Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1927 | NO. 8

FELLOWSHIP CLUB MEETS TONIGHT

N. J. Ferring, Of Des Moines, Banker And Financier, To Be Speaker Of Evening.

WILL HAVE GOOD PROGRAM

The first meeting in the new year of the Good Fellowship Club will be held this, Thursday, evening, at the library. A good program has been arranged, with the speaker of the evening being Mr. N. J. Farring, of Des Moines. Mr. Ferring is a banker and financier, and is affiliated with the Central States Electric Co., operating out of Cedar Rapids and Iowa Falls. He is reported to be a fluent and interesting speaker. The usual refreshments will be served at the close of the evening's entertainment.

The Good Fellowship club meetings are free, and open to every man in the community. Every man is cordially invited to attend this meeting, and any meeting of the club this winter.

RABBIT HUNTERS WARNED AGAINST DREAD DISEASE

Mason City Globe-Gazette: Rabbit hunters in the state of Iowa have been warned by Dr. Don M. Griswold, state epidemiologist, of a disease that has appeared in the state among persons who have handled rabbits, according to information received by Dr. G. M. Crabb.

Tularaemia is the scientific term for the malady that first appeared this year in Iowa during the first of November. Two cases were found in Iowa last year in Johnson county and the three this year were in Clay, Scott and Monroe counties.

In a diagnosis of a case, a fairly sudden onset, indolent sore on the hand, swollen regional glands and a fever with marked prostration indicate the presence of tularaemia. A history of the handling of rabbits meat will usually be obtained on careful inquiry.

In many sections of the state there have been rumors of rabbits being found dead. Tularaemia is a possible explanation of such deaths. Persons finding dead rabbits are requested to send them to the state laboratory for examination. Hunters are asked to inspect the livers and the sleens of the animals and if multiple whitish spots are seen, there is grave possibility of the presence of the disease.

A few of the cases attributed to the infection from handling the rabbits have been fatal. In every case it has left the patient weak and exhausted for several months.

The mayor of a certain town in north Iowa contracted the disease when a bit of pus flew in his eye while he was dressing a rabbit. His wife caught the disease when she was caring for the mayor's eye. Local physicians say that one can contract the disease just by touching the diseased rabbit.

Sugar Beets In Scotland

Mrs. R. E. Stevenson, formerly Miss Blanche Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Baker of Belmond, writes interestingly of conditions in Scotland, where she and Mr. Stevenson are now located. Mr. Stevenson is assistant manager of a sugar beet factory recently erected at Cupar, in Scotland, and operating for the first season this fall. Clippings from an English agricultural paper contain a number of interesting facts about the beets in Scotland. Sugar content in some of them is running as high as 19.7 percent, while acreage yields are around 15 tons. One farmer on an acre of beets had 15 tons which had a sugar content of 19.5 percent. His gross returns for the acre were about $208. The factory, judging from the English paper's description is slightly smaller than the plant in Belmond, cutting around 500 tons of beets a day.

Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Missman entertained Mr. and Mrs. Ely, of Belmond and Miss Agnes Ely of Racine, Wisconsin on Christmas day.—Klemme Times.

BELL-LEEBRICK

(Alexander Correspondent)

Miss Nellie Elsie Bell and John H. Leebrick surprised their friends when they were quietly married at the Methodist parsonage at Clarion, Tuesday, January 4, Rev. J. B. O'Connor officiating.

Mrs. Leebrick is the youngest daughter of John F. Bell, of Alexander, a lady who is very popular in social circles of that community and highly esteemed by her many friends. She has been a successful teacher of music for the past several years, besides assisting with the duties of the home and will make an efficient helpmeet for the man of her choice. The bride was prettily gowned in light green soretta silk.

Mr. Leebrick is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Leebrick, of Silome Springs, Ark. He is a man of fine character, and is employed in construction work on the M. & St. L. railroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Leebrick left the same day on a honeymoon trip to California and Oregon, where they will spend the winter with relatives and friends. They will be home to their friends after April 1 at Hampton.

For several years, Mrs. Leebrick has been correspondent for The Independent, at Alexander, and this paper joins with her many friends in extending the best of wishes for many years of happiness and prosperity.

WERE LOCAL GIVERS STUNG?

Ackley Journal: It is something like three weeks ago that two men, apparently working in company, were in Ackley soliciting money contributions to what they termed a "disabled war veterans home" to be put up at Des Moines. It appears that they were at other points. They were at Northwood; the Anchor of that city of Thursday last has this to offer:

" * * * They had credentials from what appeared to be the proper authority to solicit locally by Mayor Sabin.

"Some time last week a young man solicitied Garner citizens in the same manner. For some reason suspicion was directed against them and the honesty of their work questioned. Dr. Phillips, commander of the Garner American Legion Post, gave the young men a local endorsement but telephoned the state adjutant at Des Moines. Dr. Phillips was informed that the drive for the home closed December 1st and that no one had any authority for collecting further funds through solicitation.

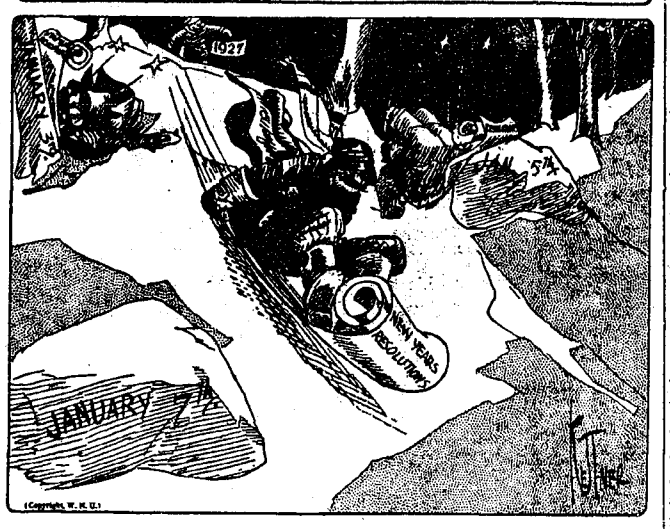
"The sheriff of Hancock county picked up three young men, one each at Klemme, Belmond and Garner and put them in jail. Their names were Hayward, Callahan and Leanord. Later they were released; for what reason is not stated in the Garner newspaper story.

"From the best information obtainable one of these young men had been authorized to solicit during the drive and when his term of employment was up he failed to send in his credentials and blanks. It appears now that Northwood merchants can charge up a few more dollars to experience which might as well have gone for some real charity. Such crooks make it harder for legitimate solicitors and should be punished."

SUGAR BEET CLUB SHOWS GOOD RESULTS

Garner Signal: The boys' and girls' sugar beet club conducted by the American Beet Sugar Company, Mason City, during the past year was very successful. The Sugar Beet Company conceived the idea that the younger members of the family might be interested in growing beets and therefore started what they called the Acre Beet Club. The boys and girls of their territory were offered some very attractive prizes. They employed Gilbert Bonstetter and put him in charge of the department. He has done some excellent work with the club members and has laid the foundation for a very valuable boys and girls club activity. During the past year, there were 58 members contracted growing 74.29 acres. They grew 974 tons, an average of 13.11 tons per acre.

Tobogganing



ASK PROTECTION FROM COURT

Seek Protection For Insane Person In Real Estate Deal.

Hans H. Boge vs. Agnes K. Boge is an action brought to have the court appoint a commissioner to act in behalf of said defendant, who is of unsound mind, that her rights may be protected in the transfer of certain real estate.

George Gilbert asks the court to quiet title to certain real estate in him.

Thos. Ness vs. A. J. Huxtable is a suit to collect the sum of $212.04 on three counts.

State Bank of Goldfield has brot suit against F. M. Bosworth to collect the sum of $3,266.37 on two promissory notes.

Albert Mix of Eagle Grove asks judgment against B. J. Simmons and Geo. Dial on their joint promissory note for the sum of $611.94.

The board of supervisors organized Monday for the year 1927 by electing E. E. Kitley of Eagle Grove chairman. Mr. Kitley is now serving his last year as a member of the board and in passing this honor around the compliment seems appropriate at this time.—Monitor.

ALGONA PEOPLE IN BANKLESS EXISTENCE

During the days when all the banks of Algona were closed the people there had some unique experiences. The Algona Advance says:

"The writer was in Joe Tod's store when a woman came tearing in with a duck egg to trade for a darning needle, and had two cents coming after the deal was completed. So she hunted all over the store and finally took a bunch of hairpins; and she was bobbed, at that, and could only use them to pick the lock on the baby's bank. A chap from Irvington blew into Cliff's hardware with a couple of rat skins to trade for nails, but was turned down—the proprietor said that he couldn't get the hides through the clearing house. But a woman spoke up and said she'd take the hides to make her boy some mittens, and would swap him a gallon of soft soap for them. The dicker was made and the chap afterwards swapped the soap for a peck of dried apples, which he traded later for a half dozen rolls of paper at Long's grocery. Then he took the paper back to Cliff's hardware and traded it for the nails he wanted, so he got his nails after all, as Cliff said the paper was always in demand. And the Irvington chap, by hurrying, finally got home in time to do his chores. And these are a few of the stunts you would have to pull if anything ever happened to our banks. So you are now reaping the benefits of your wisdom in sitting quistly and not rocking the boat, which has enabled it to sail beautifully while the crafts in other towns have run onto the rocks."

Fred Haupt was taken to the Mercy Hospital at Mason City Sunday morning. Mr. Haupt had suffered from hiccoughs for several days and was in a serious condition. At this writing Mr. Haupt is still in a critical condition, although a slight improvement is reported—Klemme Times.

SHIPPING ASSC. MEETS SATURDAY

Co-Operative Society To Show A Year Of Good Business.

The annual meeting of the Belmond Co-Operative Shipping Association will be held this week Saturday, January 8, at the library parlors. The meeting will commence at 11:00 a. m. and will consist of the annual report of the officers, and election of officers for the new year. A program of music and reading will be given, which will be featured with addresses by Mr. Ames, of Chicago, a noted expert on co-operative shipping, particularly of live stock; Mr. Cady, of the State College at Ames, an expert in accounting; and by the county agent, Mr. Tomlinson. Everyone interested in the association or in the subject the speakers will take up, is invited to attend the meeting. A free lunch will be served at noon.

The report of the officers of the association will show that the association had a good year in 1926, a year as good as any on the average. Sixty-eight carloads of stock were shipped during the year.

MARRIED

Monday, December 27, at St. Louis Mo., occured the marriage of Miss Viola Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Peterson of that place, and Orick Rhodes, of Goodell, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes arrived in Belmond last Friday and went on to Goodell where they will reside with Mr. Rhodes' parents for the present. The Peterson family formerly resided in Belmond, where the bride is well known and has many friends who extend their best wishes.

WATCH NIGHT PARTY

Rev. Snyder, of the Methodist church, planned and carried out a new and unique idea in the "Watch Night" party at the church, on New Year's eve. The evening's program started in the basement of the church at 8:00 o'clock, with games and various stunts for the children. At 9:30 there were games and contests for the grown-ups, and everyone seemed to thoroly enjoy the sport. At 10:30 doughtnuts and coffee were served, after which the program proceeded in the auditorium with some excellent talks by Mrs. E. W. Luick, Miss Bernetas Wolle, H. F. Luick and W. R Ramsay. A duet by Mrs. Trafford and Albert Chamberlain, and a vocal solo by Mrs. C. O. Fitts were enjoyed.

The New Year was ushered in by the ringing of the church bell, and prayer by the pastor. The evening closed with a "love feast," or the breaking of bread with one another, so that everyone met and greeted each other and went home with a friendly, neighborly feeling.

Albert Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Martin, of Belmond, visited the last of the week at the home of his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Pritchard. The young man is a student at Marquette college, Milwaukee, where he is taking an electrical course. Mr. and Mrs. Pritchard took him to Belmond Sunday afternoon.—Garner Leader.

PLEASANT TOWNSHIP LADIES TO MEET

The ladies of the farm bureau of Pleasant township will hold a follow-up meeting at the home of Mrs. Geo. Thompson Friday afternoon, January 7th. The lesson is to be on "Tailored Finishes." Every lady interested in this work is cordially invited.

Please bring pieces of woolen material, scissors, needle, thread, etc.

A STRANGER AND TOOK HIM IN

Reinbeck Courier: Another fake scheme which used a church as a help was exposed this week when one Reinbeck business man started to investigate the reason he had never seen any of the church calendars on which he had bought an ad last September. A man posing as from a St. Paul concern got permission from Rev. Pollock to issue a church calendar. He then got prices on printing from the Lewis Press and proceeded to solicit ads from local business men. As nearly as can be learned he secured about $75, cashed the checks that day and has not been heard of since.

LUNCHEON CLUB MEETS

Regular meeting of the Luncheon club was held last Thursday, the topic for discussion being community budget. The committee gave some data on the way community budgets are handled in the larger cities, and stated as its conclusion that a budget would not be workable in a town the size of Belmond. The desire of business men for some such form of a community financing, however, resulted in a resolution to continue the committee and take up the matter of a budget at a later date, when it is hoped some way similar to the community chest idea can be worked out for use locally.

HAS HAD VARIED EXPERIENCE

The editors of the Britt News-have this to say in their Christmas greetings to their community, and what they say is to a degree the experience of every other editor:

"We have been in business a long time—not long enough to get rich or even to have enough to retire—and we have been sassed and gassed, cussed and discussed, boohed and poo hooed, and hugged and humbugged, fleeced and snowed under, talked about, praised and condemned, pushed about, slammed about, hung up, held up, treated good and feasted, loved and hated all at once, and we are still alive. The only reason we are in business now is to be able to find out what is going to happen next, and to wish all our friends and enemies a Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year."

LEGION GROWS BEETS

In trying to devise some means of raising money for their local order, the American Legion Post of Corwith hit upon a novel idea of raising beets to raise money. It is reported from the sugar beet factory that they contracted for 18.61 acres. They tended this acreage throughout the season, hiring practically all of their help, including cultivation, etc.

Their contract was made with the American Beet Sugar Company at Mason City and the beets were marketed to that company. They received in payment for their total crop of beets $1,189.95. After deducting payment for their seed, fertilizer, labor and land rental, they had a net profit of $476.59.

Never Grasped A Hot Poker

There's a time to part and a time to meet,
There's a time to sleep and a time to eat,
There's a time to work and a time to play,
There's a time to sing and a time to pray,
There's a time that's glad and a time that's blue,
There's a time to plan and a time to do,
There's a time to grin and to show your grit,
But there never was a time to quit.

—Exchange.

DOWS TO PLAY HERE TOMORROW

Will Meet Belmond Team In First Game Of Schedule For The Winter.

GOOD GAMES IN PROSPECT

The Dows High School basket ball team will furnish the opposition for the local team in the first game after the Christmas vacation here Friday night of this week. Rowan was originally scheduled for the first game, but due to a conflict in their schedule they were unable to fill the date and Dows was signed to take their place. Dows will undoubtedly furnish plenty of opposition. The schedule includes a strong lineup of home games; including the alumni game of December 20th there will be seven and possibly eight home games. The climax of the season will come with the Eagle Grove game here on February 25th. Last year Belmond took two whirlwind games from the Eaglets by one point margins. Eagle Grove will undoubtedly be stronger this year than last, probably with one of the best teams in this part of the state. The local boys have yet to show what they can do although they showed good form in the opener with the alumni. With an entire new team Coach Hall will have a stiff assignment to turn in such teams as Goldfield, Kanawha, Britt and Eagle Grove.

The complete schedule is as follows:

Jan. 7—Dows here.
Jan. 15—Clarion here.
Jan. 21—Goldfield there.
Jan. 28—Britt here.
Jan. 29—Clarion here.
Feb. 4—Kanawha here.
Feb. 11—Open.
Feb. 15—Kanawha there.
Feb. 18—Goldfield here.
Feb. 25—Eagle Grove here.

In addition to these games it is possible that a game with Rowan may be played. Rowan was originally scheduled to play here January 7, but through a conflict in their schedule, could not play at that time. The open date of February 11th will be filled with a game away from home as the home schedule is well filled at present.

With the alumni game tucked away in the victory column the boys are working hard afternoons this week getting tuned up for the Dows game Friday night.

WEATHER SUMMARY FOR DECEMBER

Mean temperature, 17.2.

Maximum temperature, 39 on the 3rd.

Minimum temperature, -17 below on December 14.

Total precipitation, 1.46 inches.

Total snowfall, 11.50 inches.

Number of clear days, 5; partly cloudy days, 2; cloudy days, 24.

Sleet, December 6 and 7.

Auroras, December 12.

Prevailing wind, southeast.

Monthly mean temperature, 3.7 degrees below 16-year average.

Monthly precipitation .13 above 16-year average.

Total precipitation for year, 28.41 inches.

Normal precipitation, 33.53 inches.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Laick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week Dec. 25 to Jan. 1, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
26	25	5	—	Clear
27	31	14	.05	Cloudy
29	30	-1	—	Cloudy
29	20	-14	—	Clear
20	37	18	—	Clear
31	35	22	—	Cloudy
1	35	20	—	Clear

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Forristall and Thelma Rikansrud, of Belmond; Harold and Laurence Rikansrud, of Minneapolis; Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmar Rikansrud, of Menahga, Minn., and Agnes C. Rikansrud, of Winterset, came Friday of last week for a few days at the parental home.—Kanawha Reporter.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher.

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

What effect the closing of the sugar factory will have upon local business has been uppermost in the thoughts of many Belmond business men the past couple weeks. That it will have a depressing effect no one will question; taking $150,000 in business away from a community of this size must have its effect. And yet, Belmond would never miss the sugar factory if it would go after some, just a fair portion, of the regular year-after-year business that is being lost—the business that is going out of town, to the big cities and the mail order houses. If any one firm in the town of Belmond had as much business in a year as goes to the catalog houses from this vicinity, that firm would have to increase its capacity double what any business in the town now has to offer. Because our sugar factory has quit, is no reason why we should.

This paper does not believe the community will ever get anywhere, or accomplish anything, by talking growth. Belmond will never be a big town. It's capacity for expansion is limited. This is an agricultural community; we depend upon the things grown on the land for our business, our prosperity. We have nothing to offer industry, to bring factories or big business here. We cannot, therefore, grow but just so much. We have no reason to expect otherwise. Two thousand five hundred will be the limit of our population, three thousand at the outside. Why, then, waste our time and efforts talking promotion of industries, the locating of factories, when we have nothing to offer any factory except one handling the farm products?

It is better to be a big frog in a little puddle, than a little frog in a big one. Belmond has very exceptional trading territory. Half way between two large cities, with nothing of a really competitive nature within 15 to 30 miles, with three railroads, fine graveled roads leading in all directions, the town has a business territory that you will search far before beating. Rather than waste our sweetness upon the desert air by talking expansion, when we know, all of us, that our chances of such are as slim as a flapper's figure, why not see the opportunities before our very eyes and develop our own field, cultivate our own back yard? The pastures on this side of the fence are as green and lucious as those on the other—perhaps more so. Like the tied calf, we are straining vainly after the pail of milk outside the door, when if we will but turn around there is a bigger pailful waiting for us.

If Belmond cannot be a big town, there is nothing to prevent us from being a big little town. We can have a community noted for its progressiveness, its good business and its friendly spirit if we want to. It is strictly up to us. Let's quit aping the big town and just be ourselves. We do not need a big pot of money to accomplish these things; we just need a little friendly co-operation among ourselves. We need to see the golden opportunities that lie directly befor us, and to grasp them. We need to get together more, to be tolerant of one another, to be honest and frank with ourselves and our neighbors. We need to forget the petty jealousies and trivial annoyances which have grown from molehills to mountains with some of us. We need just to cheer up and be ourselves! We have a horn of our own. let's toot it. Nobody will play it for us; they're too busy learning their own music. Let's forget the sugar factory closing, and get some of the business we have been letting go away. If eventually the factory is enabled to continue operation, all well and good; it's a fine thing for the community; but instead of hoping for that, isn't it better for us to be looking around for ways and means of making up the dificit in business somewhere else?

We folks in Belmond have got to sell our town to ourselves. We have a splendid community here, with vastly greater opportunities than we are grasping. And we are letting the other fellow take what rightfully belong to us. If we'll get our share of the business every last one of us is losing to outsiders, we'll never miss the business that has gone with the sugar mill; we'll have a bigger—and a better—business than we have ever had before. And it will be a business that will stay with us, year after year.

DAWES AGAINST PRIMARIES

One wonders in reading that Vice-President Dawes favors a return to the convention system instead of the present primaries, whether Mr. Dawes is really so innocent as to suppose that men and interests willing to spend thousands and millions in primary election campaigns would not spend even a penny or a minute to control a convention.

Advocating the convention to replace the primary would have more weight if we had never had conventions. Having had them, tried them and found them possible of corruption at the worst and certainly unresponsive to the public will at the best, it will be hard to bring them back.

The proponents of the convention system are those who believe that the people are not fit to rule themselves, who are afraid to trust the citizens with the right to select candidates and who feel certain that things would be better handled by a few "best minds" than by the majority action of all the people.

And the very thing that has condemned the primaries can also be credited to their defense. If it was the open primary system rather than the secret convention method that enabled Vare and Smith to secure nominations, then it was also the open primary system that brought the facts of huge expenditures to light and makes it very doubtful whether these men will actually secure the seats that they bought.

Iowa's latest experience with the convention system cannot inspire confidence in it among the general run of voters. David Stewart, nominated by that convention may be a great senator, but he was not the choice of the people and there was nothing brought to light at the convention to indicate that he was anything more than ordinary when nominated.—Reinbeck Courier.

Iowa Falls Citizen: When nations get at each other's throats in time of war, there is no scrupples about instruments. Talk about doing away with gas is all right, but it will not stop the use of gas. In the world war each side raised a great howl about dropping bombs on innocent women and children and both sides were guilty as the devil. There has to be some efficient governmental machinery set up somewhere to take care of bad actors. For this purpose men have proposed a league of nations and a world court.

Iowa Falls Citizen: Here comes the steel trust and announces a forty percent dividend. At the same time the farm investments are bringing little or nothing. Do you suppose that there is a single steel trust magnate that is in favor of a fair start and an equal track for the farmer? Not one. All their talk is in the opposite direction and the president knows no better than to side with them. Sometime agriculture is going to get a square deal, if the farmers everywhere will stay by their guns and fight it out. Nothing but everlasting battling on can push the huge porkers from the trough.

Iowa Falls Citizen: Talk about solving the farm problem by feeding hogs, rotating crops, selecting seed corn, etc., simply shows that the talker knows not what the farm problem is. All these things are necessary to good farming, but with them the farm is still on a different plane than other industries. Whoever heard of a farm paying forty percent dividend and high wages for the farmer and his family? When the farmer is on the same price level as other industries part of the forty percent that goes to steel and oil and other industrial operations will go to the farmer where it ought to go. The farmer is the last unprotected and unorganized industry and it is the farm that furnishes the common feeding ground for the porkers that are waxing fat at the industrial trough.

LIVING WITHIN YOUR MEANS

With each new year, hope springs eternal that one may be able, during the next twelve months, to make both ends meet, and then some. The only way to do it is to cut your garment according to your cloth—to make a budget in advance and persistently try to live up to it.

The budget has long been a feature of the business world and deserves greater use in the family. Homekeepers run the biggest business in the world, receive the biggest income and spend the most money. They should give greater study to household finance. Money is such an important thing, such a serious thing. It costs the sweat, and even blood, of the good man at the head of the house, and to waste it is putting a heavy burden upon him which may break his endurance.

Another reason for budgeting is that one can have many more of the comforts of life if one spends the family money wisely than if one hands it out haphazardly. The family income can scarcely cover everything one wants, at best. It will be more likely to provide the best things if careful thought is given to what shall be chosen and what passed by.

The first essential to the family budget is to get the family interested. If some members insist in being extravagant, it is difficult and unfair for the rest to stick to the budget. Hold a family round-table and talk it all over frankly and without passion, if you can.

In making a budget, you must recognize how much income you may depend upon. With this in mind, estimate how much it is wise to spend for such items as rent, taxes, insurance, repairs, interest on the mortgage, fuel light telephone service in the household, medicines, dentist, eyeglasses, the automobile, food and clothing, household furnishings and equipment.

In estimating the clothing budget pass around the family and think over what clothes each one has and what will be likely to be needed. Those going to college will need more than those at home, and the younger member of the family will require less expensive clothing and can wear some made-overs or handed-downs—to their great disgust!

Something must be allowed for charity, for the church and the community chest, and a not-stingy quota for recreation, for concerts, for a trip or vacation, and for books and periodicals.

In this day of beauty parlorism, this personal expenditure has become a necessity with those members of the family who circulate in society or in business and the rest should be content to go looking "seedy." This part of the budget requires careful consideration.

Besides all these regulation expenditures, each member of the family needs a small fund each month for miscellaneous, for candy, carfare, toilet supplies and what-not.

Then, over all, there should be a sum for the bank, for advancement, for savings against that "rainy day."

At this point, you will feel like throwing up your hands in despair, and dear old Dad feels slightly nauseated, while Mother puckers her brows and wonders if it is going to be even harder than ever. But do not be discouraged. You have always had this same situation—but you have never faced it. You have just made guesses at the outcome of the income and have blindly hoped it would cover all needs, and then wondered afterward where it all went and felt sick at heart because it was not enough to provide so many things you needed. It will come more nearly meeting all your wants if you trim your wants to fit your ability. Do this in advance, by mutual agreement, and then stick to it.

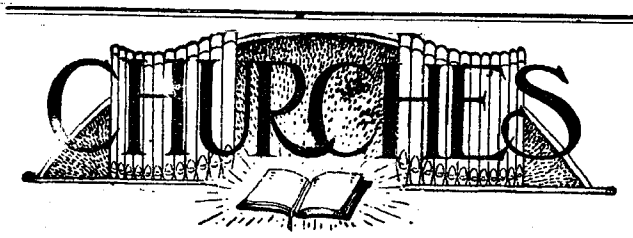
But do not stick too tight. If you find you have made a mistake or not figured wisely, do notstick to it just because you decided you would. Watch how your changes gear into your plan. They should balance. If you spend more here, you will have less for ther; and if you save at one point, you can be a little more lavish at another. Next year you will make a wiser budget—and you will grow more enthusiastic about it.

TO SAVE LAUNDERING COMFORTS

To prevent heavy quilts from becoming soiled where they touch the sleeper, baste a strip of cloth on each end. This should be at least a foot wide and lap over both sides of the comfort. When the strip becomes soiled, as it will sooner than the rest of the comfort, it can be ripped off and washed and used again. To air heavy comforts, by hanging them on the clothes line for a day, helps to keep them sweet and fresh.

INK SPOTS ON FURNITURE

To remove ink spots from furniture, dilute a half teaspoon of oil of vitriol with one tablespoon of water. Dip a feather into this and touch to the ink spot. If the oil is left too long on the ink spot, it will leave a white spot. It is best to rub it off quickly and repeat the application if the first does not quite remove the ink.



METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, January 9th:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m.

Divine Worship and Sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "Serving God With What We Have." Ex. 4:2.

Epworth League at 6:30. Ruth Ramsay, leader.

Evening Worship and Gospel Message at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "Faith and the Future." Matt: 18: 20.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. Theo. Wright Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Gowdy, assistant hostess. The nature of the program will be Broadcasting. Mrs. A. W. Russell and Mrs. C. H. Jennings have part in the program. This is indeed a very interesting program. All members of the society should make an extra effort to be present.

On Thursday night the Standard Bearers will meet at the home of Lucile Legee. Harriet Martin has charge of the lesson.

Choir rehearsal in the parsonage on Thursday night at 7:00 o'clock. All members please take notice.

Our first classes in Catechetical instruction Saturday afternoon at 1:00 and 2:00 o'clock. Children from ten years to fourteen inclusive will please meet at 1:00 o'clock; fifteen years and older at 2:00 o'clock. Anyone wishing to take this work will please be present for our first session. You are cordially invited to all of our services.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10:00 a. m.—Bible Study Hour. We have just entered upon a three months' course of studies in the Christian life. First let us ask, What does it mean to be a Christian? Of course we all know that. It simply means to be like the Christ. First, following Him. Second, learning of Him. Third, believing in Him. Fourth, witnessing for Him. Fifth, being His servant. And finally, being his friend, and in fellowship with Him, and with Him only. No man can serve God and Mammon; to attempt to do so, is to invite failure. "Choose this day Whom you will follow and serve and Whose you will be, now and forever."

11:00 a. m.—Morning Worship and Sermon. The thot of the sermon will be in line with the quarter's studies; the prayer of Jesus, that God's Kingdom might come. Has it come? If not, when will it come? Can you and I hasten it's coming, and how? Bring your friends with you. Your presence will be an inspiration to others.

TRINITY CHURCH

The Ladies' Aid meets at the church parlors Thursday afternoon.

The annual business meeting will be held Monday afternoon at 1:00 p. m.

Prayer meeting Thursday evening at the church.

Sunday School Sunday at 10:00 o'clock.

Services next Sunday evening by Rev. H. C. Holm. He meets with the class at 4:00 o'clock.

ST. OLAF CHURCH

The North Ladies' Aid meets on Thursday afternoon, January 6th at the home of Mrs. A. B. Ericson. The hostesses are Mrs. Ericson and Mrs. Lloyd Halverson.

English services Sunday at 11:00 o'clock by Rev. H. C. Holm.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Charles V

A GOUTY old man sat in a monastery cell, surrounded by dozens of clocks and watches.

"I cannot even make two clocks tick in unison," he whined peevishly. "No wonder I failed to make millions of people think alike!"

The old clock fancier was Charles V, who had given up affairs of state at the age of fifty-six, and who was spending the two remaining years of his life in monastic retirement. He had had a half century of experiences such as lent a certain pathos to his complaint about the clocks. Born in 1500 to the greatest power ever inherited by mortal man, he had risen to heights reached by no other ruler of his century and had lived to see his most cherished plans fall to pieces.

Here are some of the titles that Charles fell heir to, as a mere boy: the archduchy of Austria, the sovereignty of the Netherlands, the kingdoms of Spain, Sicily and Navarre, and the rulership of all Spain's American possessions. In addition to this, when only nineteen, he was chosen emperor of Germany, and at twenty-six was crowned king of Italy. He ruled four nations which had nothing in common and no ties of mutual interest. These facts, of course, led to endless rivalries, revolts and international complications.

Moreover, a throng of outside enemies rose against the young monarch. Francis I, king of France, who had been one of his competitors for the German crown, promptly declared war on him, seizing the duchies of Milan and Burgundy, which Charles regarded as his own. Soliman, the Magnificent (under whom, from 1520 to 1566, Turkey reached its pinnacle of greatness), invaded Hungary, advancing to the very walls of Vienna, and, with his fleets, held the Mediterranean, menacing Italy and Spain. The Netherlands, too, were ripening for revolt, while a furious revolution broke out in Spain.

Added to this, an Augustinian monk of Germany, Martin Luther, defied the pope, protested against certain tenets of the Catholic church and advanced a "reformed" creed. He drew to him thousands of Germans, his adherents becoming known as "Protestants." The security of the Catholic church, of which Charles was the acknowledged champion, was thus menaced. Altogether he had his hands full.

To beat back France's armies on the Flemish frontier and in Italy, to check the Turks on the Mediterranean and in his own duchy of Austria, to stem the tide of religious disagreements and to reconcile clashing political parties—this was the task before him. He entered on an eight-year war with France, during which he drove the French from Italy and captured King Francis. He forced a humiliating treaty on Francis. This the latter at once broke, but in a second war was again beaten.

Soliman led a great Turkish army over the German frontier and Charles advanced in person to meet him, and drove the Turks back to their own territory. Then Francis, forming an alliance with Soliman, again invaded Italy. But Charles opposed the allies so successfully that they were soon glad to sign a treaty of peace. The revolt in Spain was put down and the Netherlands for the time appeased, so Charles had at last time to attend to the Reformation, which, under Luther, Melancthon and other teachers, had by ths time swept Germany from end to end. The emperor had crushed every military foe and had humiliated every royal rival; but here, in this new religious movement at home, he found an opponent he could not conquer—a power that throve under persecution.

Council after council was held, scheme after scheme proposed. Compromises were suggested, but found favor with neither party. As if this one setback had undermined his whole edifice of greatness, so the failure of Charles in reconciling the religious sects was followed by a series of new disappointments and misfortunes. He had hoped to bequeath all his power and possessions to his son Philip, but to this the German electors would not agree. So he foresaw that on his death the mighty one-man empire he held would be split up as had those of Alexander and Charlemagne. To add to his worries, Henry II (son of Francis I) of France, backed by other rulers, invaded Germany and captured several important cities, notably Metz. Charles sought to recapture Metz, but failed, and until 1870 it remained in French hands.

Charles made one more throw of the dice against fate. He arranged a marriage between his son Philip and Queen Mary of England, thus forming an English alliance to strengthen his own power and that of the Catholic church. But the couple had no children to perpetuate the scheme.

His most cherished plans set at naught, his own subjects refusing to be guided by him in matters of religion, his health broken, his territory successfully invaded, his son debarred from inheriting his chief possessions—the combination was too much for the old emperor. He gave up his throne and left to others the helm of state which would no longer obey his enfeebled hand.

His was that saddest of fates: The fate of the man who outlives the greatness he himself had created.

FREE AIR

Having gathered up the shattered remnants of our New Year's resolutions and dumped them into the ash can, and safely passed the critical first three days, we can now get back to feeling natural again.

* * * *

By this time that sneaking, unnatural feeling should be pretty well worn off and the habitual attitude characteristic of our individuality should be predominating.

* * * *

Which is to say, we're back to normal.

* * * *

Even tho the resolutions, so bright and shining January 1, are now like unto a 1916 Ford in Louie's bone yard, it didn't hurt us any to make 'em. Of course, we never intended to follow 'em thru very extensivly, but the fact that wem ade them is proof that "Barkus is willin'."

* * * *

New Year's offers an opportunity to make resolutions. If it didn't happen around once a year, most of us wouldn't make any. The difference between making them and keeping them is just the difference between Christmas and New Year's, and New Year's and Christmas.

* * * *

Fellow asked the other day what the difference was between a baby and the luncheon club. We admitted we didn't know. "There ain't none," he said. "They both eat and holler."

* * * *

Yes, sir; New Year's is certainly one fine time to make resolutions.

* * * *

Have you noticed that the same firms which sent the pretty holiday greetings are now sending another that says "Please remit"?

* * * *

Maybe it is just a coincidence, but have you ever noticed that the doors on most political offices are marked "Pull"?

* * * *

If the U. S. becomes embroiled with Mexico over the interests of our oil magnates in that country, maybe the sugar factory here will be operated.

* * * *

The government might use it as an internment camp for the Mexican beet workers.

* * * *

The closing of the sugar factory won't hurt local business. any if it will try to get some of the money that is now buying Cadillacs for Chicago millionaires.

* * * *

Or why not get Sears, Roebuck to operate the mill and take the sugar to sell?

* * * *

What Belmond doesn't need is a nice chain store. But folks sometimes get what they don't want.

GO A-SHOPPING

We went into a clothing store the other day. The clothier had some very good things in stock. He tried to sell us something. We finally told him that while we really needed a new necktie, yet we did not suppose what he had to sell would do us any good, although we presumed that we had better buy one in order to help him out and we bought.

We next dropped into the grocers'. He had some very fine canned goods and we asked about them. We needed a can of peaches and he tried to sell us one. We told him that altho we needed peaches, yet we did not suppose his peaches would do us any good, but we would take a can in order to help support his store.

We next stopped at a hardware store to look at a hammer. The merchant showed us his line of hammers and he offered to sell us one. We told him that we needed a hammer all right but that we did not expect his hammers to do us any good, but that we would buy one just to let him know that we were a good fellow, and would like to help him make a success of his business.

We then stopped at a drygoods store for we needed some muslin. The merchant had just what we needed and he offered to sell us some. We told him that while we needed the muslin yet we did not imagine his muslin would do us any good, but that we would buy a few yards for a dry goods store really ought to be supported, and we did.

Sounds odd doesn't it. Now we really did not do any of these things at all. We just imagined it to see how it would sound to an occasional merchant who knows that advertising is responsible for all sales of merchandise, yet who tells us that advertising does him no good but that he will take some space in order to help us out.—Editor of the Perry Evening Free Press.

"BIDDIES" SWELL FARM INCOME

Poultry keeping last year paid a good profit on the farms of Iowa, or at least where the flocks were well cared for an managed. Proof of this is to be found in the annual report of the Iowa Record Flock Keepers' Association, issued at Ames by Iowa State College, which shows that the 318 flocks reporting a full year's record returned an average net profit of $653.

Profits last year from the record flocks were higher than during the preciding year by about $120 per flock. This increased profit probably came partly because of higher egg production. In the year ending last November 1, the 318 record flocks had an average egg yield of 124 eggs for each hen. The preceding year the average was only 117 eggs to the hen.

Better feeding, more efficient management and more rigid culling, learned thru work in the Record Flock Keepers' Association, were factors in increasing production. Also, the use of breeding pens by many record flock owners, encouraged thru membership in the association has helped to raise the laying abilty of the hens in these flocks. In the breeding pens are placed the choice of the layers and the eggs these hens produce are used for hatching the layers of the following year.

Ranking of the leading flocks in the state or egg production is as follows: First, Mrs. E. J. Krebill, Donnellson, 248 S. C. White Leghorns—206.4 eggs per hen; second, W. S. Grotewold, Lake Mills, 233 S. C. White Leghorns—204.4 eggs each; third, B. E. Craven, Kellogg, 476 S. C. White Leghorns—197.6 eggs each; fourth, Mrs. Herbert Hagg, Essex, 286 S. C. White Leghorns—194.4 eggs each; fifth, P. E. Applegate, Afton, 215 S. C. White Leghorns—185.6 eggs each; sixth, Mrs. W. H. Feldman, Winfield, 229 S. C. White Leghorns—185.1 eggs each; and seventh, G. E. Grunwald, Blairstown, 181 S. C. Rhode Island Reds—184.0 eggs each.

Of the 318 flocks completing the year's records, 103 had net profits above feed cost of $1,000 or over, 24 had profits exceeding $2,000, while 5 had profits in excess of $4,000. Cleve Erhardt of Elgin, owner of the largest flock reported, also had by far the largest net profit. Mr. Erhardt had a gross return from all sources of $7,750, while the feed bill was $1,486, leaving more than $6,000 return above feed costs. There were 712 S. C. White Leghorn layers in Mr. Erhardt's flock.

VICIOUS DOGS KILL 39 HOGS

Britt Tribune: Vicious dogs enacted a bloody slaughter when they went to the farm home of Hans Johnson, son of Lars Johnson, of Britt, and succeeded in killing and mangling until they had to be killed 39 head of fall pigs. R. S. Baker and E. A. Fisher were called to the farm to appraise the loss and this is the way we gathered the story from Mr. Fisher. The dogs went to the farm late at night, entered the hog house and frightened the pigs from the building. From the appearance of the hogs and the location in which they were found scattered about the hog lot, it would appear that the dogs would chase the pigs and running up to the side of them would set their jaws in the flesh of the pigs near the neck and shoulders. Terrible gashes were cut in the pigs and in most cases large pieces of flesh were torn away. Some of the pigs were so badly wounded that they bled to death while others were left lying in the snow and had to be killed. One of the hogs weighed 175 pounds. In some cases the pigs also had deep gashes in the sides and hips indicating that when they partly tore away from the dogs the canines attempted to get another hold. Mr. Fisher relates that he never had seen such a blood soaked field as the hog lot at Mr. Johnson's. There being snow on the ground made it show up the better. He states that Mr. Johnson had seen dogs in his fields chasing livestock. His own dog was shut in the barn the night of the slaughter. Out of fifty pigs in the hog house only eleven escaped.

SEED CORN SHOWS MUCH MOLD

A great deal of seed corn in Iowa this year is moldy and much precaution will have to be taken to insure planting seed that will grow. E. S. Dyas and F. G. Churchill, crops extension workers of Iowa State College, who have judged local corn shows in many parts of Iowa this year, say they have found a large percent of the ears moldy.

While some of the mold may not be injurious from the seed standpoint the crops men believe it is better to play safe and discard all of the ears that show any mold. A further precaution that will undoubtedly pay is to test the ears by the modified rag doll method so as to detect the molds which cannot be seen with the eye.

Some ears are moldy only in spots this year while others the entire ear is affected. In some instances the mold will be found only next to the cob, while the cobs of some ears are affected, indicating the presence of basisporium dry rot.

The cause for the mold is probably the heavy moisture which most seed corn contained when gathered last fall.

Any who are in doubt about using the modified rag doll test may secure information from the county agent or by writing to the Plant Pathology Department of Iowa State College, Ames.

POTATO AREA GROWS IN IOWA

Iowa may be the state where the tall corn grows, but other crops can also be grown with a great deal of success; in some cases with better results than would be secured if corn were grown on the soil.

Farmers in various parts of northern Iowa are anticipating planting a total of approximately 300 acres of potatoes on portions of the peat and much soil areas next year, according to reports reaching C. L. Fitch, in charge of vegetable extension work, Iowa State College.

Early attempts to produce corn and grain crops on these soils produced very disappointing results. Farmers then turned to drainage and by the addition of phosphate and potash fertilizers they have been able to produce large yields of potatoes, especially, as well as onions and other vegetable crops in lesser quantities.

These soils produce a very high grade of table potato, Mr. Fitch says and they rank with the best of the northern grown potatoes for seed purposes.

USE SIMPLE TABLE DECORATIONS, SAYS AMES EXPERT

"Table decoration is an art," Miss Ida M. Shilling, of the Foods and Nutrition department of Iowa State College, told the girls attending the Short Course at Iowa State College last week. "A lot of display is not approved as good decoration. Simple decorations for the table are always the most attractive.

"Artificial coloring of food is not a good way to decorate; the better way is to plan the menu, using foods with a natural color which blends with the color scheme chosen. A combination of colors which is always in good taste is green plus one other color.

"Table linen, silver, dishes, and glassware are all a part of attractive table decorations. Flowers are one of the nicest means of decorating, but they should harmonize with everything else and be low enough that people can see over them.

"The test of the well decorated table is to stand back and see it as a picture. If it is well balanced in color, line and form, it is an attractive picture."

DAIRYING BOOSTS CORN YIELD

Is there any relation between dairy farming, or any kind of livestock farming, and crop production?

A recent survey conducted by the Agricultural Economics Department, Iowa State College, indicates that there is a direct correlation. The first purebred dairy cow brought into the section surveyed, which included Bremer and Fayette counties, was bought in 1884. By 1890 dairying had become well established, reaching its highest peak in 1923.

During this time, corn yields showed a large increase. In 1890, as the survey shows, the average yield of corn was 29 bushels per acre in these two counties. In the last five years the corn acreage in these two counties has produced an average of 44 bushels per acre.

NOT ALWAYS WISE TO REFINISH OLD FURNITURE

When you are going to refinish furniture, you want to consider whether it is worth refinishing, the short course girls at Iowa State College were told last week. Early American furniture of colonial type is desirable for its simple, graceful lines and for the good wood, usually walnut or maple, of which it is made.

The original colonial furniture was made by hand and everyone can not obtain pieces of it. Now, however, very good reproductions are made, which are just as pleasing in design and material, tho not as old.

In choosing furniture, to be refinished, Mrs. Culbertson, formerly head of the Home Furnishing Department of the Extension Service, says that overly ornate lines and decorations should be avoided.

Give "Biddy" Breathing Room

About 75 percent of the people in Iowa who keep poultry crowd too many birds into their poultry houses in the opinion of E. J. Reed, poultry extension specialist of Iowa State College.

Overcrowding holds down egg production and prevents the proper development of the younger birds. If sickness breaks out in the flock, a crowded house helps spread the disease rapidly.

"Provide the house space necessary for the number of birds you want to keep or else cull your flock to fit your house space," Mr. Rood suggests. "Nature often culls the flock if the owner doesn't, where the house is crowded. And you can't sell dead birds."

The Independent's circulation is local. It is read by more people. And that's why its ads bring results.

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

Season's Greetings

To the whole community we extend our wish for a Happy and Prosperous

NEW YEAR

A car of Oil Meal on track at a very reasonable price will be one of our New Year offerings.

We carry a full line of Flour, Feed, Salt and Wire, and buy Grain, Poultry and Hides, at top prices.

Truck service for those who wish it.

Farmers Grain Company
PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!
BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

Some News Next Week

Watch this space for Griesy's ad next week!

You will find some interesting news in it.

GRIESY'S

The Friendly Place
BELMOND, - IOWA

LET'S START THIS NEW YEAR RIGHT, MR. FARMER!

Let's just sit down and figure what it is going to mean to us both in dollars and cents, and see whether the New Year will bring prosperity. Let's start it by getting together for mutual benefit, by co-operating.

This is your creamery: Farmer owned, Farmer managed, Farmer patronized. Your creamery buys cream; you sell cream. Do you know any one better to sell to than yourself? Figure it out; sell to yourself; get more money; keep the profits.

Let's start the New Year right by selling our cream to ourselves. Patronize your own business in 1927!

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

News---

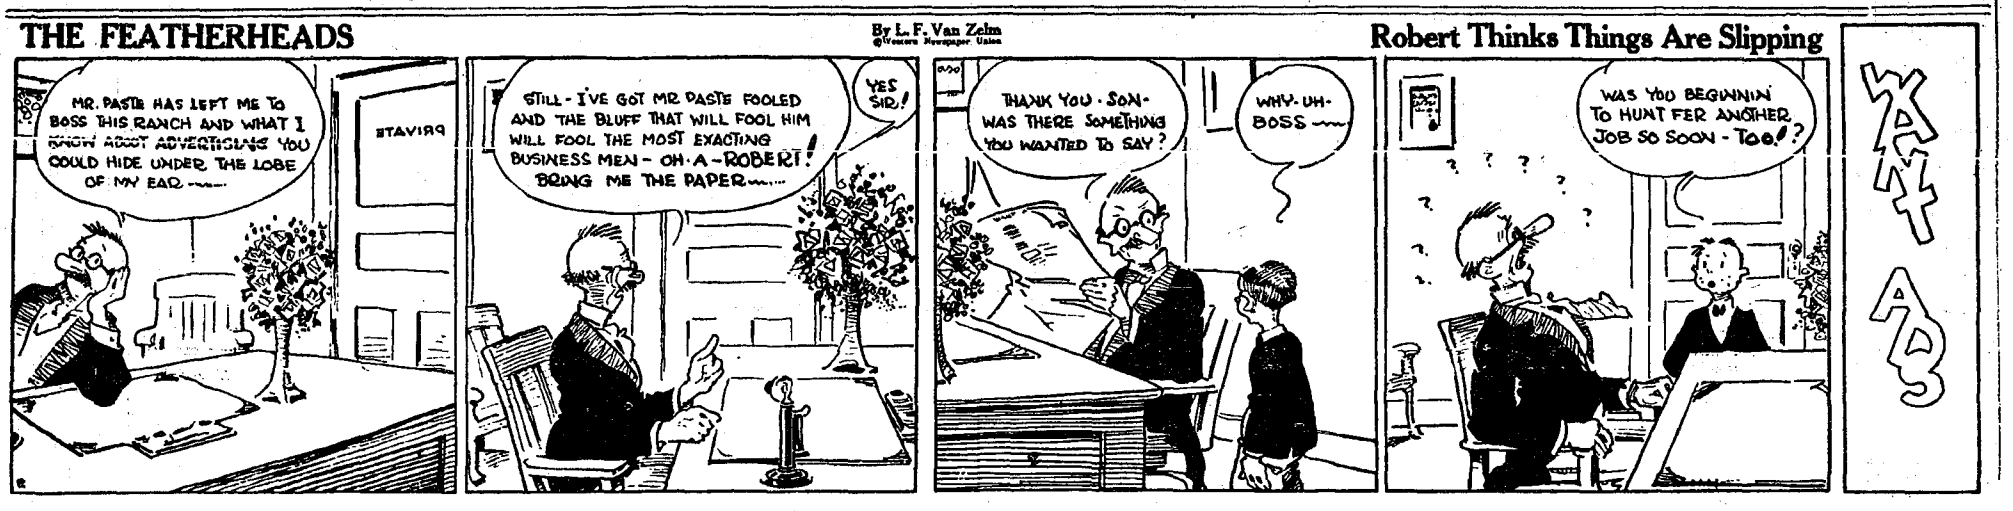
That's what a subscriber wants in a newspaper. That's what The Independent endeavors to give its readers. It maintains a staff of correspondents and local reporters for that purpose. While these reporters gather many items every week, it is not possible for them or for The Paper to get all the news.

Readers of The Independent can be of much assistance if they will telephone this office—No. 115—or mail in any items they know. To have the visit to your home of a guest mentioned in the home paper is a pleasant courtesy to them. Your own visits are of interest to your friends.

Help us make your Home Paper bigger and better in 1927 by giving us what news items you know each week. Your courtesy will be appreciated.

BELMOND INDEPENDENT
Successful Advertising — News 115 — Quality Printing

MESERVEY SECTION



EVANGELICAL CHURCH

New Year's greetings!

Sunday school at 9:45. Garfield Raecker, supt.

Morning worship at 10:45. Special services in interest of new officers.

E. L. C. E. 7 p. m Miss Mable Paul, leader

Evening worship at 7:30.

German prayer meeting Wednesday at 7 p. m. at Henry Raecker's.

Mid-week services Thursday at 7:30 p. m.

The annual meeting of the Salem church was held New Year's Eve. The annual reports were read, and other business transacted. The election results were as follows:

Trustee for 5 years, G. Lauster.

Class Leader for German Class, Theo. Wendel.

Exhorter for German Class, Jacob Nissen.

Class Leader for English Class, G. Lauster.

Exhorter for English Class, Herman Fischer.

Pianist, Mrs. Herman Fischer.

Asst. Pianist, Miss Irene Butz.

Supt. of Sunday School, Garfield Raecker.

Asst. Supt. C. J. Wendel.

Secretary, Louis Foss

Treasurer, Vern Schluter.

The other officers and teachers will be appointed later.

Lawrence Sohl, pastor.

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:30.

Morning worship at 10:30 (Ger.)

Young people's meeting at 7:15.

Evening services at 8.

Senior class in catechism meets on Tuesdays at 3:20 p. m. at the parsonage.

The annual congregational meeting will be held at the church next Saturday, Jan. 8, at 1:30 p. m. All members are requested to be present, also all who take an interest in the church work are very cordially invited to attend this meeting. An account of this meeting the classes in catechism will be dropped next Saturday.

The Ladies Aid met last Thursday. Mrs. John Watermiller served refreshments.

H. Pannkuk, pastor.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. H. Wilkens and daughters were Goodell callers Wednesday.

Mrs. A. E. Muller and daughter Neva, were Mason City callers last week Tuesday.

B. Gruis and J. Stadtlander were among the Belmond business callers Thursday.

The Mission Band held their annual meeting at the Evangelical church Tuesday last. Election of officers was held, after which games were enjoyed. Refreshments were served.

The Misses Tillie Pals and Fannie Bruns motored to Belmond Thursday to spend the afternoon.

H. M. Taulbee returned home from Mason City, Thursday, where he had been several days following a minor operation on his nose. Mrs. Taulbee accompanied him home.

The Misses Grace and Wilma Pals, Bonita Muller and Clarence Pals were Belmond callers Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Frey and son, Wilbert, were in Belmond, Monday, where the latter had his tonsils removed.

Billy Larson and family of Parkersburg came Friday to spend a few days at the Ferdinand Halfpop home. They returned home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jake Henn were callers at the S. P. Fischer home on Monday.

Tony and Ben Boelman motored to Ackley last week Wednesday to spend the day with relatives.

Harm Groen left Tuesday for Mason City to serve on the jury for two weeks.

Miss Myrtle Cooper left Tuesday for her school work at Cedar Falls, after spending the holidays at the Harm Groen home.

Herman Ostendorf left Monday for New Brunswick, N. J., to resume his studies in the seminary at that place.

Miss Grace Pals and Peter Koenen returned to their school work at Central College, Pella, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Verner Nelson and baby, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nelson and family visited with Mrs. Wilkins, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dirks and baby returned from Mason City, Thursday where they had spent several days at the Park hospital having the baby receive treatments. They report that the little one is improving.

The Misses Viola, Evelyn and Thelma Thomas have all returned to their school work after spending the holidays at their parental home.

Mr. and Mrs. John Koenen are the parents of a baby boy, born New Year's day.

Miss Alma Ralston returned to her school duties at Wellsburg, last Sunday. Thomas Ackerman of that place returned with her, having been here over New Year's day.

B. Bruns and friend, Miss Regina Buss, returned to Holland, Mich., to their school work, Sunday, after spending the holidays at the home of his mother.

Miss Eva Schluter left Tuesday for Cedar Falls to resume her studies. She was accompanied by her parents who returned home the same evening

The cemetery meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Harm Dirks on Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 11 for the regular meeting.

Herman Dirks left for Holland, Mich., to take up his duties in the seminary there.

Mrs. C. Bier and Frank Guth motored to Mason City, Monday, where the former consulted a doctor regarding her health.

Theo. Wendel and wife accompanied by Miss Rose Zieman were Mason City callers Monday.

Miss Irena Butz and brother, LuVerne, and Norman Muller were Belmond callers Thursday.

Mrs. H. K. Pals and daughter, Miss Grace, visited at the Verner Nelson home near Klemme, Thursday

Mrs. S. P. Fischer and children returned home from Mason City, last Wednesday, where Mrs. Fischer had been since her operation. They were accompanied here by Geo. J. Fischer who remained for a few week's stay.

Herman Fischer, Jr., and Oliver Sprau left Sunday for Ames where the former will continue his school work and Oliver begins his first year's work, taking up a course in electrical engineering.

Moody Quandt was numbered on the sick list last week.

J. B. Stauffer of Hampton and J. J. Tauffer of Marshalltown were business callers here Saturday. The latter remained until Sunday, visiting with old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Raecker are the parents of a baby girl, born Sunday, Jan. 2.

The Misses Sherrard and Hallie Ward returned Saturday from Centerville after spending the holidays with the former's relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Foss accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Louis Foss to Thornton, New Year's night, visiting at the James Hemming home.

Word was received here last week that Dick Muhlenbrock had passed away at his home near Latimer. Paul, George, Carl and Fred Hopkey with their families attended the funeral Wednesday, at Latimer.

Mrs. Kate Dirks was at Mason City several days last week taking treatments to prevent mastoid.

The Misses Irena Butz, Arloene Janssen and Bonita Muller, Oliver and Virgil Sprau, Donald Muller and LuVerne Butz were in Alexander New Year's night where they played during the evening's entertainment at the schoolhouse.

Miss Alma Doornkamp returned to her work at Alexander, Sunday.

Miss Ella Lacher spent New Year's day with relatives at Emmetsburg.

A. E. Muller, wife and children, Neva, Eleanor and Norman were visiting in Dows, Sunday.

Miss May Belle Sohl left Saturday for Lincoln, Neb., where she is finising her senior year of school work.

Miss Anna Pals returned Saturday from her visit at Morrison, Ill. She was accompanied by her friend, Mr. Louis Vandermeer, who will visit here for the week.

Carl Eckhoff left Tuesday last for Hollandale, Minn., where he will engage in truck farming the coming season.

Mr and Mrs. Frank Nissen and daughter, Virginia, returned home from Ames, Sunday, where Mrs. Nissen and Virginia had been visiting since Christmas. They were present at the wedding of Miss Dove Sloss which took place New Year's day.

"POLITICIANS

Reinbeck Courier: No doubt about the concerted effort on the part of demagogues and politicians to discredit Coolidge. These guys are playing on the string now that he is willing to relieve income tax payers, but is unwilling to do anything for the relief of agriculture. Our man Brookhart has joined this anvil chorus.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

If "demagogues" and "politicians" are saying that Coolidge appears to value the prosperity of the east and equally apparently seems to care little about the agricultural middle west only in as far as it effects the political fortunes of his administrations, they are only saying what the great majority of the people are saying and saying what even the old-line standpat Republican newspapers like the Nonpareil will find it hard to disprove.

Not that there is any condemnation of Coolidge in saying it. By birth, training, traditions and habit of mind Coolidge is acting just as he might have been expected to act. He is only "being himself." And he has never tried to be anything else. At no time during his last campaign did he make any promises to agriculture (except that he would appoint a commission to investigate conditions, which he did) nor did he show that he felt any sympathy for agriculture or even any realization that sympathetic attitude toward that industry was necessary.

If republicans in Iowa voted for Coolidge thinking that they were getting a friend of agriculture and the middle west in the president's chair they deceived themselves. Coolidge didn't do any deceiving. With all his faults there has never been any charge that was anything but open, honest, sincere and courageous in his attitude. He was what he was and as such he got a majority of 200,000 in the state of Iowa where not one percent of those who voted for him though with him on the one important issue as far as Iowa was concerned.

Any recent development of the real spirit of Iowa that is in violent conflict with the president's ideas of what is right and proper need not be set down as an answer to stirring appeals of the "politicians." It may be considered rather an awakening, a realization that the voters fooled themselves two yars ago and just found it out now. And certainly "politicians" very rarely mould public opinion. Statesmen may do so but politicians are more apt to follow hesitantly along after public opinion has taken shape.

INTERESTING CONVERSATION

If yu want to be a charming conversationalist, be a good listener. Draw out your companion in conversation. Find out, if you can, what are his chief interests and discuss these with him. Do not tell him what you know about them, but ask him his opinion and draw out his information. You will learn more so, and you will give him a better time. Everybody likes to talk about the things nearest to his heart and upon which he is best informed. Even the veriest clam will open up in conversation, if you strike his hobby.

OVERWEIGHT

There are those who are overweight because of deficiencies of glandular secretions, but the average man or woman who is too heavy is so because he or she eats too much and exercises too little. There is no get-thin-quick remedy which is safe and sane. The only road to "the perfect thirty-six" is by way of reduced diet and more physical activity. Walking is the ideal exercise for reducing. It takes you out into the open and refreshes the mind as well as the body. Walk three or four miles a day, if you would be fit. "Do not lose your legs" is the advice of a physician who laments the laziness of this auto age.

PLANT JARS

If you wish to make a plant jar particularly festive, paint the clay pot tan, green, gray or red. You may even stencil a design on it.

DATE TAPIOCA

Soak one cup of tapioca for two hours; cook in a double boiler for twenty minutes. Add a tablespoon butter, a half teaspoon salt, a half cup sugar, one teaspoon almond extract and a cup of chopped dates. Serve with cream, either plain or whipped.

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17; Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

Dr. R. E. Porter
Belmond's Pioneer Chiropractor
Eight Years' Experience
Hundreds of Patients That Have Received Joyous and Tingling Health
Country Calls Answered Day or Night
Over Griesy's Store
Phone 21 :: Belmond, Iowa

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

ATWATER KENT RADIO
We Wish You A Happy and Prosperous New Year
H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

STATEMENT OF CONDITION OF

Farmers Savings Bank

Organized under the laws of Iowa, located at Meservey, in the County of Cerro Gordo, at the close of business on the 31st day of December, 1926.

RESOURCES

Loans and discounts, bonds and securities		$289,968.16
Overdrafts		87.61
Banking House	$ 5,000.00
Furniture and Fixtures	3,980.00	8,980.00
Other real estate owned		22,911.26
Due from banks and bankers, cash and cash items		56,798.97
Other assets		630.67
Total Resources		$379,376.67

LIABILITIES

Capital stock	20,000.00
Surplus fund	5,000.00	$ 25,000.00
Undivided profits (after deducting expenses		5,391.30
Individual deposits subject to check	140,454.40
Savings deposits	8,235.15
Time certificates of deposit	199,432.48
Demand certificates, certified checks and unpaid dividends	863.34	348,986.37
Total Liabilities		$379,376.67

State of Iowa, Cerro Gordo County, ss.

We, A. J. Nissen, President; Conrad Bier, Vice President, and K. Clarence Ruigh, Cashier of the bank above named, do solemnly swear that the foregoing statement is full, true and correct, to the best of our knowledge and belief.

A. J. NISSEN, President
(SEAL) CONRAD BIER, Vice President
K. CLARENCE RUIGH, Cashier

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence by A. J. Nissen, Conrad Bier and K. Clarence Ruigh, this 4th day of January, 1927.

M. E. GEALOW
(SEAL) Notary Public in and for Cerro Gordo County.

Attested by: Jacob Nissen, Frank Hafermann, Wm. Messelheiser, and W. F. Butz, Directors.

Co-operation for 1927

Co-operation means so to conduct yourself that others can work with you.

We are ready, willing and able.

LET'S GO!

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

TO YOU AND YOURS
The Season's Greetings....
May this holiday time bring a full measure of joy and happiness, and the New Year twelve long months of contentment and Prosperity is the wish of

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

Clarence Cline, of Belmond, spent last week at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Mint Cline. Clarence recently returned from Iowa City, where he has been treated at the hospital there for a bad case of nervousness. He formerly attended school here and his many little playmates are glad to hear that he is much improved and is getting along nicely.

Joseph Burgess spent a few days last week at Belmend visiting at the home of his grandfather, Joe Smith.

Miss Irene Ness returned Friday to her work at Des Moines, having enjoyed a few days' vacation with her home folks.

The Camp Fire Girls spent a most enjoyable evening Monday of last week at the home of their guardian, Mrs. L. W. Wesenberg. The evening was spent socially and a marked feature was a Christmas tree which held a present for each one. An honored guest was Miss Olive Butts, teacher at Hills, Minn, who was formerly their assistant guardian. Miss Corrinne Wenzel of Belmond was an out of town guest. Tasty refreshments were served at the close of the evening.

Bert Hood, who recently returned from Des Moines where he had taken a course in barber work is now operating a shop in this city located in the office of the Hotel Chelsvig.

Carl Sandberg returned Saturday to Ames to resume his work at college.

Miss Mae Griggs is enjoying her vacation at her parental home. Mae is primary teacher at Gilmore City, Iowa.

Jay Graeber, of Elgin, Ill., and Roy Abraham, of Mariengo, Ill. came Tuesday to visit the former's brother, A. M. Graeber. On Wednesday the two former accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Graeber autoed to Kanawha to spend a few days with another brother, Fred Graeber.

Donnel Estelle went to Ackley on Wednesday to visit his sister, Mrs. George Wolfe.

Richard Clark, of Garner is a guest this week at the home of his uncle, W. F. Beier.

Mesrs. Melvin and Gerald Gordon returned Wednesday to their home at Traer having spent the past three week at the home of their cousin, Harry Carpenter.

Otto Kemp, of Ft. Dodge spent a few days last week at the home of his brothers, Paul and Theo. Kempt and sister, Mrs. Will Schlichting.

Veronica Finn and Bill Butts left on Monday for Iowa City to continue their college courses after a ten day vacation at their parental homes.

Forest Boren, who makes his home at Grundy Center with his uncle, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation with home folks. Forest attends school at Grundy Center and is in his senior year.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Robbins moved last week from Lee's parental home and are now living with Mrs. Robbin's uncle, Will Mongahen.

Miss Nettie Mason spent Friday at Belmond at the home of her niece, Mrs. John Thayer.

Mrs. E. J. Schneider, Doris and Frederick returned Saturday from Ames where they had spent a week attending the 4-H Club Short Course. Mrs. Schneider chaperoned thirty-six Hancock county club girls. They enjoyed interesting meetings during the week and a bounteous banquet on Thursday evening.

The Twin Lake Farm Bureau met December 29th for their annual holiday festivities at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Eliason. There was a fine program presented, consisting of songs and recitations in accordance with the holidays. Pupils of the different schools of the township gave the program, with Mrs. W. Warnock in charge and Miss Viola Rust as pianist. A grab bag was a feature of merriment. A sumptuous dinner was served to about eighty people. All in all it was a very successful meeting and the air seems laden with the old time spirit of "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men."

School reopened Monday with everyone back for work. The teachers had enjoyed the holidays at their respective homes except Principal Geo. O. Nelson who was forced to stay here due to the bad condition of the roads in Minnesota, making it impossible for him to get through with his car.

Gilbert Scott and Miss Mildred Remer, of Adel autoed here to spend the week end with Mildred's home folks, the Lew Remer family.

Miss Avis Wilson is quite ill at this writing suffering with heart trouble and anemia.

Julius Ahrenkiel suffered a severe attack of heart trouble late Saturday night but is much improved at this writing.

Misses Evelyn Thomas and Rhalston, of Meservey and Clara Herndon of Cedar Falls spent Tuesday with friends here.

Willie Boller went to Chicago Saturday evening. He will visit a short time there with his brother, Ed, and friends.

Joe Cordes and Miss Florence Long of Crescoe were over Sunday visitors at the Framer Cordes home.

E. W. Hood is enjoying a visit this week with his daughter, Marie and husband, from Des Moines.

Earl Clark and two sons, Robert and Gerald, of Charles City came Monday for a brief visit at the F. W. McNutt home.

L. W. Wesenberg accompanied Cato Grieuy, of Belmond to Ames Monday, where they will be until Thursday attending an implement convention.

Gerald Hill, of Clarion spent the fore part of last week with his sister, Mrs. Ed Hemmenway.

Relatives here received a message Monday of the death of Will Christie, whose home is at Dicky, North Dakota. Mr. A. C. Carpenter, Mrs. Del Christie and Mrs. Jeanette Wiles left Monday afternoon to attend the funeral. The latter is a sister of the deceased and the two former are brother and sister of Mrs. Will Christie. The Will Christie family were former residents of here and have a host of friends who will regret to hear the news.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gilligan and Lloyd Rourke, of Kanawha and Miss Marvel Gillispie, of Renwick were guests last week at the Anson Avery home.

The Claude Allie family enjoyed a visit Sunday with Claud's brother and family from Mason City.

Mrs. Tony Biller and Mrs. Gehardt Johnson, of Belmond visited relatives here, Sunday.

Eunice and Naida Wesenberg went to Meservey Wednesday to visit the latter's teacher, Miss Evelyn Thomas.

Clement Houghton, of Iowa Falls spent from Friday until Monday at the home of his mother.

Miss Ann Nolan returned Monday to her home at Grettinger, having visited the past week at the home of her sister, Mrs. Arthur Lowenberg.

Merle and Leslie Luick, of Ventura spent a few days last week at the home of their uncles, Messrs. George Luick and Al Mayhew.

Gertrude Cashman enjoyed a few days last week at Belmond at the home of her uncle, Will Parker.

Ray Christie returned Wednesday from Colfax, where he had gone for treatment for rheumatism.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Tanner entertained at their home Sunday Mrs. Tanner's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bates and her sister, Mrs. Verba and family, all of Garner.

A number of relatives gathered at the home of Mrs. James Christie on Wednesday evening and gave a surprise party for John Christie in honor of his twenty-sixth birthday. A good time was had with delicious refreshments served at the close of the evening.

Mrs. Eva Chase of Garner spent Friday at the home of her son, Clifford.

A party was held at the Elmer Boren home Sunday evening in honor of Forest Boren, who is home from Grundy Center. A large crowd of relatives and friends spent a most enjoyable evening.

Mrs. W. L. Thada and Jeane returned Friday from Mason City and Thornton, having spent last week there with relatives.

Church Notes

Missionary society was unable to meet Saturday due to the weather.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

M. E. Church Notes

Morning Worship— 11:00 a. m.
Sabbath School—10:00 a. m.
Junior League—Saturday p. m.
Epworth League—6:30 p. m.
Evening Service—7:30 p. m.

Home Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. W. A. Rietz Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Bounds will be the leader.

Congregational Church Notes

Sabbath School—10:00 a. m.
Junior Endeavor—6:30 p. m.
Evening Service—7:30 p. m. Rev. Pollosche, of Parkersburg will be here Sabbath evening.

Mission Study Club will meet Monday evening with Miss Letha Gunderson.

The Ladies' Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. H. J. C. Box on Thursday afternoon.

Miss Irene Steffens visited relatives here last week when enroute from her home at LaPorte to Ft. Dodge where she has accepted a position as saleslady.

Dannie Ramsey, of Belmond spent the week end with his cousins, Lindon and Kenneth Whitten.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Thomas and daughter, of Clarion, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jacobs of Goodell, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Mantle, Mrs. Ina Stumph, Garnette and Bernard, Douglas and Dale Farran were Sunday dinner guests at the Harold Gates home.

Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Stout and Wanda and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Whitten motored to Tama Saturday where they spent a few days at the Floyd Whitten home.

Miss Anna Beenen, of Alexander spent a few days last week visiting at the Ray A. Azeltine home and calling on other friends.

John Keith, of Traer visited his cousin, R. H. Keith last week.

Chas. Richards is on the sick list this week. Henry Wenzel is assisting with the chores at the Richards' home.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams entertained the following guests to dinner last Friday evening in honor of their brother, Clarence Williams, who left that evening for his home at Washington, D. C. Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Williams and family, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Harris and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. D. Halbrook and family; also Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schreck and son, of Hayfield and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Williams, of Flandrea, South Dakota.

The Epworth League entertained the Christian Endeavor in the church parlors on New Year's eve. A pleasant time was reported.

Mrs. Levi Johnson and daughters, who have spent the holidays at their parental, F. H. Fowler home, left Thursday for their home at Newton.

Darrell Baines, of near Dows spent last week with his cousin, Laurel Baines.

Glenn Liming is assisting Tom Ross in preparing for his sale. Mr. and Mrs. Ross expect to leave the farm March 1st.

Mrs. Harm Brinkman and daughter, of Dows were guests of Mrs. Hannah Whitten last week.

Mrs. Henry Miller and two daughters of Latimer visited last week at the home of the former's mother, Mrs. Etta Carr.

Miss Berniece Hansen very pleasantly entertained her Sabbath School class last Tuesday afternoon at her home.

Leroy Adamson of Fertile was a guest at the home of his brother, Supt. R. W. Adamson.

Edwin Nelson and family and H. L. Nelson spent the week end with their brother, Julius Nelson, of Hampton.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Keith, Margaret and Kenneth spent New Year's day at the home of a cousin, Mrs. James McGowan, at Renwick. A unique feature of the occasion was that out of the seventy-two persons present all were cousins.

Mrs. Mary Braden spent the week end at the J. E. Baines and Geo. Unger homes at Dows.

Mrs. Amy Gabelson, of Clarksville spent the week end at the home of her father, Frank Davis.

Harry Coffie, of Iowa City visited his friend, Chas. Keith last week.

Miss Alma Trusdahl, of Eagle Grove visited last week at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Elmer Burt.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

Alexander School Notes

School opened again Monday morning after the holiday recess with nearly everyone present. All teachers except Miss Tucker reported and she has not recovered from her illness of before Christmas. Her place is being filled by Mrs. Gaulke.

There will be school Saturday in order to make up the day lost before vacation.

Be on hand for the double header basket ball games Friday night when the Chapin girls and boys come for the return games. The teams broke even in their previous games and the locals are out to make it two straight this time. Come watch them do it. Admission 15c and 25c. 7:30 o'clock.

Full of pep—full of fun—the snappiest comedy show of the season will be shown Saturday night at the school house with Johnny Hines in "The Live Wire." It will give you laughs of a lifetime. Come on, it's big! Admission 10c, 15c and 25c. Show will start at 7:30 instead of 8:00 o'clock. Also good music will be furnished.

Our local declamatory contest will be held Tuesday and Wednesday nights, January 11 and 12. It is necessary to hold the contests two evenings due to the large number competing; there being twenty-two in all. On Tuesday night the Oratorical and Dramatic divisions will be given and on Wednesday night the Humorous. The programs will start at 7:30 and a small admission will be charged each night to cover expenses, namely 10c and 15c. Following are those entered in the contest:

Oratorical

Dale Allen—"The Storming of Mission Ridge."
Letha Bohlen—"The Martyr President."
Robert Harlow—"I Am An American."
Wilbur Latham—"American Immigration."
Boyd Rodemeyer—"The Prince of Peace."
Susie Schulte—"Masterful Man of the Ages."

Dramatic

Sylvia Arends—"The Arena Scene from Quo Vadis."
Bonnie Barker—"Midshipman Easy"
Dick Blau—"The Black Horse and His Rider."
Clara Dirksen—"The Sign of the Cross."
Lavonne Ingraham—"The Woodgather of Verseilles."
Mildred Larsen—"The White Hands of Telham."
Verna Larsen—"Laddie."

Humorous

Mildred Barth—"Putting On the Senior Play."
Donald Clark—"Tobias At the Oil Station."
Edith Edens—"Harry Says It With Flowers."
Wilbert Hansen—"Wives of Jamestown."
Bernadine Klinefelter—"Invitation of Mary Elizabeth."
Willard Latham—"Old Sam and the Dollar Mule."
Onida Myers—"At the Swimming Pool."
Miriam Packard—"The Lady Across the Aisle."
Ethel Schulte—"Billy Brad and the Forbidden Fruit."

In the Halverson and Iverson Essay Contest, "Your Home Should Come First," we did not win any prizes but Sylvia Arends and Edith Edens were given honorable mention.

Delinquent notices have again been sent out and we trust parents will do all they can to help bring these grades up to standard. Next week will end the first semester and a little hard work between now and May mean a passing grade.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Larsen and sons Elmer, Wilbur and Raymond were visitors at Hampton, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Veeder and daughter Virginia of Hollandale, Minn., are spending a few weeks at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nels Larsen, and other relatives and friends.

Thursday afternoon, Jan. 6, the Cemetery society will meet in the basement of the church. Hostesses are Mrs. Claas Symens, Mrs. Albert Larsen, Mrs. Rudolph Beenen and Miss Jessie Bell.

Miss Wilma Foughty of Iowa Falls is visiting at the home of her father, Will Foughty.

Mrs. Rudolph Beenen is spending a few days with relatives at Hampton.

Miss Ruth Beenen was a Hampton caller Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Douglas and son of Alden are visiting at the home of the latter's sister, Mrs. Otto Keislich.

Jesse Latham and Charlie Hopkey were at Fort Dodge, Friday, on business.

Miss Ethel Hall is visiting relatives at Bristow this week.

Paul Moody returned to Ann Arbor Mich., last Monday, where he is attending college, after spending the holidays with his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Moody.

Mrs. Harold Aigley of Belmond visited at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Polmateer Saturday afternoon.

Orlando Kelsey received word on Monday of the death of his father in-law at Cedar Rapids. Mr. and Mrs. Kelsey left that afternoon for Cedar Rapids to attend the funeral.

Miss Judith Inlay of Moville returned home the first of the week after spending several days at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Moody.

Leonard Arends left for St. Louis, Mo., where he is attending the Theological seminary of the Evangelical Synod after a two weeks' vacation with home folks.

There will be services at the St. John's Evangelical church Sunday Jan. 9. Sunday school at 2 p. m. Preaching service at 3. All services in the English language. You are welcome.

FINE TASTES

When choosing pieces for the phonograph parents could do much to cultivate fine musical tastes in their children if they would select the best opera gems and hymns. Having these about, the children will weave them into the fabric of their souls, and feel the natural elevation of spirit which comes from them.

Jazz has its place, just as the emotion it expresses is at times a part of our experience. But too much of it is degrading and coarsening. The following list of opera gems will guide parents in selecting wisely:

Bellini, "Yes, Time With Fate E'er Striving," and "Do Not Mingle" from "Somnambula."
David, "Thou Lovely Bird" from "LaPerle du Bresil."
Delibes, "Indiana Bell Song" from "Lakme."
Donizetti, "Mad Scene" from "Lucia di Lammermoor."
Gounod, "Song, Jest, Perfume and Dances" from "Romeo and Juliet," and "Jewel Song" from "Faust."
Lillo, "Tomorrow" from "Osteria."
Mascagni, Romanza from Cavalleria Rusticana.
Massenet, Scene and Gavotte from Manon, and "O Weep, Mine Eyes" from LeCid.
Meyerbeer, "O Robert, My Beloved" from "Robert il Dravolo"; and Shadow Dance from "Dinorah."
Ponchielli, "Star of the Mariner" from Gioconda.
Puccini, "If I Were Like You" from LeVilli; and "One Fine Day" from Madame Butterfly."
Thomas, "Knowest Thou the Land" and "Polonaise" from Mignon.
Rossini, "Here's Hope's Consoling Ray" from Semiramide.
Verdi, "Dearest Name" from Rigolette; "Was This the Man?" from LaTraviata; "Hernani, O Haste to Me" from Ernani; and Recitative and Romance from Aida.
Wagner, "Elsa's Dream" from Lohengrin.
Weber, "Ocean, Thou Mighty Monster" from Oberon; and "Softly Sighs the Voice of Evening" from Der Freichutz.

POLITENESS FOR CHILDREN

The easiest way to teach children courtesy, is to practice it before them. Say, "Excuse me," to your child every time there is occasion for it, and "Thank you", and "If you please," and you will not have to remind him. We are creatures of environment and one can teach courtesy—as well as bad grammar and swearing—by filling the atmosphere with that kind of thing. Language and mannerism of every kind are contagious. That is the reason that "Evil communications corrupt good manners." But politeness is just as "catching" as boorishness.

ESCALLOPED OYSTERS

For one pint of oysters use two cups cracker crumbs and a cup and a half of milk. Place in a buttered baking dish, alternate layers of cracker crumbs and oysters, having crumbs on top. Season each layer with butter, salt and pepper. Pour the milk over this and bake in a moderate oven half an hour or until the crumbs are well browned on top.

CHICAGO GREAT WESTERN

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

will be held at

BELMOND, IOWA

Wednesday, January 12, 1927

Afternoon: 1:30 to 4:00

Evening: 7:30 to 9:30

SPEAKERS

FOREST Henry, Dover, Minnesota.
J. J. Sprenger, Zumbro Falls, Minnesota.
T. A. HOVERSTAD, Chicago, Illinois.

Everybody Invited!

T. A. HOVERSTAD, Development Agent
Chicago, Illinois

For

January Investment

7 percent

Preferred Stock

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY

This is a stable, safe PREFERRED INVESTMENT in a time proven Company managed by the organization that has been successful for OVER 40 YEARS

The Company serves OVER 13,000 CUSTOMERS in over 80 COMMUNITIES

Its earnings are over $700,000 PER YEAR

Preferred Dividends are Paid each Three Months

The Price is $100 PER SHARE

YIELDS FULL 7 percent

Tax Exempt in Iowa

Free of Normal Federal Income Tax

Get the Particulars and our FREE new ILLUSTRATED BOOK from Securities Department

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY

515 Merchants National Bank Building
Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Kinseth's Store News

Here's hoping you had a pleasant time New Year's Day, and that the new year will be a happy one for you all thru the months!

A good resolution to make for the new year is to resolve to try trading at The Store on the Corner. If you do that, your chances of a happy new year will be vastly increased, because when a person saves money, he or she naturally is happy about it, and you'll save if you take advantage of the bargains we have.

There's flour, Snobread, at $2.25 a sack in five-sack lots. $2.35 single sacks. And it's real flour.

Macaroni and spaghetti for nine cents a package.

Navy beans in 5-lb lots for 38c.

Quick Naptha Soap, 6 bars for 25c.

Crackers, 2-lb box, for 34c.

Grape fruit 9c.

Big Four Soap at 38c for 10 bars.

And apples in baskets—Baldwins, Black Twigs, and others.

Above everything else, there is one thing you can always find in the Store on the Corner, and that is—SERVICE! Try it!

News About Iowa People and Events

Kenneth F. Baldridge, of Bloomfield, says that Pilot Garrison, driving the government mail plane on the Moline-Dallas route over Bloomfield, was forced to land Wednesday morning with a big load of valuable mail. Atmospheric conditions forced the landing. The fog, sleet and snow encountered on the trip from Moline to Bloomfield froze on the plane, causing great additional weight and the inability of the pilot to keep control of the machine. The plane landed on the Bloomfield emergency landing field and the precious cargo consisting of nine registered pouches, six ordinary pouches and three outside packages was transferred from the field to the Bloomfield post office and dispatched under armed guard to the K. C. train at 10:30 when itw as sent on its way south and west. One small package in the shipment called for $17 in stamps.

* * * *

Reports of diseased rabbits had no visible effect upon the demand for wild meat for the holidays. Dressed rabbits were selling at the municipal market for 50 cents and meat markets were getting 40 cents. The Fulton Market, a large distributor of such things to hotels and restaurants, received 5,000 bunnies Christmas week. These came from points along the branch of the C. B. & Q. running from Des Moines to Cainsville, Missouri. The larger number were Missouri rabbits. The Izaak Walton League will endeavor to get a law passed prohibiting hunting rabbits with ferrets. A Des Moines ferret farm sold 276 of the animals in December.

* * * *

The Maytag washing machine factory at Newton consumes 50 tons of aluminum every working day. Aluminum is secured from a certain kind of clay, and in its original form it is too soft for mechanical purposes and a copper alloy is used to harden it. Aluminum costs 17 1-2 cents a pound. Thousands of tons of aluminum junk is utilized in the foundry at Newton. That city fixes the price of aluminum junk in the United States. The Maytag factory shipped seven full trains of machines on Christmas week.

* * * *

For four winters the Des Moines Audubon society has assisted the National organization in the taking of a bird census. Sunday, December 26th was the day chosen for the observation. Eighteen members participated in the work, divided in eight groups and the timber tracts skirting the Des Moines and Coon rivers were visited. The tour covered 64 miles made on foot, and 36 different varieties of bird life were counted. That was eight more species than was found last season. The count totaled 4,385 birds. The following birds were seen: Sixty bobwhites, 1 mourning dove, 1 sharp shinned hawk, 4 Cooper's hawks, 1 red-tailed hawk. 1 red-shouldered hawk, 1 short-eared owl, 1 barred owl, 2 screech owls, 1 belted kingfisher, 37 hairy woodpeckers, 6 red-bellied woodpeckers, 15 flickers, 2 horned larks, 52 bluejays, 2,838 American crows, 1 bronzed grackle, 3 purple finches, 4 red polls, 35 American goldfinches, 189 tree sparrows, 2 chipping sparrows, 2 field sparrows, 263 slate colored juncoes, 38 song sparrows, 3 Lincoln wax-wings, 1 winter wren, 24 brown creepers, 86 white breased nut-hatchers, 7 red-breasted nuthatches, 112 tufted titmice, 410 black capped chickadees and 1 American robin. The result of the day's observation as telegraphed that night to the Bird Lore mazazine, the official organ of the society.

* * * *

Ice covered streets and highways have wrought great damage to automobiles in recent weeks. S. D. Henry, of Coon Rapids, Carroll county, says that Clifford Bell, of that town visited Des Moines one day when the ice was at its worst and he told about some auto wrecks that he saw in garages in the city. He said that one Lincoln car was so badly damaged that it would cost $2,100 to put it in running condition. But no one was hurt in the shakeup except the driver, and his wound was slight. An Essex came in a state of almost complete wreck, windshield and top torn away, and body twisted. In the accident a woman was killed. Saw cars from about every town in central Iowa in more or less damaged condition. In one garage twenty-five mechanics are employed on wrecked automobiles.

* * * *

W. C. Jarnagin says that "Storm Lake is yielding bigger catches of soft fish than ever before. The deputy state warden from Des Moines has been here and approved the work carried on by John Peterson's crew. Tuesday's haul netted 37,000 pounds of carp and buffalo, one of the biggest hauls on record. A preceding haul brought in 10,000 pounds mostly sheepshead and buffalo. Surprisingly few game fish have been taken. Ice cutting has been going ahead rapidly with ice from 12 to 14 inches thick and of fine quality."

Sam Carroll, of Keokuk, tells about a thrill received by an evening group of traveling men and other guests in the lobby of the Iowa hotel in that city the other night. A stranger rushed into the lobby and called the long distance operator and asked be connected with William Hall, the wild animal trainer at Lancaster, Mo. He talked out loud so that everybody heard him. "And I want ten elephants. Can you ship 'em right away? Good! And about 225 draft horses and fifty head of ring stock." The lobby gasped, wondered what sort of a joke it was, looked inquiringly at the clerk, and went into another humming, this time of wonder and questioning. The man at the telephone was J. A. Patterharpe, owner of the Forepaugh shows who had come from New York to see Billy Hall and had missed the train to Lancaster. Incidentally, and to some folks chiefly, he is the husband of Anna Case.

* * * *

Walter H. Beall, of West Union, says that a Fayette county herd of dairy cows has broken all Iowa records for one year's butter fat production. The herd is that of Davis, Hough and Gilley, in charge of Floyd Gilley, managing partner of the firm. Up to the year 1926 no other herd of dairy cows in Iowa ever produced so much butterfat per cow as this Fayette county herd with an average production in the twelve monthly tests in 1926 of 14,420 pounds of milk and 517.4 pounds of butterfat per cow. The average feed cost per pound of fat was 19 1-2 cents, and the average profit per cow, above feed cost, was $139. Theh igh test cow of the herd, "White Belt," a seven year old, produced over nine tons of milk, 18,044 pounds to be exact, and 702.7 pounds of butterfat. This brought in $210 in cream checks above feed cost. When a calf this cow cost Mr. Gilley $175. Her contribution to her owner's bank account since that time has been well over $1,000 above feed costs. The Gilley herd consists of eleven pure bred Holsteins.

* * * *

With 175,000 women participating in Farm Bureau activities the past year and 50,000 others actively aligned with movements set on foot by the Farmers Educational Union the farmers' wives and daughters in Iowa have challenged the members of women's federated clubs in towns and cities for a showing of results. Not only have the projects inaugurated by farm women been given prominence, but time and effort have been bestowed in organizing farm girls into 4-H clubs. As a climax to the season's activities, "Farm and Home Week" will be observed at the Iowa State College at Ames, January 31 to February 5th. In addition to members of the faculty who will make up the greater part of the speaking program, there will be a number of prominent women from various parts of the United States who will address meetings of the short course. Chief among these will be Mrs. M. W. Wood of Phoenix, Arizona, former head of the department of home economics at the University of Minnesota; Miss Harriet Goldstein, head of the art department of the University of Minnesota, and Miss Lita Bans, former national secretary of the American Home Economics Association.

* * * *

Roy A. Jarnagin, of Peterson, Clay county, tells about a public sale in that section that has the ring of other days to it. He says that the high price of the sale was $975 obtained for "Strongheart," the famous Shorthorn bull, head of the herd. He was bought by Carl Retzlas, of Walton, Nebraska. Another bull sold for $675 and another one for $440. The average price on the bulls was $340. The highest price brought by a cow was $500. The average for the entire 41 head in the offering was $208. Buyers were present from South Dakota, Minnesota and Illinois. Cam Sloss, of Peterson, was head chef at the roasting of the ox for the barbecue. The whole affair, the crowd bidding and all reminded one of the good old days when live stock was considered something of real value.

* * * *

Of the 2,000 young ladies who are enrolled at the Iowa State Teachers College at Cedar Falls, 221 are earning part or all of their expenses. One hundred thirty-seven are employed regularly and eighty-four are employed occasionally. Fifty girls work for both board and room averaging four hours per day; fifty-one work for board only averaging three hours per day. Thirty-two girls are employed in the college dining room and cafeteria while twenty-two girls work part time in the college library. Twenty-five girls are employed as clerks, stenographers, pianists or members of orchestras. It is estimated that $150 per day is earned by the young ladies of the Iowa State Teachers College in working their way through college.

* * * *

Inspector of High School normal training has been delegated by the new State Superintendent to Miss Clara Wallace, who began her work as a teacher in the rural schools of Washington county. She is a graduate from the Washington Academy and was a student at Monmouth College at Monmouth, Illinois, for two years. In 1919 she received the Degree of B. A. from the State University of Iowa, and at present is completing the requirements for an M. A. degree at the University of Chicago. She taught history in the Lake City high schools from 1919 to 1920 and was principal of the Ainsworth high school, the next two years. In 1922 she was chosen Superintendent of Schools of Washington county, and for the past three years has been normal training critic in the Davenport high school.

* * * *

Conesville, Muscatine county, was for years the shipping point from the most prolific melon farms in the country. Some years as many as 900 carloads were shipped, valued at $100.000. This condition prevailed from 1890 to 1915, then the vines began to die from wilt and the growing of melons was at an end. The soil became diseased and last summer Prof. D. R. Porter. plant pathologist at Ames, set up an experimental station down there at the request of the land owners in that vicinity and it is planned to continue the work in the hope of overcoming the difficulty. Years ago Prairie City, Jasper county, was the center of the largest potato growing section in Iowa but the soil became inoculated with some kind of a mold that made it impossible to longer grow potatoes. At one time Greeley, Colorado, was the greatest potato section in the west, but diseased soil put it out of business as far as potato culture is concerned. Cabbage growers in the vicinity of Muscatine have to fight "heart rot" and onion growers in Scott county had to learn how to avoid onion diseases. Spraying obviates destruction of many vegetables if the trouble is above the ground.

* * * *

Disposition of the $1,800,000 surplus left over after all claims had been met through the disbursement of the $22,000,000 bonus raised from a bond issue voted by the people of Iowa soon after the war, is to claim the attention of the bonus , board composed of the state auditor, the state treasurer, the adjutant general and the adjutant of the Iowa department of the American Legion. To date 102,728 bonus claims have been paid, 3,751 have been disapproved and 215 cancelled. Pending final decision on the distribution of the surplus, the board's policy is to reopen at any time consideration of claims disapproved. The 215 cancelled claims consist of duplicates and cases dropped from consideration at the request of the claimants themselves. The $1,800,000 soldiers' bonus surplus will probably be expended by the state bonus board in behalf of those who have suffered unkind fates since the war and who are beyond the reach of established veterans' relief agencies.

* * * *

Osage Mitchell county, has one of the finest high school bands in all Iowa. It is under the direction of Alvin Edgar, an Eldora young man, and has a membership of 53, composed of pupils from the 7th to the 12th grades. Prof. Edgar received special training in band music in Chicago. By continually keeping watch on the students in the lower grades and getting them started on playing he has a steady stream of material coming in.

PEPPER SAUCE

One may make an inexpensive and delicious pepper sauce, by purchasing dried peppers and letting them soak in vinegar. This seasoned vinegar, or pepper sauce is good to use with greens, cooked cabbage, meats or baked beans.

Announcing—

CHEVROLET

for Economical Transportation

The Most Beautiful CHEVROLET in Chevrolet History

TRULY the most beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet history! Truly an achievement which must immediately change all existing ideas as to what the buyer of a low priced car has a right to expect for his money!

Here is the irresistible appeal of unbroken, flowing body lines—of modish new Duco colors, fashionably striped—of notable smartness—of that flawless silhouette regularly associated with the costliest of custom-built creations.

Here are score after score of advancements in design, literally too numerous to list completely—but typified by one-piece full-crown fenders, bullet-type lamps, coincidental steering and ignition lock and large 17-inch steering wheel.

Here is definite assurance of longer life, more satisfactory operation and even greater economy—for all models are equipped with a new AC oil filter and an improved AC air cleaner!

Such features as these are usually found only on cars costing up into the thousands. They are marks of distinction on the world's finest automobiles. Yet these are now offered on The Most Beautiful Chevrolet because the spectacular growth of Chevrolet popularity has sent Chevrolet production to tremendous volume—and only the economies of tremendous volume plus inspired engineering make possible the manufacture of so fine a car to sell at Chevrolet prices.

We urge you to come in for a personal inspection. And we ask you to come, not in the customary casual mood—but actually anticipating the revelation you would expect when the world's largest builder of gearshift automobiles announces a completely new line of cars whose truly great value is based on irresistible beauty and a host of improvements including:

New AC Air Cleaner
New AC Oil Filter
New Coincidental Lock
Combination Ignition and Steering Lock
New Duco Colors
New Gasoline Gauge
New Radiator
New Bodies by Fisher
New Remote Control Door Handles
New Tire Carrier
New Bullet-Type Head Lamps
New Windshield On Open Models
New Heavy One-piece Full-crown Fenders
New Hardware
New Running Boards
New Brake and Clutch Pedal Closure

---with these amazing price reductions!

The COACH $595 — Former price $645

The COUPE $625 — Former price $645

The SEDAN $695 — Former price $735

The LANDAU $745 — Former price $765

The Touring Car $525 — Price includes balloon tires and steel disc wheels. Former price $535 with balloon tires only.

The Roadster $525 — Price includes balloon tires and steel disc wheels. Former price $535 with balloon tires only.

The Sport Cabriolet $715 — Entirely new model with rumble seat

1-Ton Truck ..... $495 (Chassis Only)

1-2 Ton Truck ..... $395 (Chassis Only)

Balloon tires now standard on all models.

All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich., effective January 1st, 1927.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY

Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY

Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

LYDIA of the Pines

by HONORÉ WILLSIE

W.N.U. SERVICE

COPYRIGHT by FREDERICK A. STOKES CO.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With her baby sister, Patience, Lydia returns from play to the untidy home of her impoverished father, Amos Dudley, at Lake City. Her father's friend, and her own devoted admirer, John Levine, after discussing affairs with Dudley, makes up his mind to go into politics.

CHAPTER II.—Lydia, Patience and a companion, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw from the nearby reservation. Lydia gives her food. Margery, small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. In their play Margery falls into the water. She is pulled out, unhurt but frightened, and taken home by Lydia and Kent. Her father calls on Amos to complain, blaming Lydia for the mishap.

CHAPTER III.—Lydia explains the accident and asserts that because Margery is considered "stuck up" she is not a popular playmate. Marshall arranges for Lydia to teach Margery to swim and otherwise become "one of the crowd." Levine tells Amos his plan to take timber from the Indian reservation and ultimately have it opened for settlement. From an older boy, Billy Norton, Lydia gets a pair of wild ducks, and despite their poverty the Dudleys have a Christmas feast.

CHAPTER IV.—Patience succumbs to an attack of diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost and her small world has collapsed. She finds comfort in the loving kindness of John Levine. Lydia learns that a note of Amos', backed by Levine and held by Marshall, is due and cannot be met. The child pleads with Marshall, and for her sake he agrees to renew the note.

CHAPTER V.—Grieving for the loss of little Patience, Lydia's health fails. Levine, understanding the situation, gives her a pup, which the lonely child takes to her heart. Reaching the age of fifteen, Lydia enters high school, where she at once realizes that her homemade frock and general appearance of poverty set her apart from her better-dressed companions. She attends a party given by her teacher, Miss Towne. The other girls, smartly dressed, make fun of her makeshift costume.

CHAPTER VI.—Levine is elected sheriff. A sixteen-year-old Indian boy, Charlie Jackson, tells Lydia of numerous wrongs done his people, mainly by Marshall and Levine. Lydia defends her friend vigorously. Meeting Levine in Lydia's house, Charlie Jackson threatens and endeavors to attack him.

CHAPTER VII.—Levine is shot by an unseen assassin. Recuperating at the Dudley cottage, he learns the real extent of Lydia's loneliness and her shaken faith in God. The man and girl enter into a compact to start a "search for God" together. Levine, recovered, begins his campaign for congress.

CHAPTER VIII.—Lydia is unable to drive the hatred of Levine from Charlie's heart, and despite herself her faith in her old friend is shaken by the young Indian's stories. Levine has long realized that despite their disparity in age he is passionately in love with the young girl.

CHAPTER IX.—Levine is triumphant in his campaign for congress. Lydia earns enough money selling fudge to go camping with Charlie, Kent, Margery and two school friends, Gustus Bach and a girl named Olga. Miss Towne chaperons them.

CHAPTER X.—Walking with Kent in the woods, Lydia witnesses a meeting of Levine and some halfbreeds. Their conversation convinces Lydia that Charlie has been right in accusing Levine of plotting to rob the Indians.

CHAPTER XI.—A visit from the old squaw whom Lydia had befriended long ago causes Charlie to tell more of Marshall's and Levine's thievery. Lydia promises to talk to Levine. Billy Norton makes a boyish proposal of marriage to Lydia, who repulses him. In her talk with Levine the man avers his methods are lawful and really best for the Indians. The girl is only half convinced.

CHAPTER XII.—Charlie tells Lydia his father was killed by halfbreeds at the instigation of Levine, and she is miserable at the thought. The family poverty also weighs heavily on her. She is elected class valedictorian. Billy Norton takes her to the senior ball, where she has her first girlish "wonderful time."

And though this was more easily said than done and the thought of murdered chiefs and starved babies troubled her occasionally, she did not really worry over it all as much as she might have were she not entering her senior year in the high school.

After the Christmas holidays Margery departed for an eastern finishing school. The night after her departure Kent made his first call on Lydia in many months. The two withdrew to the kitchen to make candy and there Lydia's surprise and pleasure gave way to suspicion. Kent seemed to want to talk for the most part about Margery!

"Hasn't she grown to be a beauty?" he said, beating the fudge briskly.

"She always was beautiful," replied Lydia, "though she's an awful silly. She never reads anything, and she flunked all her Thanksgiving examinations."

"Anybody as pretty as Margery doesn't need to be brilliant," said Kent.

"And she spoons, and you don't think much of girls that spoon." Lydia's cheeks were a deeper pink than usual.

"Shucks, don't be catty, Lydia!" growled Kent.

Kent called several times during the winter, but he never asked Lydia to go to a party nor did any of the other boy friends she saw daily in school—boys with whom she chummed over lessons, who told her their secrets, who treated her as a mental equal, yet never asked her to call, or slipped boxes of candy into her desk or asked her into a drug store for a sundae or a hot chocolate.

Nobody resented this state of affairs more than old Lizzie. After Kent's third or fourth call, she said to Lydia, closing the door behind him, "Yes. Kent'll come out here and see you, but I notice he don't take you anywhere. If you had fine party clothes and lived on Lake Shore avenue, he'd be bowing and scraping fast enough."

Lydia tossed her head. "I don't care about going to parties."

"You do, too," insisted the old lady. "You're eating your heart out. I know. I was young once."

Amos looked up from his paper. "Lydia's too young to go if they did ask her. But why don't they ask?"

"It's because I'm too poor and I live so far out and I don't spoon," answered Lydia. "I don't care, I tell you." And just to prove that she didn't care, Lydia bowed her face in her hands and began to cry.

A look of real pain crossed Amos' face. He got up hastily and went to Lydia's side.

"Why, my little girl, I thought you were perfectly happy this year. And your clothes look nice to me." He smoothed Lydia's bright hair with his work-scarred hand. "I tell you, I'll borrow some money, by heck, and get you some clothes!"

Lydia raised a startled face. "No! No! I'd rather go in rags than borrow money. We're almost out of debt now, and we'll stay out. Don't borrow, daddy," her voice rising hysterically. "Don't borrow!"

"All right, dearie, all right!" said Amos.

The matter was not mentioned again directly. But the little scene rankled with Amos. A week or so later he said at supper, "Lydia, I'm thinking seriously of moving. I can borrow enough money, I find, to add to the rent we're paying, to rent the old stone house next to Miss Towne's. My idea is to move there just till you finish college. Then we'll go out on a farm. But it'll give you your chance, Lydia."

Lydia hesitated. To move into the house next the Townes would be to arrive, to enter the inner circle, to cease to be a dowd. But—she looked about the familiar rooms.

"Daddy," she said, "would you really want to leave this cottage?"

"I'd just as soon," replied Amos. "Most places are alike to me since your mother's death. I could stand doing without the garden, if I had the farm to look forward to."

"How'd we pay the money back?" asked Lydia.

"After the Levine bill passes," said Amos, "I'll have a section of pines."

Instantly Lydia's sleeping land hunger woke and with it the memory of Charlie's tales. She sat in deep thought.

"Daddy," she said, finally, "we're not going to borrow, and we're not going to move again. What's the use of trying to make a splurge with borrowed money?"

"All right," said Amos, reluctantly. "But remember, you've had your chance and don't feel abused about our poverty."

"I won't," replied Lydia, obediently.

And, to her own surprise, she did feel less bitter about her meager, homemade clothing. She had had a chance to improve it and had resisted the temptation.

Late in March the valedictorian and salutatorian of the class were chosen. The custom was for the teachers to select the ten names that had stood highest for scholarship during the entire four years and to submit these to the pupils of the class, who by popular vote elected from these the valedictorian and the salutatorian.

To her joy and surprise, Lydia's was one of the ten names. So were Olga's and Kent's.

The day on which the election took place was cold and rainy. Amos, plodding home for supper, was astonished to see Lydia flying toward him through the mud a full quarter of a mile from home.

"Daddy, they elected me valedictorian! They did! They did! Olga got four votes and Mamie Aldrich ten and I got sixty-six. Daddy! And Mamie wasn't cross but Olga was. Oh, isn't it wonderful!"

"Valedictorian! My little Lydia! Scholarship and popular vote! I wish your mother was here. I'll write to Levine tonight. He'll have to be here for the exercises."

"And Kent is salutatorian. He won by just two votes. I've got to begin to plan about my dress."

"Now, I'm going to buy that dress, Lydia, if I have to borrow money. You aren't going to begin any talk about earning it."

"Oh, all right," said Lydia, hastily. "You won't have to borrow. White goods is always cheap and I'll get it right away so I can put lots of hard work on it."

"What's your speech going to be about?" asked Amos, as they turned in the gate.

"I haven't had time to think about that. I'll plan it all out while I'm sewing."

Billy did not congratulate Lydia. He passed her just as he had during all the months, with a curt little "Hello." To tell the truth, Lydia was heartily ashamed of herself for her shabby reception of Billy's plea. She knew she had been unkind and she missed the desultory companionship she had had with Billy.

The preparation of the dress went on amazingly well. The speechmaking was less simple. As was customary, Lydia chose the class motto, "Dulci Amor Patriae," for her subject and sweated inordinately to find something to say. She complained bitterly because during the four years at high school nothing at all was taught about love of country, or patriotism, or anything that would make the motto suggestive.

Amos answered her plaint indignantly. "Well, for heaven's sake! And you a descendant of the Puritans! Lord, what's become of the old stock! No, I won't help you at all. Think it out for yourself."

She and Adam Spent the Afternoon on the Lake Shore.

And think it out Lydia did, sitting on the front steps with her sewing and listening to the sighing of the pine by the gate.

There was but one flaw in Lydia's happiness. Nobody asked her to attend the senior ball that was to take place on graduation night. To be sure, it was not an invitation affair. The class was supposed to attend in a body, but there was, nevertheless, the usual two-ing and only a very few of the girls who had no invitation from boys would go. Lydia herself would have cut off her hand rather than appear at her own senior ball without a young man.

Mortified and unhappy, she avoided her mates during the last week of school, fearing the inevitable question, "Who is going to take you, Lyd?"

The tenth dawned a lovely June day. The exercises began at ten and by half-past eight Lydia was buttoned into her pretty little organdie, Lizzie was puffing in her black alpaca and Amos was standing about in his black Sunday suit, which dated back to his early married days. By nine-thirty they had reached the Methodist church and Amos and Lizzie were established in the middle of the front row of the balcony, while Lydia was shivering with fright in the choir-room, where the class was gathered.

Somebody began to play the organ and somebody else, who looked like Miss Towne, shoved Lydia toward the door and she led the long line of her mates into the front pews. A college professor spoke at length, then Kent appeared on the platform.

Good old Kent, even if he wouldn't take Lydia to parties! Kent, with his black eyes and hair, his ruddy skin and broad shoulders, was good to look on and was giving his speech easily and well, but Lydia was seeing him in a red bathing suit as he hung Florence Dombey from a yard arm of the willow. What a dear he had been! Now it all was different. They were grown up. This day marked their growing up and Kent didn't want to take her to parties.

Kent bowed and took his seat. The quartette sang and somebody prodded Lydia smartly in the back. She made her way up to the platform and began to speak automatically.

Amos with tight clenched fists and Lizzie with her lips a thin seam of nervous compression, were swelled with vanity and torn with fear lest she forget her lines.

But John Levine, who had dashed in late and stood unnoticed in the crowd under the gallery listened intently, while he yearned over Lydia's immature beauty like a mother.

"And so," she ended, "when we say good-by, you all must remember that we go out into the world resolved to live up to our motto. That we believe with our forefathers that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. That all men are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. And that because the New England people in the Middle West are far from the cradle of liberty where these ideas were born, living among foreigners it behooves the members of our class to carry our motto into their daily life. Love of country leads us, and so farewell!"

It was a foolish, sentimental little speech with one or two real thoughts in it and John Levine smiled even while the tears filled his eyes. He told himself that no one, least of all probably Lydia herself, realized the cynical application of the class motto to Lake City conditions.

The diplomas were distributed. The great morning was over.

After dinner Amos rushed back to the factory. Lydia hung the graduation gown away in her closet and she and Adam spent the afternoon on the lake shore, where the delicate splendor and perfume of June endeavored in vain to prove to Lydia that the senior ball was of no consequence.

After the supper dishes were washed she sat on the steps in the dusk with Adam's head in her lap when a carriage rolled up to the gate. A man came swiftly up the path. Lydia with a gasp recognized Billy Norton. Billy, wearing a dress suit and carrying a bouquet of flowers!

"Good evening, Lydia," he said calmly. "Will you go to the senior ball with me?"

Lydia was too much overcome for speech. She never before had seen a man in a dress suit! It made of Billy a man of the world. Where was the country boy she had snubbed?

"Here are some flowers I hope you'll wear," Billy went on, formally. "Would you mind hurrying? It's pretty late."

"Oh, Billy!" breathed Lydia, at last. "Aren't you an angel!"

In half an hour the two were seated in the carriage, an actual, party-going, city hack, and bumping gayly on the way to the ball.

Lydia's first dancing party! Lydia's first man escort and he wearing a dress suit and there were only two others in the hall! Who would attempt to describe the joy of that evening? Who would have recognized Billy, the farmer, in the cool blond person who calmly appropriated Lydia's card, taking half the dances for himself and parceling out the rest grudgingly and discriminatingly.

For three hours, Lydia spun through a golden haze of melody and rhythm. Into three hours she crammed all the joy, all the thrill, that she had dreamed of through her lonely girlhood. At half after eleven she was waltzing with Billy.

"We must leave now, Lydia," he said. "I promised your father I'd have you home by midnight. I want to get a stand-in with your dad because I want to take you to more parties."

"Oh, Billy! Do you!" breathed Lydia. "Well, I don't think there's any one in the world has nicer things happen to them than I do! Oh, Billy, just this waltz!"

At the end, Lydia looked up with a wondering smile. "I didn't know any one could be so perfectly happy, Billy. I shall always remember that of you—you gave me my happiest moment."

On the way home in the bumping hack, Billy seemed to relax. "Well, did I give you a good time, miss, or didn't I? Could Kent or Gustus have done better?"

"Billy," said Lydia, "last summer I was just a silly little girl. Now, I'm grown up. You were the swellest person at the ball tonight. You just wait till I tell your mother about it."

Billy went up the path with Lydia to the steps and held her hand a moment in silence after he said, "It's a wonderful night!"

A wonderful night, indeed! The moon hung low over the lake and the fragrance of late lilac and of linden blooms enveloped them. Youth and June moonlight and silence! A wonderful night indeed!

"You are very sweet, Lydia," whispered the young man. He laid his cheek for a moment against her hand, then turned quickly away.

CHAPTER XIII

The Indian Celebration

It was three or four days later that news came that the Levine bill had passed. It was a compromise bill as John had intimated it would be to the half breeds in the woods. Only the mixed bloods could sell their lands. Nevertheless there was great rejoicing in Lake City. Plans were begun immediately for a Fourth of July celebration upon the reservation. Kent to his lasting regret missed the celebration. Immediately after school closed he had gone into Levine's office and had been sent to inspect Levine's holdings in the northern part of the state.

Levine returned the last week in June and took charge of the preparations. Amos, who never had been on the reservation, planned to go and Levine rented an automobile and invited Lydia, Amos, Billy Norton and Lizzie to accompany him.

As they neared the reservation John halted the car.

On all sides but one were pine woods. The one side was bordered by a little lake, motionless under the July sun. On the edge of the pines were set dozens of tents and birch-bark wick-i-ups. In the center of the meadow was a huge flagpole from which drooped the Stars and Stripes.

Already the meadow was liberally dotted with sightseers of whom there seemed to be as many Indians as whites.

"Isn't it great!" cried Lydia. "What do we do first?"

"Well," said Levine, "I'm free until three o'clock, when the speeches begin. There'll be all sorts of Indian games going until then."

"This is just a celebration and nothing else, John, isn't it?" asked Amos.

"That's all," replied Levine. "We thought it was a good way to jolly the Indians. At the same time it gave folks a reason for coming up here and seeing what we were fighting for and, last and not least, it was the Indian agent's chance to come gracefully over on our side. He's done more of the actual work of getting the celebration going than I have."

"I wonder why?" asked Billy, suddenly.

"All there is left for him to do," said Levine. "Lydia, before the speeches begin, go up in the pines and choose your tract. I'll buy it for you."

"The whole thing's wrong," muttered Billy.

Levine gave him a quick look, then smiled a little cynically. "You'd better go along with Lydia and take a look at the pines," he suggested.

"I'd like to look at the pines again," said Lydia. "Come along, Billy."

They entered the woods in silence and followed a sun-flecked aisle until the sound of the celebration was muffled.

Billy leaned against one of the great tree trunks and stared thoughtfully about him.

"I'm all mixed up, Lydia," he said. "It's all wrong. I know the things Levine and the rest are doing to get this land are wrong, and yet I don't see how they can be stopped. I came up here last month to see how bad off the Indians were. And I saw the poor starving, diseased brutes and I cursed by white breed. And yet, Lyd, I saw a tract of pine up in the middle of the reservation that I'd sell my soul to own!"

There was understanding in Lydia's eyes. "Oh, the pines are wonderful," she exclaimed. "If one could only keep them forever! And I suppose that's the way the Indians feel about them, too!"

"It's all wrong," muttered Billy. "It's all wrong, and yet," more firmly, "the reservation is doomed and if we don't take some of it, Lydia, we'll not be helping the Indians—but just being foolish."

"To have it and hold it for your children's children," exclaimed Lydia, passionately. "You and yours to live on it forever. And yet, I'd see a dead Indian baby and starving squaws behind every tree. I know I would."

"I tell you what I'm going to do," said Billy, doggedly. "I'm going to get hold of that tract. I'm not going to deceive myself that it's all anything but a rotten thieving game we whites are playing, but I'm going to it, anyhow. I'll pay for it, somehow, and I'll go on doing what I can to see that the Indians get what's left of a decent deal."

The two listened to the wind in the pines, then Lydia said, "We must get back for the speeches."

Levine had just finished his speech when Billy and Lydia got within hearing, and he introduced State Senator James Farwell as the chief speaker of the day. His audience, standing in the burning sun, was restless. The Indians, understanding little that was said, were motionless, but the whites drifted about, talked in undertones and applauded only when as a fitting peak to all the efforts of the ages toward freedom, Farwell placed the present freeing of the Indians from the reservation.

"The fool!" said Billy to Lydia, as Farwell finally began to bow himself off the platform.

Levine rose and began, "Ladies and gentlemen, this ends our program. We thank—"

He was interrupted here by applause from the Indians. Looking round he saw Charlie Jackson leading forward old Chief Wolf.

"Chief Wolf wants to say a few words," cried Charlie.

"The program is closed," called Levine loudly.

There was a threat in Charlie's voice. "He is going to speak!" And there was a threat in the Indian voices that answered from the audience, "Let speak! Let speak."

Levine conferred hastily with Farwell and the Indian agent, then the three with manifest reluctance stood back and Charlie led the old Indian to the foot of the platform.

Old Wolf was half blind with trachoma. He was emaciated with sickness and slow starvation. Nevertheless, clad in the beaded buckskin and eagle feathers of his youth, with his hawk face held high he was a heroic figure of a man.

He held up his right hand and began to speak in a trembling old bass, Charlie's young tenor translating sentence by sentence.

"I come from the wick-i-ups of my fathers to say one last word to the whites. I have lived too long. I have seen my race change from young men strong and daring as eagles, as thrifty and fat as brown bears, to feeble yellow wolves fit only to lap the carrion thrown them by the whites, and to lie in the sun and die.

"And I say to you whites, you have done this. You swore by your God, in solemn council, that we could keep this reservation forever. With room for all the peoples of the world here, you could not find room for the Indian. You are a race of liars. You are a race of thieves. You have debauched our young men with your women. You have ruined our daughters with your men. You have taken our money. And now you are entering our last home with the hand of desolation. When the enemy enters the abiding place, the dweller is doomed. But I place the curse of the Indian Spirit on you and the land you are stealing. Some day it will be done to you as you have done to us. Some day—"

Levine stepped forward. "Jackson, take that Indian away," he commanded.

An angry murmur came from the Indians in the audience. A murmur that as Levine laid hold of old Wolf's arm, grew to strange calls. There was a surging movement toward the platform. Billy jumped on a box that he had found for a seat for Lydia.

"Charlie!" he roared, "Charlie! Remember there are women and children in this crowd."

"What do I care for your women and children?" shouted Charlie.

Then his glance fell on Lydia's golden head. She waved her hand to him beseechingly. Charlie hesitated for a moment, then spoke loudly in Indian to the crowd, and led old Wolf from the platform. The movement forward of the Indians ceased. The whites moved out of the crowd and for a moment there was a complete segregation of Indians and whites.

Billy got down from his box with a sigh of relief. "That might have been an ugly moment," he said, "if Charlie hadn't seen you."

The noise of hawkers began again, but something had gone out of the celebration. The Indians stood about in groups, talking, Charlie and Chief Wolf the center always of the largest group.

Amos and John joined Billy and Lydia at the machine. "The war dancing begins at sundown," said Levine. "I told the Indian agent 'twas a risk to let them go on, after this episode. But he laughs at me. I don't like the look of things, though. I don't know but what I'd better get you folks home."

"I don't think Charlie Jackson would stand for any violence," said Billy.

"I don't know about that," Levine spoke thoughtfully. "He's left Doc Fulton and is living on the reservation again. They always revert."

"Listen! Listen!" cried Lydia.

There was a red glow behind the clouds low in the west. From the foot of the flagpole came a peculiar beat of drum. A white can beat a drum to carry one through a Gettysburg. An Indian can beat a drum to carry one's soul back to the sacrifice of blood upon a stony altar. This drum beat "magicked" Lydia and Billy. It was more than a tocsin, more than a dance rhythm, more than the spring call. They hurried to the roped-off circle round the flagpole, followed by John and Amos.

Into the ring, in all the multi-colored glory of beads and paint, swung a dozen moccasined braves. They moved in a step impossible to describe—a step grave, rhythmic, lilting, now slow, three beats to a step, now swift, three steps to a beat. Old chiefs, half blind with trachoma, scarred with scrofula and decrepit with starvation; young bucks, fresh and still strong, danced side by side, turned by the alchemy of the drum into like things, young and vivid as dawn.

Lydia shivered with excitement. Billy pulled her arm through his.

"I don't like this," he muttered.

"I don't believe they mean any harm," said Lydia. "Lots of the whites started home before sunset, anyhow."

"I wish you had," replied Billy. "Gee, here it comes."

The chant suddenly changed to a yell. The drum beat quickened, and the great circle of dancing Indians broke and charged the crowd of whites. A number of them drew revolvers and began firing them into the air. Others drew taut the great bows they carried. The whites plunged backward precipitately.

"Kill 'em whites!" shrieked the squaws.

"Run 'em whites off our reservation!" shouted half a dozen young bucks.

Lydia was trembling but cool. "Good for them! Oh, Billy, good for them!" she exclaimed.

Thus far the whites had taken the proceedings as a joke. Then a white woman screamed—

"Run! It's a massacre!"

"Massacre" is a horrifying word to use to whites in an Indian country. Men and women both took up the cry—

"It's a massacre! Run!"

And the great crowd bolted.

Like pursuing wolves, the Indians followed, beating the laggards with their bows, shouting exultantly. Billy caught Lydia round the waist and held her in front of him as well as he could.

Then Lydia heard Billy's voice in her ear. "If this isn't stopped, it will be a massacre. We've got to find Charlie Jackson. He caught a screaming squaw by the arm.

"Susie, where's Charlie Jackson?"

She jerked her thumb back toward the flagpole and twisted away.

"All right! Now we'll make for the pole, Lydia, get behind me and put your arms round my waist. Hang on, for heaven's sake."

Lydia did hang on for a few moments. But the flight was now developing into a free-for-all fight. And before she knew just how it happened, Lydia had fallen and feet surged over her.

She buried her face in her arms. It seemed an age to her before Billy had snatched her to her feet. In reality she was not down for more than two minutes. Billy swung her against his chest with one arm and swung out with his other, shouting at Indians and whites alike.

"You d—d beasts! You dirty d—d beasts."

Lydia, bruised and shaken, clung to him breathlessly, then cried, "Go ahead, Billy!"

Continued on page seven

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Cato C. Griesy spent New Year's Eve with friends in Mason City.

Miss Minnie Geitz, of Iowa Falls, spent New Year's at the home of her mother, Mrs. Philip Geitz.

Mrs. G. F. McBurney spent the week end with her son, Philip, and wife, at Cedar Rapids.

Mr. and Mrs. Eph Holm and Mr. and Mrs. Ole Holm spent New Year's day at the Rev. Holm home, in Eagle Grove.

Miss Wilma Trumbell returned on Sunday to her teaching duties at Swaledale.

Rev. S. U. Leinbach was elected president of the Wright County Farm Bureau at the annual meeting in Clarion, Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clair Christie and little daughter, who have been visiting his parents and other relatives here, returned to their home in Ames, Saturday.

Mrs. H. G. Nordschow was called to Perry, Monday, by the illness of a relative.

Fred Rulter went to Oakdale Saturday, to visit his two sons, Andrew and Harm, who are receiving treatment there. Andrew has been at the sanitarium the past two years, Harm going about six weeks ago.

Mrs. Gus Ziska went to Dows last Friday, where she spent New Year's visiting friends.

Mrs. Dan Brooks is reported as being quite ill this week.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Skovlin, from Mason City, were week end guests of Belmond relatives.

New Year's day was observed by the banks and postoffice, the former closing all day and the latter part of the day. Business houses mostly remained open thruout the day the same as usual on Saturdays.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 1.—Mac. J. Thompson, closing out farm sale. Particulars later.

FEB. 8—Roy Jenison. Spotted Poland sow sale.

FEB. 9.—Maxwell Baker, Poland China hog sale.

FEB. 12—J. M. Sampson, Spotted Poland bred sow sale.

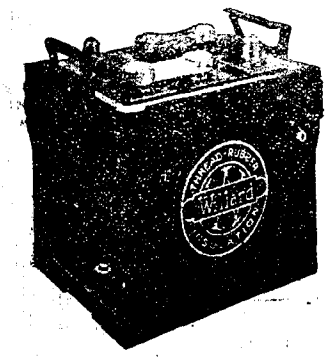
FEB. 17—Harry Ziska, Duroc Jersey bred sow sale.

FEB. 10—G. Gobeli, farm sale, location 4 miles north, 1-2 mile west of Meservey.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

READ THE WANT ADS

Will Your



BATTERY STAND
COLD WEATHER INSPECTION?
IF YOU ARE NOT SURE—
BETTER STOP AROUND
AND LET US
TEST IT OUT FOR YOU.

Belmond Storage Battery Company

BELMOND, IOWA

Phone 46 Official 2417

Mrs. Floyd Lewis and son, of Tracy, Minn. were holiday guests at the home of Mrs. Lewis' mother, Mrs. Val Griesy, and with other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Con. Nissen motored to Eldora to spend New Year's with Mr. Nissen's brother, John, and his mother, who is staying with her son there this winter.

Nissen Bros., proprietors of the City Market, have started the new year right by taking a year's advertising contract with The Independent. They will have some money-saving specials listed each week, which housewives will find to their advantage to read. The first ad of their contract appears this week.

Cato C. Griesy left Monday by auto for Ames, where he is attending an implement dealers' convention being held there this week. He was accompanied by the implement dealer at Meservey, C. J. Wendel, and by the Goodell dealer, L. W. Wesenberg.

Orval Kent, employed at the sugar factory, was struck on the head by a gate at the car dump while at work one day last week. Intense headaches developed in a few days and an Xray by Dr. Steele showed an indentation of the skull. Mr. Kent was sent to Iowa City for an operation to relieve the pressure on his brain.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee W. Stacy and family motored to Bradford, Sunday, where they spent the day with relatives.

Miss Ethyl Thompson, of Klemme spent New Year's with home folks here, returning to her duties in the First National Bank at that place, Monday.

Mabel Cullinan left for Belmond Tuesday after spending several days in Klemme. She expects to leave for Iowa City again Thursday.—Klemme Times.

Big Dance Friday night, January 7, Belmond Opera House. Music by Neota Ridder and her Syncopating Savages. Dance tickets 75c a couple.

Miss Jane Wilson, of Irwin, Iowa is the new teacher in the Junior High, at school. Miss Wilson takes the place of Miss Lois Thompson, who resigned at Christmas time to be married.

Prof. and Mrs. H. J. Williams enjoyed as their guests over New Year's, Mr. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Williams, of Sibley, and his brothers, H. R. Williams, Jr. of Des Moines, and R. C. Williams and family. of Jessup.

Mr. and Mrs. Mc. J. Thompson went to Britt, Monday, to attend the funeral of a friend, Charles Howlet, an old resident of that place.

Mr. C. R. Trumbell, of Belmond visited at the Sumner Trumbell home Monday.—Klemme Times.

Dr. J. E. Wallace, of Ionia, South Dakota, came last week for a visit with his wife here. Dr. Wallace has been in South Dakota the past year or so, looking after extensive real estate interests there, having a ranch of some 2500 acres in that state.

Have you tried our New Bread? Our bread business increased over 200 percent. Made from Occident flour. Barban's Bakery.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Davenport drove to Cedar Falls Tuesday, taking Beatrice, who is attending the college there. Mrs. Davenport had the misfortune of slipping on the icy walk at the college grounds and fracturing her wrist.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Hildebrand are the parents of a baby boy, born Friday, December 31. The new son has been named Roger Merle.

O. L. Varland and family motored to Northwood to spend New Year's with relatives.

Dick Dirks and Miss Tillie Pals of Meservey were guests at the home of Mrs. H. Mennenga, Sunday.

Jean Elder entertained a number of her girl friends at a Father Time party, Friday.

Mrs. Tom Johnson left Wednesday for her home in Grand Forks, North Dakota, after attending the funeral of Mrs. J. N. Johnson, recently.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—We have a number of slightly used Standard Incubators, capacity from 300 to 1200. These machines are in good condition and are priced to sell.—Mrs. Harold Smith, Alexander, Iowa. 8tf

FOR SALE—Remington portable typewriter, good as new. Can be seen at Independent. $35. 72c

FOR SALE—Home grown potatoes. Sound and ripe. Lawrence Gealow. Phone 285, or inquire at Independent. 5tf

FOR SALE—Millet hay, 25 to 30 tons. Reasonable price. C. H. Bernahl, 2 miles south and 1 mile west of Meservey. 1*

FOR SALE—1926 Ford truck. Also 1926 Ford coupe. Elmer Larson.

FOR SALE—Pure bred Bronze Turkey gobbler. John Chapman. Phone 3713. 82*

FOR SALE—Fresh heifer, Shorthorn. John Chapman. Phone 3713.

FOR SALE—Light Brama Roosters. $1.50 each.—Mrs. I. F. Bier, Meservey, Iowa. 72c

FOR SALE—Pure bred Spotted Poland China boar. 1 year old last September. —Karl Johansen, Alexander, Iowa. Phone 8704. 72*

FOR SALE—High grade Hampshire gilts, cholera immune.—S. U. Leinbach. Phone 118. 7tf

FOR SALE—My farm, 4 miles southwest of Belmond. For price and terms, inquire at State Bank of Belmond.—Aug. Hunst. 94*

WANTED—Single man to work on farm. Must be experienced. Inquire at Independent. 82*

SPECIAL for Saturday, Cinnamon Rolls 15c per dozen. Barban's Bakery.

Eddie Christie and Harold Johnson left Monday for Milwaukee, Wis., where they will attend a business school.

Andrew Larson is spending a few weeks at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harry Ziska, and family, near Kanawha.

Miss Mildred Jacobson entertained a number of friends at a New Year's party, Monday evening.

Mrs. Theo. Wright will be hostess to the M. E. Missionary society, this afternoon.

H. F. Peterson recently purchased a fine new Packard sedan.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Tyrrell went to Beaumont, Texas, last week, to attend a family reunion of the Tyrrell family.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church was held in the church parlors last week Tuesday.

A number of the Belmond friends of "Dad" Engles, who conducts a fishing resort on Cross Lake, Minnesota, held a party for him last evening in the library parlors, "Dad" being down here on a visit.

School opens today after the holiday vacation.

Mrs. John Lieuwen has been ill the past week or so with the flu. Mr. Lieuwen has been numbered among the sick for some time past.

1/3 Off

In order to make room for the spring Embroidery stock we are offering

All Fall and Winter

Embroidery Packages at 1-3 Discount

Final January Clearance of All Velvet Hats

The Hat Shoppe

Belmond, Iowa

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	20c
Springs	20c
Roosters	10c
Ducks	18c
Geese	15c
Eggs	30c
Butterfat	48c
Creamery Butter	53c
Oats	38c
Corn	50c
Barley	55c

Also

"Home Scouts"

An F. B. O. Comedy

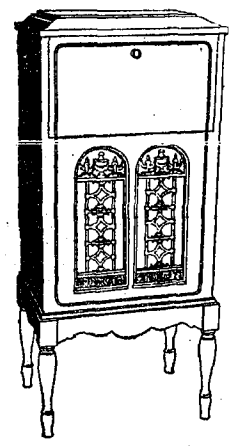
SATURDAY and MONDAY

January 8 and 10

Belmond Opera House

Prices 10c and 20c

Pfanstiehl Overtone Radio



Single-tuned Six Console

with built-in speaker

FOR the following important reasons this six-tube Pfanstiehl set is ideal for home entertainment.

1. It is easy to tune. A single tuning knob quickly locates the wave length desired. Tunes at once with precision.
2. Its tone is superb. The Pfanstiehl is noted for its faithful reproduction of overtones, on which depends the beauty of all fine music.
3. It has a built-in "overtone" speaker—horn and unit sympathetically adjusted to the overtone receiver—resulting in extraordinary tone balance.
4. The cabinet is compact—only 18" wide—with room for all accessories needed; handsomely finished in hand-rubbed walnut with ornamental metal grill over speaker opening.

It will be a pleasure to show you this new Pfanstiehl. The price is $210. Demonstration in your home, if desired.

Schultz Drug Co.

Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Thursday - Friday
Saturday
January 6-7-8

HALF HOGS
PER POUND
18c

ONE TON OF LARD!
WE HAVE JUST RERECEIVED A TON OF LARD, WHICH WE ARE SELLING IN 60-LB. TUBS AT PER POUND—
15c

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market

Nissen Bros., Props.

Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Loats' Savings!

You remember this store went on the cash basis January 1, and promised you the same high quality groceries at lesser prices. This week we offer a few samples:

CORN, was 15c, now 11c
PEAS, were 15c, now 11c
WHEAT FOOD, Purety, was 25c, now 20c
MILK, tall can 10c
CREAM OF NUT OLEO ...25c
RAISIN BRAN 15c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S

BELMOND Iowa

PHONE 38

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, January 6, 1927. No. 39

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

Along with all your other friends, we wish you a Happy New Year. May prosperity in 1927 stick to you closer than a postage stamp!

—

We have made a lot of resolutions for the New Year but they can all be summed up in two words — BETTER SERVICE.

—

We're going over to Lathrop's cigar store and try this:
"How much are those cigars?"
"Two for a quarter."
"How much for one?"
"Fifteen cents."
"All right, I'll take the other one."

—

The lumber business is just like any other business. We have to make a profit or quit. Everybody understands that. And we've never met anybody who objects to paying a reasonable profit—so long as it is reasonable.

—

The morchant's ever glad or sorry,
When he's added up his inventory.

"Where in the blankety-blank can I wash my hands?" roared the rough burley to the hotel waitress.
"Go right down the hall," she replied sweetly, "you'll see a sign that says 'For Gentlemen Only,' but don't you mind that—go right on in."

—

Why buy an inferior coal, when you can get good coal, high in heat units and low in foreign matter, for just a little more money?

—

"Quality is Economy."

—

Again we say it, A VERY HAPPY NEW YEAR TO YOU!

ALWAYS DEPENDABLE

YOUR INVENTORY---

Have you taken it yet? If you are in business, probably you have. But have you taken your financial inventory.

Every adult, whether in business or not, can well afford to go over his or her finances once a year and learn just where they stand. If your financial condition is not what you would like it to be, start now to build it up. A Savings Account started with one dollar in this Bank will do it.

We Pay You Five Percent Interest

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND IOWA

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, JANUARY, 13, 1927 | NO. 9

BELMOND GATHERS IN FIRST GAME

High School Basket Ball Team Defeats Dows In First Of Winter Games, Friday.

PLAY CLARION SATURDAY

Friday evening the Belmond basket ball quintet defeated the fast Dows team, on our floor, by a score of 16 to 12. This was the first regularly scheduled basketball game of the season, altho we defeated the B. H. S. Alumni before the holidays. At the end of the first quarter, Belmond had two field baskets to its credit, while Dows had not been able to make a single goal. The second quarter was the only period of the game in which Dows became dangerous. By several long shots they scored four field baskets, while Belmond scored only two points on free throw and the half closed with Dows leading, eight to six. Belmond came back strong in the third quarter, caging the ball four times while holding its opponents' to two field baskets. In the final period Dows was held scoreless while Belmond scored its final field basket. The game was a fast one, being especially notable however, for the smaller number of personals called. The feature of the game was the splendid team work of the Belmond. The Belmond boys played an offensive game practically all the time the excellent short-passing game of McNulty and the two Johnsons constituting the best brand of basket ball which Belmond as seen for some time. However. Belmond needs practice in basket shooting. their principal weakness being in failure to find the basket. The excellent showing of the Belmond quintet gives promise of some extra fine cage contests this winter.

Beginning with the third and last number of the Lyceum course, Wednesday evening, at 8:15, followed by the first round of the state debate series Thursday evening at 7:30 and closing with two basketball games with Clarion Saturday evening, activities in high school will get in full swing this week. Including the school orchestra which will play several selections before the debate, about 35 individuals will participate in activities of the school these nights.

There will be no admission charge for the debate Thursday evening.

Friday morning the regular high school assembly was held. Miss Waugh conducted the assembly in singing two or three songs and Miss Thomas made several announcements concerning the schedule for semester examinations which will be held next week Wednesday, Thursday and part of Friday. Miss Thomas also formally announced a slight change in the curriculum. The substance of the change is in the discontinuing of the subject, Commercial Law, and inserting the subject, Biology. Both subjects come in the Junior year so there will be no noticable rearrangement of schedules. Supt. Williams will be the instructor of the new subject. Mr. Williams has had both training and experience in teaching along this line and will undoubtedly provide an interesting and worthwhile course, which from present indications will also be a popular one.

Thursday evening of this week the first round of the state debate series takes place. Belmond has two teams entered in this contest, one arguing the affirmative, and one the negative side of the question. The negative team, consisting of Lucile Skouge, Helen Luick and Randall Klemme will go to Garner and debate the Garner team there. The affirmative team Harriet Martin, Richard Gowdy, and Ruth Ramsay will debate Clarion in the Belmond auditorium. The question for debate is: Resolved, That Congress Should Enact Legislation Embodying the Principles of the Haugen Farm Relief Bill.

The question is selected thru the Department of Speech, of the Iowa State University. It is a question that should be of interest, not only to all the farmers, but to everyone interested in agriculture and its position. If you have made a study of the question and its relation to the life of the nation you will be interested in hearing what high school pupils can do with the subject. If you want to know more about farm relief, whether you have a decided opinion about it or not, come out Thursday evening and let the debaters tell you what prominent statesmen and economists have to say about such a plan and what its leading advantages and defects are. And incidently lend a little moral support to your home team by showing them that you are back of them. No admission will be charged. At different times in the past visitors have complimented Belmond on its public spirited interest in the scholastic activities of the high school. This year we have every reason to be optimistic concerning the debating season for out of the six people debating, two were on the team which defeated Mason City last year, and three of the others have had good debating experience, so don't fail to do your part in once more "putting Belmond on the map."

Harold Peyton, of the 5th grade, and formerly in Miss Heggen's room has left school.

The Junior sigh school boys had their first basketball practice session Monday evening.

Roy Barron entered Miss Quigley's room this week.

John Dempsey has been absent since vacation because of illness.

Donald Thomas was enrolled in Miss Nelson's room Thursday.

Lavonne Peyton, a member of the 4th grade, has moved to Clarion to live.

The following members of the 4th grade have received the new bronze Palmer Method awards for their work in penmanship: Jane Holtzbauer, James Gowdy, Edith Greenwood, Irene Greenlander, Mary Stadtlander, Keith Madsen, Lucile Steinlicht, Wilbur Luick, Mursel Bohning, Lillian Johnson, Gwendolyn House, Markeson Varland, Arthur Johnson, Helen Olsen, Laurette Hood, Naomi Roosevelt, William Stadtlander, Doris Berghefer, Billy Luick, Alec Zeiger, Corene Dorr, Franklin Kelly, Bartlett Davenport, Lois Stapley, Charles Norby, LaVonne Peyton. The remaining six members of the class are working hard on the drills. We hope to make the class 100 percent perfect before the end of the month. All of the class are continuing the work for the higher awards.

Richard Gowdy won the typing medal this week with a speed of 45 words a minute, defeating Harriet Martin by five-sixths of a word.

Several students, both in the grades and in the high school, have enrolled in Miss Waugh's violin class and regular practices will be held on Wednesday nights after school.

The high school orchestra, composed of students from the Junior high and the high school will play at the debate, Thursday evening.

The Junior high operetta which was postponed will be given in about three weeks.

A music memory contest will be held in the Junior high Friday afternoon. A number of records will be played on the phonograph, the student giving the most nearly correct list of the names of the pieces played, and their composers receiving a prize.

Check Artist Trims Garner

The Otto Shreck, an alleged check artist, was taken into custody last week by Garner officials at Owatonna, Minn., charged with passing worthless checks in Hancock county under the name of "M. E. Johnson." It is also suspected that Shreck and a partner broke into a hardware store in Owatonna, and charges are now pending against Shreck for forgery and breaking and entering. He has been identified by two merchants as the man who defrauded them with worthless checks.

FARM BUREAU IN ANNUAL MIXER MEETING, JANUARY 14

The Wright County Farm Bureau will hold their annual good fellowship mixer in the Church of Christ, Clarion, Friday, January 14, at 8:00 o'clock. A good program, community singing, two short plays, used in the little country theatre at the State Fair, Des Moines, and a short address, a get-acquainted recess and eats, make up the evening's entertainment. A good turnout of Farm Bureau folks and friends is looked for.

Conspiracy

ELDER SUED FOR BIG DEBT

"Dad" Ingalls Claims He Offers To Pay With Buckwheat

"DAD" Ingalls, of Cross Lake, Minnesota, came drifting into town last week looking for a hired man and incidentally visiting some of the noted anglers of the community. Probably, if "Dad" would tell the truth—which, of course, a good fisherman always does—he would admit he sort of hankered for a few yarns with the gang. "Dad"—that's the only name anyone who has ever visited his fishin' resort on Cross Lake ever calls him—is 80 years young, or will be next May. With those few years, he naturally travels pretty slowly, never exceeding 50 miles an hour, and there being so many folks in Belmond who wanted to see and visit with him, some of the boys got up a party Wednesday night at the library parlors, where some 50 or 60 friends had the opportunity of shaking Dad's hand and telling lies.

To adequately describe this party is rather difficult, inasmuch as The Independent always aims to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, providing it possibly can. After Louis Luick had furnished the music with his fiddle for Jack Dempsey to clog, Claude Benson called the meeting to order. It seems that Geo. Elder owed Dad a debt, brought about in some doggoned way, and hadn't paid it altho Dad had sent him a statement and enclosed stamp for reply, George keeping the stamp but not replying. Dad alleged George had offered to settle with buckwheat, and he thought George was trying to pass the buck. To maintain the good name of the town, settle an honest debt, and remove the only obstacle to Dad's enjoyable visit, a kangaroo court was organized and the case tried, Atty. Bullard acting as Ingalls' lawyer and Atty Henderson for Mr. Elder. Six good men and true were picked to decide the question, being chosen for their good looks and brand of cigarettes—"They satisfy."

Character witnesses were called in the persons of C. O. Fitts, Clyde Jennings and Fred Johnson, and the reputation of both parties to the case established—very definitely established. The evidence introduced tended to show that Dad had a tender heart and knew a great deal about ice houses, but that his memory was exceedingly poor on some points. Mr. Elder was shown to be a good man, also, a friend of the bereaved, but a man who disliked dogs. After examining, cross examining and criss cross questions, the case was submitted to the jury, which retired to the kitchen, had a drink, and returned evenly divided—three saying both were guilty, and three declaring they couldn't determine which of the two principals was the biggest prevaricator, so voting not guilty. Everybody had a doggone good time, including Dad.

The evening was topped off with oyster stew, (built by "Cy" Packard), coffee, sandwiches and pickles.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip McBurney of Cedar Rapids spent the week end at the home of Philip's parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. F. McBurney.

SHIPPING ASSC. HAS FINE YEAR

Manager Christie Gives Annual Report At Saturday Meeting

The Belmond Co-Operative Shipping Association met at the Belmond library basement Saturday, January 8th. Lunch was served to about 75 members and friends. O. J. Jenison and Geo. Thompson were elected directors for a term of three years.

After a short musical program a splendid talk was given by Mr. Ames, of Chicago.

The following report of the manager was read and approved:

Returns and Deductions

Gross Sales	$138,986.72
Market Net	184,082.33
Chicago Deductions,
Freight Commission,
Yardage and Feed	4,904.39
Amount paid to Shippers	$132,906.27
Manager's Commission	480.98
Local Car Expense	397.39
Received from Members for Sinking Fund	297.69
Market Net	$184,082.33

Cash Account

Balance Dec. 31, 1925	$278.59
Received from Railroad Co. (Claims)	140.92
Insurance received from Members	297.69
Paid out Claims for Stock		$482.32
Telephone		8.10
Paid out for Annual Meeting (1926)		26.75
Paid out for Stationery and Stamps		21.80
Advertising		31.20
Balance on hand January 8, 1927		146.83
	$717.00	$717.00

Livestock Shipped

Total cars of Hogs shipped	55
Total cars of Cattle shipped	7
Total cars of Mixed shipped	6
Grand Total cars shipped	68
Number of Cattle shipped	256
Number of Hogs shipped	3,929
Total weight of hogs shipped	908,025
Average weight per hog	231 lbs.
Average shrinkage per hog	6.6 lbs.
Number of Sheep shipped	134

Respectfully submitted,
M. F. Christie, Mgr.

EAGLE GROVE DEBATES MUNICIPAL PLANT

Eagle Grove citizens were invited to attend a mass meeting last week, to discuss the advisability of the city building a municipal electric plant. The question has been agitated some time, the city council appearing to favor it, with one newspaper apparently receptive of the idea and the other against it. No complaint is found with the service given by the company now furnishing the town, the idea being that the city can furnish service cheaper.

Mrs. Fred Shipley spent last week end with her sister at Titonka.

DECEMBER REPORT OF COW TESTING ASSOC'N

Virgil E. Martin, tester of the Goldfield-Belmond Cow Testing Association, furnishes the following report of the association for the month of December, 1926:

Many members are short of good legume hay and other good roughages. Dairymen that have tested continually, say they are now receiving the greatest benefits from the test work. Many members could have paid their testing fees several times with the increased profits received thru improved feeding methods, even tho they have only tested a few months. These members are starting a good program of breeding for production.

Ten purebred bulls have been brot into this association since the first of June, 1926.

The following are high herds for December:

Herds Over Eight Cows

Albert Clark, mixed breed, no cows dry, 11 milking; average milk 960, fat 35, test 3.64.

F. B. Mathias, grades, 2 cows dry, 9 milking; average milk 687, fat 33.3, test 4.8.

Schnug & Shager, mixed, 1 cow dry, 8 milking; average milk 702, fat 31.4, test 4.4.

A. O. & E. G. Hauge, P. B. H., 3 cows dry, 10 milking; average milk 810, fat 29, test 3.59.

Herds Under Eight Cows

Sams & Son, P. B. & G. H., none dry, 4 milking; average milk 961, fat 372, test 3.81.

T. H. Potter, P. B. J., none dry, 4 milking; average milk 618, fat 30.8, test 5.0.

High Cows for Month

W. H. Helmke, P. B. H., 4 years old, fresh Nov. 14; milk 1714, fat 61.7, test 3.6, name "Ideal Queen Mutual."

A. O. & E. G. Hauge, P. B. H., 7 years old, fresh Nov, 9; milk 1754, fat 59.6, test 3.4, name "Georgia Calama."

F. B. Mathias, Gr. G., 5 yrs. old, fresh Oct. 2; milk 1119, fat 58.2, test 5.2, name "Bluie."

F. B. Mathias, Gr. G., 3 years old, fresh Sept. 28; milk 1404, fat 56.1, test 4.0, name "Cupid."

F. B. Mathias, Gr. G., 5 years old, fresh Sept. 11; milk 998, fat 55.9, test 5.6, name "Rose."

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week January 1 to January 8, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
2	38	24	—	Pt. Cloudy
3	39	22	T	Cloudy
4	38	29	—	Clear
5	39	23	—	Pt. Cloudy
6	33	25	—	Cloudy
7	33	27	T	Cloudy
8	39	23	.05	Cloudy

MRS. DANIAL E. BROOKS

Susan A. Lasher was born Dec. 30, 1848, in the state of New York. There she was married to Danial E. Brooks. In the early days they moved to Hancock county, coming overland with team and wagon, finally settling at Goodell where they lived until 1907, when they moved to Belmond.

Mrs. Brooks was the mother of six children, three of whom preceded her in death, namely Annie, Millard and Wardner. The three sons who survive her are John. of Belmond, Will of Lake Lillian, Minn., and Ray of Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. Mrs. Brooks died at her home in Belmond, January 7, 1927, death being caused by creeping paralysis.

Funeral services were held at the home, Saturday afternoon, Rev. Snyder of the Methodist church in charge and burial was made in the Amsterdam cemetery, east of Goodell.

Dec. 14, 1926, Patrol II gave a little party for their mothers at the home of Marion Luick. There were several musical numbers, including a solo by Marion Luick. A fine reading was given by Mary Elizabeth Blake. Some members of the patrol gave a clever patrol prophesy representing those girls 30 years from now. The rest of the program was taken up by games. Refreshments were served by the Patrol and then followed the distribution of gifts by Santa Claus. A very enjoyable time was spent by those present. Scribe.

WOMAN TEARS UP EVIDENCE

Farmer's Wife Grabs Evidence And Tears It Up, Defeating Schemes Of Attorney.

HARD TO MAKE CASE NOW

A few weeks ago the sheriff's office received a hurry up call on the phone from a stranger in a nearby rural community. It so happened that no one was in the office at the time. When the sheriff returned the party had gone. Some time later it developed that an outside attorney had appeared in the neighborhood referred to for the purpose of enforcing collection on a note and contract secured from the farmer by some smooth salesman. The lady of the house answered the door and listened patiently to the attorney's presentation of his case. Suddenly she grabbed the documents from his hands and beat a hasty retreat in the direction of the field where her husband was at work, tearing up the papers as she ran. Seeing he had been outwitted the aforesaid attorney drove to a neighboring farm home and called up the sheriff's office as above stated. Altho the stranger is still looking for satisfaction, it would seem that he was out of luck with the evidence destroyed and in event of a trial most juries would favor the farmer's wife

Sheriff Johnson was a Des Moines business caller one day last week.

Judge Sherwood A. Clock has filed the appointment of E. P. Tinkham of Fort Dodge as shorthand reporter in this, the eleventh district. The appointment is effective from the first of the year.

Kelleher & Mitchell, a Fort Dodge law firm, asks judgment against the First National bank of Eagle Grove in the sum of $500 for services rendered plaintiff at the time said bank was merged with the Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove.

At the last session of the board of supervisors J. K. Hilton was retained as highway engineer for the ensuing year. This is gratifying to his friends and insures the fact that No. 10 will continue to be one of the very best graveled roads to be found anywhere.—Monitor.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

January 10, 1927, the Girl Scouts started the new year right by having a good meeting this evening. The meeting was attended by two very welcome guests, Mrs. Jacobson and Mrs. Parsons. The girls were each requested to bring something to sew on and at the close of the meeting each one was asked to come forth and show her work. Some very dainty and useful articles are being made, such as quilt tops, center pieces pillow covers, etc. First we sewed then passed down to the gym, where Patrol I defeated Patrol II in basket ball, also Patrol IV was defeated by Patrol V after which we marched back to the Junior high assembly and had our business meeting. It was decided that we have a bath contest. Each girl must take two tub baths a week and at the end of a specified length of time, the winning girl is to receive a prize, also the winning Patrol. The meeting adjourned a little after eight. Scribe.

Harold Holm in Wyoming

Word was received Tuesday from Harold Holm by his family stating that he was in Wyoming. He has been absent from home since the latter part of December and much anxiety was felt for his safety.—Monitor.

An enjoyable meeting of the Good Fellowship club was held Thursday night at the library. After a very interesting program consisting of a piano solo by Miss Ruth Jones, a vocal solo by Mrs. Wm. Trafford, and a reading by Miss Skouge, the club liutened to an address by Mr. Ferrin, of the Central States Electric Co. Mr. Ferrin is a former banker, and he gave a splendid talk on the banking situation in Iowa, stressing the fact that the public should have confidence in its banks. The usual refreshments closed the evening. A large crowd was present.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch 25c
Locals, per line 10c
Classified, per word 02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

In a number of the exchange papers coming to its desk, The Independent notices since January urgent requests from the publishers to the subscribers to "pay up" their subscription. There would be no need of such requests if the papers were on a businesslike basis, subscriptions payable in advance. With the pay-as-you-please plan, there will always be as many, if not more, delinquent subscribers as there are paid up ones. Always the publisher will lose, for he can never collect all the arrears. In its first two and a half years, The Independent had charged on its books $1600 in subscriptions—and since 1922, when this paper was placed on a cash basis, only $2.00 of these back subscription accounts has been paid. What was true with this paper, is true with others running on the pay-as-you-please plan. To attempt to collect hundreds of dollars in back subscriptions would be foolish; in two-, three and four-dollar accounts, by the time the publisher has collected them he has spent it all, caused much dispute and made many enemies. The pay-in-advance way is the only businesslike way, and the way to which all newspapers will have to come sooner or later. It eliminates disputes over ordering the paper, it ends arguments about time ordered, does away with misunderstandings which cause hard feelings, and, first of all, stops the financial losses of the charge method. If a reader wants his home paper he should be willing to pay for it—and will, if that is the only way he can get it. He will appreciate it after he has seen the benefit; will want it stopped if he does not renew. Having tried both ways, The Independent would never consider the charge method again. The reader list secured by the cash method is a gilt-edge circulation to offer the advertiser—the only circulation recognized by the national advertising agencies and the Audit Bureau of Circulations. The only reason more publishers do not go on the cash basis in their subscriptions is because they are afraid to; they might offend some hard-boiled reader who pays when and if he pleases, and they might lose some of their circulation. Better to lose some and have the remainder gilt-edge, to get the money for the papers they send out—and they would get more in the long run than they are getting now. The newspapers who stage the subscription campaigns are the ones who have a list in arrears, and a list runs down from general debility. The campaign is often the last resort of a dying institution. Witness the Clarion News. They cost more than any publisher can afford to pay, and bring a list that is worse than useless oftentimes, because many of the subscriptions were ordered simply because some pretty girl wheedled the subscriber into it to help her "win a prize." The only safe and satisfactory method is the pay-in-advance one. Get your price—and make your paper worth it.

The United States intervention in Nicaragua will bear watching for interesting developments. It is bringing much criticism on the part of the country, both in the senate and in the public press. Since Secretary Kellog's attempt to use the public press for propaganda purposes in its disputes with Mexico, the press has been skeptical of the secretary's statements and intentions. The country is not at all solidly behind the administration in its policies in Mexico and Nicaragua. The statements, then retractions, the bolshevik bugaboo attempted to be thrust upon the people by the secretary of state, the propaganda, too thinly disguised to get by, have created a feeling of distrust, of suspicion, among the people at large. One thing the public learned from the late war and one thing above all others has stuck—that they were fooled by propaganda into believing and doing a lot of things they realize now shouldn't have been thought or done. As Lincoln said, you cannot fool all of the people all of the time, and the public is wary of swallowing whole everything the powers that be are attempting to feed it; they are taking with plenty of salt dispatches from the "war zone" and the statements of the whitehouse "spokesman." The fact seems to be that America is more or less in a muddle in its foreign relations, with no definite policy or plan to pursue. Coupled with the unrest and dissatisfaction of large sections of the country over domestic problems, it looks like presidential year, 1928, would contain a great deal of interest.

EDITOR IS INDIGNANT OVER BIDDING DEMAND

The editor of the Livermore Gazette is somewhat indignant because some of his townsmen or townswomen have brought to his place small pieces of work connected with some public entertainment, and asked him to bid on it.

The editor rightfully takes the stand that when he spends his time and space boosting such an event that the work should be given to him for the usual price, and that he should not be forced to work the cheapest of anyone in this portion of the state to get the work for the event for which he has done so much.

The Republican refuses to bid on small jobs. We work off the Franklin Price List and charge the prices indicated there. If we can do your work at the prices quoted by this authority we will be pleased to wait on you. If not, you should order your work elsewhere. But we do believe that when we give you space for the usual notice of your meetings and functions, we are entitled to your patronage at the usual prices.—Humboldt Republican.

THAT CHURCH CALENDAR

Reinbeck Courier: The article which appeared in last week's issue of the Courier relative to a church calendar which a stranger was to furnish the Rev. J. B. Pollock for the United Presbyterian church was substantially correct. As the calendar was to cost the church nothing, the entire proceeds from the advertisements going to the stranger who was to secure them, the pastor did not consult either the Board of Trustees or the Session of the Congregation. Mr. Pollock holds himself morally responsible, and as no service was rendered the business men of the community in the way of giving publicity to their business, he is anxious to reimburse them for all they paid for the advertisements which failed to appear.

Appreciating the good will of the business men who were "victimized," and expressing his regret that he did not make it plain in his note given to the stranger that all proceeds from the advertisements were to go to the stranger and not the church. Mr. Pollock urges those interested to communicate to him at an early convenience the amount they contributed to this "calendar fund."

GET 'LEGGER WITH 126 GALLONS IN AUTO

After an exciting chase, a bootlegger was caught at Kanawha last week with 126 gallons of booze in his car. Two men in a Buick sedan hit a Ford north of Garner. They were in a terrible hurry, and offered $25 in settlement for the damage just as a Garner man drove up. The Garner man became suspicious because the damage was small, and he followed the two until they turned west on the paving toward Britt. He phoned the Britt marshal, where the Buick stopped and one man got out. As the marshal approached the car the other man, seeing him coming, stepped on the gas and left. The other man was arrested. The driver speeded toward Kanawha, and Kanawha officials were notified to be on the watch. When he got to Kanawha, the bootlegger was going close to 60 miles an hour. Efforts to stop him were fruitless, the 'legger driving over sidewalks to avoid them. South of Kanawha, however he became stuck in a snowdrift, where he was captured, together with 126 gallons of booze. The two men were taken to Mason City where they were later released on bonds, the car and booze being held.

SOL AND THE BABY

His "place in the sun" is as necessary for Baby, as his milk. We have always known thot sunshine was necessary to proper development and health, but we have never stressed it enough. Science is teaching us its value. Without enough sunshine directly upon the baby, the baby will have rickets, his bones will not develop normally, his flesh will be flabby, and he will be pale. Winter babies are particularly subject to these calamities, for their mothers cherish the old notion that the baby is delicate and must be protected from the direct sunlight.

It is not enough to have the sun shine thru the window or the clothing. The ultra violet ray will not penetrate these. Turn the baby's eyes away from the direct rays of the sun, and let him lie in the sunshine for ten minutes at a time, increasing the length of time three minutes daily until he has a good coat of tan. If it is too cold out doors, open the window in a warmed room and let a little sunshine in." If protected from the wind, the thermometer will register forty degrees more in the sunshine, and mothers may count on that.

The morning sun is better than at any other hour. If the sun comes out on a winter day, hustle the baby out into the sunshine. This is the most important work you can do—even if you have to stop washing dishes or have dinner late.

There is a peculiar quality about cod liver oil which gives it an effect similar to sunshine. It has been called "bottled sunshine" and should be given to winter babies and to all those who suffer from the lack of sunshine. It may be given with orange juice if too distasteful. It is not a good thing to expose the skin to the direct rays of the sun long enough to burn or blister it. The ideal to be aimed at is to get the sunshine more gradually and develop a coat of tan.

HINTS TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Fondant for candy is better if allowed to stand some time to "ripen."

Try sausage instead of salt pork for baking beans. If beans are left over, use them in sandwiches.

Sort over the vegetables stored in your cellar. Remove those which are rotting and see if the rest are wrinkling for lack of moisture. If so, cover with damp newspapers.

Keep a supply of mayonaise on hand and use left over vegetables in salads for the next meal.

Plan your budget now. One of the greatest faults of the age is that so many families are failing to live within their income.

On stormy days, when you are shut in, it is a good time to ransack the closets and take inventory of what you have. Mend and make over things you can continue using and make a list of the new things the family will need in the spring. This will ease the spring rush. You can make aprons, towels, holders and many domestic things during the indoor, cozy months, and these do not have to wait for the latest fashion plate to see what the styles will be.

Do you keep some fuses on hand to replace a worn out one and avoid being left in darkness waiting for the repair man to come?

Pour hot water from the wash boiler down your drain pipes each week to prevent their becoming clogged. A little lye in the water helps.

Is the air in your living rooms too dry? See that some water evaporates into it daily.

A SANE MIND AND JOLLITY

"Try to be cheerful and associate with "jolly" people, is the advice of a great psychologist to people who are "borderline personalities." It is good advice for any of us. To brood upon unhappy experiences and thots makes one morose. Associates have a great influence upon one. It is strengthening to be in the company of those who are "jolly." And—if jolly companions are a blessing to the world—why not BE one?

LIME AS A FOOD

To look fresh and young and to be well, your body must have lime. If you do not get enough of it you will grow withered and prematurely old. Lime in plenty in the diet encourages digestion, intestinal activity and a sturdy heart. The lack of it induces many ills, and is given as one probable cause of hay fever.

One cannot eat lime in a condensed form and the lime tablets purchased at the drug store are likely not to be assimiliated into the body tissues. But one can consume it in food. Milk is one of the best sources of lime. Lime is also found in strawberries, figs, yolk of eggs, prunes, peas, dates, potatoes and in bran and whole wheat.

BAKED HAM

Soak theh am in cold water over night. Scrub, and put on to boil. Simmer three hours, and let stand until cold in its liquor. While simmering, add half a cup of vinegar. When cold, skim off the fat. add half a cup of brown sugar; use two cups of the liquid in which it was cooked; and bake an hour in a moderate oven.

Serve the ham hot, and surrounded with a ring of baked apples.

JANUARY

The first month of the year is named after the Roman god, Janus. He was the two-faced doorkeeper of heaven, with one face looking to the past year and one to the future. Has the past year brought you many good things, and is it pleasant to look back over it? May the next year be even sweeter! It is a fresh page in the book of life. May you have the vision to plan it wisly and the stick-to-it-iveness to make your dreams come true!

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN
J. F. Wipperman, Pastor.

Divine services next Sunday morning at 10:30, in the English language.

Services at 11:15 in the German language.

Sunday School at 9:45.

Class at the church Saturday at 10:00 a. m.

The Volbeading Farm Home Hatchery, of Latimer, Iowa, is now booking orders for High Quality Chicks of all popular breeds. Send for special prices on early orders. Phone 8816. 102*

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10 a. m. Bible study hour.

11 a. m. Morning worship and sermon. Subject of sermon: The Coming of Christ's Kingdom.

No evening service.

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's day, Jan. 16:

Sunday school at 10 a. m. Classes for all ages.

Divine worship and sermon at 11. Subject of sermon: The Power of Memory. Gen. 41:9.

Epworth League at 6:30. Helen Luick, leader. Had a splendid meeting last Sunday night under the leadership of Ruth Ramsay. Twenty young people present. There are many more that would realize special benefits in coming. Will you be one of these?

Evening worship and gospel message at 7:30. Subject of sermon: The Second Mile Christian. Matt. 5:41.

Catechetical instructions Saturday afternoon, Juniors at 1:00 o'clock, Seniors at 2:00. All grade students 10 years old are eligible for the Junior class. High school students, and adults not in school for the Senior class.

Choir rehearsal in the parsonage Thursday night at 7 o'clock.

Regular official board meeting in the Epworth League room of the church Monday night, Jan. 17. Please take note; it is important that all officials be present, as there is important business.

A large number of our folks have received a copy of the "Penny" gospel, signifying a willingness not only to join the larger numbers, but to read a portion of God's word daily. There is one for you.

You are cordially invited to all of our servces.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Borgias

THREE people sat in an upper room of a gorgeous Roman palace one night in 1492. The eldest of the trio was a singularly beautiful woman of perhaps forty. She was Rosa Vanozzi, the fairest Italian of her day. The room's two other occupants were her son and daughter, Cesare and Lucrezia Borgia. They were awaiting the signal that should announce the election of Rodrigo Borgia, father of Cesare and Lucrezia, as pope.

Italy, in the Fifteenth century, was split up into numerous petty kingdoms, principalities and duchies, more or less independent of one another, yet all subject to the spiritual authority of Rome. The pope, too, held vast possessions, territories and armed forces. There was little coalition throughout central and eastern Europe. Italy and Germany were full of minor states; Russia was slowly taking shape as an independent and united nation; the former Western empire was but a name, and the Eastern empire was a thing of the past. Spain's great powers, Castile and Aragon, were just uniting under Ferdinand and Isabella; France was recovering from the successive beatings England had given her, though much of her territory was still in British hands; Great Britain was not, as now, one nation, for wars with Scotland still recurred at intervals. Thus it may be seen that nearly all Europe was torn by dissensions and lack of coalition.

Yet a brighter day was dawning. In 1453 the Turks crushed the Eastern empire by capturing Constantinople, thus also ending the vague dream of re-establishing the old Western empire. This dream had impeded Italy's progress and obstructed Germany's consolidation. Now that it was a thing of the past, these and other nations were enabled to settle down and turn their thoughts to progress. Hence, during the latter half of the Fifteenth century, dawned the era known as the Renaissance (or rebirth).

It was the transition period between the Middle ages and modern times. And in this transition Rodrigo Borgia unconsciously played a strong part.

Borgia was elected pope, taking the title Alexander VI, in 1492 (the year Columbus discovered America). Like Richard III and many another scoundrel, he made a just and wise temporal ruler.

He was a man of most abandoned personal character. Through the favor of his uncle, Pope Calixtus III, he had in early life risen high in the church. Now, on mounting the papal chair, one of his first acts was to make his eighteen-year-old son, Cesare, a cardinal. He also married his daughter, Lucrezia, to the son of a neighboring prince. Soon after she saw a chance to make a better marriage, so poisoned her husband, as she is also credited with poisoning one or more of his successors. Giovanni, the new pope's eldest son, was created a duke. Cesare Borgia, preferring that rank to a cardinalship, murdered Giovanni and left the church for a military career. Within a very few years, by battle, diplomacy and cold-blooded murder, Cesare had conquered for himself a large part of Italy, and undoubtedly planned to make himself temporal ruler (as his father was the spiritual lord) of the entire nation. His cruelties, crimes and excesses set Italy aghast, but his father, who was completely under the young man's influence, refused to punish or in any way check him.

Charles VIII, king of France, cast envying eyes on the rich little kingdom of Naples and led an army across the Alps to annex it to his own dominions. Pope Alexander barred his way, and at last, by bribes, diplomacy and open force (combined with a fatal contagion that ravaged the French army), drove him back.

By 1503 the plans of Pope Alexander and Cesare Borgia were so far complete that the latter was about to be crowned king of Romagna, as an important step in his plan of ruling Italy, when fate intervened in a most dramatic fashion. Several cardinals who had offended the pope were invited by him to supper. Poisoned wine flasks were prepared for them by Alexander. Through a servant's mistake one of the poisoned flagons was set before the pope and Cesare. The former was killed and the latter made dangerously ill by the noxious draught. Cesare Borgia afterwards told Niccolo Macchiavelli, the wily Florentine diplomat and writer:

"I had prepared to meet every emergency except the simultaneous disabling of my father and myself."

As it was, Cesare's enemies gained instant control of the situation. The ambitious youth was overthrown and his golden plans crumbled to dust. A few years later he died, fighting, in exile. The Borgian dream of spiritual and temporal empire was forever at an end.

Through Alexander's degradation of the holy papal office a revulsion of feeling set in. Temporal power, abused, reacted in the throwing off of the fetters that had for centuries helped to hold back the nations from progress. The way was paved for a return to the original sacred purpose of the papacy. The political wrongs of the system, reaching their acme under Borgia, died down, leaving room for betterment of both church and state.

FREE AIR

Say, we wish some of you folks would lend a helping hand on this Colyum. Doping it out each and every week, as the announcer for the medicine show says, is a job. Sometimes a fellow feels like a pedestrian on a banana peel, ready to slip into most anything, and ideas pour out as readily as talk at the luncheon club. Again one feels as funny as a stockholder in the sugar company, and ideas are as scarce as dividends from the United Manufacturing Co.

* * * *

One good thing about this Hawkeye Manufacturing Co., they ain't got no stock to sell. And durnod if we don't believe they ought to have a vote of thanks from the community.

* * * *

After the secret session at the library Wednesday night, we got to thinkin' maybe Dad Ingalls would start an ice house and sell stock, and we knew just how some folks would gobble it up, too.

* * * *

But Dad's too old to start anything like that now; he can make more money rentin' boats to game wardens.

* * * *

Some folks have learned that going to law is the last thing anybody should do; by the time the lawyers get thru with you, you're worse off than before you started.

* * * *

You better settle, even if it's with buckwheat.

* * * *

But as we started out to say, we wish you'd sorta lend a hand occasionally with this Colyum. We invite your contributions, whether prose or poetry or just an idea. If you've got something you think is worth passing on, send it in; contributions to this department of this Great Family Journal —or as Grant Tracy calls it, the Menace—can be signed by a nom de plume. (A nom de plume is something you ain"t. Like if you are an egg, why sign your epistle Ham, or if you're a ham sign it Bacon. See?)

* * * *

Yes, Grant's one of our oldest subscribers. He reads the Independent evenings; daytimes he helps J. Greenlander whittle splinters.

* * * *

Somebody was telling us the other day that they call our part of town the red light district, on account of Harold Aigley's red light at his garage entrance.

* * * *

By the same token, that street by Dr. Steele's palace of pain must be Agony Avenue, and the one by the city hall is Byers Boulevard, while the path past the sugar factory is Memory Lane.

READ IT AND THINK

Advertising agency space buyers who read a recent issue of Fourth Estate must have stopped short, rubbed their eyes, and taken a second and then a third look at the advertisement of the Detroit Times.

Here's what the Detroit Times said in 48-point type that filled an entire page:

"Every community of worthwhile size in Michigan has a newspaper that can do more for advertisers locally than a publication trickling out of Detroit can do—the Detroit Times does not claim any 'zone'—it's field is the Greater Detroit area—a million and a half people—and it doesn't even cover that all alone."

What a contrast to the usual "line of the big city paper with its boast of 'statewide" coverage and that it is unnecessary to use any other paper if you place an account with us" and all the talk about so-and-so many motor routes and so-and-so many papers going to this small town.

Here is a frank admission that the city paper, covers the city and that if you want to sell something to the people in the country and small towns, you must use their papers.

This advertisement points to the possibility of co-operation among the advertising representatives of the country press and city papers. When all newspapers, weeklies and dailies, work together and send representatives to the conventions of the International Advertising association, the cause of newspapers as opposed to competing mediums will have been immeasurably strengthened. — The Northwood Anchor.

She was only a drygood dealer's daughter, but she had her notions.

She couldn't be a school teacher, because she hadn't any class.

MANY LEARN FARM ACCOUNTING

Instruction in farm record keeping last year was given to nearly 1,400 Iowa farm girls and boys in rural schools, a recent report of the Iowa State College Extension Service shows.

This farm accounting was carried on as a part of the school arithmetic. There were 296 teachers in 16 counties who reported on the work. The boys who did accounting work numbered 536 and the girls 498. The number reported directly by teachers was 1,098, while 235 sent in their reports to county school superintendents.

Of those keeping accounts, 828 were over 12 years of age; 521 were in the eighth grade, 385 in the seventh grade and 41 in the sixth grade. Ninety-six kept records of their own farms and 291 indicated that they would keep accounts of their home farms in 1927.

The teachers reported the attitude and work of those toward record keeping as follows: 332 were rated "excellent," 459 "good," 158 "fair" and 40 "poor."

FARMERS "EYE" CROP SEEDS

A lot of farmers in Iowa this winter are learning something of the procedure to follow in examining clover and other crop seeds for purity and are learning where to buy the purest and cleanest seeds at the least money. In various part of the state "Pure Seed Selection Days" are being held thru the joint efforts of county agents and Iowa State College extension workers.

Samples of clover, alfalfa and other crop seeds are secured from a large number of growers and seedsmen for these seed selction days. The farmers who attend are supplied with magnifying glasses and with trays showing various kinds of weed seeds. Each farmer is thus enabled to examine the various samples and learn of the purity and the kinds of weed seed or other foreign material in each.

About 10 or 12 counties are having pure seed selection meetings this winter and a few held such meetings a year ago. About 50 farmers attended one of these meetings which was held at Harlan in Shelby county a few days ago. Samples of seed had been secured from about 10 different dealers for this meeting. The price of the seed and name of each dealer was posted with the sample so that the farmers could decide at the meeting on the best place to secure seed.

BEST FEEDERS WILL GET $2,000

Two new feeding contests are to be offered Iowa farmers this year, one to determine the state's best hog feeder and the other to find the best baby beef producer. Ten prizes, ranking from $200 down to $40 for tenth and totaling $1,000, are to be offered in each contest. It costs not one cent to enter either contest.

The new swine feeding contest is to be known as the "Iowa Pig Crop Contest," and the winner will be determined on the basis of the average production of pork per sow in 180 days. A farmer must enter his entire herd of sows. Any desired method of feeding and managing the sows may be followed. The contestant will be required to mark the pigs and keep an accurate check on them. An approximate record of the feeds used must also be kept, but the basis for determining the winner will be the average pounds of pork per sow.

The new baby beef feeding contest will be known as the "Iowa Carlot Baby Beef Production Contest." To enter this contest, a man must have 15 to 20 head for a carlot, at least two-thirds of which must be of his own raising. The plan of the contest is to determine who can produce the most pounds of beef in 450 days. The best 15 animals will be selected and weighed when the load averages 450 days of age.

In the baby beef contest, the birth dates of all of the calves must be known and each calf will be marked. The calves must have been dropped some time between February 1 and June 31, 1927.

Steers, heifers or mixed loads may be entered. Grades, purebreds or crossbreds of any beef breed may be fed. The only requirement as to breeding is that the calves must be sired by a purebred beef bull and be from cows of beef breeding.

Simple records as to methods of feeding and handling thec alves will be required, but the contest itself will be decided entirely an the basis of weight at 450 days of age. The caives may be sold at any time or on any market after the final contest weights have been taken.

In addition to the state prize list for these contests, it is is expected that county prizes will be arranged for in counties where enough entries are secured to justify it. Every man who enters either of these contests has a real chance to win something. Entries may be made thru the county agent or they may be sent directly to the Animal Husbandry Department of the Extension Service, Iowa State College, Ames.

FARMERS TOOK TIP ON HOGS

Corn Belt farmers last summer evidently "read the hand writing on the wall" with regard to an impending heavy increase in fall pig production, which would have meant greatly lowered hog prices. Because they sensed the situation, apparently a very large number of farmers changed their minds as to the number of sows to breed for fall pigs and when the United States Department of Agriculture made the annual December 1 survey, it found that instead of increasing the fall farrowings 38 percent as the June 1 "Intention to Breed" survey indicated, they increased this present fall pig crop only 4 perecent over that of a year ago.

Because of the surprising small fall pig crop, agricultural economists at Iowa State College see a much brighter prospect for hog prices in 1927 than they had formerly thought would be possible. After giving the entire matter thoro study with regard to hog supplies, possible pork demands and taking into account the probable relative prices of corn and hogs, they conclude that the outlook is good for favorable hog prices in most of 1927.

"On the whole, it seems the part of good farm business to continue to feed hogs to heavy weights and to convert as much corn as possible into pork in 1927," say the economists. The basis of this belief is this: They have found nothing in their studies of the corn market situation to indicate that corn prices will increase markedly, the marketings of hogs this year are expected to be the smallest of any year since 1920-1921, or about a million less hogs are expected to be marketed between November 1, 1926, and November 1, 1927, than were marketed in the preceding year; there are no indications that business or industrial activity is to slacken and thus reduce the domestic pork demand.

There is one factor, however, which does not look so favorable for hog prices: The exports of lard and pork to Europe have fallen off somewhat and as a consequence the November 1 holding of lard was about double the average for the last five years, while that of pork was slightly greater than that of last year, tho below the five year average.

Another encouraging feature of the recent December 1 survey is that it indicates farmers intend keeping only about 9 percent more sows for next spring farrow than were kept a year ago. Concerning this feature of the report, the Iowa State economists say:

"As there has always been a decrease in the actual farrowing over reported intentions, this 9 percent is of practically no significance. It seems that farmers have been reacting to the available information in a way at least to curtail the troublesome increases in hog production which have so frequently spoiled the hog market in the past. It is of utmost importance to the prosperity of the Corn Belt and particularly to Iowa farmers that over production of hogs should be avoided in the future. No other single factor has so important an influence on Iowa farm income."

FLAX RETURNS $37 PER ACRE

Last year 12 farmers in northern Iowa tried out flax and found it to be far more profitable on the average than oats. The average yield of flax on these farms in Chickasaw, Mitchell, Kossuth and Worth counties was 17.24 bushels to the acre and at the Minneapolis quotation of $2.20 per bushel, the flax gave a gross return of $37 per acre.

Oats last year in the same section average 32 bushels to the acre and were worth 42 cents a bushel at Minneapolis when flax was selling for the $2.20 price. Hence, the flax gave a gross return nearly three times as much as did oats, or $37 per acre as compared with $13.

On 9 of the 12 farms, alfalfa, red clover or sweet clover was sown with the flax and in cases where comparisons were possible, equally as good or better stands of clover or alfalfa were obtained with the flax than with oats.

In these trials the flax was seeded on new land in five instances, while in the other seven it was grown on old soil. Wilt-resistant strains were used. The yields of flax on the various farms ranged from 12.4 to 24.8 bushels per acre.

If flax can be grown as successfully every year as it was the past, it would seem that more farmers might well replace a good part of their oats acreage with flax, Iowa State College crop specialists believe. This would be especially true where oats are grown as a cash crop rather than for feed. The tests of last year show that flax can be used successfully as a nurse crop for legume seedings.

DAIRYMEN TO HAVE FULL WEEK

A full week of dairy instruction and meetings is planned for visiting dairymen during Farm and Home Week, Ames, Jan. 31-Feb. 5. The arrangements are in charge of Prof. Earl Weaver, head of the Dairy Husbandry Department.

Registration will be Monday forenoon. In the afternoon the visitors will study breed type and will have some judging practice. They will also visit the college dairy farm at milking time in order to learn the feeding and management methods used on the farm. Tuesday there will be further judging practice and discussion of problems encountered in breeding cattle. Wednesday will be devoted to feeding problems entirely, with the presentation of the results of a large number of recent feeding experiments conducted at the college dairy farm.

Thursday will be devoted to the meetings of the State Dairy Association and the state breed associations, with the annual dairy banquet at noon. Friday, the last day of the week's work, will be turned over to the men who wish to compete in the third annual farmers' judging contest. The best dairy cattle judge will be awarded The Dairy Farmer Medal, given by The Dairy Farmer, Des Moines.

CORN BY-PRODUCTS

Prof. O. R. Sweeney, head of the department of chemical engineering in Iowa State college, says there are 200 by-products of cornstalks and corncobs and declares that "turning cornstalks and corncobs into profitable by-products and therefore adding from $5 to $10 to the income from every acre of corn is one of the biggest and most promising things for agriculture in the corn belt." That would be fine, of course, and it will some day. No doubt about it. But, in the meantime the corn producer is entitled to a profit which he is not now getting.

There is no question of the future prosperity of the corn belt. Increased population alone assures that and the many by-products of corn make it doubly sure. Yet it will take considerable time to bring about this prosperity and there is an emergency that ought to be met.

A plan has been worked out at Ames, Prof. Sweeney says, to bale corn stalks and thus make them easy to handle fir shipment to mills that can use them. Lumber and paper can be made of corn stalks easily, he said, and corn cobs and oat hulls cooked together make a sugar known as xylose, that smells good and tastes good, but has no food value. Because of that it is considered excellent for diabetics and may play an important role in the treatment of that and similar diseases.

It will be considerable work to gather and bale cornstalks, yet if they bring enough on the market to warrant the work and expense, well and good, but nobody knows what price can be paid or what it will cost to gather, bale and deliver to the railway station. Corncobs can be more easily handled, as they are piled up from the sheller.

If in any way the corn producer can manage to get a profit of $5 per acre from cornstalks and corncobs after deducting costs of assembling and marketing, it will be a source of new income and will go far toward making farming profitable.—Webster City Freeman-Tribune.

The Independent's circulation is local. It is read by more people. And that's why its ads bring results.

FARMER SERVICE!

That's our aim---and we pride ourselves that we give it. Try us if you are not one of our regular customers. Let us grind your next order of Feed.

A car of Oil Meal on track at a very reasonable price is one of our New Year offerings.

We carry a full line of Flour, Feed, Salt and Wire, and buy Grain, Poultry and Hides, at top prices.

Truck service for those who wish it.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

Next Week!

we are going to try something and see how it works out. It will mean money saved for you if you take advantage of it.

Watch for Our Ad Next Week! It will contain some interesting reading!

GRIESY'S

The Friendly Place

BELMOND, - IOWA

Give Yourself New Business by Using MEYER BOTH Illustrations and Copy free at~

The Independent Office

Meyer Both today are recognized as the leading artists of the country. A recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, December 4th, carried eleven advertisements made by the art staff of this company. The advertisements were:

Campbell Soup	Palmolive
Fisher Bodies	Pabst Cheese
Chevrolet	Royal Easy Chairs
Chrysler	Ray-O-Vac Light
Studebaker	Washburn Crosby Co.

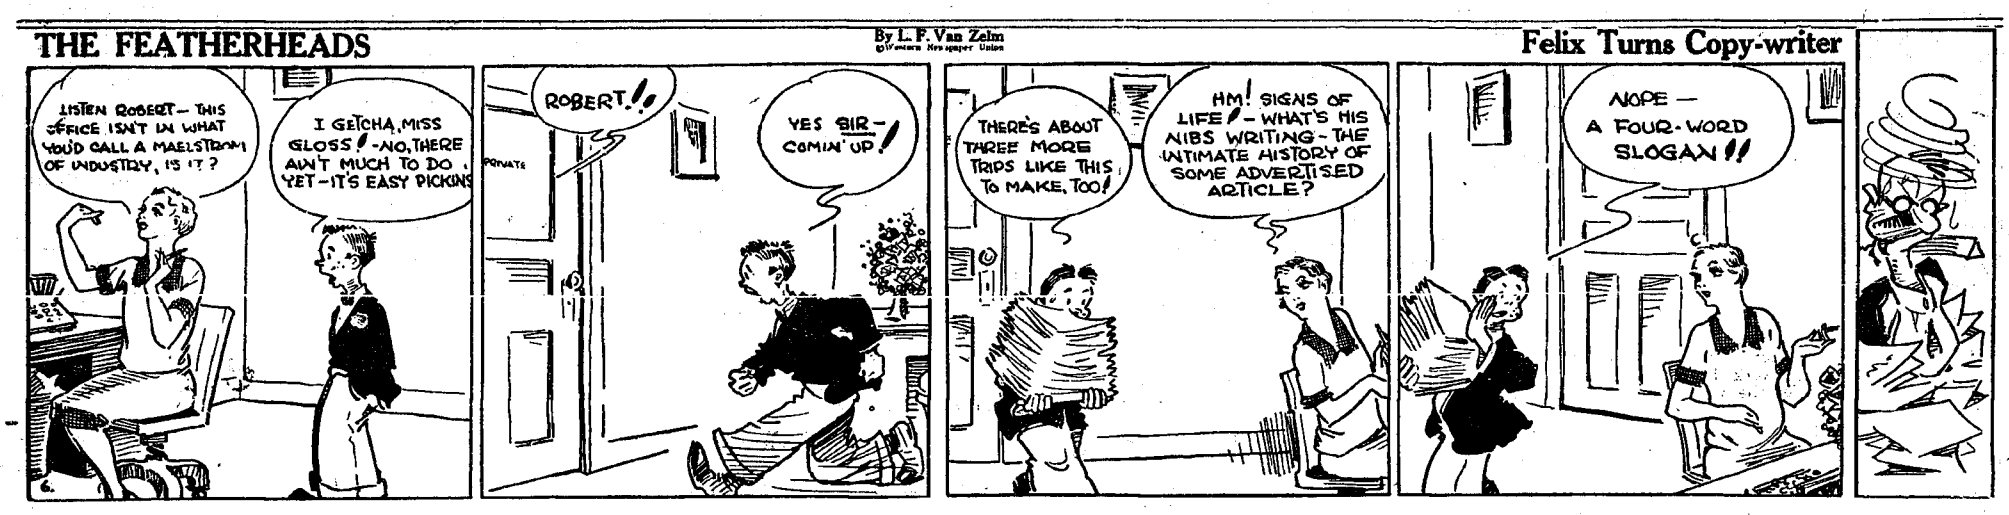
When you see a good looking advertisement, handsomely illustrated, you can be almost sure of it being a Meyer Both Production.

The Independent uses the Meyer Both service exclusively for its advertisers and it costs them nothing. A special service for any line of merchandise can be provided at a small cost.

BELMOND INDEPENDENT

Successful	News	Quality
Advertising	115	Printing

MESERVEY SECTION



EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Workers' conference of Sunday school officers and teachers Friday evening at 8:00.

Sunday school 9:45 a. m. G. E. Raecker, Supt.

Morning worship 10:45.

Services will be in the interest of our Sunday school work.

E. L. C. E. 7 p. m. What Confession of Christ includes. Eva Sprau, leader.

Evening services at 7:30.

Tuesday evening at about 6:30, the "Work to Win" class will have supper together in the church basement, and then hold the annual meeting. All the members are urged to be present.

Wednesday evening at 7:45 at the Prelipp home, German prayer meeting.

The mid-week services at church Thursday evening at 7:45.

Come and worship with us.

Lawrence Sohl, Pastor.

The teachers appointed for the various classes in the Evangelical Sunday school are:

Men's class (Ger), C. Bier, Theo. Wendel.

Women's class (Ger), Mrs. Henry Raecker, Mother Mayer.

Mixed class, A. E. Muller.

Work to Win class. Mrs. Laurance Sohl, Mrs. Frank Guth.

Friends' class, Jacob Nissen, Herman Fischer.

King's Daughters class, Mrs. C. J. Wendel, Miss Olive Sherrard.

Boys' class, G. Lauster, Herman Fischer.

Girls' class, Mrs. H. Fischer, Mrs. Hieko Janssen.

Junior boys and girls, Miss Eva Sprau, Mrs. Hieko Janssen.

Junior boys and girls, Mrs. Esther Rooks, Mrs. Hieko Janssen.

Primary class, Miss Irene Guth, Miss Mildred Gealow.

Beginners, Miss Irene Butz, Miss Mildred Gealow.

Bible training class Rev. Sohl.

Supt. Adult Dept. A. E. Muller.

Supt. Senior Dept. Mrs. C. J Wendel.

Supt. Intermediate Dept. G. Lauster.

Supt. Junior Dept Mrs. Esther Rooks.

Supt. Children's Dept. Miss Irene Butz.

Supt. Home Dept. Mrs. Jim Faaburg.

Supt. Cradle Roll, Mrs. Carl Quandt.

Supt. Mission Dept. Mrs. C. J. Wendel.

G. E. Raecker, Supt., C. J. Wendel Asst. Supt., Laurence Sohl, Pastor, Committee.

REFORMED CHURCH

Catechetical classes meet next Saturday at 1:30. Come with your lessons prepared. Let us start the new year right. All parents are kindly requested to co-operate with the pastor in this most important phase of our church work. Let our motto be, "Our Children for Christ." Here is a great field of labor. No other church work is more important than to win the children for Christ and to train them for Christian service. In so doing we are making them both Christians and good citizens. Fathers and mothers, what about your boys and girls?

Sunday school at 9:30.

Morning worship at 10:30 (Ger).

Young people's meeting at 7:15.

Evening services at 8.

The annual Sunday school teachers meeting will be held Monday, Jan. 17 at 2 p. m. All teachers are earnestly requested to be present.

The Senior class in catechism will meet Tuesday, Jan. 18 at 3:20 at the manse. This week the class will meet on Friday at the usual time.

The Dorcas society will meet Wednesday eve, Jan. 19. This will be the annual business meeting. All try to be present.

The Ladies Aid will meet Thursday, Jan. 20 at 1:30. The last announcement should have read that Mrs. Geo. Watermiller served refreshments instead of Mrs. John Watermiller.

This church extends a hearty welcome to all to attend its meetings.

H. Pannkuk, pastor.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. T. Kaduce is spending the week at the home of her sister, Mrs. Geo. Bleeker, at Ackley.

H. F. Reif was a Mason City business visitor Friday.

ANNUAL BANK MEETING

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Farmers Savings bank was held Monday, Jan. 10.

R. S. Stanberry, attorney of Mason City, was elected director to fill the vacancy of the late H. J. Klemme who was one of the founders of the bank some 20 years ago, and had served the bank continuously as President and chairman of the board of directors. Mr. Stanberry has been attorney for the bank for several years and will prove a valuable addition to the bank.

The bank has not missed paying a dividend since 1913, having paid an 8 pecent dividend for the year 1926.

All the old employees of the bank will remain with the exception of Miss Gealow, who will severe her connections with the bank about Feb. 1, her position having already been filled by Miss Ella Lacher, of Hartley, who assumed her duties about a month ago.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Last Friday evening Miss Irena Butz was very pleasantly surprised when upon arriving home, she found guests awaiting her to help her celebrate her birthday. Mrs. Butz had prepared a dinner which was greatly enjoyed by all. The evening was spent in a social way. The guests, members of the faculty, left wishing Miss Butz many more birthdays.

NOTICE!

Sealed bids will be received up to 2:00 p. m. January 29, 1927, by the Wisner Township Trustees, for road superintendent. The trustees reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

HAROLD B. BLEWETT,
102c Township Clerk.

Mrs. E. A. Yahnke returned to her home near Garden City, Minn., last Thursday after spending a few days here at the home of her father, Wm. Prelipp.

C. J. Wendel returned Friday from Ames where he had been attending an implement dealers' convention.

L. B. Hulsebus and family from Dows motored up Friday, L. B. and Bobby spending the day with relatives while Mrs. Hulsebus went to Mason City between trains.

The orchestra met at the Muller home Friday evening for rehearsal. There were 14 present.

Mrs. C. Bier was a Mason City visitor Friday, receiving medical treatments.

Rev. and Mrs. H. M. Raecker of Sheffield were visiting relatives in town Thursday and getting acquainted with their new niece at the G. E. Raecker home.

The W. M. S. met at the home of Mrs. C. Bier for the first meeting of the year. Following the devotional and business sessions, the convention reporter was read and discussed.

Rev. H. M. Raecker and family accompanied by the Misses Anderson of Sheffield visited the former's relatives here Saturday.

Mrs. G. E. Thomas and daughter Lois visited Miss Evelyn at Goodell, Friday afternoon. Mrs. Thomas returned the same evening. Lois remaining and accompanying Evelyn to Cedar Falls for an over Sunday visit with their sisters, Viola and Thelma.

I. A. Nissen and children, Arlene and Ardell, braved the storm Sunday and drove over from Kamrar to spend the afternoon at the Adam Kolb home.

James Hemming of Thornton was a Sunday guest at the Ed. Foss home He reports that his wife is still in Rochester receiving treatments at the hospital.

Mrs. O. Strasburg and daughter Gladys spent the week end visiting at the Clarence Groesbeck home at Klemme.

Wm. F. Butz and daughter Miss Irena were at Belmond, Saturday, where the latter had dental work done

Due to the stormy weather Sunday the services at the Reformed church were omitted.

The Farmers' Institute conducted by the Great Western railroad company made their third annual visit to our little city Tuesday. Afternoon and evening meetings were held and those who had been in the habit of attending in former years made it a point to be present to hear the men who were in charge of the institute, and encouraging others to attend, also.

Louis Foss and wife, Arloene Janssen, Bonita and Donald Muller, Virgil Sprau and Luverne Butz took part in the musical numbers at the schoolhouse in Alexander Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ostendorf were in Mason City, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Schlicting motored to Mason City on business, Saturday.

Robert Goebli, accompanied by Elmer Paul of Sheffield made a business trip to Minnesota, last week Wednesday.

G. Lauster and C. F. W. Paul motored to Eagle Grove, Tuesday, to attend a hog sale.

H. F. Reif and S. P. Fischer were in Mason City on business, Tuesday.

Louis Foss and wife, Albert Wendel and wife and Mrs. C. J. Wendel motored to Mason City, Tuesday, on business.

H. B. Frey and Mrs. Frey took their son Wilbert to Mason City, Tuesday, where he entered the hospital for treatment. He has not been getting along well since the removal of his tonsils.

Rev. H. Pannkuk left Monday for a few days' visit with relatives at Titonka.

WANT ADS PAY

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Over 150 different colors are obtained from coal-tar?

It would take a snail 14 days, 5 hours, traveling continuously to go a mile?

Thibetans greeat each other by rubbing noses?

Jews originated the custom of hand shaking?

The Chinese stand change of climate better than any other race?

Roses originally came from Asia?

Many kinds of beetles have two eyes on each side of the head?

Lions and tigers become docile as lambs when they scent lavender?

A drop of blood goes round the body in 22 seconds.

The right hand is more sensitive to the touch than the left?

Herrings will not live in aquariums?

The skin of a large whale is two feet thick?

Coal did not become common fuel until 1625?

A spider in Sumatra has legs seventeen inches long?

In a year a horse eats nine times its own weight in hay?

The color of the Red Sea is due to certain marine plants in it?

An engine consumes more coal in cold weather than in hot?

The average person speaks about twelve thousand words a day?

A grain of iodine will color seven thousand times its weight of water?

Lobsters will cast claws from sheer fright?

Beasts of prey are not usually good for food?

A swallow can keep up a speed of 90 miles an hour?

More than half the human body is composed of water?

There are no microbes 2,000 feet above the level of the sea?

The name Newton occurs fewer than 72 times in English place names?

Quality Printing Pleases. That is the Independent kind. Get yours here

Dr. R. E. Porter
Belmond's Pioneer Chiropractor
Eight Years' Experience
Hundreds of Patients That Have Received Joyous and Tingling Health
Country Calls Answered Day or Night
Over Griesy's Store
Phone 21 :: Belmond, Iowa

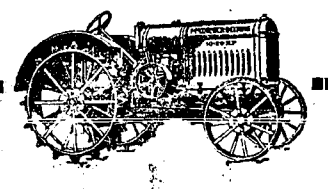
Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone—Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

for READ WANT ADS results

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork
Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

We Handle
ATWATER KENT RADIOS
CROSLEY RADIOS
PATHE RADIOS
SLAGLE RADIOS
Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries
All kinds Cunningham Tubes
1st class—not "Seconds"
Phone 52 for Home Demonstration.

H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa



FREE! FREE!

Tractor School

ALL farmers who are interested in power farming will be welcome at the

Free Power Farming Entertainment
Instructive Lectures

By experienced tractor men who will be with us all day

TAKING APART and REBUILDING that famous

McCormick-Deering Tractor

HERE is an opportunity, folks, for everybody to learn more about farm tractors, their construction, care and operation.

You cannot afford to miss this entertainment. TRAINED men will be here who will illustrate, demonstrate, and talk on up-to-date subjects.

REMEMBER the date and the place.

Tuesday, January 25, 1927
From 9:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.
At Meservey Garage

COME EARLY and stay all day as we are going to serve a FREE LUNCH at noon.

C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

Co-operation for 1927

Co-operation means so to conduct yourself that others can work with you.

We are ready, willing and able.

LET'S GO!

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

TO YOU AND YOURS
The Season's Greetings....

May this holiday time bring a full measure of joy and happiness, and the New Year twelve long months of contentment and Prosperity is the wish of

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

Lyle LaRue returned Tuesday from Armstrong where he had visited relatives.

The Misses Edna Rust, Fannie and Marie Landon returned to Belmond, Thursday, to continue their high school work.

Sven Hegland is suffering intensely with a badly crushed hand having caught it in a corn sheller Tuesday of last week.

E. P. Hubbard returned Wednesday from Beloit, Wis., where he has been the past month with his mother who is very poorly. He also visited his brother at Madison, Wis.

Mrs. Arley Blickendorfer of Garner spent Wednesday at the home of her mother, Mrs. James Christie.

Tauge Matson of Unionville, Mo., motored here Thursday and will visit indefinitely with home folks. He is doing highway bridge work but has closed up his work for the winter.

Len Wilson returned last week from Madison, Wis., having spent a couple weeks there doing carpenter work.

Mrs. Will Schlicting is on the list of ill, suffering from the flu.

Mrs. Vierkant returned Saturday to her home at Meservey. She had spent the past week here with her daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Bishop.

Olive Butts returned Saturday to Hills, Minn., where she is English teacher in the high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sherman of Torrington, Wyo., came Thursday to visit several weeks with her mother, Mrs. A. D. White.

Mrs. Clara Butts and Mrs. Lewis Wesenberg left Friday for California where they will enjoy a six weeks visit. They will visit the Bill Wesenberg family at Long Beach and the Stevens and Konke families at Glendale. Mrs. Stevens will be remembered as Lenore Sheffield, and Mrs. Konke as Esther Wesenberg prior to their marriage.

A. C. Carpenter returned Saturday from North Dakota where he had been to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, Will Christie. Mrs. Janette Wiles and Mrs. D. Christie, who also went, remained for a longer visit with relatives.

Miss Evelyn Thomas spent the week end with friends at Cedar Falls

The high school students have their declamatory pieces and are putting many hours of hard work on them. About 15 have entered and plans are being made to give the contest at a near date. Miss Evelyn Thomas is directing the work.

Avon Hegland drove to Williams, Saturday, taking a chicken house. He has purchased a farm and will move there March 1.

Frank Clark and family moved last week from the farm and are now living in their town residence. Al Mayhew has rented the farm for the coming year.

Goodell friends received the news, Thursday, of the death of Mrs. Dan Brooks, of Belmond. The Brooks family were former residents of this place for many years being some of the early settlers.

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Graeber went to Kanawha, Friday, to spend the day at the John McCorkle home.

Robert and Gerald Clark, who recently returned from Charles City, entered school Tuesday, Robert in the eighth grade and Gerald in the sixth.

The second number of the school lyceum course will be given Thursday evening of this week, at the opera house.

Clara Kirkwood of Belmond arrived Monday to work at the Wesenberg home while Mrs. Wesenberg is in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Donahue, who have been spending the holidays at the Dave Finn home, returned last week to St. Mary, Kansas where Mr. Donahue has a position in the school.

Mrs. Butts, Warner and Olive were entertained Wednesday at the Adolph Wenzel home at Belmond.

Forest Boren returned last week to continue his high school work at Grundy Center.

Jonas Alsvig and Framer Corder motored to Northwood, Friday, and visited at the John Lillebo home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Lowenberg and son Joseph from Clare visited from Saturday until Monday at Ivan's parental home.

Mrs. Earl Finn and daughter Earline of Klemme, came Thursday to visit her home folks, the L. H. Wilson family, returning Sunday.

The LaRue family enjoyed an over Sunday visit with a friend Miss Alberta Peters, of Dows.

Mr. Gaffney came last week from Ireland to visit his sister, Mrs. F. Quigley, Sr.

Gus Okrueg was a business visitor at Dows, Thursday.

Miss Nettie Thada visited a few days last week at Clear Lake.

Mrs. Bill Tanner is at Garner, visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bates and sister, Mrs. Verba.

Mrs. Francis Quigley and son returned Sunday from Belmond having visited her parents a few days.

Church Notes

Ladies Aid Wednesday p. m. entertained by Mesdames Schneider and Ruka.

Missionary will hold their "Thank Offering" meeting Saturday, Feb. 5.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

United Church of Alexander
Lewis N. Moody, Pastor

Prayer and conference meetings will be held every Tuesday evening the first meeting in each month will be a Sunday school workers conference.

The Missionary Circle will meet Thursday afternoon of this week with Mrs. Pekarek. Program leader, Mrs Lloyd Green.

The Camp Fire Girls will meet at the parsonage Wednesday afternoon Jan. 19, after school for the election of officers.

The Sunday school board met last Friday evening and elected the following officers: Supt. W. F. Dunn; Asst. Supt. F. L. Greenfield; Supt. of Primary Dept, Mrs. George Dunn; Asst. Primary Supt. Ruth Beenen; Supt. of Home Dept. Mrs. Carrie Peters; Cradle Roll Supt. Mrs. W. F. Dunn; Secretary, Ethel Schulte; Assisant Sec, Bernardine Klinefelter; Treas. Bonnie Barker; Pianist, Sylvia Arends; Asst. Pianist, Ruth Peters; Librarians, Lela Larsen and Susie Schulte.

Nancy Carter was born near Marlow, Ill., in April, 1853, and died at the home of her granddaughter in Alexander, Ia., Jan. 5, 1927, aged 73 years, 8 months and 29 days. August 28 1875, she was married to George C. Hutson. They lived on a farm near Marlow for several years, after which they resided in Mt. Vernon, Ill., until 1900 when they moved to State Center, Ia., where she continued to reside until she went to live with her granddaughter about 4 years ago. Mr. Hutson died in November, 1902. Six children were born, three of whom died in infancy, Grover at the age of two, Floyd at the age of 15, and Mrs. Nellie Hutson Porter, Nov. 12, 1915. Besides her granddaughter, Mrs. W. P. Aldinger of Alexander, Mrs. Hutson leaves one brother, Wm. Carter, one sister, Mrs. Dolly Stone of Blueford Ill., two great grandchildren and several nephews and nieces. Mrs. Hutson had been a faithful member of the Methodist church for many years and was highly esteemed by all who knew her. After a short service at the home, the body was taken to State Center where services were held at the M. E. church at 1:30 p. m. and the body laid to rest in the family lot.

Mr. and Mrs. John Arends were calling on Hampton friends, Friday.

Rev. Geo. Bonte of Ackley came Thursday to visit his mother, Mrs. John Bonte.

H. C. Penning of Ackley came Thursday to visit relatives and look after farm interests here.

John Arends was a business caller at Belmond, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Larsen were at Hampton, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schulte returned home Wednesday from Port Arthur, Texas, where they have been for the past two weeks visiting at the home of her brother, Peter Pals and with other relatives. They found their folks well, and the weather warm with bright, sunshiny days, the roses in full bloom and fresh garden vegetables to use. Mr. and Mrs. Pals are old residents of our town and their many friends will be glad to learn of their good health this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gaulke and daughter were Dows visitors, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Larsen and son Raymond were business callers at Latimer, Saturday.

The Alexander dray line changed hands last week, when Forest Gillet bought of Dick Stoffer the line, and there is no question but that Mr. Gillet will make a very dependable drayman as Mr. Stoffer has been.

Miss Melba Tucker returned Sunday from Hansell where she has been for two weeks at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edd Tucker, entertaining a severe attack of the grippe.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Harmon returned to their home at Goldfield, on Monday after a few days' visit at the Nels Larsen home.

Fred N. Larsen is in the hospital at Belmond for treatment of a very sore finger, having had it lanced in several places.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

The officers and stockholders of the Rowan State bank met Monday for the annual bank meeting. The following officers were elected: Pres. W. H. Whitten; vice pres. Nels B. Olson; cashier, F. B. Sheldon; asst. cashier Aug Rietz

Henry Azeltine, who has been seriously ill for some time, is somewhat improved

Mr. and Mrs. Alt Hackley and Miss Dorothy Steffens motored to Newell, Thursday for a visit at the Hal Steffens home.

The Geo. Liming family moved into the W. W. Azeltine house in west Rowan last week as soon as the Wessels family vacated. The Geo. Wessels family move to Fort Dodge where Mr. Wessels has a position as night watchman on the bridge.

Mrs. Milton Brown of Maringo came Friday to assist in the care of her father, F. H. Fowler, who is quite ill again.

The W. C. T. U. will meet Wednesday, Jan. 19 at the R. A. Azeltine home. Subject: Citizenship. Leader, Mrs. R. H. Keith.

Betty, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Steffens, was operated upon for mastoid trouble, at Mason City, Wednesday last. Mr. Coburn father of Mrs. Steffens, and Mrs. Lukins of Clarion accompanied them.

Mrs. Lee Aldrich is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Schroder from Clarion spent last Thursday with their daughter, Mrs. G. R. Sheldon.

Mrs. Emma Munson, who has spent several weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Peddle, has returned to her home.

Harry Cain has hauled several truck loads of hogs recently which brought the owners nearly $900 one load bringing over that amount.

The Misses Penas, Berg, Lippert and Nerlev hiked to Clarion Saturday afternoon, and returned on the evening train.

The W. F. M. S. met Wednesday at the D. A. French home. Mrs A. O. Pelly was leader.

Rev. Pillasct of Parkersburg was a business caller in town, Saturday.

At the Woman's Missionary society of the Congregational church last Thursday the following officers were elected: Pres. Mrs. H. J. C. Box; vice pres. Mrs. R Virden; Rec. Sec. Mrs. J. S. Farran; Cor Sec. Mrs. D. W. Whitten; Treas. Mrs A. E. Emerson.

The Royal Neighbors and their families enjoyed a party at the hall Friday evening.

Ralph Whitten left Sunday to resume his school duties at Perry.

The ladies of the Iowa Township Farm Bureau held a helpful all-day meeting at the Earl Patton home last Friday. The lesson on tailored finishings including shrinking, pressing of wool and silk and finishing of seams and hems was conducted by Mrs. Jack Munnis, assisted by Mrs. Chas. Martin and Mrs. Hugh Whitten. Twenty-one ladies were present. A branch meeting was also held on Monday afternoon at the C. W. Fowler home when about 25 ladies were present.

Mr. and Mrs K. E. Hagen and children of Thompson were guests last week at the parental, W. Z. Stout home.

The next meeting of the Parent-Teachers association will be held at the high school auditorium Tuesday eve, Jan. 18. All patrons of the school are urged to attend, as well as all friends of the school.

The Methodist Sunday school elected the following officers at their regular meeting last Monday:

Supt. Angie Baines; Asst. Supt. W. A. Rietz; Sec. Lillian Azeltine; Treas. Berneice Hansen; Organist, Clara Azeltine; Chorister, W. A. Riet.

Teachers: Senior class, Miss Nora Shaffer; Asst. Mrs. W. W. Azeltine. Young Married People's class, Mrs. Earl Sellers. Young People's class, Mrs. A. O. Pelley; Intermediate boys class, A. O. Pelley; Intermediate girls' class, Mrs. G. R. Sheldon; 1st Intermediate boys' class, Murtell Myers; 2nd Intermediate girls class, Berneice Hansen; 1st Junior boys, Ed. Haupt; 1st Junior girls, Mrs. Ed. Haupt; 2nd Junior mixed, Esther Fowler; Primary class, Clara Azeltine.

Supply teachers for Senior classes, Mesdames Bounds and F. M. Myers. Supply teachers for intermediate classes, Mesdames Hannah Whitten and F. H. Fowler. Supply for Junior classes, Ruth Bounds and Nina Rietz.

Methodist church notes—

Sabbath school ..... 10:30 a. m.
Morning worship ..... 11:30 a. m.
Senior League ..... 6:30 p. m.
Evening service ..... 7:30 p. m.

Mid-week prayer service Wednesday at 7:30 at the church.

READ THE WANT ADS

AND NOW GALT IS SORE AT DOWS

Galt and Dows have always been on friendly terms as good neighbors should, but one of those unforseen events happened Sunday night which has caused a rupture in this friendly feeling. A citizen of Dows who had made this place their residence for some twenty odd years was returning from their holiday outing on the nine o'clock train that evening. When the train stopped at Galt, they got off and apparently did not notice the difference until the train pulled out. They eventually got into communication with Dows friends who went after them with a car. But what the good citizens of Galt want to know, "is how in the world anyone could mistake their hustling little town for Dows?"—Dows Advocate.

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

Sampson's White Feather HATCHERY
WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCK IOWA RECORD FLOCK
Blood Tested and Iowa Accredited
Every pullet not in production on January 1st was sold on the market. We simply do not hatch from culls. We sell Baby Chicks from our own flock, hatched by a Jamesway Mammoth Incubator.
Breeding Cockerels $2.25 each, in lots of 5. We also do cutsom hatching.
Send for our Catalog! Mrs. J. M. Sampson BELMOND, IOWA

Kinseth's Store News

Here's hoping you had a pleasant time New Year's Day, and that the new year will be a happy one for you all thru the months!

A good resolution to make for the new year is to resolve to try trading at The Store on the Corner. If you do that, your chances of a happy new year will be vastly increased, because when a person saves money, he or she naturally is happy about it, and you'll save if you take advantage of the bargains we have.

There's flour, Snobread, at $2.25 a sack in five-sack lots. $2.35 single sacks. And it's real flour.

Macaroni and spaghetti for nine cents a package.

Navy beans in 5-lb lots for 88c.

Quick Naptha Soap, 6 bars for 25c.

Crackers, 2-lb box, for 34c.

Grape fruit 9c.

Big Four Soap at 38c for 10 bars.

And apples in baskets—Baldwins, Black Twigs, and others.

Above everything else, there is one thing you can always find in the Store on the Corner, and that is—SERVICE! Try it!

Choice Goods
Bred Sow SALE
LA CON FARM
Dows, Iowa
Saturday, January 15, 1927

We extend a personal invitation to every farmer who is interested in good Poland Chinas to visit our farm on the above date and see the offering we are selling whether you desire to buy or not. The mission of the pure bred breeder is the production of seed stock for the improvement of the pork herds in his and adjoining communities. Seventy herds selected their herd sires at our farm the past fall and are in line for a splendid increase in their herds as well as additional profit in their next crop of pigs through the increased size and early maturity that goes with these better hogs. Forty more can make a still greater improvement in their herds by the selection of a sow from this offering and retaining her gilts as their brood sows for another year. We have bred many of the breed's greatest winners as well as largest hogs. Choice Goods, the boar to which all of these sows are bred, is a combination of the best of all the hogs that have gone before him. See him sale day and we leave the decision of whether or not you want a sow bred to him entirely to you.

TERMS—See the Clerk. He makes the Terms.
FREE LUNCH AT NOON!
SALE IN HEATED PAVILION.
H. S. Duncan and H. O. Tellier, Auctioneers.
U. M. Rummel, Clerk.
Farm Adjoins Town On the Southwest.

LA CON FARM
A. D. SEVERE, Mgr.
DOWS, IOWA

Some Objections to Low Test Cream--

Many of our patrons may wonder why we prefer cream testing from 30 to 45 percent rather than low test cream.

The reasons are as follows:

FOR THE PATRON

1 More bulk to handle; greater number of cans and larger cooling tanks.

2. Poorer keeping qualities of cream, because thin cream spoils quicker.

3. More bulk to haul to the creamery.

5. Less skim milk for feed.

6. Lower price per pound for butterfat.

FOR THE CREAMERY

1. More bulk to handle, more labor, greater number of churnings and more equipment in creamery.

2. Greater amount of buttermilk, hence greater fat losses.

3. Cannot improve butter because only a small amount of starter can be used.

4. Inferior butter means lower prices and consequently lower prices for fat to farmer may cause creamery to fail.

It is your problem—our problem—and every dairyman and creamery's problem—let's resolve to solve it—and to bring your cream to—

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

News About Iowa People and Events

In the million dollar mail robbery in Chicago in 1921 was a bond for $1,000 issued by the White-Phillips Company, of Davenport, which had been duly recorded, and hence not negotiable. The bond was recently found among the effects of a man named Hyman who was charged with the robbery and who committed suicide pending the time for his trial. Fear of apprehension had restrained him from attempting to dispose of it. Prior to its discovery, a duplicate bond had been issued and delivered to the owner. This incident serves to confirm the wisdom of the government in insisting upon the prompt registration of all government securities.

* * * *

What is regarded as the most largely attended banquet ever held in the state was that featured during the junior short course at the Iowa State College a Ames the last week of the old year. Approximately 2,500 boys and girls with their club leaders sat down at the gorgeous feast. The tables were loaded with 1,000 pounds of ham—fifty hams in all, forty bushels or 1,500 pounds of potatoes au gratin, 3,500 parkerhouse rolls, 2,500 half pint bottles of milk, 300 pounds of cherry sherbet, 315 quart bricks of ice cream, 150 pounds of celery, 120 pounds or 15 gallons of sweet pickles, 160 pounds of cake, 60 gallons of fruit cocktail, 84 gallons of spiced peaches, 100 pounds of butter and 150 gallons of drinking water. One hundred and sixty waiters were required for preparing and serving the feast. The waiters, it is estimated walked over 100 miles in all to serve the people. An estimate of the total surface of the table tops places that area at about one-fifth of an acre. The distance up and down the aisles around the tables was more than a mile.

* * * *

Des Moines set a new all-time record for postal receipts in 1926 with a total of $3,300.00. This is an approximate increase of 10 percent over 1925 which was also a banner year with a total of $3,009,073. October showed the biggest month's business with $307,718 or an average of almost $10,000 in receipts every day of the month. The past year was the first in history when the postoffice showed an increase every month over the corresponding months of past years.

* * * *

Joe H. Morris, of Albia, was recently re-elected president of the United Mine Workers of America, district No. 13, which includes the Iowa field. Mr. Morris is the son of a Methodist minister. He began as a coal miner in the Angus field in Boone county when his father was pastor of a church in that place. At that time Angus was quite a city, a vigorous rival of its near neighbor, Perry, in Dallas county. There is but little remaining of the once famous coal mining town. Mr. Morris has made a study of coal mining problems through the passing years and he has devoted intelligent application to their solution. If Iowa people would consume Iowa coal a languishing industry would be restored and thousands of men now working only a few hours or days a week would be given steady employment.

* * * *

Members of the American Legion and Auxiliaries are devoted to the welfare of their unfortunate veterans. Just before Christmas the Winthrop and Independence units of the American Legion Auxiliary put on a program for the benefit of the thirty veterans who are at the State Hospital at Independence for treatmen. Thec hapel was beautifully decorated in Christmas colors and a lovely tree occupied the center of the stage, and the following program was presented: Piano solo, Miss Allyn, of Winthrop; dances by Misses Velma Meffert and Mary Joe Holland, of Winthrop; readings by Margaret Weepie and Leslie Hunt, of Independence; vocal solo, by Miss Allyn. Following the program, Christmas boxes were distributed, and smokes sent down by the American Legion Post No. 138 were passed out.

* * * *

Hon. Lars W. Boe, formerly of Forest City, Winnebago county, and a member of the state senate in the 85th and 86th general assemblies, and now president of St. Olaf College at Northfield, Minn., has been knighted b yKing Haakoon, of Norway, "for contribution to reconstruction of war torn European countries and to world literature." Dr. Boe received the decoration of the order of "Knight of St. Olaf" in recognition of his work as one of the two American members of the executive committee of the Lutheran World Council.

* * * *

Members of the Izaak Walton League were instrumental in causing the arrest of Fred and Frank Darrow who were working on a dam across the Maquoketa river at Hopkinton, Delaware county. It is reported that they went down the river and set off charges of dynamite on the county line and picked up a tubful of fish. The offenders were turned over to the Jones county officials to be disposed of.

* * * *

F. C. Upon, with the Chicago Joint Stock Land Bank, says there is not a square corner on the Jefferson highway between Des Moines and Leon, Decatur county. Every square turn has been eliminated. The road is paved or graveled to Indianola and from there to the Missouri line drags are in constant use when the weather will permit. The Jefferson highway between Indianola and Osceola, for a long stretch follows a ridge and a magnificent view is afforded on either side. Tracts of timber along the way add variety and beauty.

* * * *

The Iowa Interstate Bridge Commission presented a supplementary report of the year's activities to Governor Hammill, recommending construction by the state of a bridge across the Missouri river at Onawa, midway between Sioux City and Council Bluffs which now are the only bridge crossings between Nebraska and Iowa. It is recommended that the Onawa bridge proposal be incorporated in the program outlined in the previous report of the commission, which recommended the purchase of interstate toll bridges at Sioux City and Council Bluffs. It was suggested in the previous report that between four and five percent of the state primary road fund be set aside each year for the purchase or construction of state bridges across the Missouri and Mississippi rivers. The commission is composed of Stewart Gilman, R. J. Andrews, and Ward Evans, all of Sioux City.

* * * *

Luther college at Decorah, Winneshiek county, is the only institution of higher learning in Iowa that does not admit young women, its students all being male. But it has another distinction, that of sending its splendid band to Europe on a concert tour a few years ago. Now it is announced that this famous band is planning on making a tour of the state, leaving Decorah on February 9th and returning on February 28th. Its itinerary as announced by L. A. Moe, the director, is as follows: Feb. 9, New Hampton; Feb. 10, Osage; Feb. 11, Mason City; Feb. 12, Northwood; Feb. 13, Albert Lea; Feb. 14, Lake Mills; Feb. 15, Forest City; Feb. 16, Bode; Feb. 17, Humboldt; Feb. 18, Eagle Grove; Feb. 19, Webster City; Feb. 20, Jewell; Feb. 21, Story City; Feb. 22, Marshalltown; Feb. 23, Marengo; Feb. 24, Rock Island. The membership of the band on its concert tour is to be limited to fifty.

* * * *

Christmas 1926 will go down into history as having been more generally observed in Des Moines than at any previous time. Christmas trees, richly decorated with electric lights of all colors were in evidence in more residence windows than ever before. Small trees lined the principal business streets, and Christmas carols were rendered upon the streets, in business houses and hotels and in public places. A large municipal tree richly illuminated was placed on the river front just east of the library. In the court house lobby a monster tree, ornamented with colored lights and tinsel, afforded comfort to many a dejected wanderer. In the lobbies of leading hotels large trees were in evidence. On some of the largest bill-boards in the city the Stoner-McCray people had reproduced oneo f the world's masterpieces, the visit of the wise men to the Christ Child. A large tree at the entrance of Grandview park was brilliantly illuminated which afforded a happy contrast to the somber native trees about it. All of this in spite of the worst bank failure in the history of the state.

* * * *

The Iowa interstate bridge commission recommended construction by Iowa and Wisconsin of a bridge across the Mississippi river at McGregor. The report of the commission said there was urgent need for such a bridge, and that Iowa and Wisconsin engineers estimated it could be constructed for about $1,500,000. It would reach Wisconsin a few miles south of Prairie du Chien. Julius Boeckh is chairman of the commission. Other members are Fred White of Ames and F. G. Bell of McGregor.

Ray Sperbeck, of Swea City, Kossuth county, is doing some strutting because that community shipped a car load of ducks and geese to California, through the Swea City Poultry company. Leon Beck, of a Los Angeles commission firm, made the trip to Swea City for the purpose of chaperoning the birds to California, where former Iowans had them for Christmas, adorning their festive boards with some really corn fed poultry once more.

* * * *

Sioux City is rejoicing over the news from Washington that the senate has passed the river and harbor bill, already approved by the lower house, authorizing the construction of a six foot channel in the Missouri river from Kansas City to Sioux City. For this purpose $12,000,000 will be available. Old timers remember when the Missouri river was navigable away up into Montana. Surely it ought to be possible now, with all modern methods of deepening the channel, to utilize the stream as far as Sioux City, the sponsors of the measure contend.

* * * *

Cigaret tax collections during the year 1926 amounted to $859,448.84, an increase of $50,112.20 over 1925. Inheritance tax receipts for the year just ended totaled $1,232,695.49, as compared with $1,076,293.71 in 1925. This is an increase of $156,401.78. Iowa derived a gross revenue from gasoline taxes in 1926 amounting to $5,033,892.97. The year 1926 was the first full year of operation of the law, collections for the 1925 period being for eight months only.

* * * *

The estate of Joseph Price, colored civil war veteran of Toledo, Tama county, which consists of about $4,000 saved from his pension, is given to Piney Woods school, Braxton, Miss., by the terms of his will. Price who was without surviving kin, died at Iowa Soldiers' Home, Marshalltown. Piney Woods school was founded and is operated by Laurence Jones, former Iowan, for education of negroes.

* * * *

Iowa has 385 consolidated schools in operation in eighty-nine counties. There are ten counties with no consolidated schools. The annual budget for these schools is approximately $10,000,000, $8,000,000 of which is levied for the general fund and the remainder for the schoolhouse fund. Iowa consolidated schools have enrolled 85,961 students. Grades absorb 60,806 of these and the high schools 25,155. Teachers employed total 2,091 in the grades, and 1,653 in the high schools. The medium salary per month for grade teachers is $112.50, and $163 for high school teachers, including superintendents. Counties which have no consolidated schools are Chickasaw, Clarke, Dubuque, Monroe, Muscatine, Scott, Howard Lyon, Wapello and Winneshiek.

* * * *

Removing "rough" fish from Iowa lakes is a popular industry these days. At West Okoboji 200 contracts were signed with the state game warden department. O. E. Smith, of Spirit Lake, says that in order to get their chosen spots on the lake the rush was made at midnight Friday night, many being desirous of obtaining certain locations. The ice on the West Okoboji is from six to eight inches thick. Ben Reed was high man for the first day, being successful in taking about fifty fish. He and his companion are located near the head of the lake about the same spot where they made successful catches last winter. The netters are under contract to only remove buffalo, carp, quillback, redhorse, suckers and dogfish. The nets used are not less than 3 3-4 inch mesh nor more than 4 1-2 inch, and no one can use more than 400 lineal feet of net. The going price at this time is 5 cents per pound for carp and 7 cents for bufalo.

A SMILE

A Californian and a New Englander were matching stories.

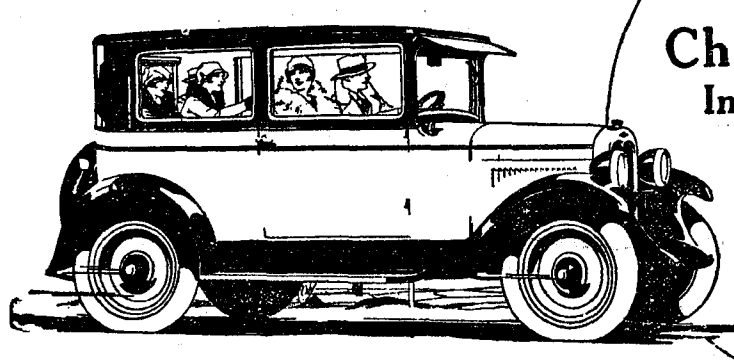
"Why," said the Californian, "we grow cabbage so big that an army of soldiers can camp under one."

"That's nothing," said the New Englander, "we make copper kettles in New England so big that a thousand men can be riveting one and yet be so far apart they can't hear each other's hammer."

"Go on," said the Californian, "why would anyone use a kettle of that size for?"

"Why, to boil your California cabbage in," said the New Englander.—Boston Globe.

The Greatest Sensation of America's Greatest Industry!



The Chevrolet Coach Improved in Quality ---yet reduced to $595

F O B, Flint, Mich.
Former price $645

for Economical Transportation
CHEVROLET

The Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History

New and Marvelously Beautiful Fisher Bodies —a host of Mechanical Improvements—New Features found only on the costliest cars

NEW LOW PRICES

The COACH $595 — Former price $645
The COUPE $625 — Former price $645
The SEDAN $695 — Former price $735
The LANDAU $745 — Former price $765
The Touring Car $525 — Price includes balloon tires and steel disc wheels. Former price $535 with balloon tires only.
The Roadster $525 — Price includes balloon tires and steel disc wheels. Former price $535 with balloon tires only.
The Sport Cabriolet $715 — Entirely new model with rumble seat
1-Ton Truck ..... $495 (Chassis Only)
1-2 Ton Truck ... $395 (Chassis Only)

Balloon tires are now standard on all models
All Prices F O B Flint, Mich.

---plus an Amazing Reducting in Prices!

America has always expected great things from its greatest industry. But the announcement of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet has been the automotive sensation of all time!

Here is a car which in beauty, luxury, quality and modern design challenges the costliest creations of the day.

Here, in a price class where average standards have been the rule, is now offered a car so far beyond all expectation that comparisons cease to exist.

Seven superb models styled as low priced cars were never styled before and offering such marks of fine car distinction as: full crown one-piece fenders, bullet type lamps and "fish tail" rear deck modeling! New and supremely beautiful bodies by Fisher! And, above all, infinitely finer quality---the result of a host of additional improvements such as AC oil filter, AC air cleaner, coincidental steering and ignition lock, larger 17-inch steering wheel, gasoline guage and many, many others!

All this is combined to a superb degree in the long famous leader of the Chevrolet line---the Coach. It would be a brilliant achievement for any manufacturer merely to design such a splendid car to sell at ANY reasonably low price. But to sell it at the amazing price of $595 is a feat of history making proportions. This one price reduction alone would suffice to center worldwide attention on Chevrolet. But due to economies of tremendous production plus the vast resources of General Motors, Chevrolet also announces striking price reductions on other models.

For years Chevrolet has led the world in providing Quality at Low Cost. But now with a new and more beautiful car---with a car infinitely finer in quality and greatly lower in price, Chevrolet stands supreme and unchallenged in dollar-for-dollar value!

No matter in what price class you intend to buy or whether you plan to spend more or less than the price of a Chevrolet, come in today and see the most beautiful low priced Coach ever designed. Admire its marvelous style and grace! Mark its many new fine-car features! Learn for yourself by personal inspection why, at its new low price, it is the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry!

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

LYDIA of the Pines

by HONORÉ WILLSIE

W.N.U. SERVICE

COPYRIGHT by FREDERICK A. STOKES CO.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With her baby sister, Patience, Lydia returns from play to the untidy home of her impoverished father, Amos Dudley, at Lake City. Her father's friend, and her own devoted admirer, John Levine, after discussing affairs with Dudley, makes up his mind to go into politics.

CHAPTER II.—Lydia, Patience and a companion, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw from the nearby reservation. Lydia gives her food. Margery, small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. In their play Margery falls into the water. She is pulled out, unhurt but frightened, and taken home by Lydia and Kent. Her father calls on Amos to complain, blaming Lydia for the mishap.

CHAPTER III.—Lydia explains the accident and asserts that because Margery is considered "stuck up" she is not a popular playmate. Marshall arranges for Lydia to teach Margery to swim and otherwise become "one of the crowd." Levine tells Amos his plan to take timber from the Indian reservation and ultimately have it opened for settlement. From an older boy, Billy Norton, Lydia gets a pair of wild ducks, and despite their poverty the Dudleys have a Christmas feast.

CHAPTER IV.—Patience succumbs to an attack of diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost and her small world has collapsed. She finds comfort in the loving kindness of John Levine. Lydia learns that a note of Amos', backed by Levine and held by Marshall, is due and cannot be met. The child pleads with Marshall, and for her sake he agrees to renew the note.

CHAPTER V.—Grieving for the loss of little Patience, Lydia's health fails. Levine, understanding the situation, gives her a pup, which the lonely child takes to her heart. Reaching the age of fifteen, Lydia enters high school, where she at once realizes that her homemade frock and general appearance of poverty set her apart from her better-dressed companions. She attends a party given by her teacher, Miss Towne. The other girls, smartly dressed, make fun of her makeshift costume.

CHAPTER VI.—Levine is elected sheriff. A sixteen-year-old Indian boy, Charlie Jackson, tells Lydia of numerous wrongs done his people, mainly by Marshall and Levine. Lydia defends her friend vigorously. Meeting Levine in Lydia's house, Charlie Jackson threatens and endeavors to attack him.

CHAPTER VII.—Levine is shot by an unseen assassin. Recuperating at the Dudley cottage, he learns the real extent of Lydia's loneliness and her shaken faith in God. The man and girl enter into a compact to start a "search for God" together. Levine, recovered, begins his campaign for congress.

CHAPTER VIII.—Lydia is unable to drive the hatred of Levine from Charlie's heart, and despite herself her faith in her old friend is shaken by the young Indian's stories. Levine has long realized that despite their disparity in age he is passionately in love with the young girl.

CHAPTER IX.—Levine is triumphant in his campaign for congress. Lydia earns enough money selling fudge to go camping with Charlie, Kent, Margery and two school friends, Gustus Bach and a girl named Olga. Miss Towne chaperons them.

CHAPTER X.—Walking with Kent in the woods, Lydia witnesses a meeting of Levine and some halfbreeds. Their conversation convinces Lydia that Charlie has been right in accusing Levine of plotting to rob the Indians.

CHAPTER XI.—A visit from the old squaw whom Lydia had befriended long ago causes Charlie to tell more of Marshall's and Levine's thievery. Lydia promises to talk to Levine. Billy Norton makes a boyish proposal of marriage to Lydia, who repulses him. In her talk with Levine the man avers his methods are lawful and really best for the Indians. The girl is only half convinced.

CHAPTER XII.—Charlie tells Lydia his father was killed by halfbreeds at the instigation of Levine, and she is miserable at the thought. The family poverty also weighs heavily on her. She is elected class valedictorian. Billy Norton takes her to the senior ball, where she has her first girlish "wonderful time."

CHAPTER XIII.—Congress passes Levine's bill for the opening of the reservation. At the celebration of the event the Indians, led by Charlie, make a disturbance. Billy Norton saves Lydia from harm. Amos arranges to get 120 acres of the reservation, through Levine. Billy tells Lydia he is going to expose Marshall's crooked deals.

CHAPTER XIV.—A congressional commission comes to Lake City to investigate Indian matters, and evidence involving most of the town's prominent citizens is produced.

He glanced down at her and saw a streak of blood on her forehead. His face worked and he began to sob and curse like a madman.

Kicking, striking with his free arm, oaths rolling from his lips, he burst through the crowd and rushed Lydia to the free space about the flagpole where Charlie Jackson stood coolly watching the proceedings.

Billy shook his fist under the Indian's nose.

"Get down there and call the pack off or I'll brain you."

Jackson shrugged his shoulders, calmly. "Let 'em have their fun. It's their last blowout. I hope they do kill Levine and Marshall."

Lydia pulled herself free of Billy.

"Call them off, Charlie. It'll just mean trouble in the end for all of you if you don't."

Charlie looked at Lydia closely and his voice changed as he said, "You got hurt, Lydia? I'm sorry."

"Sorry! You d—d brute!" raved Billy. "I tell you, call off this row!"

The two young men glared at each other. Afterglow and firelight revealed a ferocity in Billy's face and a cool hatred in Charlie's that made Lydia gasp.

Billy put his face closer to Charlie's. "Call it off!" he growled.

Charlie returned Billy's stare for a long moment. Then sullenly, slowly, he turned and threw out across the night a long, shrill cry. He gave it again and again. At each repetition the noise of the mob grew less, and shortly panting, feverish-eyed bucks began to struggle into the light around the pole.

Then, without a word, Billy led Lydia away. The Indians passing them shook their bows at them but they were unmolested.

"Can you walk, Lydia? Do you think you're badly hurt?" asked Billy. "To think of me not scratched and you hurt! Your father ought to horsewhip me!"

"You saved me from being trampled to death!" cried Lydia, indignantly. "Oh, there's the auto."

"Billy," cried Levine, "could you run the car and the two women down the road while Amos and I help the agent get order here? The worst seems to be over, for some reason."

"Billy got Charlie Jackson to call the Indians in," said Lydia.

"I'll wait for you at the willows, a mile below Last Chance," said Billy.

He was an indifferent chauffeur but he reached the willows without mishap.

Sitting with the murmur of the brook and the fragrance of marsh grass enveloping them, the two young people did not talk much.

"Billy," whispered Lydia, "you're so good to me and I was so horrid to you once."

Billy felt her fingers on his knee and instantly the thin little hand was enveloped in his warm fist. "Do you take it all back, Lydia?"

"Well, the horrid part of it, I do," she hedged.

"That's all right," returned the young man. "I'm willing to fight for the rest of it. Don't try to pull your hand away, because I intend to hold it till the folks come. You can't help yourself, so you have no responsibility in the matter."

So for an Hour They Sat.

So for an hour longer they sat, watching the summer night and waiting.

Finally two dim figures approached. "All right, Lydia?" asked Amos.

"Oh, yes! Yes!" she cried. "Are either of you hurt?"

"No," replied Levine. "We got hold of Charlie Jackson about eleven and locked him up, then we felt secure."

"You aren't going to hurt Charlie!" cried Lydia.

"No, but we'll shut him up for a week or so," said Amos.

Levine started the car homeward.

They reached home at daylight. The celebration made table talk and newspaper topic for several days. No real attempt was made to punish the Indians. For once, the whites, moved by a sense of tardy and inadequate justice, withheld their hands.

It was just before college opened that Amos announced that he was going to buy the one hundred and twenty acres John had set aside for him.

"How are you going to pay for it?" Lydia asked.

"Don't you worry, I'll tend to that," replied Amos. "John's going to hold it for me, till I can get the pine cut off. That'll pay for the land."

"How much did you pay for it, Mr. Levine?" asked Lydia.

Levine grinned. "I forget!"

Lydia sat with her chin cupped in her palm, her blue eyes on Levine. To the surprise of both men, she said nothing.

After the supper dishes were washed, and Amos was attending to the chickens, Lydia came slowly out to the front steps where Levine was sitting. She leaned her head against his arm and they sat in silence.

"Lydia," said John, finally, "how does the Great Search go on?"

"I don't thing I make much headway," replied Lydia. "The older I grow, the less I understand men and I've always felt as if, if there was a God, He was a man."

"You mean male, rather than female," agreed John. "Lydia, dear, I wish you did have faith."

"But do you believe, yourself?" urged Lydia.

"Yes. I know that the soul can't die," said the man, quietly. "And the thing that makes me surest is the feeling I have for you. I know that I'll have another chance."

"What do you mean?" asked Lydia wonderingly.

"That, you'll never know," he replied.

"Well, I know that you're a dear," said the young girl, unexpectedly, "no matter how you get your Indian lands. And I love you to death."

She patted his cheek caressingly, and John Levine smiled sadly to himself in the darkness.

* * * * * * *

College life was not much unlike high school life for Lydia. She was very timid at first: suffered agony when called on to recite; reached all her classes as early as possible and sat in a far corner to escape notice. But gradually, among the six thousand students she began to lose her self-consciousness and to feel that, after all, she was only attending a larger high school.

Except for flying visits home, John Levine spent the year at Washington. He was returned to congress practically automatically, at the end of his term. Kent threve mightily as a real estate man. He continued to call on Lydia at irregular intervals in order to boast, she thought, of his real estate acumen and of his correspondence with Margery and Olga, both of whom were now at boarding school.

One Sunday afternoon in March Amos was in town with John Levine, who was on one of his hurried visits home, when Billy Norton came over to the cottage.

Lydia saw at once that something was wrong.

"What's worrying you, Billy?" she asked.

"Lydia," he said, dropping into Amos' chair and folding his big arms, "you know my tract of land—the one I was going to buy from an Indian? I paid young Lone Wolf a ten-dollar option on it while I looked round to see how I could raise enough to pay him a fair price. He's only a kid of seventeen and stone blind from trachoma. Well, yesterday I found that Marshall had bought it in. He looked young Lone Wolf up and gave him a bag of candy. The Indians are crazy for candy. Then he told him to make his cross on a piece of paper. That that was a receipt that he was to keep and if he'd show it at the store whenever he wanted candy, he'd have all he wanted, for nothing. And he had two half-breeds witness it. What Marshall had done was to get Lone Wolf to sign a warranty deed, giving Marshall his pine land. The poor devil of an Indian didn't know it till yesterday when he showed me his 'receipt' in great glee. Of course, they'll swear he's a mixed blood."

Lydia burst out, "Oh, I wish that reservation had never been heard of! It demoralizes every one who comes in contact with it."

"Lydia," said Billy, slowly, "I'm going to expose Marshall. I'm going to show up his crooked deals with the Indians. I'm going to rip this reservation graft wide open. I'm not going to touch an acre of the land myself so I can go in with clean hands and I'm not going to forget that I came pretty close to being a skunk, myself."

"Oh, but, Billy!" cried Lydia. "There's John Levine and all our friends—oh, you can't do it!"

"Look here, Lydia," Billy's voice was stern, "are you for or against Indian graft?"

Lydia drew a long breath but was spared an immediate answer for there was a knock on the door and Kent came in.

"Well," said Kent, after Lydia had settled them all comfortably, "I just left Charlie Jackson—poor old prune. He's been trying to keep the whites off the reservation by organizing the full bloods to stand against the halfbreeds. But after a year of trying he's given up hope. He's drinking a little."

"And still you folks will keep on, stealing the reservation!" exclaimed Billy.

Nobody spoke for a moment. Lydia looked from Billy to Kent, and back again. Kent was by far the handsomer of the two. He dressed well, and sat now, knees crossed, hands clasped behind his head, with easy grace. Billy was a six-footer, larger than Kent and inclined to be raw-boned. His mouth was humorous and sensitive, his gray eyes were searching.

Billy stayed and helped Lydia to clean up the dishes. Kent would never have thought of this, Lydia said to herself with a vague pang. When they had finished Billy gravely took Lydia's coat from the hook and said, "Come, woman, and walk in the gloaming with your humble servant."

Lydia giggled and obeyed. They walked briskly till a rise in the road gave them a view of the lake and a scarlet rift in the sky where the sun had sunk in a bank of clouds.

"Now, Lydia," said Billy, "answer my question. Are you for or against Indian graft?"

Lydia's throat tightened. "I won't take sides against Mr. Levine," she replied.

"Do you mean that you don't want me to expose Marshall?" asked Billy.

"You've no right to ask me that." Lydia's voice was cross.

"But I have. Lydia, though you don't want it, my life is yours. No matter whether we can ever be anything else, we are friends, aren't we, friends in the deepest sense of the word—aren't we, Lydia?"

Friendship! Something very warm and high and fine entered Lydia's heart.

"Yes, we are friends, Billy," she said slowly. "But oh, Billy, don't make me decide that! You'll have to let me think about it. You see, it's deciding my attitude toward all my friends, even toward dad. And I hadn't intended ever to decide."

"And will you tell me, tomorrow, or next day, Lydia?"

"I'll tell you as soon as I decide," she answered.

Amos brought John Levine home with him for supper. It seemed to Lydia that Levine never had been dearer to her than he was that evening. He did not talk of the Indians, to Lydia's relief, but of Washington politics. As the evening drew to a close, and Amos went out to his chickens as usual after Lizzie had gone to bed, John turned to Lydia.

"Really grown up, aren't you, Lydia? Do you enjoy being a young lady?"

"Yes, I do, only I miss the old days when I saw so much of you. No one will ever understand me as you do."

"Oh, I don't know. There are Billy and Kent."

"There'll never be any one like you." Then moved by a sudden impulse she leaned toward him and said, "No matter what happens, you will always know that I love you, won't you, Mr. Levine?"

John looked at the wistful face, keenly. "Why, what could happen, young Lydia?"

"Oh, lots of things! I'm grown up now and—and I have to make decisions about the rightness and the wrongness of things. But no matter what I decide, nothing can change my love for you."

"When you were just a little tot," said Levine, "you were full of gumption and did your own thinking. And I've been glad to see you keep the habit. Always make your own decisions, dear. Don't let me or any one else decide matters of conscience for you."

He rose as he heard Amos coming in the back door, and with his hand under Lydia's chin, he looked long and earnestly into her eyes. Then as Billy had done earlier in the evening, he sighed, "Oh, Lydia! Lydia!" and turned away.

CHAPTER XIV

The Investigation Begins

Lydia admitted to herself that for years something within her had been demanding that she take a stand on the Indian question, something to which Charlie Jackson and Billy had appealed, something which Kent and John Levine had ignored. Yet neither Charlie nor Billy had really forced her to a decision.

Bit by bit she went over her thinking life, beginning with her first recollection of Charlie Jackson in the class in civil government, and all that was feminine and blind devotion in her fought desperately with all that education and her civic-minded forefathers had given her.

Coming home from her last recitation, one mild afternoon, she stopped at the gate and looked up into the pine tree. And there with the lowing of the Norton herds and the hoarse call of the crows mingling with the soft voice of the pine and the lapping of the lake, she made her decision. For clearly as though the pine had put it into words, something said to Lydia that it was not her business to decide whether or not the Indians deserved to live. It was her business to recognize that in their method of killing the Indians, the whites had been utterly dishonorable. That her refusing to take a stand could not exonerate them. And finally, that by closing her eyes to the facts, because of her love for Levine, she was herself sharing the general taint.

It was Lydia's first acknowledgment of her responsibility to America, and it left her a little breathless and trembling. She turned back to the road and made her way swiftly to the Norton place.

"Billy," she said, panting, her cheeks bright and her yellow hair blowing, "I'm against the Indian grafting."

Billy put out his hand, solemnly, and the two shook hands. For all Billy was four years older than Lydia, they both were very, very young. So young that they believed that they could fight single-handed the whole world of intrigue and greed in which their little community was set. And yet, futile as they may seem, it is on young decisions such as these that the race creeps upward!

"What are you going to do, Billy?" asked Lydia.

"I'm going to get a government investigation started, somehow," he replied. "It'll take time, but I'll get it. It'll be lovely muckraking, Lyd!"

"I hate to think of it," she said unsteadily. "Lizzie is miserable, today. Will you tell your mother, Billy, and ask her to come over to see her this evening? I musn't stop any longer now."

Poor old Lizzie was miserable, indeed. For years, she had struggled against rheumatism, but now it had bound her, hand and foot. Ma Norton came over in the evening. Lizzie was in bed shivering and flushed and moaning with pain.

Ma waited till Lizzie slept, then she told Lydia and Amos that Doctor Fulton had better be called, and Amos, with a worried air, started for town at once.

Doctor Fulton shook his head and sighed.

"She's in for a run of rheumatic fever. Get some extra hot water bottles and make up your mind for a long siege, Lydia."

And it was a long siege. Six weeks of agony for Lizzie, of nursing and housework and worrying for Lydia. Ma Norton and the neighbors gave what time they could, but the brunt, of course, fell on Lydia.

Billy called every evening on his way home to supper. John Levine sat up two or three nights a week. Kent came out once a week, with a cheery word and a basket of fruit. And at frequent intervals, the Marshall surrey stopped at the gate and Elviry or Dave appeared with some of Elviry's delicious cookery for Lydia and Amos.

During all this time she said nothing to Billy about his muckraking campaign. He finished his law course in June and entered ex-Senator Alvord's office as he had planned. There was another election in the fall and John Levine was returned to congress, this time almost without a struggle.

Like a bomb, late in December fell the news that the Indian commissioner had been called before a senate committee to answer questions regarding the relations of Lake City to the reservation, while following close on the heels of this announcement came word that a congressional commission of three had been appointed to sit at Lake City to investigate Indian matters.

"All Right," Said Kent Soberly.

"Billy, how did you do it?" asked Lydia, in consternation. He had overtaken her one bitter cold January afternoon, on her way home from college.

"I didn't do much," said Billy. "I just got affidavits, dozens of them, showing frauds, and gave them to Senator Alvord. He has a lot of influence among the senators and is a personal friend of the President."

Lydia's lips were set tightly as she plodded along the snowy road.

"Billy," she said, finally, "are you doing this to get even with Dave Marshall?"

"I'm doing it because I'm ashamed of what New Englanders have done with their heritage. And I'm doing it for you. To make a name for you. You are going to marry me, some day, Lydia."

"I'm not," said Lydia flatly.

Billy laughed. "You can't help yourself, honey. It's fate for both of us. Come along home! You're shivering."

"When you talk that way, I hate you!" exclaimed Lydia, but Billy only laughed again.

The commissioners sat for months and in that time they exposed to the burning sun of publicity the muck of thievery and dishonor on which Lake City's placid beauty was built.

Marriage after marriage of squaws with Lake City citizens was unearthed, most of these same citizens also having a white family. Hundreds of tracts of lands that had been obtained by stealing or by fraud from full bloods were listed. Bags of candy, bits of jewelry, bolts of cotton had been exchanged for pine worth thousands of dollars.

It was a nerve-racking period for Lake City. Whether purposely or not, the net did not begin to close round John Levine till toward the end of the hearing. Nor did Levine come home until late in the summer, when the commission had been sitting for some months.

In spite of a sense of apprehension that would not lift, the year was a happy one for Lydia. In the first place, she went to three college dancing parties during the year. In the second place, Kent asked her to go with him to the last party and, to Lydia's mind, a notable conversation took place at that time.

"Thanks, Kent," said Lydia, carelessly, "but I'm going with Billy."

"Billy! Always Billy!" snorted Kent. "Why, you and I were friends before we ever heard of Billy!"

"Yes," returned Lydia calmly. "You've always liked me as I have you. But you've always been ashamed of my clothes. I don't blame you a bit, but you can imagine how I feel about Billy, who's taken me, clothes or no clothes."

It was Kent's turn to flush.

"Hang it, Lyd, I've been an infernal cad, that's all!"

"And," Lydia went on, mercilessly, "I've got nothing to wear now but the same old graduating dress. I suppose you were hoping for better things?"

"Stop it!" Kent shouted. "I deserve it, but I'm not going to take it. I'm asking you for just one reason and that is, I've waked up to the fact that you're the finest girl in the world. No one can hold a candle to you."

There was a sudden lilt in Lydia's voice that did not escape Kent as she answered laughingly, "Well, if you feel the same after seeing Margery this summer, I'll be glad to go to one of the hops next fall with you, and thank you, deeply, Mr. Moulton."

"All right," said Kent, soberly. "The first hop next fall is mine and as many more as I can get."

It was late in the spring and after the conversation with Kent, that it began to be rumored about town that ex-Senator Alvord's office was at the bottom of the Indian investigation. Kent accused Billy of this openly, one Sunday afternoon at Lydia's.

"I'm willing to take the blame, if necessary," said Billy.

"Nice thing to do to your friends and neighbors, Bill," Kent went on. "What the deuce did you do it for?"

Billy shrugged his shoulders and said nothing. Kent appealed to Lydia.

"Would you have gone to parties with him if you'd known what he was doing to his town, Lyd?"

"Kent, I knew it," said Lydia, after a pause.

"You knew it! You let a lot of sickly sentimentality ruin Lake City in the eyes of the world? Not only that. Think what's coming to John Levine! Think what's coming to me, though I've done little enough!"

"Then I'm glad it came to stop you while you'd still done little!" cried Lydia. "Oh, there's Margery! Isn't she lovely!"

It was Margery, just home from boarding school, where she gaily announced as she shook hands she had been "finally finished."

"Margery," cried Lydia, "you're so beautiful that you're simply above envy. What a duck of a dress!"

"Isn't it!" agreed Margery. "What were you all discussing so solemnly when I interrupted?"

"Indian graft!" said Billy, laconically.

"Isn't it awful! Oh, Billy, by the way, daddy says he thinks Senator Alvord started the whole thing. Did he?"

"Yes, and I helped," replied Billy shortly.

"Well, I think you ought to be ashamed of yourself," cried Margery, airily. "Don't you, Lydia?"

"No, I don't, I'm proud of him, though I'm scared to death," said Lydia.

"Well, I just tell you, Billy Norton," there was a sudden shrill note in Margery's voice, "if anything really horrid is unearthed about daddy, I'll never speak to you again. Would you, Kent?"

"I don't intend to anyhow," replied Kent, coolly. "Yet me take you home in my toot-toot."

"But I just got here," protested Margery.

"It's now or never," said Kent, rising, "I've got to run along."

"Oh, if it's that serious!" Margery took Kent's arm. "By-by, Lydia! Come over and see my new dresses."

After they were gone, Billy sat up and looked at Lydia. "Lydia," he said. "I'm going to quit. You know I've worked with Charlie Jackson right along."

"Quit? But Billy, why I—I didn't think you minded Kent and Margery that much!"

"I don't mind them at all. But Lydia, I found yesterday my father got one hundred and twenty acres from a ten-year-old full-blood boy for five dollars and a bicycle. Last week Charlie unearthed a full-blood squaw from whom your father had gotten two hundred and forty acres for an old sewing machine and twenty-five dollars. I've done so much for the Indians and Charlie is so fond of you that he'll shut these Indians up, but I can't go on, after that, of course."

"Yes, you'll go on, Billy," Lydia's voice was very low. "After I faced what would come to John Levine through this, I can face anything."

Billy gave a little groan and bowed his head on Lydia's knee. Suddenly she felt years older than Billy. She smoothed his tumbled blond hair.

"I told you all the battles of the world were fought for a woman," he said. "Dear, I'll go on, though it'll break mother's heart."

"It won't break her heart," said Lydia. "Women's hearts don't break over that sort of thing."

CHAPTER XV

Ducit Amor Patriae

It was the last week in August when John Levine was summoned before the commission. Lydia and Amos were summoned with him.

There were two long tables at one end of the room behind one of which sat the three commissioners. At the other table were the official stenographers and Charlie Jackson. Before the tables were chairs and here were John Levine and Kent, Pa Norton, and Billy, old Susie and a younger squaw, with several bucks.

(Continued Next Week)

What You Want In the WANT ADS

LOCALS

Mrs. D. E. Packard was hostess to the Priscilla club, yesterday.

Mrs. Clarence Scott and son, Robert Dale, returned home from Witchita, Kansas, Sunday, where they had been visiting.

Will sell 30 full blood Hampshire fall pigs at the combination sale, Saturday.—Grindem & Eccles. 1*

Mrs. Wm. Sheriff was taken to the Hampton hospital Friday morning, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis, Perry Loomis taking her over in his car. She is reported recovering nicely from the operation.

The Cemetery Aid society will meet at the home of Mrs. C. C. Benson, Friday, January 14. Hostesses will be Mrs. C. C. Benson, Mrs. F. O. Fitts, Mrs. George Schanck, Mrs. W. E. Bullard and Mrs. I. H. Benson. All members are urged to be present.

Mr and Mrs. Wm. Gealow and son Harry, from north of Meservey, visited relatives here Monday.

Luncheon club will meet at the hotel this noon in regular session. The topic for discussion will be Highways and will be in charge of W. C. Tyrrell and R. H. Klemme, committee.

Miss Rena Purdy spent the holiday vacation with her brother Bert Rowen, in Chicago.

J. W. Scott attended a convention of Atwater Kent radio dealers, held at Mason City the first of the week.

The Monday Night Bridge club met this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morse.

Special for Saturday—Coffee Cake of all kinds, Cookies of all kinds. 15c a dozen from our oven to you. Fresh baked goods of all kinds.—Barban's Bakery.

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow has taken an advertising contract with The Independent, the first ad of which appears on page 8 this week. Mrs. Fetrow has a stock of fresh baked goods such as pies, cake, and the like, and will be glad to fill your wants in this line. Watch her ad each week for her message of service.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 1.—Mac. J. Thompson, closing out farm sale. Particulars later.

FEB. 8—Roy Jenison. Spotted Poland sow sale.

FEB. 9.—Maxwell Baker, Poland China hog sale.

FEB. 10—G. Gobeli, farm sale, location 4 miles north, 1-2 mile west of Meservey.

FEB. 12—J. M. Sampsor, Spotted Poland bred sow sale.

FEB. 17—Harry Ziska, Duroc Jersey bred sow sale.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

Miss Elma Stapley returned Thursday from Chicago, where she had been visiting relatives. Her sister, Evelyn, remained for a longer visit.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Peterson, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Cato C. Griesy and Mrs. E. L Madsen, motored to Bode, Tuesday evening, to attend a joint installation of the Masonic and Eastern Star lodges of that place

The Central States Electric Co. line crew, who have been working here the past few weeks, moved to Britt, Tuesday.

Mrs. Frank Case suffered a badly lacerated hand Monday, when she had her hand caught in a power clothes wringer. Several stitches were required to gather the wound together, the flesh being badly torn where her rings were crushed into it.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dittmer were pleasantly surprised by some two dozen friends and neighbors, last evening. The evening was spent in a social way and in bridge. Refreshments were brought by the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Dittmer expect to move away from this community in the near future.

Mrs. Wilkins, mother of Mrs. R. M Hildebrand, returned to her home at Buffalo Center, Monday, after a visit at the Hildebrand home.

Last Tuesday evening occured the mock wedding of Molly Wagontrack, (Lucile Skouge) and Johnny Cabbage head (Lucile Hauge) at the home of Lucile Legge. Right Reverend Hezekiah Abrahamson (Bertha Eliason), officiated. The bride was accompanied by flower girls, ring bearer, maid of honor and best man, all represented by Senior high school girls. After the wedding, various games were played. Miss Legge was presented with a handsome gift, and at a late hour the guests were served refreshments and left, expressing their good wishes for a happy future. ***

Dec. 20, 1926, the Girl Scouts held a party for the second patrol, in the gymnasium. We played some interesting games and had our regular business meeting. A feature was the awarding of badges. Amelia Greenlander, Christina Groen, Ruth Courson and Berle Hake received their tenderfoot badges. Lillian McNutt was the only girl of the troop to receive her second class badge. The following merit badges were awarded to Harriet Gowdy: musician, homemaker, needlewomen, canning, handywoman, pathfinder, laundress. Mary Elizabeth Blake received the musician, scribe, homemaker, laundress, hostess, pathfinder, handy woman badges. Muriel Luick received the homemaker merit badge. This is a good record for our first court of awards this year, but we hope to have a greater number next time. Following this the committee served us with a very delicious lunch. An enjoyable time was spent by all in this Christmas celebration. (We even had a beautiful decorated Christmas tree.) The Second Patrol take this opportunity to thank their hostess for the lovely time which they enjoyed.

Scribe.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—We have a number of slightly used Standard Incubators, capacity from 300 to 1200. These machines are in good condition and are priced to sell.—Mrs. Harold Smith, Alexander, Iowa. 8tf

FOR SALE—Home grown potatoes. Sound and ripe. Lawrence Gealow. Phone 285, or inquire at Independent. 5tf

FOR SALE—Five Barred Rock Cockerels. $1.75 each. Also one dozen Barred Rock pullets, $1.00 each. —Mrs. L. W. Stacy, Phone 325.

FOR SALE—Two-hole corn sheller in good condition. Reasonable.—Carl Dorenkamp. Phone 3121. 1*

FOR SALE—1926 Ford truck. Also 1926 Ford coupe. Elmer Larson.

FOR SALE—High grade Spotted Poland and Poland China sows. Cholera immune. Phone 1818.—Andrew Pals. 1*

FOR SALE—Fresh heifer, Shorthorn. John Chapman. Phone 3713.

FOR SALE—Pure bred Buff Orpington cockerels. $1.50 each.—Carl Dorenkamp. Phone 3121. 1*

FOR SALE—My farm, 4 miles southwest of Belmond. For price and terms, inquire at State Bank of Belmond.—Aug. Hunst. 94*

FOR SALE—1926 Ford Truck.—Elmer Larson. 1*

FOR SALE—Pure bred Barred Rock Cockerels. $1.75 each if taken at once.—Mrs. C. C. Parks. 1*

FOR SALE—Pure bred Duroc Jersey boar. Registered. Priced right.—Oren Hanson. Phone 1210. 1*

FOR SALE—Ladies' winter coat. Large fur collar. In splendid condition. Phone 260. 1c

WANTED—Single man to work on farm. Must be experienced. Inquire at Independent. 82*

FOR RENT—Six room modern house, 5 block north of State Bank. See M. C. Barry. 1*

STRAYED—Sorrel gelding, with wire cut on left hind leg; also bay mare, two colts, one coming 2 and one coming 3 years old, and 1 black mule, from our place January 3. Finder please notify Rowen Bros., Rowan, Iowa. 1*

FOUND—Stray calf, came by my place last fall. Owner can have same by paying costs and proving property. Reg. Houghton, Goodell, Ia., 1c

Mr. Farmer—If you are hungry, try our meals and lunches. Best there is.—Barban's Bakery Cafe.

Mrs. E. Purcell came from Milwaukee, last week to keep house for Mrs E. F. Bailey during her absence in Kansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Starnes of Clear Lake were here Saturday to attend the Brooks funeral.

George McNicol motored to Eagle Grove, Saturday, to meet his father, who came from Des Moines.

The Belmond Co-Operative Shipping association shipped two loads of prime hogs Saturday which netted the owners $11.26 per hundred.

A miscellaneous shower was given Miss Lucille Legge, Wednesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. J. S. White, by a number of her friends. Miss Legge is to be married in the near future.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	20c
Springs	20c
Roosters	10c
Ducks	18c
Geese	15c
Eggs	30c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	53c
Oats	39c
Corn, No. 3 yellow	58c
Barley	55c

Hemstitching

Done here during Mrs. Stevens' absence.

We have a select stock of

EARLY SPRING HATS

to show you at this time.

The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Opera House

SATURDAY AND MONDAY
January 15 and 17
THOMAS MEIGHAN IN
"The Man Who Found Himself"

with Virginia Valli. A Paramount picture. Story by Booth Tarkington. Meighan's finest fighting role—out of prison shadows to the sunshine of a happy home.

ADDED ATTRACTION
AMATEUR
Charleston Contest

Open to all—prizes to the winners!
Prices 10c and 20c

Wednesday, Jan. 19
EVELYN BRENT
In
"Smooth As Satin"
Also An
F. B. O. COMEDY
Prices 10c and 20c

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Thursday - Friday
Saturday
January 13-14-15

Beef Roast!
Prime, juicy cuts that will make fine roasts.
PER POUND
17c

Hamburger!
PER POUND
15c

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Loats' Savings!

You remember this store went on the cash basis January 1, and promised you the same high quality groceries at lesser prices. This week we offer a few samples:

CORN, was 15c, now 11c
PEAS, were 15c, now 11c
WHEAT FOOD, Purety, was 25c, now 20c
MILK, tall can 10c
CREAM OF NUT OLEO ...25c
RAISIN BRAN 15c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, January 13, 1927 No. 40

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

C. O. Fitts says his idea of helpfulness is to bring a basket of fruit to the sick man and then sit on the bed and eat it.

—

Oh, my darling Nellie Gray,
They have taken her away,
They caught her making moonshine
In the hills the other day.

—

Dr. Parsons thinks that if all of us knew everything about the rest of us, none of us would associate with any of us.

Ever hear this one? A negro preacher pestered his bishop so much with appeals for help that the bishop finally told him in no uncertain terms not to send any more appeals. The following week there came another letter as follows: "This is not an appeal, this is a report. I have no pants."

—

Henceforth, we are giving 5 per cent discount on all merchandise bought and paid for within 10 days from date of purchase. Eight per cent interest will be charged after 30 days.

—

We are doing this because it is the only fair way to do and is right in line with our policy of service to our customers. The buyer who pays cash is entitled to a discount, a lesser price than the one who charges. We expect it, so why shouldn't we grant you the same right?

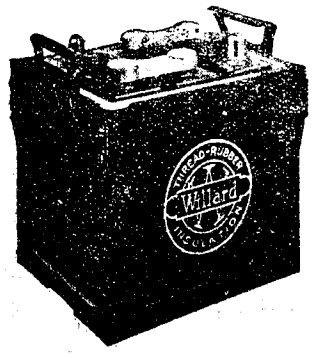
—

The 8 per cent interest after 30 days is to make it fair to us. The folks from whom we buy lumber charge us if we don't settle up in 30 days. There's a lot to this; come in and let us tell you some of it.

—

Let's go get more business in 1927 than we had last year! We serve a good many of you, and we want to be of service to more.

Will Your



BATTERY STAND COLD WEATHER INSPECTION?
IF YOU ARE NOT SURE—
BETTER STOP AROUND
AND LET US
TEST IT OUT FOR YOU.

Belmond Storage Battery Company
BELMOND, IOWA
Phone 46 Official 2417

SERVICE!

It would help me wonderfully and please you immensely if I could furnish you with

FRESH BAKED GOODS

So I am asking you to call me over the phone before 9:00 o'clock in morning if you want fresh baked

PIES, CAKES, ETC.

Just leave your order every morning for the day

FOR BETTER SERVICE!
Phone 88

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
BELMOND, IOWA

FREE! FREE!

We are giving KNIFE SHARPENERS worth 25c Free with a 25c package of Nature's Remedy. Two Sharpeners with a 50c package. Have you gotten yours?

FOR THAT COLD use Dewitt's Vapo Balm in combination with DeWitt's Cold Tablets. One package Cold Tablets free with a 75c package DeWitt's Vapo Balm.

HAVE YOU A GOOD Cough Syrup in your medicine chest? We have all the old reliable cough syrups. Try a bottle of Nyal's Wild Cherry for the children. Honey and Hore hound is very good, too.

FOR QUICKEST RELIEF fr that Sore Throat use Nyal's Sore Throat Gargle. It does the work and is guaranteed.

WE ARE SELLING LOTS OF RECORDS—
Victor Records ----------3 for $1.00
Edison Records ----------4 for $1.00

Schultz Drug Co.

Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

Build for the Future

It has been said: "Some men fail in the struggle of life because they never begin, but more people fail because they never finish."

In the case of SAVINGS accounts, one is likely to put off until tomorrow and the "tomorrow" comes too late to be of much practical use. If you have no savings account, now is the time to start one here.

We Pay You Five Percent Interest

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND
IOWA

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 — BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, JANUARY 20, 1927 — NO. 10

LOCALS WIN THEIR THIRD STRAIGHT

Take Measure Of Clarion Team In Fast Game Saturday; Goldfield This Week.

FANS TAKING INTEREST

The Belmond High cagers won their third straight game by turning in Clarion on the local floor Saturday night. The local boys started the game strong, jumping into the lead and holding it for the entire game. Belmond led 10 to 5 at the end of the first half. During the last half both teams slowed up, each scoring but four points. Don McNulty with three field goals and two free throws led in the scoring. John Holtzbauer with two field goals and Henry Johnson with two free throws completed the scoring for Belmond. The locals showed considerable improvement in passing and handling the ball, over their previous games, though their basket eyes are not yet perfect.

The rooters at the game showed the most pep seen at a game for quite a while and with the increasing interest in the team local boosters are expecting some real games during the rest of the season.

The team goes to Goldfield Friday for the first out-of-town game, and reports from Goldfield indicate our boys will be pushed harder than in the first three games.

In a preliminary game the Belmond Freshmen lost to the Clarion Freshmen.

The next home game will be played January 8, with Britt furnishing the opposition.

The Larcher Duo gave the last number of the Lyceum course in the High School auditorium Wednesday evening. Both of the members showed much talent. Miss Larcher gave several interesting selections on her saxaphone, clarihet, and drum and displayed her ability in several readings. Mr. McGinniss was heard in several piano selections and was an exceptional artist on his piano-accordian. The program consisted of good music, the appreciation of which was shown by the undivided attention of the audience. The Junior class should be commended for bringing such artists as the Larcher Duo to our high school.

The High School assembly period Friday morning was devoted to freshening the memory of old Belmond High School students, and in the case of the underclassmen, formally introducing them to the words of our pep songs. Henceforth, we hope to have the added volume of the lusty freshmen voices throughout the songs, in addition to the usual roar of the upper classmen. If we did not attain entire perfection in those forty-five minutes, at least we are putting more thought and a whole lot more pep into those songs than ever before. After Miss Waugh had been satisfied as to our beautiful tone quality (?) and splendid volume, our yell leader led in some hearty "Rahs" for our basket ball team. Anyone listening must certainly have been convinced of Belmond High School's ability in her activities and impressed by the enthusiastic, wholehearted, perfectly splendid "pep" shown by the entire high school. In fact the responce was so marked that even our exacting yell leader was moved to compliment us on having shown the best pep of the year. Of course we were all encouraged, and with athletic activities progressing as steadily as they have been, we hope to transfer some of our hopefulness to our many loyal friends and patrons throughout the community.

Last Thursday Belmond took part in the first round of the state debating series, and came out with one defeat and one victory. Our negative team, consisting of Randall Klemme, Helen Luick, and Lucile Skouge, went to Garner and brought home the bacon. The debate at Garner was attended by a very small crowd of people, about half of which were from Belmond. Garner was handicapped by inexperience. The outstanding speaker was our third speaker, Randall Klemme, whose de-

(Continued on page two.)

JUDGE GIVES DR. C. H. HANSON A NEW TRIAL

Judge Thompson, of Webster City held an adjourned session of the district court at Clarion Monday. Among the main cases up for consideration was that of Dr. C. H. Hanson of Eagle Grove, convicted at the last term of practicing medicine without a license. After hearing the pleas of the attorneys the court granted a new trial to the defendant on the ground of prejudicial argument. It is rumored that the doctor is quite sick in his home at Eagle Grove. He was not at the trial.

The Brown-Camp Hardware Co. vs. W. W. Waddell et al is a suit to collect the sum of $7,010.31 on two past due promissory notes executed in May, 1917, and February, 1924, for $3,000 and $1,800 respectively.

Security Savings Bank of Eagle Grove brings action against Gus Peters to collect a balance of $1,560 on his past due note.

August Groshens, of Eagle Grove alleges in his petition for a divorce that his wife Annie Groshens on or about the 10th day of November, 1924, told this plaintiff to get out of the house and stay out; that she did not want to live with him any longer; that she has since absented herself from him without any reasonable cause. The couple were married at Clarion October 29, 1902 and have no children.

Monday, Sheriff Johnson received an inquiry from Des Moines officers regarding a man by name of Arthur Gilliat. The same day Special Agent Rossmen for the Great Western came to Clarion with cards bearing the finger prints of a man in jail at Rockwell City, having been convicted of robbing the company's depot at Lohrville. It later developed that the man wanted was the one in jail at Rockwell City. He is an ex-convict with a bad record, having been sentenced to serve twenty years at Anamosa on a robbery charge with a deadly weapon. He is now wanted on other counts. He was released by the board of parole and for a time masqueraded as a student at Ames college, using the campus as the basis of operations. Tuesday morning Sheriff Johnson received a message saying the prisoner had escaped from jail and was still at large. In some manner he secured a rope and swung himself to the ground from the second story of the building. He may have fallen a part of the way as blood was found on the ground under his window.

Marriage licenses have been issued as follows the past week: Habert Peter Pick and Ola Mae Hiter of Lake township; Henry L. Mennenga and Lucille Bernice Legge of Belmond; Harry Cragg and Minnie B. Beal of Eagle Grove.

The Farmers State Bank of Dows asks judgment against Mrs. Charlotte Kuhn on her two promissory notes in the sum of $107.22—Monitor.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP TONIGHT

The Good Fellowship Club meets this, Thursday, evening, January 20, at the library parlors, in the regular scheduled meeting. As usual, a preliminary program of music will be given, to be followed by the speaker of the evening, Mr. T. J. O'Shaughnessy, of Chicago. Mr. O'Shaughnessy, who is a railroad man and connected with the Rock Island lines will talk on the supervision of the personnell of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific company. He is reported an able speaker, with a fund of humor, and his message should be worth hearing. The usual refreshments will be served at the close of the evening.

The Good Fellowship Club invites every man in the community, regardless of race, creed or class, to be its guest at this meeting, or at any of the public meetings. There is no charge; everything is free but the eats, and these are served at cost and you do not have to eat if you do not desire. The Good Fellowship Club meetings are simply what the name implies, good fellowship, and are for the sole purpose of fostering the good fellowship spirit in the community; of getting together, having a good time, and learning a little from one another and from the speaker's message.

Shortening the Long Winter Nights

B. K. KINSETH DIES SUDDENLY

Came Here Eight Years Ago; One of Leading Merchants.

B. K. Kinseth, one of the leading merchants of Belmond, died suddenly at his home here Monday, about 6:00 a. m. Death was due to the failure of his heart, Mr. Kinseth having suffered for some time from heart trouble. He had been forced to take extreme care of his health for years, and had enjoyed more or less good health until recently. About a week ago he with Mrs. Kinseth went to Bode to visit relatives. While there, an infection developed on his nose, which turned into a large boil and rapidly grew worse until his face was badly swollen. The pain from this, so close to his brain, is thought to have aggravated his heart until the already weakened organ broke down.

Mr. Kinseth came to Belmond about eight years ago and engaged in the grocery business in the Martin building. He was successful, and thru the untiring efforts of he and his family, and by giving his patrons service at all times, built up one of the best businesses in the community.

Funeral services were held yesterday, Wednesday, at the Methodist church in Belmond, in charge of Rev. Reitan, of Kanawha. Burial Rev. J. F. Snyder, of Belmond, and was made in the Belmond cemetery. An obituary will be printed next week.

LEGGE-MENNENGA

One of the leading social events of the season occured on Monday when Miss Lucille Legge and Mr. Henry Mennenga, of Belmond, Iowa were united in marriage at the Methodist parsonage in Clarion.

The Rev. J. B. O'Connor read the ring ceremony at high noon, after which a three-course dinner was served.

The bride wore an Ashes of Roses silk crepe dress, trimmed in silver lace with a bouquet of pink rosebuds, and moonlight gray slippers with hose to match. The groom wore a pencil strip black suit.

Miss Legge entered the Belmond schools at the age of five years and with her amiable disposition has won for herself a host of friends.

Mr. Mennenga was born and reared on the Mennenga farm three miles northeast of Belmond and is a leader for good things in the community in which he lived. Both young people were very active in Sunday School and church activities, and are highly respected by all who know them.

The bride and groom will make their home on the H. L. Carpenter farm two and one-half miles north of Goodell and will be at home to their many friends after March 1st.

Those who witnessed the wedding ceremony were Mrs. Martha Wallace, of Belmond, grandmother of the bride, Mr. W. H. Davis, of Belmond, uncle of the bride, Mrs. J. B. O'Connor, of Clarion, Iowa, and Mr. and Mrs. O. F. Peterson, of Clarion, Ia.

Mrs. Glenn Klemme was hostess to the Delphian club, Monday evening.

WEATHER FOR THE PAST YEAR

H. F. Luick, Co-Operative Observer, Gives Fine Report.

A great many Iowa people migrate each winter to warmer climates in order to avoid some of Iowa's severe winter weather. On a whole they are wise but a careful analysis of the weather for the past year will prove interesting.

The average temperature for the past twelve months was 45.7 degrees. That is to say, if we were to strike an average for the temperature that would not vary winter or summer, night or day, it would be 45.7 degrees. If we were to strike an average for the growing months, viz, April to September, we would have as the temperature maintained at all times 63.2 degrees.

The warmest day of the past year was on July 20th when the thermometer went to 104 degrees. The coldest day of the past year was on December 14th when the temperature went to 17 degrees below zero. However, on January 28th it dropped to within 2 degrees of the low point.

The precipitation for 1926 was a little below the sixteen year average, the amount being 28.41 inches. The normal per year is 33.53 inches. September was the wettest month with a rainfall for 6.39 inches while May was second with 5.47 inches. If all the snow that fell in 1926 were on the ground at one time, only 3.25 inches of a yard stick would be showing above the snow. An Iowa northwest wind blowing at the rate of 30 miles per hour would pile this snow into banks that even our faithful M. & St. L. could not negotiate. December had the largest fall with 11.50 inches, February being second with 6.50 inches, while October had the least—a trace. During the growing months of April to September 77.3 percent of the precipitation fell.

During the year there were 80 clear days, 64 that were partly cloudy and 221 that were rated as cloudy.

Seven months of the year the wind blew from the northwest more than any other direction; three months it blew from the southeast and one month it blew from the southwest while another month it blew mostly from the northeast.

Remembering that 45.9 degrees is the average temperature for this part of Iowa from one year's beginning to its end, it is rather interesting to see the variation from year to year as the following figures will disclose:

1910—46.0; 1911—47.7; 1912—45.0; 1913—48.0; 1914—47.1; 1915—45.5; 1916—44.7; 1917—42.1; 1918—47.3; 1919—45.9; 1920—46.1; 1921—50.8; 1922—49.0; 1923—46.8; 1924—44.8; 1925—46.8; 1926—46.7.

A great many believe that rainfall from one year to another does not vary much. A study of these figures will prove the contrary holds true:

1910—20.08; 1911—28.58; 1912—29.68; 1913—27.91; 1914—35.53; 1915—40.57; 1916—37.47; 1917—28.49; 1918—42.58; 1919—37.40; 1920—37.59; 1921—29.82; 1922—21.93; 1923—30.74; 1924—33.30; 1925—33.66; 1926—28.41.

A brief description of the instruments furnished by the U. S. Government is interesting to those who have never seen them. Two thermometers are furnished, a maximum and a minimum, both absolutely accurate. The maximum thermometer, like the ordinary house thermometer, has mercury in the column that expands when the temperatures are warm and contracts when it grows cooler. But the Government thermometer differs in this respect, the column of mercury remains in the highest position it reaches similar to a fever thermometer. The minimum thermometer is filled with alcohol and will register temperature as low as 60 degrees below zero. It has a little indicator that rides at the top of the alcohol column and as the temperatures lower this little indicator goes down, too, and remains at the low point even if the weather warms and the alcohol column rises above the low point. So with these two thermometers it is possible to tell what the highest and the lowest temperaure have been since they were set. Each day at 7:00 p. m. the readings for the preceding 24 hours are taken and the thermometers set, at which time they will both register alike. At the time of setting the mercurial column is shaken down until it will settle no lower and the minimum thermometer is raised in a vertical position with bulb uppermost so that the indicator will again rest on top of the alcohol column.

Rainfall is measured in a rain guage with facilities so accurate that even one hundredths of an inch can be measured. It consists of two receptacles, one setting inside the other, connected by a funnel over the larger so that any rain falling into this funnel is run into the inner brass container. The outer container has a diameter ten times larger than the inner brass container so that if an inch of water were to fall into the funnel covering the outer container, the inner container would have ten inches of water in it. After a rain, a measuring stick graduated into 1-100 of an inch is used to measure the water in the inner container. During the winter months, the inner container is removed entirely for then the precipitation is in the form of snow, which is caught in the larger container. To ascertain the amount of precipitation in a given snowfall, the snow that has fallen in the larger container is melted and the water that comes as a result is measured in the inner container by the use of the measuring stick. To ascertain the amount of snow that has fallen in a given 24-hour period, a common rule is used to measure the fall in at least three different places in an open field and the average of the three measurements used as the proper amount of snowfall.

Once each month, the records from a Weather Bureau station are forwarded in a franked envelope to the Division Chief at Des Moines, where the records for the state are compiled. Once each week during the growing season, a report is given showing the progress being made in crops, accounts of the harvest and reports on the yield. Some over 100 stations are being maintained over the state so that some very valuable material is at hand for anyone seeking information about Iowa.

Great credit is due Mr. Geo. P. Hardwick of this city for his sixteen years of service and for the wonderful set of reports that has been handed on. Not a day in that long period of service did he fail to record the data on the weather. Belmond people will be indebted to Mr. Hardwick for a long time for his splendid co-operation.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Co-operative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week Jan. 8 to Jan. 15, 1927, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
9	35	13	T	Clear
10	15	0	—	Clear
11	28	-4	—	Cloudy
12	32	20	.10	Cloudy
13	21	1	—	Pt. Cloudy
14	8	-10	—	Clear
15	10	-13	—	Clear

Herbert Steenblock was accompanied to Mason City, Friday night, by A. W. Loats and Claude Johnson, from which point Herbert took the train for Milwaukee where he will enter a business college.

WORK STARTED ON NEW BRIDGE

Contractor Has Force Of Men Working On Bridge Over East Branch Of River.

CENTER PIER IS GOING IN

Edward Ove. of Dike, contractor of the two new bridges being built on Primary No. 15, north of Belmond, has started work on the job, his men beginning about a week ago.

The bridge across the east span of the Iowa river is being erected first. This is to be a steel structure, with two 90-foot spans, making a 180-foot bridge. Workmen have the cofferdam sunk now for the center pier, which will be in the middle of the river. Work will probably be started this week toward excavating for the pier. Advantage is being taken of the ice on the river, and Mr. Ove states he hopes to get this pier in before the ice breaks in the spring.

Gravel is now being hauled to the job, some of the gravel being taken from the Great Western pit north of town, the washed gravel coming from Mason City. Moe & Nelson, the local gravel hauling firm, are hauling some of this gravel. A number of local men are being employed in various capacities about the job on the bridge.

This bridge, and the one across the west branch of the river, were let by the state highway commission at a meeting early in December. They are a part of the plan to straighten primary No. 15 thru Belmond. The road is to be straightened this year so that it will avoid the turn east up Main street from the river corner, and will run straight on north, crossing both branches of the Iowa river north of town and joining No. 15 a little farther on.

EFFECT CONSOLIDATION EAGLE GROVE PAPERS

The largest newspaper deal ever consummated in Wright county was closed last week when H. W. Barnes of the Eagle Grove Eagle purchased the Times of that city. The last issue of the Times will appear this week, after which the two papers will be consolidated. Having already absorbed the Goldfield Chronicle, this last move finds Mr. Barnes occupying the entire west half of the county in a field by himself. Times was when such a condition could not exist for a period of thirty days for there were plenty of hungry editors who would venture into such a field and trust to luck, taking their pay in cabbages and cord wood. At the present time it takes nearly as much money to run a good newspaper as it does a bank. The Eagle Grove business men are pleased with the change, for in quite a large measure both papers covered the same field, thereby making the advertising rate burdensome. With a slight increase over present advertising and subscription rates Mr. Barnes can cover the same field at less cost than at present and in addition give the people of that territory a much better newspaper. The Eagle, which bears the distinction of being one of the best newspapers in northern Iowa, will hereafter be able to still set a higher standard. Mr. Goshorn expects to move to Jefferson City, Mo., where he has an opening on a daily paper.—Monitor.

February Jurors Are Named

The next term of district court is to convene at Clarion, Feb. 7, with Judge Fry presiding. The following are trial jurors who have been summoned from this end of the county:

Belmond—Pete English, Earl Jenison, A. M. Larson, C. M. Morse, Minnie Johnson, William P. Barry, R. L. Parson.

Rowan—Herb. Lester, Minnie Pelley.

Grand jurors from this part of the county are Geo. T. Johnson and Ole Holm, Belmond.

Andy Lamb has had his crew of men working full blast on the ice crop the past feew weeks. The ice is of good quality this winter, and Mr. Lamb has shipped out qantities on all three railroads.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

IT'S ALL WRONG

The average farmer, the man who raises the food stuffs and products that keeps the world moving, feels delighted at the end of the year if he breaks even and with a little hard luck such as hog cholera or a bad storm during the year that injures his crops, he usually ends up a little worse off than when he started. This is not due to any fault of the farmer or mismanagement but to the fact that he is not receiving his just dues from the markets. The large manufacturing industries are all protected by a tariff and with their organizations know at the beginning of the year just what they will have at the end of that time. A large steel corporation in the east recently declared a forty percent dividend. If the farmer could declare a forty percent dividend for about three years there would be no business in the agricultural districts for the big loan companies for the present loans would be paid off and a nice surplus left. Thats why the farmers is dissatisfied. He is not getting a square deal and never has had one. When eastern sentiment is changed so that a law can be passed that will protect the farmer as well as the manufacturer, all will be well. The farmer is not looking forward to a forty percent dividend, but to prices that will allow him a reasonable profit.—Upper Des Moines Republican.

That the "revolt of youth" is largely a figment of the imagination of the older generation. We are measuring youth today with the same tape used forty years ago, and the system of measurement has changed.

That crime statistics which implicate youth reflect entirely changed conditions, brought about by increased population and greatly increased criminal codes. Most of the men of fifty avoided the courts during their boyhood years because the present criminal laws were not then enacted.

That forty years ago we were not spending more for an automobile than we did for a home, and we never left $5,000 worth of easily removed property unguarded on the streets and in the auto parks.

That forty years ago the church did not face the competition of the radio, the motion picture and countless magazines, and hell fire and Santa Claus were still articles of faith.

That if youth still measured up to the standards of forty years ago, there would be chaos in the present age. Financial stability of the country depends today on the demands of youth.

That if we could bring back the family chores, the barefoot days, for youth we would bring financial ruin with them.

Youth today is the logical outgrowth of present day conditions, no better and no worse than middle age.

It is like the garden rose removed to the hot house; it is brighter and gayer—but still a rose.—Whittier California News.

JUST AS BAD AS—

Looking through the files of twenty-five years ago to pick out some ancient items we ran across a lengthy story of an excursion train which ran from Hampton to Albert Lea to carry passengers to a theatrical performance.

The train was run over the old Iowa Central Railway, now the M. & St. L. and stopped at Northwood to pick up the crowd which went from here.

The story was especially interesting to the writer because he had just been listening to a misguided man declare that drinking conditions now are just as bad as when open saloons were running.

The account of the trip on the excursion train back from Albert Lea mentions the many drunken men on the train—and some women. If the story is true, those intoxicated persons raced back and forth through the coaches, insulting women and picking quarrels with their escorts and friends who protested. The conductor and brakeman could not handle the crowd and the Northwood pasengers were glad when they reached their home station and could get away from the profane and obscene language, the quarreling and fighting which was taking place.

After the train left Northwood, it was said, the brakeman exchanged places with the locomotive fireman, who it seemed was a large and husky individual. He went through the coaches and quelled the drunken rioters with his fists, knocking every man down who failed to obey his orders, and finally the train drew into Mason City with a fairly quiet and subdued crowd of drunks.

That was in the times when Albert Lea had a number of saloons, probably as many as ten or fifteen. Such scenes were common on railroad train excursions in those days. Whiskey flowed like water, fist fights were numerous and sometimes the train men were entirely unable to handle the roughs and had to hold their trains at stations until police assistance could be had. Do you see or hear of any of that nowadays? The answer, of course, is "no."

There isn't any of it being done. As a matter of truth there is not as much drinking being done—by several thousand times less, and it is not only untruthful but absurd when anyone tells you that conditions as to liquor consumption are "just as bad as———."—Northwood Anchor.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Continued from page one.)

livery and subject matter led all three judges to give him first place in the ranking of individual speakers. Robert Baggs was the outstanding speaker for Garner. His rebuttal was commendable, and his delivery was good throughout. The negative returned home with a three to nothing vote in their favor.

The debate at Belmond was attended by a large crowd. Before the debate music was furnished by the High School orchestra, and noise in the form of yells by the undergraduates present. The Clarion team, composed of three boys, had the edge on the Belmond people because of their excellent stage presence. Although the affirmative was probably the better prepared in subject matter, the negative through apparently extemporaneous delivery won the approval of the judges. Brydon Myers, of Clarion was the best speaker of the evening in the eyes of the judges but was not noticeably superior to Ruth Ramsay, of Belmond, who ranked second in the placing of individual speakers. The decision was quite a surprise to the audience, but our team took it with the B. H. S. spirit—like good sportsmen.

Although Belmond is out of the state series the debaters and their friends believe that the good derived is not in winning the state championship but in the experience and practice.

Have you ever felt like a thief when you looked at a 93 or 95 grade and realized that it was a direct result of dishonesty? Did you feel better than you would have had it been an 80 which represented honest thought? Have you asked yourself if anybody saw you? Have you wondered if it paid? Just think about it.

It seems to be the custom of certain High School students to make a practice of aiding others or securing help in their final examinations. They spend more time in making up new and unknown ways of cheating than they do in working for honest grades. It's this kind of premeditated, deliberate cheating that lowers the morale of the school, and disgusts everyone with the students who find his method the easiest way out.

This dishonesty is unfair. It is unfair to yourself. You all realize that. Have you ever considered how unfair it is to others? Everyone has an ideal embodied in someone. Nine out of ten Juniors or Seniors present the ideal of some underclassman. If their model makes a practice of dishonesty we cannot blame them for thinking that it is the universal practice of Belmond High School. Most of us realize that our High School standards do not include cheating in examinations. Thus when you cheat you are being untrue to the standards of your school. In the words of our High School song, "We revere her and defend her, may her colors never fall."

Cheating is not fashionable. It is not modern. The slogan of this generation is good sportsmanship, as compared to the standards of the preceding generation. Our moral standards of right and wrong do not include dishonesty. When you violate this code you can only expect, in the scathing slang of the day, "How dumb."

A Student

Supercilious groups of the idle brilliant, noisy, superior and disturbing, fervent cramming just outside No. 33, enthusiastic students who are cleaning out their lockers, less enthusiastic ones who aren't tense silence inside No. 33, teachers struggling bravely to conceal boredom, the inevitable stacks of examination paper, tense melancholy writ on the faces, teachers who glare convincingly, a door slammed in the distance, determined looks, some not quite so determined, eager students eagerly seeking bulletins on corrected papers, less eager students who have had information on corrected papers, woebegone looks, door slamming in the distance, almost human teachers, whispering in a corner, leaden atmosphere, loaded classrooms, longer silences broken by a sigh, empty forlorn classrooms, general lack of routine—yes, this is the day of wrath—final semester examinations.

Mrs. Anfinson visited Miss Barry's room, Tuesday.

George Montgomery entered the 6th grade last Tuesday.

Bernard Parker, from Miss Smith's room is absent on acount of whooping cough.

Nellie and Mable Kelly are absent this week, due to illness.

Mrs. Chamberlain visited Miss Smith's room this week.

LIFTING WATER LOWERS SPIRITS

Lifting laundry water in and out of portable tubs makes wash day the hardest of all in many rural homes. The latest publication of home laundering issued by the United States Department of Agriculture contains a hint for reducing this task to a minimum. Pipe the water to the tubs by means of a flexible rubber hose, if possible, and by all means siphon off the waste water with a hose when ready to empty the tubs. To make such asiphon, fill a short length of the hose with water, close the ends and invert it, placing one end under the surface of the water and the other at a lower level. Open without removing the shorter end from the water. A faucet soldered into the end of the wash boiler facilitates emptying it.

NO STANDARD BUDGET

There is no such thing as a standard budget, but you can make your own, if you sit down and list all the articles and services your family is likely to need during the coming year, and compare this list carefully with the income you expect to receive. If the planned expenditures are not less than the anticipated income, you must make them so by pruning here and there. Your spending and saving plan will be easier to follow if you work it out for each month, after making your general estimate for the year.

KEEP ZINC FROM FOOD

Liquid foods including buttermilk, milk, cider and other fruit juices should not be allowed to stand for even a short time in a galvanized iron vessel, nor should such a utensil be employed in making preserves, jellies, etc. The zinc used in galvanizing will dissolve and give the food an unpleasant taste and may cause sudden and intense illness.

CHOOSINESS

The outstanding reason for malnutrition among American children is bad habits. Of course, there are some parents who do not provide the right food for their children because of lack of knowledge of food values or failure to understand the importance at hand. In any case bad food habits, whether based on the child's "choosiness" or the parent's lack of information, can be corrected only through education in what are the proper foods for children and how they can be trained to eat wholesome foods.

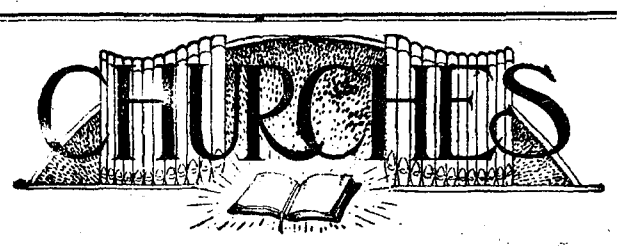
BALKY WAFFLES

An electric waffle iron should never be greased. If your waffles stick perhaps you have not put enough melted butter or other shortening into the butter. One or two extra tablespoons of melted shortening in the batter will often prevent sticking. Also when the waffle is brown and crisp and ready to take out of the iron, thrust a fork firmly into it and lift the waffle straight up. If you work around the edges with a knife attempting to loosen it in that way, the waffle will break and be almost impossible to get out whole.

Crisp salads offer a most appetizing way of getting enough fruits and vegetables in the day's meals. Serve some kind of a salad every day.

Information about oil burners for house heating is available upon request from the United States Department of Agriculture.

If the lower part of the kitchen wall, which receives the hardest wear and gets soiled soonest, is marked off four or five feet above the floor by a wooden strip and painted or stained a different tone from the rest of the wall, that part can be cleaned or refinished without making the upper wall look shabby.



METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, January 23:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m.

Divine Worship and Sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "Lengthening and Strengthening." Isa. 54:2.

Epworth League at 6:30. Harriet Martin, leader. Subject to be discussed, "Missions."

Evening Worship and Gospel Message at 7:30. Subject of Sermon, "Eloquence of Silence." Psa. 19:1.

Cathetical classes at 1:00 and 2:00 o'clock respectively, Saturday.

Choir rehearsal in the parsonage on Thursday night at 7:00 o'clock.

Ladies' Aid meets with Mrs. Martin Nissen Thursday afternoon. The work for the coming year will be planned at this meeting. It is therefore important that all members should be present.

Everybody cordially invited to all of our services.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

School of Religious Education at 10:00 o'clock. Subject, "Prayer in the Christian Life."

Public Worship and Sermon at 11:00 o'clock. Subject, "The Pathway of Success," or "The Road to Greatness." Every road leads us somewhere, if we will walk in it. Where does the way in which you are now going and living lead you? It may be an easy road to go downward with the dead fish. But if you wish to see the real beauties and grandeurs of this world, or life, then climb the mountains, make an effort, pay the price, and make the sacrifice. Bring your friends with you, and let us "Consider, and provoke one another unto love and good works."

ST. OLAF CHURCH

Norwegian services Sunday at 11:00 a. m., in charge of J. J. Brekke.

The North Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. Malvin Hanson, Wednesday afternoon, January 26.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Inquisition

"I HAVE depopulated happy villages, rich towns and fertile districts of my beloved country in the holy name of religion," wrote Queen Isabella of Spain in the last part of the Fifteenth century.

But the religion of which she spoke was not one based upon the Scriptures, nor upon the creeds of either Catholics or Protestants, nor of any other branch of the Church of Christ. It was a man-made dogma, with torture and intimidation for basis.

In 1480 the Inquisition, or "Holy Office," as it was termed, was organized in Spain. The Spanish nation was almost at the height of its greatness. The marriage of Ferdinand and Isabella had united the mighty provinces of Castile and Aragon. There were thousands of Moors (Mahometans from Africa) and other non-Christians throughout the country. These were, in many cases, rich and powerful. The church feared that Christianity's supremacy was in danger. Hence the great body of Moors were driven out! and those who remained, as well as followers of other religions, were forced, on pain of death, to embrace Christianity. Then the Inquisition turned its attention to so-called heretics, and Spain gained a reputation for heartless cruelty from which it has never wholly recovered.

At Seville, in 1481, the Inquisition began its actual work. During that year, in Seville, alone, 298 victims were burned. Throughout all the nation about 2,000 suffered a like fate. Thomas of Torquemada, a Dominican, was made president of the holy office. He and his successor, Cardinal Ximines, made it a national institution whose name aroused panic and hatred in every district of Spain and aroused even the callous Fifteenth century Englishmen to indignation.

The Inquisition's mode of procedure was unique. A man, woman or child was suspected of heresy, seized and subjected to an irregular preliminary examination. Then all the evidence and suspicious circumstances in the case were submitted to a higher body. The members of this, fearing lest their own holy zeal might otherwise be questioned, usually decided against the prisoner. The latter was then locked up in solitary confinement and a sort of "third degree" was applied to force a confession of guilt and to enroll the victim as a "penitent." If no confession was forthcoming the most horrible tortures were applied.

Most of these tortures were of too atrocious a nature to bear description. A few of the less unspeakable were the "thumb-screw," the "boot," the "rack" and the "virgin." The thumb-screw and boot crushed the fingers and feet, respectively, to a jelly. The rack was an apparatus to which a prisoner was strapped while every joint was stretched and twisted until sinews were torn apart and bones crushed. The "virgin" was a hollow image lined with spikes. The victim was placed within it and the spikes driven slowly into his flesh. In these hideous ways did the Inquisitors of Spain seek to enforce the gentle doctrines of peace, forgiveness and love.

If the suspect still refused to confess he was carried to the highest court of the Inquisition, and there, for the first time, he heard the charges against him and was allowed to reply to them. Heretofore, he had had no clear idea of what particular crime he was accused. The defense was usually a mere mockery. If the victim had wealthy friends he could appeal to Rome. Thus, while the local Inquisition confiscated the captive's property, the papal headquarters also got his friends' money.

In the rare cases of acquittal there was no redress for torture, imprisonment and loss of fortune. If convicted, the condemned heretic was burned alive. The motto of the holy office was "Misericordia et Justitia"—"Mercy and Justice!"

Such horrors drove people from the country by the hundred thousand. In seventy years the hitherto increasing population of Spain dropped from 10,000,000 to 6,000,000. Trade, agriculture, manufacture and all industries were brought to a standstill. Whole districts were depopulated.

But there is, perhaps, no great evil without some compensating good. While the reign of terror was at its height a golden gateway of escape opened to westward. America was discovered. In the new land men might hope to live reasonably free from the demoniacal tortures of the Inquisition. Accordingly the maltreated Spaniards flocked thither in thousands. Towns, villages and rural districts in the New World were speedily filled by the refugees.

In considering the Inquisition it must not, for a moment, be imagined that the holy office had the approval of Christians at large, or that it reflected discredit on the true tenets of the church. There can be no great and holy cause that does not somewhere lead to abuses and misrule. So the medieval Spaniards merely used Christianity as an instrument wherewith to wreak their own cruelty and injustice.

And, after all, were their crimes so much more atrocious than the slaying of crazy old women as witches by the pious Puritans of New England or the wholesale slaughter of innocent Moslem children by Godfrey de Bouillon and the holy Crusaders?

FREE AIR

One of the respected readers of this Colyum, of which there are Legion, asked us last week what we'd had to drink press day, to cause us to leave that baby chick local tacked onto the church notes.

* * * *

We don't know how many noticed this little misplacement, but there were plenty, we'll bet on that.

* * * *

Mistakes will happen, you know. That's why even the bankers have rubbers on their pencils.

* * * *

And that's what Chas. Zieman, of Thornton, said. He sent us a check and failed to sign it, and we didn't feel like forging his name to it. So we took a chance and sent it back—and durned if he didn't sign and return it!

* * * *

But it sure makes a difference who makes the mistakes. Take a doctor now; when he makes one nobody knows about it except the folks in heaven—and so far, the spirits haven't developed the broadcasting system extensively. When a lawyer makes one, it's covered up. When the minister makes one it's hushed up. But let an editor make one—and it's all over the country in no time.

* * * *

Yessir, it happens in the best regulated families. A few weeks ago, the Clarion Monitor had some Goblins advertised for sale. No, not goblers—goblins.

* * * *

Wellbigolli, Clarion has some of 'em, all right.

* * * *

Which? Both.

* * * *

Understand Joe Scott over here at the battery station is going to put up a broadcasting station. That's the report. So far he hasn't decided what hours he'll broadcast, or when he'll begin, or what his advertising rates will be, or whose wave length he'll swipe.

* * * *

Mr. Scott is desirous of dating up local talent in the musical and entertainment line. He will receive prospective radiators—that's a good one—at his newly decorated suite of offices this Saturday between the hours of 1:58 and 2:00 p. m.

* * * *

"My Sweetie's Due at Two to Two."

* * * *

Mr. Scott will sell gladiola bulbs, dress goods, seeds, hog dip, stock food, shoes, paints and such appropriate things.

* * * *

Who says us folks in the Red Light District aren't going to be among those present?

* * * *

We understand Grant Tracy is going to submit us an idea some of these days for use in Free Air. Haven't received it yet, probably he hasn't had one, but it is sure to be a good one when it arrives.

* * * *

That loud commotion you heard late Tuesday afternoon was a beet weeder colliding with an International speed wagon.

* * * *

Just time before we sign off to tell you a little story about Bill Dempsey. Bill's boy wa misbehaving one day when his mother said to him, "Why can't you be a good boy?" "I will for a nickel," the boy answered hopefully. "For shame! You ought to be like your father, good for nothing."

MILWAUKEE RAILROAD LOCKS ITS STOCK YARDS

A recent order to agents of the C. M. & St. P. railway calls for the locking of the stock yards at stations says the Britt Tribune. This has been put into effect at all stations east of Mason City and progress west is now under way. Agent B. R. Boldt received the chains and locks one day recently and the order to put into effect immediately. The railway is taking this action because of the abuse of privileges wherein stock buyers and shippers use the yards—sometimes several weeks—for feeding and housing and then ship the stock by truck.

As it now appears, truck shippers and buyers of livestock who ship by truck, will have to either put in their own stock yards or make arrangements with the Milwaukee whereby rental of their yards will offer the accomodation desired.

for READ WANT ADS results

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

MACHINERY KILLING CORN BORER

Michigan's corn borer sub-station, at Monroe, is doing some interesting work for the Corn Belt and perhaps for other crop areas beyond the corn fields. The husker-shredder killed all corn borers except those in the ears and shelled grain, where less than 1 percent escaped destruction. The ensilage cutter killed them 100 percent at cutting lengths from 3-8 to 3-4 inches. The corn binders with low cutting attachments got all the borers when cutting at the surface. The stubble pulverizer also did a complete job. So did the roughage grinder.

NEW CORN BORER QUARANTINE ESTABLISHED

New outbreaks of the corn borer in Illinois, Indiana and Michigan, which are not covered by the federal quarantine, have been met by a rigid state quarantine which was issued on January 12th by Dr. C. J. Drake, State Entomologist, with the approval of M. G. Thornburg, Secretary of Agriculture, and Governor John Hammill.

The new quarantine is issued in two sections. The first section establishes a state quarantine against districts which have been recently infested with the European corn borer and which are not covered by the federal quarantine. The second portion of the quarantine reaffirms the present federal quarantine.

All products from infected areas which may harbor the corn borer are barred entrance into the state unless they are accompanied by a federal certificate showing that the articles are free from corn borer, that they have originated outside of the corn borer territory or that they have treated in such a manner as to kill all corn borers. The Iowa quarantine is perhaps the most complete quarantine that has been issued against the corn borer by any state.

PLAN WAR ON POOR SEEDS

"At the request of many reliable seed dealers in the state, the Iowa Department of Agriculture is starting their war against poor seeds earlier this year than ever before," states M. G. Thornburg, Secretary of Agriculture.

Our pure seed law is proving to be not only a protection to the farmer but to the reliable seedsman as well," said Mr. Thornburg. "When seeds are not carefully inspected, poor seeds can be misrepresented to the public and make it difficult to sell pure seeds in competition. Our object in inspection of seeds and requiring them to be properly labeled is so that every purchaser may be protected against noxious weeds and seeds that will not grow."

Last year, over 1800 samples of seed were sampled in all parts of the country. Some of the dealers who did not live up to the law were prosecuted, while in other cases, seeds were ordered off sale. All seed offered for sale must show the following information: Name and address of dealer, variety of seed, purity and date tested, germination, noxious weeds, when and where grown, net weight and amount of weed seed.

EGG MARKETING LEGISLATION SUGGESTED

"Farmers should receive more money when good eggs ares old, than for eggs of average quality, and consumers should be able to know what kind of eggs they are buying," stated Carl N. Kennedy, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, in discussing the egg marketing question.

"Changes of this kind will make poultry raising more profitable, as it will increase the average price received for the product, and it will improve the confidence of the public in good eggs, thereby increasing consumption," said Mr. Kennedy.

"The general poultry trade is slowly making some improvement along these lines but such work could undoubtedly be aided by constructive legislation. A law establishing egg grades would stimulate buying on grade, while a law requiring eggs to be graded when sold, would make it impossible to pan poor eggs off on unsuspecting consumers, as fresh eggs."

IOWA RANKS HIGH IN FARM EFFICIENCY

"Critics of Iowa Agriculture are saying that part of the farmer's plight is due to inefficiency, but the records of the Weather and Crop Bureau of the Iowa Department of Agriculture show that the tonnage of crops has more than doubled in the last 35 years, while the census shows that the farm population has steadily decreased," stated Director C. D. Reed.

"Certainly the efficiency per man gives no cause for criticism. The output of Iowa agricultural production could, no doubt, be doubled again in a short time if there were sufficient incentive in the way of a remunerative price, but any increase in production by farmers as a class reduces the total dollars received," said Mr. Reed. "The only way in which efficiency can count is in finding ways to produce things easier and better but without increasing the total amount produced. This means to farm less acres, breed less sows and milk less cows, but all of such a high order as to cut the cost of production.

"One additional sow bred per farm seems like a very moderate increase but it increases the hogs marketed from Iowa by 1,000,000. To save one more pig per litter increases the number of hogs marketed by 2,000,000. By all means, the pig should be saved for this reduces the cost of production, but the number of sows bred should be decreased accordingly. To breed three more sows per farm would wreck the hog business in a year. The average Iowa farm in 1925 marketed 14 less hogs than in 1924 but received $111.00 more for them. Why not raise the 14 less hogs and thereby reduce the cost of production, as well as increase the price?

"Up to a certain point which each farmer can determine for himself and for his particular farm and surroundings, more bushels or tons per acre, more pigs per litter, more pounds of butterfat per cow, etc., reduce production costs, but this effort is all wasted if thereby greater mass production results. The only place where greater efficiency can possibly benefit the farmer, is in decreased cost of production."

WANT ADS PAY

Baby Chicks Announcement

The Hillandale Stock Farm Announces

The Opening of their Hatchery, February 1, 1927
WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCKS IOWA RECORD FLOCK
Iowa Accredited—Blood Tested—FISHEL Strain
We have been breeding up our flock for eight years, and intend to give our customers satisfaction.

We Sell BABY CHICKS from Our Own Flock!

Our Jamesway Mammoth Junior Incubator is now installed, and we are ready for your orders. Place your orders early and be assured of getting your chicks when you want them.

WE WILL DO SOME CUSTOM HATCHING

MRS. IRA L. CHRISTIE

Phone 3318 R. F. D. No. 1 Belmond, Iowa

Announcing A New Buick

a superlative, close-coupled five-passenger enclosed car the Town Brougham a new version of Fisher coach-craft a striking example of Buick beauty with performance that startled the motor car industry especially an engine vibrationless beyond belief.

At your earliest opportunity ask your Buick dealer to show and demonstrate the new Town Brougham to you.

THE GREATEST BUICK EVER BUILT

VALVE-IN-HEAD Buick MOTOR CARS A 25-10

Hub Motor Co.

BELMOND, IOWA

MAKE $1000 AT 7 Per cent EARN AS MUCH AS $1750 AT 4 Per cent INCREASE YOUR INCOME CAPITAL BY INVESTING IN Central States Electric Company 7 Per cent Preferred Stock

THIS BUSINESS IS EARNING CASH DIVIDENDS ALL THE TIME —NEVER STOPS INVEST NOW AN GET A DIVIDEND CHECK APRIL 1ST AND REMEMBER IF YOU SHOULD EVER NEED YOUR MONEY YOU CAN SELL AT ANY TIME.

Send for your FREE COPY of our ILLUSTRATED BOOK

Securities Department

Central States Electric Co.

515 Merchants National Bank Bldg.,

Cedar Rapids - Iowa

Give Yourself New Business by Using MEYER BOTH Illustrations and Copy free at—

The Independent Office

Meyer Both today are recognized as the leading artists of the country. A recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, December 4th, carried eleven advertisements made by the art staff of this company. The advertisements were:

Campbell Soup	Palmolive
Fisher Bodies	Pabst Cheese
Chevrolet	Royal Easy Chairs
Chrysler	Ray-O-Vac Light
Studebaker	Washburn Crosby Co.

When you see a good looking advertisement, handsomely illustrated, you can be almost sure of it being a Meyer Both Production.

The Independent uses the Meyer Both service exclusively for its advertisers and it costs them nothing. A special service for any line of merchandise can be provided at a small cost.

BELMOND INDEPENDENT

Successful Advertising — News 115 — Quality Printing

BUILT TO SERVE

The Electric Light, Power and Gas Systems of Central States Electric Company have been built to serve the people of over 80 Cities and Towns efficiently and well.

A great deal of money invested in the Power Plants, Gas Plants and both local and long distance and transmission lines represent the capital and savings of many hundreds of the Customers of this Company. These Customers have invested in this Company because the business is essential to the prosperity and well being of their communities and because they know this business is conducted in the public interest, which means on the basis of fair dealing and having proper regard for the costs of rendering service, maintaining the property in good operating condition and earning the fair income the Investors are entitled to.

Every Customer is cordially invited to become a part-owner in the Company and participate in its earnings. Respectfully,

Central States Electric Co.

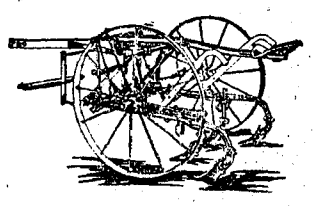
General Office

CEDAR RAPIDS, - - - - - IOWA

An Inducement for Early Orders

The Famous John Deere Balance Riding Cultivator

At a Price on Delivery . . . $45.00



This Cultivator was regularly sold at $52.50 last season.

The Hummer Balance Riding Cultivator

This cultivator was regularly sold at $46.00 last season now only $39.50

See these cultivators at our store now---and place your order for summer delivery.

These Cultivators are guaranteed to be the latest 1927 models, and the price is guaranteed to be the lowest of the season.

GRIESY'S

PHONE 10. The Friendly Place BELMOND, IOWA

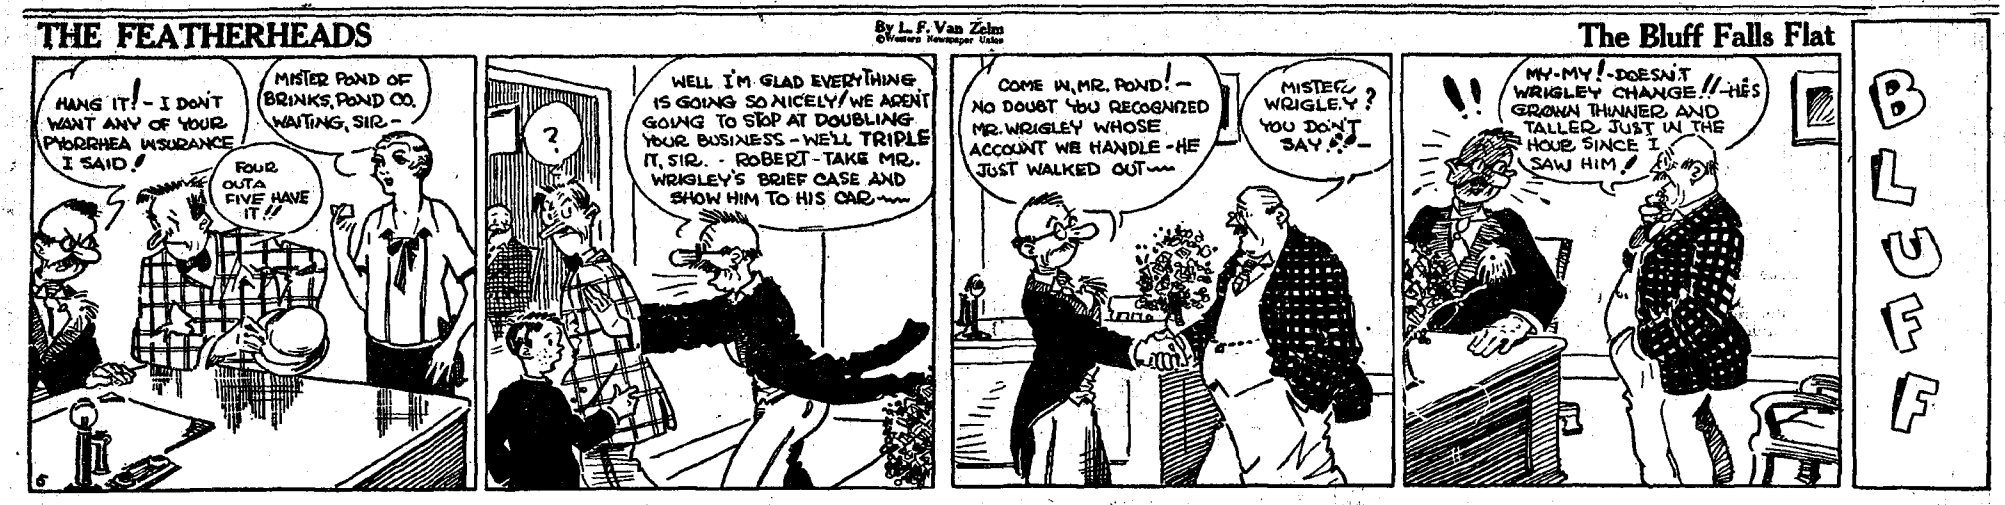
MESERVEY SECTION



EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday School, 9:45 a. m. G. E. Raecker, Supt. Classes for all ages.

Morning Worship, 10:45. Subject, "It is Natural to Pray." Each one of us prays sometime.

E. L. C. E., 7:00 p. m. Subject, "How Can We Train for Service?" Leader, Walter Lauster.

Prayer Meeting Wednesday, at 7:00, at parsonage.

Mid-week Services at 7:45 p. m. G. Lauster, Leader.

Come with us and we will do thee good.

Laurence Sohl.

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30.
Morning Worship at 10:30 (Ger.)
Young People's Meeting at 7:15.
Evening Services at 8:00.
Catechetical Classes meet next Saturday at 1:30 p. m.
All are welcome to these services.

H Pannkuk

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The high school Declamatory contest will be held in the Evangelical church on Friday, January 28, at 7:30. A great deal of interest has been shown among the students and we are hoping that the patrons and friends of the school will help to make it a success.

Semester tests are being given in all the grades and the high school on Thursday and Friday of this week.

The Freshman class will soon begin work on a Lincoln Essay contest. A bronze medal from the Illinois Watch Company, of Springfield, Ill. is now on display in the Muller Mercantile Store and will be presented to the winner of the Essay Contest.

The following literary program was given in the high school assembly last Friday afternoon.

Roll call—answered with quotations from Longfellow.
Account of Longfellow's life—Walter Lauster.
Stunt—Portraying characters from Longfellow's poems:
Elmer Prelipp—Miles Standish.
Franklin Fischer—Father Felician.
Marvin Nissen—Hiawatha.
Lloyd Paul—Paul Revere.
Report on "Evangeline"—John Schlegel.
Song—Chorus of Girls.
Story of Miles Standish"—Andrew Lauen.
Review of "Paul Revere"—Bernard Brater.
Instrumental Trio—Bonita Muller, Virgil Sprau and Franklin Fischer.
The Story of "Hiawatha"—Neva Muller, Lydia Pannkuk, Hallie Ward and Arloene Janssen.
"Excelsior"—Lydia Groen.
Pantomime—The Children's Hour—Wilma Pals, Marie Pals. Hallie Ward, Bonita Muller, Harriet Sprau.
Song by the Society.

The Home Economics girls have been making cheese dishes the past two weeks. They have studied their value in the diet. In sewing the girls are busy hunting samples of different kinds of cotton material.

Several in high school received announcements of MayBelle Sohl's graduation from the high school in Lincoln, Nebraska on Friday night. MayBelle attended Meservey high school last year.

Two of last year's graduates have entered college, Mollie Zieman is attending the Hamilton Business College at Mason City and Oliver Sprau has begun his course in electrical engineering at Ames.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

H. M. Taulbee and wife were Mason City shoppers, Saturday.

A. Kolb was a motor passenger to Mason City, Monday.

Rev. L. Sohl returned from Dysart last Saturday where he had been called to officiate at the funeral of a former parishioner, who was a victim in a railway accident which occured in Montana.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Enabnit, from near Swaledale visited at the Adam Kolb home, Sunday.

Rev. H. Pannkuk is the owner of a new Essex sedan which he can put to good use when making his pastoral calls.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Fischer motored to Mason City, Monday, on business matters.

James Hemming, of Thornton, visited at the Ed Foss home Sunday afternoon.

Miss Grace Groen went to Mason City, Saturday to relieve Mrs. Frey, who has been with Wilbert at the hospital. Mrs. Frey came home in the afternoon, returning to Mason City with H. B., Sunday.

Mrs. C. Bier was in Mason City between trains, Saturday, receiving medical treatments.

Miss Barbara Gealow went to Belmond Saturday with her brother-in-law to spend a week at their home.

Ralph Paul had the misfortune of having one of his big toes broken while hauling corn. In some manner he got his foot under the wagon, the result being a broken tendon, which is giving him considerable pain and inconvenience.

Miss Wilma Pals was unable to be in school Monday, owing to illness.

Albert Hafermann returned from his trip across the waters last week. He was accompanied by a lady friend whom we understand will make this her home. Dame rumor is authority for the bit of news that Cupid again reigns.

Postmaster Smith was a Mason City business caller Monday between motors.

Those who have been motoring to Mason City have found the roads rather treacherous in several places. Several cars have gone into the ditch near the Bramson place without the slightest warning, and have had to be pulled out. Otherwise no damage done.

Mr. and Mrs. Harm Dirks and Mrs. Kate Dirks and daughter, Ruth were in Mason City, Monday.

Rev. and Mrs. Pannkuk were Mason City callers Monday afternoon.

H. B. Frey has been making trips to Mason City at different times the past week to visit Wilbert, who is at the Park hospial receiving medical treatments, and getting along well as can be expected. Mrs. Fred is remaining with him.

Lee Lcyke and family, of Boone, came last Sunday for a visit at the parental Hans Lcyke home. His brother Frank and several friends accompanied them here, returning the same evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bohning and daughter, Miss Grace, also Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bohning and baby visited at the F. Frohling home last week, on Wednesday. The occasion was the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Frohling.

Mrs. Ben Vierkant is visiting at the home of her daughter and family at Goodell.

Geo. Groen was a Mason City caller Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Nissen and Miss Mildred Gealow motored to Mason City last Thursday on business matters.

The Misses Olive Sherrard, Eva Sprau, Irene Butz, Inez Obrecht and Hallie Ward went to Mason City on Thursday evening to see the picture "The Scarlet Letter" at the Cecil.

H. K. Pals returned from Des Moines Friday, where he had been attending a Farm Bureau convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sorenson arrived here from Illonois last Wednesday evening. They made the trip via the auto route and reported fairly good roads. considering the time of year.

The King's Daughters and Friends Sunday School classes met in the Evangelical church basement for their monthly business and social meeting. Both classes chose new officers for the ensuing year. Following the business hour, games were enjoyed. Before leaving for home refreshments were served.

NOTICE!

Sealed bids will be received up to 2:00 p. m. January 29, 1927, by the Wisner Township Trustees, for road superintendent. The trustees reserve the right to reject any or all bids.

HAROLD B. BLEWETT,
Township Clerk.
102c

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
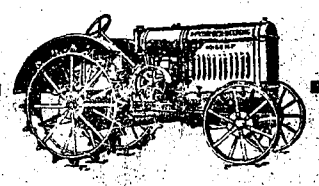
Meservey, - Iowa

We Handle
ATWATER KENT RADIOS
CROSLEY RADIOS
PATHE RADIOS
SLAGLE RADIOS
Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries
All kinds Cunningham Tubes
1st class—not "Seconds"
Phone 52 for Home Demonstration.
H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

FREE LECTURE
Illustrated with Motion Pictures
You Are Invited
After months of effort, we have finally arranged for the benefit of the farmers of our community, this wonderful lecture, heard by dairymen and stockmen all over the country.
This highly instructive, practical talk on feeds and feeding will be given by Prof F. G Kraege. He has devoted almost a lifetime to a practical study of the feeding problem and will tell you and show you how to change loss into profit through more efficient feeding.
The splendid facts that Prof Kraege will place before you have been proven from the combined experience of many thousands of dairymen and stockmen. This is a practical affair, not a theory.
You are invited to be present only as our guest, with no obligation. You ought to be present at this lecture even if it cost you a $2.00 bill, but it costs you nothing
There is a romance in the movie picture all will enjoy. Bring the whole family.
Goodell Opera House
Monday, January 24, 1927
Sponsored by
C. J. Wendel, Meservey
L. W. Wesenberg, Goodell
Hackerson & Tandie, Kanawha



FREE! FREE!
Tractor School
ALL farmers who are interested in power farming will be welcome at the Free Power Farming Entertainment
Instructive Lectures
By experienced tractor men who will be with us all day
TAKING APART and REBUILDING that famous
McCormick-Deering Tractor
HERE is an opportunity, folks, for everybody to learn more about farm tractors, their construction, care and operation.
You cannot afford to miss this entertainment. TRAINED men will be here who will illustrate, demonstrate, and talk on up-to-date subjects.
REMEMBER the date and the place.
Tuesday, January 25, 1927
From 9:00 a. m. to 4:00 p. m.
At Meservey Garage
COME EARLY and stay all day as we are going to serve a FREE LUNCH at noon.
C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

Co-operation for 1927
Co-operation means so to conduct yourself that others can work with you.
We are ready, willing and able.
LET'S GO!
Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

TO YOU AND YOURS
The Season's Greetings....
May this holiday time bring a full measure of joy and happiness, and the New Year twelve long months of contentment and Prosperity is the wish of
Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

The high school pupils will present their declamatory contest at the U. B. church on Tuesday evening, January 25th. The following will participate, with Miss Evelyn Thomas as coach:

Oratorical

"Visions of War" _____Lela Griggs
"Prepare" _____ Iris Sherwood
"The Wandering Jew"
____ _____ Wayne Wesenberg

Dramatic

"The Dog Flanders" ___Floyd Scott
"Humoresque" ____Daphne Houghton
"The Swan Song" ____Viola Quigley
"The Christis" ___Eunice Wesesberg
"Brothers" _____Doris Schneider
"Man and the Shadows"
_____ Gertrude Cashman

Humorous

"A Family Group" _Cholm Houghton
"The Comforter" _____Ina Burgess
"George Says"__Frederick Schneider
"Evolution" _____ Joseph Burgess
"The Pettison Twins Visit the Kindergarten" _____ Effie Clark
"P. A. I. L. W. R.—The Paten Adjustable, Indestructable Loop Wire Receptacle" _____ Dale Conklin

The three winners from this contest will compete with the winners from the schools in the east part of Hancock county. The winners then will contest with the winners of the west part of the county.

The Rank Buss family moved last week from the Sandry farm to Alexander where they have rented Charlie Longley's farm. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Mayhew will move to the farm vacated by Mr. Buss.

Miss Lois Thomas, of Meservey visited Monday with her sister, Evelyn, who teaches here.

The Hancock county assessors met Saturday at Garner to attend their annual Short Course. Instructions were given them in regard to their work of assessing. Those attending from here were Fred Nolte, town assessor, Fred Schultz, Avery township, and Howard Ruka, Twin Lake township.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Beier spent Tuesday and Thursday at Mason City where the latter had dental work done.

Mrs. Gus Okreug returned Tuesday from northern Wisconsin where she had spent three weeks with her mother who is in very poor health. Mrs. Curtis Shawson, a sister of Mrs. Okreug, who had also been to see her mother came home with the former and visited until Wednesday, then returning to her home at Plain View, Minnesota.

Frederick Schneider is absent from school, being quite ill with the measles.

Mrs. D. Christie and Mrs. Jeanette Wiles returned Tuesday from Dickey, North Dakota, having gone there to attend the funeral of the latter's brother, Will Christie.

Miss Hazel LaRue, of Dows came Saturday and visited until Monday at her parental home.

Mrs. Will Deiger had the misfortune to slip and fall on the ice near the U. B. church as she was coming to the Aid Wednesday afternoon. She injured her arm very seriously, tearing the ligaments loose and throwing the elbow out of joint.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Okreug, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Will Lamer autoed to Hampton Wednesday, where Mrs. Lamer had an Xray picture taken and an examination of her arm, which she injured some time ago in the auto accident. The doctors at the hospital pronounced her arm as getting along nicely and in time thought it would be perfectly well.

Mr. Boheman, an impersonator, was the gentleman to appear Thursday evening as the second number of the Lyceum course. He proved to be exceptionally fine and entertaining. The next number will be the last one and will be given Monday, February 14th at the U. B. church. Dr. Berry will be the entertainer. He will show pictures of the "Passion Play" and will impersonate several characters of the play.

Howard Ruka returned Tuesday from Cedar Rapids where he had visited the past three weeks with his mother, Mrs. Reese. Howard was the elected assessor for Twin Lake township and returned to do this work.

Max Nolte returned Thursday from Missouri where he had been for a few days.

The Corri Fitts family, of Belmond were entertained Sunday at the S. S. Matson home.

Miss Louise Mason substituted in the intermediate room Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. Francis Quigley Jr. received word Saturday that her father, Mr. Kinseth at Belmond was seriously ill. She went to Belmond. A later report was that he passed away on Monday morning.

Mrs. James Trumbell, of Mason City visited last week at the home of her son. Harry.

A farewell surprise party was held Wednesday evening at the Pete Lakore home for Mr. and Mrs. Buss, who are moving to Alexander. The evening was spent in playing cards and socially. Delicious refreshments were served. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Buss presented them with a beautiful casserole.

Junior Kinseth, of Belmond is spending a few days this week with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Avery.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Thorson, of Burt; Mrs. Earl Finn, of Klemme; and Harvey Wilson, of Clear Lake were called home Wednesday, due to the critical condition of their sister, Miss Avis Wilson. Avis is very ill with heart trouble, anemia and rheumatism. She is a little better at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sherman, of Torrington, Wyoming, who are visiting at the White home spent a few days at the Allie White home at Klemme.

Mrs. Rose Houghton, who recently returned home from the Mason City hospital has improved rapidly and her many friends are glad to hear that she is feeling fine.

Mr. and Mrs. George Vance spent Friday at Fort Dodge.

Mrs. Clara Kirkwood accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wenzel, of Belmond to Mason City on Wednesday.

S. S. Matson, Alva, Tauge and Harry Newgard were entertained on Thursday to dinner at the White home.

Julius Ahrenkiel passed away about midnight Saturday night, death resulting from heart trouble. The funeral will be held Tuesday at 2:00 p. m. An obituary will appear next week.

Church Notes

The U. B. Ladies' Aid will hold an apron and food sale Saturday afternoon, February 12th.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

Alexander United Church
Lewis N. Moody, Pastor

All services next Sunday as usual.

Prayer and conference meeting every Tuesday evening.

The Delta Alpha class will meet with Mrs. Fred Bobst on Friday evening of this week.

The Ladies' Aid will meet in the basement Wednesday afternoon, January 26. Hostesses, Mrs. L. C. Peters and Mrs. H. C. Polmateer.

St. John's Evangelical Church
C. J. Barth, Pastor

Sunday School—2:00 p. m.
Preaching (German)—3:00 p. m.

Henry Polmateer and Lloyd Davis autoed to Renwick Sunday. Mr. Polmateer will move to Renwick in the spring.

Lewis Bell, Mrs. Nels Larsen, Mrs. Fred Larsen and son, Raymond were at Belmond Wednesday to see Fred Larsen, who is in the hospital.

Lloyd Green left Saturday on a business trip to Chicago.

Herman Browns are rejoicing over the arrival of a new baby daughter on January 15th.

Mr. and Mrs. Karl Johansen left Wednesday for Rochester, Minnesota where Mr. Johansen is to continue treatments. Mr. Johansen has been feeling fine for several months and we are sorry to learn that it was necessary for him to return to the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Gillett were business callers at Hampton Thursday.

Fred Rodemeyer and sons Boyd and Robert were callers at Clear Lake and Sheffield, Sunday.

Lucius Ashley, of Vernon Center, Minnesota was calling on old acquaintances Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Hall were business callers at Clarion, Saturday.

Albert Larsen, Mrs. Fred Larsen and sons Elmer, Wilbur and Raymond; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greenfield and son, Frederick were visiting relatives at Belmond, Sunday.

Rev. Moody and Miss Marjoria Webster were Hampton callers on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Tinkey were calling on Belmond friends, Sunday.

H. H. Carragher and T. W. Hall, of Mason City were canvassing in this vicinity several days the past week.

Jerry Beenen returned Friday after a week's visit with his sister, Miss Edith, at Chicago.

Miss Alma Dorenkamp spent the week end with her mother at Meservey.

Mrs. Rudolph Beenen is visiting realtives at Hampton this past week. We are glad to report that Miss Dorothy Bell is much better now, after her severe illness a week ago.

The friends of Fred N. Larsen will be glad to learn that he is much improved at this writing.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

At the annual dinner and church meeting the following officers were re-elected: W. A. Hoke in the place of W. A. Duffy, as deacon; Jake Aldinger re-elected as deacon; Clint Kercheval re-elected as trustee; Mrs. Clint Kercheval re-elected as clerk; Mrs. Hugh Whitten, treasurer; Edgar Bingham as Sunday School superintendent; Howard Box, assistant Sunday School superintendent; Mrs. Clint Kercheval, pianist; Mrs. Rolland Harris, assistant pianist; Mrs. Roy Hyde, chorister; Mrs. Lula Emerson, Cradle Roll superintendent.

Harry Cain, accompanied by F. M. Myers, went to Harcourt Wednesday of last week to move Walter Myers' drug stock to Steamboat Rock. Mr. Cain returned home Thursday afternoon. Mr. Myers remained to assist Walter in the arrangement of his drug stock. They came to Rowan Friday to spend the week end at home, returning to Steamboat Rock on Monday.

The Vern Sharp family have moved into the west rooms of the hotel and Mr. Sharp is working for Ray Azeltine.

Gae Fletcher returned Thursday afternoon from his recent trip to California and says Iowa is good enough for him.

Mrs. Joe Thomas and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Ersland attended the funeral of Mrs. John Thomas' father, Mr. George Doyle, at Williams, Thursday. Mrs. Thomas had been called to the bedside of her father last week.

E. S. Tway met with what might have been a serious accident Friday afternoon when driving just west of Clarion his car turned around in the road and landed in the ditch with the result of a broken wheel and some broken glass, but Mr. Tway luckily escaped physical injury.

The last number of the lecture course sponsored by the high school was enjoyed by a large audience last Friday evening, when Mr. Frank Bowman presented a most pleasing entertainment. Many were heard to say "that was the very best impersonations I have ever heard." The school lacked but a small margin of paying out on the lecture numbers.

Wm. Baines, of Montgomery arrived Thursday for an extended visit with his sister, Mrs. Hannah Whitten and with relatives at Dows.

Mrs. Jennie Rowan is on the sick list.

The Milt Ramsay family, of Belmond visited Rowan relatives, Sunday.

Gene Burt spent a part of last week in Des Moines. He and his family spent the week end with their friends the Butterfield's in Clarion.

The Tom Ross sale last week was well attended and prices ruled high. The Ross family expect to move to Galt for the present.

Mrs. John Richards is ill of nervous and heart trouble.

Supt. and Mrs. Adamson spent Saturday with friends at Mason City.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wenzel moved last week to the farm recently vacated by Gae Fletcher. Mr. Wenzel is ill of tonsilitis.

(Too Late for Last Week)

The Alfred Boyington residence was a scene of excitment about 3:00 p. m. Monday, when fire was discovered in the upper south room. It is presumed that the children had left clothing too near the stove pipe and when a fire was started in the room below about 2:00 p. m. burning wool was detected and the upper room was found to be full of smoke. Central was called and several business men rushed to the scene. The bedding of one bed and some clothing was totally destroyed. Mr. Boyington was away from home at the time. It was surely fortunate that the fire was not discovered later.

The Gav Fletcher household goods was moved the first of the week into the Dan Fletcher house recently vacated by the Geo. Liming family.

A new flowing well of ninety feet depth was completed this week on the E. R. Ballou farm near the site of the old flow. The new flow is of unusual force.

READ THE ADS

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

Monday evening, January 17, 1927 the Girl Scouts held their usual weekly meeting. We were honored by having another guest, Mrs. Elder. Miss Saurwine favored us with a very original little health play entitled "First Aid." It was the story of a mother and her five daughters. The play was well given and we greatly appreciated it.

Patrol I defeated Patrol III in basket ball, Miss Hammers being kind enough to referee for us. After the game ended we had our business meeting which started by singing a few school songs. The bath contest is coming along very nicely and the girls seem to be quite enthused over it. Patrols I, II and IV are in the lead, each having nine girls who took their two tub baths last week. We hope they will continue this splendid work.

The meeting adjourned at 8:20.
Scribe.

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

Dr. R. E. Porter
Belmond's Pioneer Chiropractor
Eight Years' Experience
Hundreds of Patients That Have Received Joyous and Tingling Health
Country Calls Answered Day or Night
Over Griesy's Store
Phone 21 :: Belmond, Iowa

Year 'Round Income

Autumn is the harvest time for many crops, but the farmer who has good dairy cows harvests a cash income the year 'round.

This creamery provides the market that allows you to harvest the largest cash income.

We want your cream during 1927. We guarantee prompt service and satisfaction.

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

for Economical Transportation
CHEVROLET

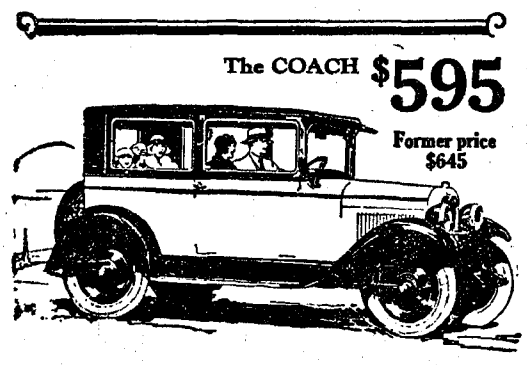
and a host of Improvements
Beautiful CHEVROLET
in Chevrolet History

AC Oil Filter
New Coincidental Lock (Combination Ignition and Steering Lock)
New Duco Colors
New Gasoline Gauge
New Radiator
New Bodies by Fisher
New Remote Control Door Handles
New Tire Carrier
New Bullet-Type Head Lamps
New Windshield on Open Models
New large 17-inch Steering Wheel

AC Air Cleaner
New Heavy One-Piece Full-crown Fenders
New Windshield Pillars (Narrower to provide perfect clear vision)
New and Improved Transmission
New Brake and Clutch Pedal Closure (Preventing excessive draft on floor of car.)
New Universal Joint Seal
New Hardware
New Running Boards

Marvelous beauty, luxury and style! A host of improvements that raise to an even higher level the Chevrolet standard of quality! And, in addition, amazingly reduced prices! That's why the Most Beautiful Chevrolet is everywhere regarded as the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry!

Study the list at the left. It's improvements and features like these which are found on the very best of high priced quality built cars! It's improvements and features like these that make the Most Beautiful Chevrolet mechanically finer, more satisfying in performance, and the value the equal of which has never before been offered by any maker of quality automobiles! Come in! Special showing all this week.



The COACH $595
Former price $645

With These Amazing Price Reductions!

The COUPE - - $625 Former Price $645
The SEDAN - - $695 Former Price $735
The LANDAU - $745 Former Price $765
The Sport Cabriolet $715 Entirely New Model with Rumble Seat.
Touring Car or Roadster $525 Price includes balloon tires and steel disc wheels. Former price $535 with balloon tires only.
1-Ton Truck (Chassis Only) $495
½-Ton Truck (Chassis Only) $395

Balloon tires now standard on all models.
All prices f.o.b. Flint, Mich.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa
RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

FARMER SERVICE!

That's our aim---and we pride ourselves that we give it. Try us if you are not one of our regular customers. Let us grind your next order of Feed.

A car of Oil Meal on track at a very reasonable price is one of our New Year offerings.

We carry a full line of Flour, Feed, Salt and Wire, and buy Grain, Poultry and Hides, at top prices.

Truck service for those who wish it.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

Local News

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Starnes, of Clear Lake, spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nels Stockseth.

Harry Webb's Sunday School class enjoyed a party Friday evening in the M. E. church parlors.

Mrs. Chas. Norby has been enjoying a visit the past week from her sister, Miss Fannie Jackson.

The M. E. Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Martin Nissen, Thursday afternoon of this week. All members are urged to be present. Bring your friends. The year's work will be planned.

Henry Saatoff and wife, of Hampton spent Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Gartin.

Wm. Pech was a visitor, Sunday, at Swea City.

Mrs. Beaver, of Estherville, is a guest this week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Vestweber.

Herb. Hadley and family were Sunday visitors at Des Moines with Mrs. Hadley's sister.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ditmer gave them a surprise party last week Monday evening. The Ditmer family are moving away.

The Ayers Bakery has been discontinued.

Clifford Johnson and Wm. Vestweber Jr. have returned from Torrington, Wyoming, where they have been helping to construct a new sugar factory. They also worked in the factory during the campaign, going from there to Colorado Springs to visit H. C. Enger before returning home. The sugar factory at Torrington is a 2,000 ton mill. The pulp drier was not finished for last fall's run. The green pulp was fed to 2,000 head of cattle.

Kinseth's Store News

Complete Gasification plus 62-64 Gravity

SKELLY

Less Knocking and Quicker Starting

10 Important Advances

1 Complete Gasification
2 Quicker Starting
3 Less crank-case dilution
4 Less carbon
5 Less "knocking"
6 Lower end-point
7 Uniform quality
8 An all-the-year 'round product
9 Higher gravity
10 No extra cost to motorists

ALTHOUGH gravity is not the test of a real gasoline, Skelly Refractionated Gasoline tests 62-64—and no competing product tests higher!

Contrary to popular belief, high gravity is neither new nor of great importance. But to secure at all temperatures COMPLETE GASIFICATION, resulting in quicker starting and less "knocking"—that is new—that is all important.

Using the new Skelly Distilling and Refractionating System, Skelly chemists make a superior gasoline—a gasoline of high gravity—but that's not all. Nine other important advances, all of them meaning more than gravity, are achieved.

No Advance In Price To Motorists

This unusual gasoline costs Skelly more to make, costs Skelly jobbers $60 to $85 more per tank car—

—but it doesn't cost you, the motorist, a cent more than other gasolines of lesser quality.

Buy Where You See the Skelly Banner Displayed

Represented By COMMUNITY SERVICE STATION COMPANY
Belmond, - Iowa

Farmers Co-operative Elevator
Solsberg, Iowa

Chris Larson
Alexander, Iowa

REFINED BY THE MAKERS OF TAGOLENE MOTOR OILS

NEW, ADVANCED SKELLY Refractionated GASOLINE

Skelly Radio Hour every Monday 8-9 P. M. KVOO Tulsa, wave length 374.8.

LYDIA of the Pines

by HONORÉ WILLSIE

W.N.U. SERVICE

COPYRIGHT by FREDERICK A. STOKES CO.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With her baby sister, Patience, Lydia returns from play to the untidy home of her impoverished father, Amos Dudley, at Lake City. Her father's friend, and her own devoted admirer, John Levine, after discussing affairs with Dudley, makes up his mind to go into politics.

CHAPTER II.—Lydia, Patience and a companion, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw from the nearby reservation. Lydia gives her food. Margery, small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. In their play Margery falls into the water. She is pulled out, unhurt but frightened, and taken home by Lydia and Kent. Her father calls on Amos to complain, blaming Lydia for the mishap.

CHAPTER III.—Lydia explains the accident and asserts that because Margery is considered "stuck up" she is not a popular playmate. Marshall arranges for Lydia to teach Margery to swim and otherwise become "one of the crowd." Levine tells Amos his plan to take timber from the Indian reservation and ultimately have it opened for settlement. From an older boy, Billy Norton, Lydia gets a pair of wild ducks, and despite their poverty the Dudleys have a Christmas feast.

CHAPTER IV.—Patience succumbs to an attack of diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost and her small world has collapsed. She finds comfort in the loving kindness of John Levine. Lydia learns that a note of Amos', backed by Levine and held by Marshall, is due and cannot be met. The child pleads with Marshall, and for her sake he agrees to renew the note.

CHAPTER V.—Grieving for the loss of little Patience, Lydia's health fails. Levine, understanding the situation, gives her a pup, which the lonely child takes to her heart. Reaching the age of fifteen, Lydia enters high school, where she at once realizes that her homemade frock and general appearance of poverty set her apart from her better-dressed companions. She attends a party given by her teacher, Miss Towne. The other girls, smartly dressed, make fun of her makeshift costume.

CHAPTER VI.—Levine is elected sheriff. A sixteen-year-old Indian boy, Charlie Jackson, tells Lydia of numerous wrongs done his people, mainly by Marshall and Levine. Lydia defends her friend vigorously. Meeting Levine in Lydia's house, Charlie Jackson threatens and endeavors to attack him.

CHAPTER VII.—Levine is shot by an unseen assassin. Recuperating at the Dudley cottage, he learns the real extent of Lydia's loneliness and her shaken faith in God. The man and girl enter into a compact to start a "search for God" together. Levine, recovered, begins his campaign for congress.

CHAPTER VIII.—Lydia is unable to drive the hatred of Levine from Charlie's heart, and despite herself her faith in her old friend is shaken by the young Indian's stories. Levine has long realized that despite their disparity in age he is passionately in love with the young girl.

CHAPTER IX.—Levine is triumphant in his campaign for congress. Lydia earns enough money selling fudge to go camping with Charlie, Kent, Margery and two school friends, Gustus Bach and a girl named Olga. Miss Towne chaperons them.

CHAPTER X.—Walking with Kent in the woods, Lydia witnesses a meeting of Levine and some halfbreeds. Their conversation convinces Lydia that Charlie has been right in accusing Levine of plotting to rob the Indians.

CHAPTER XI.—A visit from the old squaw whom Lydia had befriended long ago causes Charlie to tell more of Marshall's and Levine's thievery. Lydia promises to talk to Levine. Billy Norton makes a boyish proposal of marriage to Lydia, who repulses him. In her talk with Levine the man avers his methods are lawful and really best for the Indians. The girl is only half convinced.

CHAPTER XII.—Charlie tells Lydia his father was killed by halfbreeds at the instigation of Levine, and she is miserable at the thought. The family poverty also weighs heavily on her. She is elected class valedictorian. Billy Norton takes her to the senior ball, where she has her first girlish "wonderful time."

CHAPTER XIII.—Congress passes Levine's bill for the opening of the reservation. At the celebration of the event the Indians, led by Charlie, make a disturbance. Billy Norton saves Lydia from harm. Amos arranges to get 120 acres of the reservation, through Levine. Billy tells Lydia he is going to expose Marshall's crooked deals.

CHAPTER XIV.—A congressional commission comes to Lake City to investigate Indian matters, and evidence involving most of the town's prominent citizens is produced.

Lydia gave a sigh of relief when Levine caught her eye across the room and smiled at her. She looked at the commissioners curiously. She knew them fairly well from the many newspaper pictures she had seen of them. The fat gentleman, with penetrating blue eyes and a clean-shaven face, was Senator Smith of Texas. The roly-poly man, with black eyes and a grizzled beard, was Senator Elway of Maine, and the tall, smooth-shaven man with red hair was Senator James of New York.

"Mr. Levine," said Senator Smith, "we have found that you had carried on so many—er—transactions that we finally decided to choose three or four sample cases and let our case stand on those. Jackson, call Crippled Bear."

Charlie spoke quickly to one of the bucks, who rose and took the empty chair by Charlie.

He began to talk at once, Charlie interpreting slowly and carefully.

"I am a mixed blood. Many moons ago the man Levine found me drunk in the snow. He picked me up and kept me in his house over night. When I was sober, he fed me. Then he made this plan. I was to gather half a dozen half-breeds together, he could trust. In the spring he would come up to the reservation and talk to us. I did this and he came. We were very hungry when he met us in the woods and he gave us food and money. Then he told us he was going to get the big fathers at Washington to let us sell our pines so we could always have money and food. Never be hungry any more—never.

"Then he said while he was getting that done, he would pay us a little every month to go through the woods and chop down the best trees. The Big Father will let whites get 'dead and down' timber out of Indian woods, he said. But not let whites cut any. So we say yes, and though full bloods are very mad when we cut down big trees, we do it. For many moons we do it and in winter, white men haul it to sawmills.

"Every little while, Levine comes up there and we have a council and tell him everything that happens. All about things Marshall and other whites do. And he pays us always. Then he tells us that the Big Father will let mixed bloods sell their pine lands but not full bloods. So then we agree when he wants any full blood land to swear that any full blood is mixed. And we have done this now, perhaps twenty times."

The mixed blood and Charlie paused. Mr. Smith took up a paper. "I have here, Mr. Levine, a statement of your dealings with the Lake City Lumber company. You have had sawed by them during the past six or eight years millions of feet of pine lumber. I find that you are holding Indian lands in the name of Lydia Dudley and her father, Amos Dudley, these lands legally belonging to full bloods. Amos Dudley is also the purchaser of land from full bloods, as is William Norton, Sr., through you."

Levine rose quickly. "Gentlemen," he exclaimed, "surely you can find enough counts against me without including Miss Dudley, who has never heard of the matter you mention."

Commissioner James spoke for the first time. "Suppose we go on with the witnesses before we open any discussion with Mr. Levine. Jackson, what have these squaws to tell?"

Charlie called old Susie. And old Susie told of the death of her daughter from starvation and cold, this same daughter having sold her pines to Levine for a five-dollar bill and a dollar watch. She held out the watch toward Levine in one trembling old hand.

"I find this in dress, when she dead. She strong. It take her many days to die. I old. I pray Great Spirit take me. No! I starve! I freeze! I no can die. She young. She have little baby. She die."

Suddenly, she flung the watch at Levine's feet and sank trembling into her chair.

There was silence for a moment. In at the open window came the rumble of a street car. Levine cleared his throat.

"All this is dramatic, of course, but doesn't make me the murderer of the squaw."

"No! but you killed my father!" shouted Charlie Jackson. And rising, he hurled forth the story he had told Lydia, years before. Lydia sat with her hands clasped tightly in her lap, her eyes fastened in horror on Charlie's face. It seemed to Lydia that the noose was fastened closer round John's neck with every word that was uttered.

Suddenly she sprang to her feet. "Stop, Charlie! Stop!" she screamed. "You shan't say any more!"

Senator Elway rapped on the table. "You're out of order, Miss Dudley," he exclaimed, sharply.

Lydia had forgotten to be embarrassed. "I can't help it if I am," she insisted, "I won't have Charlie Jackson picturing Mr. Levine as a fiend, while I have a tongue to speak with. Mr. Levine's not a murderer. He couldn't be. He's been as much to me as my own father ever since my mother died when I was a little girl. He's understood me as only my own mother could.

"You think he could murder when he could hold a little girl on his knees and comfort her for the death of her little sister, when he taught her how to find God, when—oh, I know he's robbed the Indians—so has my own father, it seems, and so has Pa Norton, and so has Kent, and all of them are dear people. They've all been wrong. But think of the temptation, Mr. Commissioner! Supposing you were poor and the wonderful pines lay up there, so easy to take."

"You're covering a good deal of ground and getting away from the specific case, Miss Dudley," said Smith. "Of course, what you say doesn't exonerate Mr. Levine. What you say of his character is interesting but there remains the fact that he has been proceeding fraudulently for years in his relations to the Indian lands. You yourself don't pretend to justify your acts, do you, Mr. Levine?"

Lydia sat down and Levine slowly rose and looked thoughtfully out of the window. "The legality or illegality of the matter has nothing to do with the broader ethics of the case, though I think you will find, gentlemen, that my acts are protected by law," he said. "The virgin land lies there, inhabited by a degenerate race, whose one hope of salvation lay in amalgamation with the white race. An ignorant government, when land was plenty and the tribe was larger, placed certain restrictions on the reservation. When land became scarce, and the tribe dwindled to a handful, those restrictions became wrong. It was inevitable that the whites should override them. Knowing that the ethics of my acts and those of other people would be questioned, I went to congress to get these restrictions removed. If another two years could have elapsed, before these investigations had been begun, the fair name of Lake City never would have been smirched." Levine's hand on the back of his chair tightened as he looked directly at Billy Norton.

Once more Lydia came to her feet. "Oh, Mr. Levine," she exclaimed, "don't put all the blame on Billy! Really, it's my fault. He wouldn't have done it if I hadn't agreed that it was right. Oh, it is all my fault," she repeated brokenly, "all the trouble that's come to Lake City."

Billy Norton jumped up. "That's blamed nonsense!" he began, when Smith interrupted him, impatiently.

"Be seated, Norton." Then, gently, to Lydia, "My dear, you mean that, knowing what an investigation would mean to the people you love, you backed young Norton in instigating one."

"Yes, sir," faltered Lydia.

"Can you tell us why?" asked Elway, still more gently.

Lydia twisted her hands uncomfortably and looked at Billy.

"Go ahead, Lyd," he said, reassuringly.

"Because it was right," she said, finally. "Because—Ducit Amor Patriae—you know, because no matter whether the Indians were good or bad, we had made promises to them and they depended on us." She paused, struggling for words.

"I did it because I felt responsible to the country like my ancestors did, in the Civil war and in the Revolution, to—to take care of America, to keep it clean, no matter how it hurt. I—I couldn't be led by love of country and see my people doing something contemptible, something that the world would remember against us forever, and not try to stop it, no matter how it hurt."

Trembling so that the ribbon at her throat quivered, she looked at the three commissioners, and sat down.

"I suggest that we adjourn for lunch," said Smith. "Miss Dudley, you need not return."

While her father paused to speak to Kent and Levine, Lydia made her escape.

She expected John Levine to come home with her father to supper, and for the first time in her life, she did not want to meet her best loved friend. But she might have spared herself this anxiety, for Amos came home alone. Levine was busy, he said.

To Lydia's pain and disappointment, Levine did not come to the cottage before he returned to Washington, which he did the week following the hearing. And then, all thought of her status with him was swallowed up in astonishment over the revelations that came out early in September when Dave Marshall and the Indian agent were called before the commission.

Dave Marshall was the owner of the Last Chance! The Last Chance where "hussies" lay in wait like vultures for the Indian youths, took their government allowances, took their ancient Indian decency, and cast them forth to pollute their tribe with drink and disease. The Last Chance! The headquarters for the illegal selling of whisky to Indians. Where Indians were taught to evade the law, to carry whisky into the reservation and where in turn the bounty for their arrest was pledged to Marshall. The Last Chance, the main source of Dave Marshall's wealth!

Even Lake City was horrified by these revelations. People began to remove their money from his bank and for a time a run was threatened, then Dave resigned as president and the run was stayed. The drug store owned by Dave was boycotted. The women of the town began to cut Margery and Elviry.

Lydia, sitting on the front steps in the lovely September afternoons, rubbed Adam's ears, watched the pine and the Norton herds and thought some long, long thoughts. Finally, one hazy Saturday afternoon, she gathered a great bunch of many colored asters and started off, without telling Lizzie of her destination.

It was nearly five o'clock when she stopped at the Marshalls' gate. Elviry opened the screen door and Lydia marched in and paused. Dave Marshall was sitting by the kitchen table, his hat on the back of his head, a pile of newspapers on the floor beside him. He did not speak to Lydia when she came in.

This was worse than Lydia had thought it would be. She had not calculated on Dave's being at home. At that moment there was a light step in the dining room, and Margery came into the kitchen. When she saw Lydia she gasped.

"Hadn't you heard? Oh, Lydia! You came anyhow!" and suddenly Margery threw herself down and sobbed with her face in Lydia's lap.

Elviry threw her apron over her head and Dave, with a groan, dropped his head on his chest. For a moment, there was only the crackling of the fire in the stove and Margery's sobs to be heard.

Gathered a Great Bunch of Many-Colored Asters.

Then Dave said, "What did you come for, Lydia? You only hurt yourself and you can't help us. I don't know what to do! God! I don't know what to do! I want Margery and her mother to pack up and go away—for good. I'll close up here and follow when I can. None of these cases will ever come to anything in our state court. It's the disgrace—and the way the women folks take it."

"I—I've been thinking," said Lydia, timidly, "that what you ought to do—I don't think it would do a bit of good for you all to go away. The story would follow you. Mr. Marshall ought to sell out everything and buy a farm. Let Mrs. Marshall go off for a visit, if she wants to, and let Margery come and stay with me a while and go to college."

Dave raised his head. "That's what I'd rather do, Lydia, for myself. Just stay here and try to live it down. I'd like to farm it. Always intended to."

"I don't see why she needs to go to your house," said Elviry. "Let her stay right here, and go up to college with you if she will. And I don't want to go live on a farm, either."

"Elviry," said Dave grimly, "our day is over. All we can hope to save out of the wreck is a future for Margery. Just get that through your head once and for all. I think Lydia's idea is horse sense. But it's for Margery to decide."

Margery rubbed her hand over her forehead. "Well," she said, "I don't see that I'd gain anything but a reputation for being a quitter, if I went to Lydia's. I'll stay with you folks, but I'll go to college, if Lydia'll stand by me."

Lydia rose. "Then that's settled. On Monday we'll register. I'll meet you on the eight o'clock car."

"I can't thank you, Lyd—" began Margery.

"I don't want any thanks," said Lydia, making for the door, where Dave intercepted her with outstretched hand.

Lydia looked up into his dark face and her own turned crimson. "I can't shake hands," she said, "honestly, I can't. The Last Chance and the—the starving squaws make me sick. I'll stand by Margery and help you—but I can't do that."

Dave Marshall dropped his hand and turned away without a word and Lydia sped from the house into the sunset.

CHAPTER XVI

The Military Hop

Margery, for the first month or so, was silent and kept as close as possible to Lydia's apron strings. But no girl as beautiful as she was could be kept in Coventry long and though she refused for a time to go to parties, it was not long before Margery was taking tramps with the college boys and joining happily enough in the simple pleasures at the cottage.

Lydia did not hear from Kent until a week before the first college hop, late in October. Then she received a formal note from him, reminding her of his invitation.

"Oh, Lyd!" exclaimed Margery, "aren't you lucky! I haven't seen Kent or heard from him since our trouble!"

"Neither have I," said Lydia. "And I suspect he's so cross with me that he hates to keep this engagement. But I don't care. I wish I had a new dress. But I've made the sleeves small in my organdie and made a new girdle. It looks as well as could be expected!" she finished comically.

The hop was a success, a decided success, in spite of the organdie. Kent was inclined to be stiff, at first, and to wear a slightly injured air, and yet, mingled with this was a frank and youthful bravado. And there could be no doubt that among the college boys, Kent was more or less of a hero. It was something to boast of, evidently, to have one's name coupled with Levine's in the great scandal.

Kent had supposed that he would have some trouble in filling Lydia's card for her, but to his surprise, he found that in her timid way, Lydia was something of a personage among the older college boys and the younger professors.

It was altogether an intoxicating evening and at its end Lydia pulled on her last winter's overcoat and clambered into Kent's little automobile, utterly satisfied with life.

"Oh, Kent, it was wonderful!"

"And you don't feel as if I were a villain any more? You've forgiven me?"

"Forgiven you? For what?"

"For not agreeing with you on the Indian question. Gee, I was sore at you, Lyd, that morning at the hearing, and yet I was like your dad. I was proud of you, too."

"Oh, don't let's talk about it, tonight, Kent," Lydia protested.

"All right, old girl, only just remember that I can't change. I back Mr. Levine to the limit. And maybe he hasn't a surprise party coming for all of you!"

"I don't care," insisted Lydia. "I'm going to be happy tonight, and I won't talk Indians. Margery is feeling much better. She's at our house every Sunday. You must come round and see her!"

"Why shouldn't I come to see you, Lydia?" asked Kent, with a new note in his voice.

"Why, of course, you'd see me, but Margery's always been the main attraction with you."

"Has she? Seems to me I recall a time when I couldn't endure the sight of her. And when you were the best pal I had. That's what you are, Lydia, a real pal. A fellow can flirt round with the rest of 'em, but you're the one to look forward to spending a lifetime with! Tomorrow's Sunday. Let's take a walk down to the Willows in the afternoon."

"All right, Kent," said Lydia, quietly, and silence fell on both of them till they drew up at the cottage gate.

For some reason, when she woke the next morning, Lydia half hoped that the soft patter against her window was of rain drops. But it was the wind-tossed maple leaves, whose scarlet and gold were drifting deep on the lawn and garden. At three o'clock Lydia and Kent set off down the road to the Willows.

They strolled along the leafy road, with the tang of the autumn in their nostrils, and the blue gleam of the lake in their eyes. It was only a half mile to the Willows and as they turned in, Kent took Lydia's hand and drew it through his arm.

"Look," he said, "I believe there is even a little left of our cave, after all this time. What a rough little devil I was in those days. And yet, even then, Lyd, I believe I had an idea of trying to take care of you."

He dropped Lydia's hand and faced her. "Lydia, do you care for me—care for me enough to marry me?"

Lydia turned pale. Something in her heart began to sing. Something in her brain began to stir, uncomfortably.

"Oh, Kent," she began, breathlessly, then paused and the two looked deep into each other's eyes.

"Lydia! Lydia! I need you so!" cried Kent. "You are such a dear, such a pal, so pretty, so sweet—and I need you so! Won't you marry me, Lydia?"

"I've always loved you dearly, Kent, and yet," faltered Lydia, "and yet, somehow, I don't think we'd ever make each other happy."

"Not make each other happy! I'd like to know why not! Just try me, Lydia! Try me!"

"I'd like to try you, dear if— Wait, Kent, wait! Let me have my playtime, Kent. I've never had a real one, you know, till now. Let me finish college, then ask me again, will you, Kent?"

Kent jerked his head discontentedly. "I think it would be better for us to tie to each other right now. Please, Lydia dear!"

Lydia shook her head slowly. "Let me have my playtime, Kent. I don't know that side of myself at all."

(Continued Next Week)

Power and Pumping Rates

The Mason City Globe Gazette in it's issue of January 13th, announced that the light and power Company serving Clarion had reduced the power rate and said that the old rate was 10.8c for the first 100 KWH; the next 200 KWH was billed at 8.4c and over that was 7.2c. That 100 KWH will cost $6.10 under the new rate as compared with $10.80 under the rate which was displaced the first of the year.

The new rate, based on monthly consumption is: 8c for the first 10 KWH per horsepower; 7c for the next 40 KWH per horsepower; 5c for the next 50 KWH per horsepower and all excess consumption at 3c per KWH.

The rates which our Company has charged for several years in Belmond, based on monthly consumption, has been:

10c per KWH for the first 15 KWH.
8c per KWH for the next 30 KWH.
4c per KWH for all over 45 KWH.
Minimum bill, $1.00 per horsepower.

Our customers for years have had the advantage of this rate, which is less than two-thirds of what the old Clarion rate was. The old rate carried with it a minimum bill of $1.25 per horsepower, while our regular rate has been a monthly minimum bill of $1.00 per horsepower. Our regular standard rate above quoted on the average is less than the new Clarion rate.

The cost of the first 100 KWH as given by the Globe-Gazette under the new Clarion rate is $6.10, while under our regular rate it is $5.35. It is true that their rate starts at two cents lower than our rate, but this only continues for the first 15 KWH per horsepower. For the next 35 KWH, they charge 7c and we charge 6c. For the consumption from 50 KWH on they charge 5c and we charge 4c.

The three cent rate is of no benefit to the consumer because the power companies have no customers who will use their motors enough to get the benefit of it. It is only applicable after the customer has used his motor at full load 5 1-4 hours on every working day of the month.

The following schedule shows the comparative costs of current on motors of one, two, three and five horsepower operated for five hours on full load for twenty-five days per month, estimated on our regular standard rates at Belmond as compared with the new Clarion rate:

Size of Motor	KWH	Bill	Average per KWH	CLARION RATE Bill	Average per KWH
1 H. P.	116	$ 6.14	5.29c	$ 6.58	5.66c
2 H. P.	212	11.48	5.40c	12.56	5.92c
3 H. P.	308	16.82	5.46c	13.54	6.02c
5 H. P.	500	27.50	5.50c	30.50	6.10c

PUMPING RATES

There has been considerable discussion about the price which Belmond is paying for electric current to operate its water works This current has been furnished under contract for several years and at no time has the monthly bill exceeded 4c per KWH.

The above estimate of power bills is based on standard squirrel cage motors 110-220 volts with 70 percent power factor.

This advertisement is solely for the information of our customers and is not in criticism of power companies serving nearby towns.

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY
CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

LOCALS

Big Ten-Cent Sale at Parsons.'

Mrs. H. Bohning was hostess to the Kensington club, Wednesday afternoon.

Otto Dorr, son of A. J. Dorr, returned last week to Des Moines to take up his studies at Drake University. Otto is studying law, and had been spending the holiday vacation at home.

Helland Bros. will hold a sale of all of the personal property belonging to their late father's estate, consisting of horses, cattle and farm machinery, on Wednesday, February 2, at 1:00 p. m. See next week's paper for further particulars.—Adv.

The regular meeting of the P. T. A will be held Friday afternoon, January 21, at 2:45. The program this month will be in the nature of an "Earning and Saving" campaign. Mr. R. E. Courson is the speaker of the afternoon and Mrs. H. L. Gowdy will conduct a discussion of the same topic. Miss Waugh will have charge of the music and a number will be presented by the children in kindergarten.

The Volbeading Farm Home Hatchery, of Latimer, Iowa, is now booking orders for High Quality Chicks of all popular breeds. Send for special prices on early orders. Phone 8816. 102*

FURNITURE SALE!

As I am moving away, I will sell at auction, at 1st Nat. Bank corner,
Saturday, January 22
at 2:00 p. m., all my household goods Among them will be:

Birdseye Maple dresser,
Walnut chiffonier,
Walnut dressing table,
Bed, springs and mattress,
Chairs, rockers and tables,
Perfection oil stove,
And various other articles. All furniture in good condition.

Terms: Cash.

T. D. Rankins, Auctioneer.
C. M. Morse, Clerk. W. A. DITTMER

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 1.—Mac. J. Thompson, closing out farm sale. Particulars later.

FEB. 2—Helland Bros., closing out farm sale. Particulars next week.

FEB. 3—Alsvig Bros., closing out farm sale. Particulars next week.

FEB. 8—Roy Jenison. Spotted Poland sow sale.

FEB. 9.—Maxwell Baker, Poland China hog sale.

FEB. 10—G. Gobeli, farm sale, location 4 miles north, 1-2 mile west of Meservey.

FEB. 12—J. M. Sampson. Spotted Poland bred sow sale.

FEB. 17—Harry Ziska, Duroc Jersey bred sow sale.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

The Howard Spitler family, of Klemme, were Sunday guests at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Spitler.

Mrs. N. F. Easton has moved into rooms at the Thos. Cullinan residence, where she is now living.

Mrs. Chas. Thiltgen, district deputy for the Rebekahs, and her staff, Mrs. E. E. Boughton, Mrs. T. N. Davenport, Mrs. E. Stapley, Mrs. Chas. Hedges and Mrs. H. Hawley went to Eagle Grove Monday evening to install the new officers at that place. Tuesday evening they went to Dows to install the officers there.

Mr, and Mrs. Charlie Pritchard, of Buffalo Center are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Martin, this week.

Big Ten-Cent Sale at Parsons.'

Jacob Leu, Sam Covington, and others left last week for Chicago, where they expect to find employment.

The Luncheon Club met per schedule last Thursday noon, at the hotel. The topic for discussion was Highways, in charge of W. C. Tyrrell and R. H. Klemme. Mr. Tyrrell was out of town and could not be present at the meeting, so the topic was left for a later meeting. Reports of committees were received and the meeting then adjourned.

J. W. Scott, of the Belmond Storage Battery Co. has been completely remodeling his office room, laying a smooth concrete floor, putting in new partitions and decorating. When finished he will have a very attractive display room, and says he will be ready for inspection about Saturday.

Methodist Missionary Society for January met at the Theodore Wright home. Mrs. Gowdy associate hostess. During the business session an interesting letter was read from our friend Ida Anderson, who is at Oakdale. The ladies decided to observe Founders Day in March. Mrs. A. W. Russel was leader. The subject was "Native Measures of Reforms from Our Study of Moslem Women." Mrs. Ramsay played a record which is a Moslem call to prayer. Rev. Snyder talked inspiringly of some phases of mission work. Mrs. Clyde Jennings led the mystery questions. Delicious refreshments and a social time were enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Christie are constructing a splendid new chicken house on their farm, northwest of Belmond. The new house is 16x26, of frame construction, and has a full basement nine feet high. In the basement they have installed a Jamesway Mammoth Junior incubator, with a capacity of 2,160 eggs. This can be increased in case of need to 6,000 eggs per setting. The first floor of the new chicken house will be used as a brooder house, several special conveniences and arrangements having been made for this purpose. The entire building will have a special Jamesway ventilating system. They have the White Plymouth Rock chickens, and will sell baby chicks and do custom hatching.

Miss Margaret Mennenga was a guest at the home of Mrs. J. Combs, in Des Moines, a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Martin returned Monday from Des Moines, where they had visited over the week end with friends and relatives.

Paul Johnson left Sunday for Des Moines where he will enter the Des Moines University. Verle Brewer and Lillian Gealow entered the University the first week in the month.

Dr. and Mrs. McLurney have received word that Philip has been promoted to first assistant manager of the Kresge Co., at Evansville, Indiana, and that he had to report for duty there Wednesday morning of this week.

Big Ten-Cent Sale at Parsons.'

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Hadley and family spent the week end with her sister and family in Des Moines.

The First National Farm Loan Association held its Annual Meeting at the State Bank of Belmond, January 11th, 1927. A radio had been instaled for the occasion and a very fine radio program was received from the Federal Land Bank of Omaha.

The Secretary's report revealed that the borrowers had received $2,224.43 in Dividends during the year of 1926. It also showed that the Association is made up of forty-seven members with the loans totaling $446,600.00. It will be noted that the average loan is a little less than ten thousand dollars, which is a very good showing. The Association has made very satisfactory progress. The regular five percent semi-annual Dividend was declared and distributed at the meeting.

The following Directors were elected for the year 1927: Charles Sampson, Ole Thompson, J. N. Johnson, M. F. Christie, T. A. Davenport.

Following the Association meeting the directors met and elected the following officers: Charles Sampson, President; Ole Thompson, Vice President; O. L. Varland, Secretary-Treasurer.

Miss Vida Stebleton, of Garner has been spending the last few days with relatives here.

Elzo Bushman went to Pella last Friday to resume his studies at Central college.

Mrs. L. Ludtke has been enjoying a visit from her two daughters, from Chicago. They returned to Chicago the first of the week.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—We have a number of slightly used Standard Incubators, capacity from 300 to 1200. These machines are in good condition and are priced to sell.—Mrs. Harold Smith, Alexander, Iowa. 8tf

FOR SALE—Five Barred Rock Cockerels. $1.75 each. Also one dozen Barred Rock pullets, $1.00 each. —Mrs. L. W. Stacy, Phone 325.

FOR SALE—1926 Ford truck. Also 1926 Ford coupe. Elmer Larson.

FOR SALE—Fresh heifer, Shorthorn. John Chapman. Phone 8713.

FOR SALE—Good home-grown Early Ohio potatoes. While they last. Call 371. 112*

FOR SALE—My farm, 4 miles southwest of Belmond. For price and terms, inquire at State Bank of Belmond.—Aug. Hunst. 94*

WANTED—Position doing general housework. Inquire at Independent.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	20c
Springs	20c
Roosters	10c
Ducks	18c
Geese	15c
Eggs	32c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	53c
Oats	39c
Corn, No. 5 yellow	54c
Barley	56c

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Friday - Saturday
January 21-22

Spare Ribs per pound..... 22c
Weiners per pound..... 22c
Cream of Nut Oleo per pound. 23c
Two pounds for..... 45c

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Loats' Savings!

You remember this store went on the cash basis January 1, and promised you the same high quality groceries at lesser prices. This week we offer a few samples:

CORN, was 15c, now 11c
PEAS, were 15c, now 11c
WHEAT FOOD, Purety, was 25c, now 20c
MILK, tall can 10c
CREAM OF NUT OLEO ...25c
RAISIN BRAN 15c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

Hemstitching
Done here during
Mrs. Stevens' absence.

We have a select stock of
EARLY SPRING HATS
to show you at this time.

The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Opera House

SATURDAY AND MONDAY
JANUARY 22 and 24
Raymond Griffith In
"Hands Up"
A Rip-Roaring Comedy-Western of Civil War Times!
Ray and his high hat have hit home again with another hilarious comedy, "Hands Up." Laid in the Civil War period. And, shades of Robert E. Lee, what a comedy it is!
Produced by the director of "Paths to Paradise."
Also A Good 2-Reel
F. B. O. Comedy
Prices 10c and 20c

TUESDAY & WEDNESDAY
January 25 and 26
"Love's Bargain"
A dramatic play of intense interest, with an all-star cast.
Also Good Comedy
Prices 10c and 20c

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, January 20, 1927 No. 41

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

Since we've become editor of Splinters we've been thinking of joining the state editorial association or something.

We've sort o' lost interest in Mars. What if people do live on it? We couldn't sell 'em any lumber.

Do any of you masculine readers carry a pocket-piece? We are surprised how many do. We know a man who has carried a potato for many years. It is withered, shrunk and petrified until it has completely lost its identity. The surface is smooth and glossy. We know another man who has carried an 1834 half dollar for years because that was the date his mother was born.

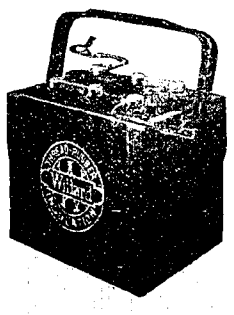
Ever Hear This One?

The preacher closed his temperance sermon in a burst of oratory. "If I had my way," he shouted, "every drop of liquor in this country would be poured into the river. The congregation will now sing No. 262." And then he couldn't understand why the audience laughed. The name of the hymn was "Shall We Gather at the River?"

Just received a car of Hard Coal. Those who have brooders, and want to use them this spring. Better get your Hard Coal now, whether you buy here or elsewhere. It is gratifying to us, the amount of customers, who are taking advantage of the 5 percent discount which we are giving on all commodities.

A Missouri man found his wife in a barber shop having her hair bobbed. He escorted her home and administered a good hard spanking. Now she is asking for a divorce. There's one man who evidently means what he says, anyway.

As nearly as we can figure it out, there are two periods when fishing is good—just before you get there, and just after you leave.



BELMOND
Atwater
STORAGE
Kent
BATTERY
Radios
CO.

J. W. Scott
Prop.
Phone 46 Official 2417

SERVICE!

It would help me wonderfully and please you immensely if I could furnish you with
FRESH BAKED GOODS
So I am asking you to call me over the phone before 9:00 o'clock in morning if you want fresh baked
PIES, CAKES, ETC.
Just leave your order every morning for the day
FOR BETTER SERVICE!
Phone 88

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
BELMOND, IOWA

For Relief of Coughs, Colds, Flu, Bronchitis, Etc. use
LEE'S VAPO SPRAY

In cases that do not yield to this treatment use FLU KOFF EMULSION, which is a cough syrup to be given in food or water as an additional treatment.

PANACEA PUTS HENS IN LAYING TRIM!

Here is what we propose. Count your flock. Then for every 100 hens get 12 ponds of Panacea. For 200 hens get a 25-pound pail. If that doesn't put eggs in your market basket, increase the egg yield to your entire satisfaction return the empty package to us and we will refund your money.

We are selling lots of DR. HESS' STOCK TONIC. Take enough for your hogs for 30 or 60 days. If not profitable to you we will refund your money.

Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

ALWAYS DEPENDABLE

"At a Great Penny Worth, Pause Awhile"
B. FRANKLIN

FRANKLIN'S MEMORY will never die.

He belongs to the whole world. His full life is a challenge to each one of us.

Today, as the world does him honor, he stands as the direct opposite of the idea of "something-for-nothing"—the idea of "getting-by" or of putting something over"—that leads thousands to failure each year!

And Thrift, as Poor Richard urged, is still the pathway to wealth and success.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND IOWA

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, JANUARY 27, 1927 | NO. 11

BELMOND LOSES GOLDFIELD GAME

Basketball Team Suffers First Defeat of Winter Season To Fast Goldfield Team.

PLAY GAME HERE FRIDAY

The much dreaded "exams" are over, our report cards received with respective happiness and chagrin, our schedules re-arranged, new subjects added, and a new semester begun. We're trying to put a lot of our sadly neglected New Year's resolutions into practice, in regard to grades, to say nothing of deportment and keeping watch of permit slips. Semester examinations when the weather is hot and sultry aren't so joyfully welcomed and everyone is striving for those 90's. The teachers were even kind enough to introduce a brand new subject, for the curious and studious Junior and Senior students—Biology. It seems to be quite a favorite so far. This begins the New Regime.

The Parent-Teachers' Association devoted its January meeting last Friday afternoon to the consideration of thrift. Mr. R. E. Courson talked to the members on the subject, especially stressing the question of present day salesmanship and installment plans of purchasing. Mrs. H. L. Gowdy led an informal discussion in which Mrs. O. L. Varland, Mr. J. D. Hall and Mrs. G. F. McBurney took part. The kindergarten band played one number at the opening of the meeting. Refreshments were served during the social hour by Mrs. Anfinson, Mrs. Studebaker, Mrs. Nordschow, Mrs. Stapley, Mrs. Pfaltzgraff Mrs. Hadley, Mrs. Ray Klemme, Mrs. Obrecht, Mrs. Roe and Mrs. Peterson.

A dual debate with Eagle Grove will take place Thursday afternoon, January 27. Our negative team consisting of Lucille Skouge, Helen Luick, and Randall Klemme will debate at home, and our affirmative team, Harriet Martin, Richard Gowdy and Ruth Ramsay will go to Eagle Grove.

Belmond High School met their first defeat at the hands of the Goldfield quintet at Goldfield Friday night. The final score was 15 to 27, the game however not being so one-sided as the score indicates. The game was fast and exciting from start to finish. Belmond's main difficulty was in locating the basket, their passing and team work being excellent. Goldfield scored most of their points during the first half and the Purple and White during the last half. During the last half Belmond showed their very best work, with accurate passing, quick pivoting, and breaking to pieces the strong Goldfield defense, but repeatedly failed to make their many shots. Several of our points were made by Britt high school at Belmond Friday night. We have not played Britt this year, and we look forward to a good game. We defeated Clarion on our own floor, and are waiting anxiously and hopefully for the outcome at Clarion Saturday night.

Richard Gowdy won the typing medal with a speed of 47 words a minute.

Junior High School Notes

The Junior High girls are getting ready for a basket ball game with the Freshmen.

The eighth grade boys are very interested in their manual training course, which Mr. Hall is giving them this semester. The eighth grade girls are studying Art under the direction of Miss Sauerwine.

Lyle and Muriel Montgomery have entered our eighth grade. This makes the Junior High enrollment 85.

The Junior High Operetta, "The Maid and the Golden Slipper" is to be given Thursday, February 3. Those taking part are working hard and the entertainment promises to be one of the best of the year. Make your plans to attend and don't forget the date, February 3.

Lois Trafford won the dollar which was given to the one who named correctly all the records played in the music memory contest in Junior High last week. A large number of students named all the selections and composers but failed to spell them correctly. Lois was the only one out of eighty who had a perfect paper.

Junior High people not absent nor tardy this semester: June Ayers, Velma Brewer, Ruth Courson, Arlene Dippel, Amelia Greenlander, Christina Groen, Leona Halfpop, Corrine Johnson, Esther Kemp, Violet Norris, Duan Packard, Minerva Rise, Mona Schmidt, Holm Swenson, Mildred Van Buskirk, Mary E. Blake, Lewis Dippel, Freda Peterson, Frances Ramsey.

An Artext Print entitled "A Boy With A Rabbit" was received by the Kindergarten as its award in the health contest in which the children took part during the first months of school. The Kindergarten also won the Parent-Teachers' Association pennant for this month.

The Girls' Glee Club is working on the test pieces for the district contest in Mason City on April 15th. Winners in the twelve districts will go to Iowa City in May to the State Festival. The Club has been doing fine work this year and the members are all very enthusiastic. They are hoping to make Belmond outstanding for its musical talent.

The following High School students were neither absent nor tardy during the first semester:

Seniors—Carl Mennenga, Mary Quinlan, Edna Rust, Lucille Skouge, Jessie Wallace.

Juniors—Margaret Barry, Lucille Dochterman, Evelyn Greenwood, John Holtzbauer, Mildred Jacobson, Alma Nelson, Ruth Ramsay, Harriet Martin.

Sophomores—Lola Bamford, Eleanor Barry, Grant Chapman, Harriet Gowdy, Martial Holtzbauer, Marie Landon, Muriel Luick, Dewain Morris Velva Sturdevant.

Freshmen—Donald Baker, Dwight Boughton, Bessie Cullinan, Merlin Dipple, Helen Kinseth, Fannie Landon, Ruth Cullinan, Lova Leonard, George Mack, June Norby, Clarence Peterson, Nina Schmidt, Dudley Myers.

The following grade pupils were neither absent nor tardy this semester:

First Grade—Lee Brewer, Earlene Madsen, Maryon Nielson, Eulalia Sullivan.

Kindergarten—Ruth Fulton, Ruth Kemp, Harmon Klemme, Anna Zeiger, Dale Ramsey, Vivian Rise.

Second Grade—Georgia House, Donald Finn, Orvis Fitts, Eugene Major, Clara Shaw, Esther Swenson.

Third Grade—Bernadine Ayers, Bernard Ayers, Ray Bonte, Waunita Brewer, Ruth Finn, Angelina Jacobson, Donald Nielson, Meryl Pfaltzgraff, Ralph Rowe, James Shaw, Dorothea Thayer, Veona Townsan.

Miss Jackson's Room—Patricia McNulty, Harris Dipple, Jessie Jacobson, Doloris Pech, Arthur Kemp.

Fourth Grade—Muriel Bohning, Arthur Johnson, James Gowdy, Wilbur Luick, Jame Holtzbauer, Charles Norby, Gwendolyn House, Naomi Roosevelt, Mary Stadtlander, William Stadtlander.

Fifth Grade—Dorothy Courson, Theodore Dorenkamp, Francis Leavy, Gerald McNulty, Wayne Nissen, Gladys Petersen, Blanche Pfaltzgraff, Ina Schmidt, Maxine Stacy, Loren Whelan.

Sixth Grade—June Greenfield, June Obrecht, Lawrence Adams, Clair Bonte, Veda Curtis, Elsie Daniels, Paul Dipple, Carol Jacobson, Nellie McVay, Billy Moore, Maxine Nordschow, George Norris, Royce Tomson.

Miss Cambier had the following visitors in her room, Friday, January 21: Mrs. J. Zeiger, Mrs: J. White, Mrs. M. Ramsey, Mrs. Legge Wallace, Mrs. W. Ramsay.

The following visited in Miss Quigley's room last Friday: Mrs. Will Johnson, Mrs. Clair McDermott.

Citizens of Eagle Grove will vote February 18 on a proposition to build a municipal light plant, at a cost of $65,000, same to be in a bond issue. This is the result of the agitation there over such a plant, which has been going on more or less for the past two years. A petition was recently circulated which received about 500 signatures in favor of calling an election.

Regular meeting of the Luncheon Club will be held this noon. Dr. G. F. McBurney, Dr. L. R. Parsons and T. A. Davenport are the committee in charge of the topic for discussion, "City Streets, Public Safety, Lighting and Sewage."

The Trappers

OBITUARY OF B. K. KINSETH

Came Here Eight Years Ago; One of Leading Merchants.

B. K. Kinseth was born in Norland, Norway, on April 29th, 1871, and died at his home in Belmond on Monday morning, January 17th, at 5:30 o'clock. Mr. Kinseth was one of a family of fifteen children. At the age of six years he came with his family to the United States, coming to Iowa and locating at Bode, Iowa. There he spent his boyhood and young manhood. There he married and raised his family. He was married in Bode to Miss Hena Lansing, who with four children survive him. To this union were born five children, the eldest a daughter, dying in infancy. The surviving children are Reynold L. and Bernold O. Kinseth of Belmond, Mrs. Clarence Bohlen of Alexander, and Mrs. Francis Quigley, of Goodell. Mr. Kinseth entered into business in Bode and conducted a store there for a number of years. Afterward he moved to Livermore, Iowa, operating a store there and after residing there for two years he moved with his family to Alexander, Iowa, where he conducted a successful store for seven years. Selling out his business at that place he came to Belmond in July of the year 1919 and bought out the corner store from W. A. Parsons. This business he with his sons have been operating since that time and have developed and maintained a large business. A short time ago Mr. Kinseth purchased a store in Clarion which he operated for a time but recently disposed of it. Mr. Kinseth suffered much in recent years from heart disease but in spite of that he was an enterprising and progressive merchant and always had his active participation in the management of the store. He had many friends here and in other communities where he has resided who will mourn his untimely taking away. He was in the prime of life as to years but could not withstand the ravages of the disease which beset him. His mourning wife and children have the sympathy of all their friends. Funeral services were held in the M. E. church last Wednesday afternoon conducted by the pastor, Rev. Snyder, assisted by Rev. O'Connor from Clarion, interment being in Belmond cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy in the death of our loved one, B. K. Kinseth, and for the floral tributes sent.

The Relatives.

Sugar Company officials are working with officials of the Dyer Construction Co. on a plan to operate the sugar factory this year. Nothing has been arrived at as yet, but hopes are held that some satisfactory arrangement can be made and the plant continue operation. Definite notice will doubtless be forthcoming in the near future.

Mrs. J. R. Stebbleton and little daughter left Monday for Des Moines where they will make their future home.

HANSON GIVEN PERMIT TO LEAVE

Eagle Grove Doctor Claims His Health Needs Attention.

Last week Judge Thompson, of Webster City issued an order permitting Dr. C. H. Hanson, of Eagle Grove a leave of absence from Wright county on account of his health. The doctor is said to be suffering from a nervous breakdown. The petition in part is as follows: "That he be permitted to go to New Orleans or Chicago for treatment, and to be absent from the state of Iowa for the purpose for a period not exceeding sixty days, or for such time as will be necessary to restore his health."

Mary E. Morris, of Clarion seeks a divorce from her husband, Ralph E. Morris, a railway brakeman, alleging the defendant has become quarrelsome and abusive. The couple were married at Boone, Iowa, April 1, 1921, and have one daughter.

State Bank of Belmond brings action against Joe Kiplinger to recover the sum of $306.78 on two past due promissory notes.

Anna Sadler, of Eagle Grove seeks to recover the sum of $775.00 from Dr. C. H. Hanson on acount of past due house rent.

Farmers State Bank of Dows demands judgment against Chas. and Charlotte Kughn, for $151.80, being balance due on their note.

Roy Wold, of Holmes demands judgment against N. G. Lokerse in the sum of $100 on his past due note.

E. N. Zinn brings suit against the Farmers Savings Bank of Goldfield asking judgment for $3584.49 and that said judgment be decreed a first lien upon a $7000 note and mortgage, given to secure a $4000 note upon which the above sum is now due.

The board of supervisors meet in regular February session on the 7th. On account of the Eagle Grove Times having been consolidated with the Eagle it will be necessary for the board to select a third official newspaper. Three papers eligible, the Herald-Press and Independent at Belmond and the Advocate at Dows.

Ten new cases were filed Tuesday for trial at the February term of court, as follows:

Farmers Savings Bank of Godlfield vs. Jessie and J. D. Lehman is an action to collect $2011.62 on two promissory notes. The sum of $442.56 is amount asked of these defendants by the above bank under a separate suit.

Frank Lynch, of Eagle Grove brings suit to collect $200 house rent from Mr. and Mrs. Herman Heggebo.

Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove vs. E. A. Allen is a suit to collect $5365.56 on a past due note.

Farmers Savings bank of Goldfield vs. Clayton Riley is a suit to collect on three notes the aggregate sum of $5125.18.

Emil Stauffer asks judgment against the Mathison Motor Co., in the sum of $210.36. Plaintiff alleges he purchased a Ford truck on the installment plan. Later the defendant allegec he placed a box thereon of the value of $20 and replaced a tire of the same value. That the defendant, without legal process, took possession of said truck, box and tire. Plaintiff seeks to recover the amount of the installments paid and the value of the box and tire.

Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove asks judgment against Thos. and Sylvia Arthur in the sum of $7494.47, being the amount of three notes. The same bank brings a second suit against these defendants to collect $9964.34 on two other notes, also suit on joint note of Thomas and Martin Arthur to collect $829.17.

Frank and Lillian McDaniels, of Woolstock are defendants in a suit brought by Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove to collect $5322.20 on their joint note and mortgage.

The Goodrich Rubber Co. vs. Joseph Osman is suit to collect balance due on account for tubes and tires of $89.16.

A past due candy account aggregating $110.72 is basis of suit brot by Walter Birk Candy Co. vs. Moseley Grocery Co., of Goldfield.—Monitor.

ADOPT A CHILD; BRING HAPPINESS INTO YOUR HOME

Iowa has two State Orphanages filled to capacity with Iowa children. These institutions are giving excellent care to the children, but no institution can take the place of a good home. There are over three hundred children of as fine a type as you can find anywhere for whom the state is seeking good homes, and we are sure that there are more than enough homes that will be glad to take one of these unfortunate children and give them the normal home life that a child needs.

We have already found homes for several hundred children, but they keep coming to us in groups, eleven coming on one train the other day, six of these from one family.

If you are in a position so that you can open your heart and your home to one of these unfortunate children, kindly write Edwin H. Sands, Superintendent of Child Welfare, State House, Des Moines, Iowa, telling him your preference—whether a boy or a girl and about what age you would prefer, and the matter will be given immediate attention.

COMMUNITY CLUB MEETS FRIDAY AFTERNOON

This week Friday afternoon will be the regular meeting of the Community Welfare Club. This will be a very important meeting. If you are interested in the welfare of the community, be there. Plans will be made for the annual membership drive.

Mrs. G. F. McBurney and Mrs. Chas. Thiltgen have charge of the drive. The nominating committee will also be appointed at this meeting.

The serving committee are: Mrs. Lud C. Johnson, chairman; Mrs. Adolph Wenzel, Mrs. Wm. Nelson, Mrs. C. L. Groh, Mrs. Theo. Rankins, Mrs. R. A. Rankins, Mrs. Herman Schultz, Mrs. C. C. McGuire, Mrs. E. C. Kinney, Miss Mary Barry.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 1.—Mac. J. Thompson, closing out farm sale. Particulars later.

FEB. 2—Helland Bros., closing out farm sale. Particulars next week.

FEB. 3—Alsvig Bros., closing out farm sale. Particulars next week.

FEB. 8—Roy Jenison. Spotted Poland sow sale.

FEB. 9.—Maxwell Baker, Poland China hog sale.

FEB. 10—G. Gobell, farm sale, location 4 miles north, 1-2 mile west of Meservey.

FEB. 12—J. M. Sampson, Spotted Poland bred sow sale.

FEB. 17—Harry Ziska, Duroc Jersey bred sow sale.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week Jan. 15 to 22, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
16	29	5	—	Cloudy
17	29	5	T	Cloudy
18	9	-5	.02	Cloudy
19	10	-8	—	Cloudy
20	8	-11	—	Cloudy
21	-2	-5	—	Pt. Cloudy
22	11	-15	—	Clear

MANY SALES IN NEXT TWO WEEKS

Four Farm Sales and Three Hog Sales Are Dated For Two Weeks In February

MUCH ADVERTISING DONE

The first two weeks in February will be featured with an unusual number of sales, some seven being dated for the first twelve days in the month. February 1, L. H. Mikelson, on the Courson farm eight miles west of Belmond, will have a closing out farm sale, before moving to Minnesota. February 3, Alsvig Bros., west of Goodell, are holding a farm sale prior to moving to Illinois where they will farm. February 2. Helland Bros., as administrators of the estate of the late Lewis Helland, will sell a number of head of live stock and some farm machinery at the farm southeast of Belmond. Another farm sale will be that of Mc. J. Thompson, northeast of Belmond, on February 1, Mr. Thompson planning on moving to town. Detailed advertisements of the latter three of these farm sales will be found in this issue of The Independent.

Three pure bred hog sales will feature the second week in February, namely those of the Baker Stock Farm, Sampson Stock Farm. and Roy Jenison.

On Tuesday, February 8, Mr. Jenison will offer for sale 50 head of Spotted Poland China bred sows and gilts, the sale being held at the United Manufacturing Co. building at the Rock Island yards. Included in his offering are eight herd sows, 17 fall yearling sows, and 25 spring gilts. Some of the very best blood lines of the breed are in this offering, which is mated to his three outstanding boars, Auctioneer's Peacock, Sensation Harvester, and Style Plus.

February 9, the Baker Stock Farm, of which Max Baker is proprietor, will sell a splendid bunch of Poland China Spring Gilts. This sale will also be held at the United Manufacturing Co. building. Mr. Baker has some of the finest Poland China gilts the breed has to offer, and as proof of their type and quality his herd won twenty-one firsts, eleven seconds, eight thirds, four grand champions and three junior champions at the Fort Dodge, Humboldt, Algona and Britt fairs last season. His offering at this sale is mated to Revenual A-26939, by Revenue A-379 out of Joker Lady 2nd.

The Sampson Stock Farm, on February 12, will offer for sale 50 Spotted Poland China bred sows and gilts, featuring the get of The Wizard Jr. 114545 Jack O'Diamonds Jr. 114429, and Spotted Model 103393. This sale will also be held at the United Manufacturing Co. building. Mr. Sampson has some real Spotted Poland type animals in this offering, showing the finest blood lines in that breed. He has had very enthusiastic reports from buyers at former sales, and in this sale has still better offerings.

The entire local advertising for these three blooded hog sales has been handled by The Independent. Each of the three breeders has been furnised with complete catalogs for their respective sales, and their newspaper advertising both at home and in surrounding towns handled by this paper. Mr. Earl Clark, of Goodell, has been an extra printer with the regular force during the past two weeks, assisting in taking care of the extra work entailed in printing hog sale catalogs, and the farm sale bills.

On February 17, Harry Ziska, west of Belmond, will have a Duroc Jersey hog sale, details of which will be given later. Mr. Ziska has some of the best Duroc Jerseys in this part of the state, and a good sale is being anticipated.

MARRIAGE RECORD

Lloyd James O'Rourk, Kanawha, Marvyl LaRue Gillespie, Renwick; Porter Faulhaber, Belmond, Mary Riekens, Belmond.

The Monday Night Bridge Club met this week with Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Luick.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------.10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

ASKING FOR WAR

Wallace's Farmer: Does the United States want a new war? Investors in Mexico and Central America seem to; possibly some folk in the army and navy are not averse to it; but what about the rest of us, the folks who earn neither money nor honors by conflict, but who pay the bills?

Marines have landed in Nicaragua. A fleet of battleships is off the Nicaraguan coast. The president of the United States has accused Mexico of an unfriendly act in aiding one candidate for president in Nicaragua. An American ship has stopped a Mexican ship on the high seas and prevented delivery of her load of munitions.

If Nicaragua were a strong country, we would be at war with her this minute. If Mexico were a strong country, we would be at war with her. What the United States had done to these two minor nations would have brought retaliation from any great power, in the shape of a declaration of war. What kind of diplomacy is it that leads the American people into a situation like this?

The present situation is an outgrowth of the fears and ambitions of American investors in both Nicaragua and Mexico. Mexico has adopted certain regulations with regard to land ownership of which American investors do not approve. Nicaragua had a president who had views unlike those of Mexico. The Nicaraguan president was succeeded, after some doubtful work, by a former employe of an American corporation. The former vice-president, thinking himself entitled to the succession and thinking the new president a tool of foreign investors, attempted to overthrow the new man. He had almost succeeded when the state department ordered marines and sailors to Nicaragua, saved the president by creating a neutral zone, helped him further by seeing that he got munitions, and injured his opponent by seeing that he didn't get munitions.

The excuse for this action is defense of American lives and property. So far as anyone knows, no lives were in danger. Danger to property there doubtless was, as there is in any uproar. It is questionable just how far a great nation is entitled to carry this theory of defense of the lives and property of its nationals. Men put money in investments like these because of high returns; these high returns they defend as justified because of the risks taken; when risks actually appear, they call for battleships to remove them. They want both safety and high returns.

How far can this theory be carried? American property was damaged in Great Britain by the coal strike; did we land marines there? American lives have been endangered by riots in Italy; did we send battleships to demand apologies? What kind of a rule is it that is applied only to the weak and never to the strong?

The real reason for the American conquest of Nicaragua is apparently the desire to frighten Mexico into letting American investors have what they want. American action in Nicaragua has encouraged the springing up of half a dozen little revolutionary movements in Mexico, movements probably financed by Americans. These American investors have tried to secure justice in Mexican courts; they have not considered the further possibility of arbitration between the two countries. Apparently they want more than courts or arbitration will get them. They seem to be bound to secure it with the guns of our fleet and the rifles of our marines.

There have been some courageous voices in congress, speaking out against this attempt to drag the United States into a war for the profit of a few men. Lozier, of Missouri for one added to his fine record on the farm bills a sound protest against the Nicaraguan expedition. We look to see representatives from all farm states standing strongly against the policy of the state department at Washington. Neither the thinking farmer nor business man wants our country courting war, as it seems to be doing by the action taken.

INFLUENCING LEGISLATION

We admire the courage of Secretary Ramsay in tackling the big oil concerns, but can see the finish of his fond dreams when old Standard Oil, Harry F. Sinclair, E. H. Doheny and the rest of the big boys send lobbyists to Des Moines to tell the legislators where to head in.—Webster City Freeman-Journal.

The esteemed Freeman Journal thus more or less directly brings against the Iowa assembly a charge that its membership—and a majority membership at that—is likely to be influenced as to legislation by ulterior means. With the oil scandals with which Sinclair, Doheny and others have been connected and in the state of mind held by the public as to that connection the paragraph above would naturally tend toward the conclusion that the huge interests could by devious means control the action of the Iowa assembly. Whether intentionally or not the paragraph quoted above carries that unjust not to say insulting inference.—Marshalltown Times-Republican.

Both these papers belong to an association which maintains a man at Des Moines during each legislative session to look after their interests Neither paper would countenance that man using bribery or force to secure or to obstruct legislation. What they have him there for is to see that facts favorable to their side are presented before any committee or assembly member acting on legislation involving them.

Why then, because the oil interests are big, is it an insult to legislators to presume that these interests will have men representing their interests when these interests are so unfairly attacked as in Secretary Ramsay's proposed legislation.

The Marshalltown paper rushes to defend legislators that are hardly in need of so much defense. We would like as well as anyone to buy gas at 12c a gallon. But we certainly would not like an idea in legislation that tells a business what it must charge and makes that charge so much less than the present charge as to make it appear unreasonably low. And we heartily agree with the Freeman-Journal that after representatives of oil interests get thru showing that unfairness to the assembly the bill has a mightly slender chance of passing.—Reinbeck Courier.

TEXAS EDITOR BECOMES PEEVED AND TELLS TRUTH

A west Texas editor got tired of being called a liar because of an occasional typographical error or a slight disarrangement of facts in publishing a commonplace news item. In his wrath he announced:

"A lot of people in this town fall out with the editor and brand him a liar when the ordinary mistakes of life show up in the paper. You have a little charity and fellow feeling for every man in town but your editor. You claim you want facts and d——d if we don't get them to you. Read the next issue of this sheet and you will see facts with the bark off.

"I admit that I have been a liar, an editorial liar ever since I have been editing this sheet, but I have never printed a lie in these columns except to keep somebody's feelings from being hurt. I am not afraid of any of you, and I'll be dad-blamed if I don't print the truth from now on, or until some of you get out of the habit of calling me a liar every time I make some unavoidable typographical errors. Now watch my smoke."

Here are some of the paragraphs out of the next issue:

"John Bennin, the laziest man in town, made a trip to Belleview yesterday."

"Rev. Sty preached last Sunday at the local church. His sermon was punk and uninteresting except some stuff he quoted from Bob Ingersoll, for which he failed to give Bob any credit.

"Tom Spardin married Miss Coralie Meadows last trades day at the county seat. It isn't generally known but the marriage was brought about mainly by a Remington shotgun manipulated by the bride's father. Tom concluded that marrying was the healthiest thing he could do until other arrangements could be made."

"Regan Lloyd, cashier of the State Bank at Willow Grove, died last Wednesday and was buried by the Odd Fellows at Pleasant Mount cemetery. He had been taking this paper for several years and had not paid us a cent. We thought that, being a banker, he would certainly pay some time. We will sell the account for two-bits worth of groceries."

"Married—Miss Susie Scruggs and Horace Griffin. The bride is a very ordinary girl who flirts with every traveling man she meets and never helped her mother three days in her life all put together. She is anything but a beauty, resembling a gravel pit in the face and walks like a duck. The groom is a natural born loafer and bum. He never did a lick of work until his step-daddy ran him off from home last fall. He went to the county seat and just before he starved to death he accepted a job as chambermaid in a livery stable. As soon as his ma found out where he was she went up and got him and brought him home. They now reside at the home of his wife's father and he says he has no definite plans for the future. Susie will have a hard row to hoe."

SELECTING FURNISHINGS

In building your house into a home by putting your personality to it, give serious study to everything you put into it. Things last such a long time that it is a pity to make poor selections when one could just as well choose things of "beauty and a joy forever."

Discriminate between things which will endure for all your life; as dressers, tables, chairs, and things which will soon have to be replaced; as drapes, dishes, rugs, lamp shades, table runners and upholstery. If you must economize—and most of us must—select the latter of inexpensive stuff but do not buy shoddy furniture.

If you cannot buy many things according to your taste begin in just one room or one corner of the room, and let that room or corner be your delight until you can make the rest of the house come up to it. Of course the living room—where you spend your hours of ease and where you entertain your guests will deserve your first beautification. Unseen and little used rooms can await their turn.

The house should be considered as a unit in selecting furnishings. The rooms opening into one another should harmonize. They may be varied enough to avoid monotony by little touches or different styles, but they should not clash or be so distinct as to look choppy. An advantage in selecting all the furnishings as a unit, that is, with a general style or color tone, is that they can be moved from room to room as they grow shabby, or upon need, and will fit in their later location.

Everything you buy should be suitable in color, size and design to its use and to its environment. It should not be so large as to dwarf the proportions of the room or its neighboring pieces. Variety in type is in good taste, as a delicate French chair in the same room with an overstuffed one. Everything in the house should be useful or beautiful, and if it can be both, so much the better.

REGULATING FOODS

It is very dangerous to allow the waste pipes of the body to clog or become sluggish. They should throw off the portions of food which the body doesn't use. If retained in the system, they become poisons and set up disease conditions. For this reason we need body-regulating foods.

Unless we give thought to it, or have formed right food habits, we are likely to neglect to eat the regulating foods and to choose only the building foods. The regulating foods are often more expensive or inaccessible and have long been regarded as knick-knacks or accessories rather than much needed daily foods.

In the winter time, there is a temptation to eat too hearty and too concenrated foods. Bulky vegetables, bran, whole grains, will help overcome this. It is also hardest to get the needed vitamins in the winter-time. These are to be found in fresh milk; green, leafy vegetables; carrots; oranges; lemons; eggs; cheese; liver; kidneys; cabbage; tomatoes and beans and peas. These foods not only have regulating qualities, neutralizing body acids, but they contain mineral salts without which the body cannot develop properly, nor be healthy.

THE CLUB ROOM

The club room has some advantages over the holding of club meeting in the homes of members. It may be more centrally located and hence more convenient. It may be better able to take care of a crowd than are most homes. It makes the meetings more business-like and the members have more freedom and independence. It brings about a delightful cooperation and relieves the few hostesses of heavy burdens.

It has the disadvantage of lacking the hospitable sweetness of a home meeting, the refined sociability of having a hostess who does the honors. It frequently draws a smaller company than the home meeting, to which people will go to pay their respects to the one who entertains.

The club room is the modern solution of the large club and the club with a purpose. The meeting at home was more particularly for the exclusive club which was devoted chiefly to culture and self improvement.

While the providing of a club room looks like a big proposition when you face it, yet it is always found a much easier thing to accomplish than is anticipated. If many persons are once interested in providing a club room, or if some enthusiastic leader will head the project, many unsuspected friends will gladly arise and make donations; and the small contributions of the membership amount to a surprising total.

And then, the whole burden does not have to be borne in one year, but may be distributed over a period of time, and the responsibility falls lightly upon all, being shared by present members and a larger membership to come.

THE EXPENSE ACCOUNT

There are some important things you should know about how you are spending your money and there is no other way you can learn them than by keeping an expense account. Ordinarily people just throw up their hands in terror when the matter of where the money goes is mentioned. It is a wise financier who knows from keeping tab, just what became of that which he earned with the sweat of his brow.

Keep an account book, properly ruled and labelled, and each night note in it what money you have spent that day. If you can carry the book in your pocket or your purse, so much the better, for that will enable you to jot down every expenditure at once and save you much anxious puzzling when you come to reckon with yourself.

The expense account shows you if you are allotting too little or too much money to any one item; and if that amount should be increased or reduced another time.

It tells you whether there has been a fair division of expenditures among the various members of the family and who has been greedy or who has been short-changed.

It shows you where luxuries have been purchased at the expense of necessities, and points the way to reform.

It makes it possible for you to decide what corners to trim, that you may increase your savings without undue sacrifices.

And then, it is a satisfaction to look back over the year and know what did become of it all, anyhow. It shows you that you have accomplished something and your labors have not been in vain.

BRAN MUFFINS

Stir the wet and dry ingredients of these separately the night before, and bake them for breakfast. Sift together three cups flour, two teaspoons salt, two teaspoons soda and one teaspoon baking powder. Add three cups bran and mix. In a separate bowl, blend two tablespoons melted fat with a half cup of molasses. Add a cup and a half of sour milk. The next morning mix the wet and dry ingredients, and bake slowly in well greased muffin tins.

CHURCHES

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services for the Lord's Day, January 30, as follows:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m.

Divine Worship and Sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "The Diamond." Ex. 28:18.

Epworth League at 6:30. Joe Sprenzel, leader. Topic, "Missions."

Evening Worship and Gospel Message at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "Four Points in Christianity." Matt. 20.

The first division of the Ladies' Aid will serve an oyster supper in the basement of the church Friday evening, January 28, beginning at 5:30, until all folks are served. Price 25 and 35 cents.

Everybody cordially invited to all of our services.

We preach Jesus Christ and Him crucified.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10:00 a. m.—Bible Study Hour.

11:00 a. m.—Morning Worship and Sermon, by the pastor. The thot of the sermon next Sunday morning will be a continuation of last Sunday's thot, "The Pathway to Success." But next Sunday morning let us think of "Success" in the highest moral and spiritual realms.

In this connection let us remember that it is better to conduct ourselves in such a manner that God can smile upon us, even if the world frowns upon us; than to conduct ourselves so that the world would cheerfully smile upon us, but God would be forced to frown upon us. And yet how often we choose only the smile of the world, but care for the approval of God.

The Ladies' Missionary Society will meet on Thursday afternoon of this week, at the home of Mrs. G. F. Elder. All of the ladies are invited.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Joan of Arc

THE great presence-chamber of the French court was crowded to the doors. On a dais at the upper end of the room sat a gorgeously attired man, surrounded by flattering courtiers. Into that brilliant assemblage a poor peasant girl was ushered. Her tanned face was homely, but lighted by unusually large, melancholy eyes. She was Joan, the peasant's daughter of Domremy.

Her eyes swept the gay court, rested indifferently on the gaudy form in the chair of state, then passed on to a far corner of the room, where she singled out a plainly dressed man who stood unnoticed in a lesser group of courtiers. Going up to this man, she knelt before him, saying:

"You are Charles, the dauphin (crown prince) of France!"

A murmur of amazement ran through the listening crowd. The dauphin raised the peasant girl to her feet. The smile of derision that had curled his lips gave place to a look of awe. Joan of Arc's career had begun.

France and England had for centuries been bitter foes. They were forever at war with each other. (These wars endured at intervals until the battle of Waterloo, in 1815.) France had been repeatedly beaten by the better-disciplined islanders. Invasion after invasion on the part of the English had torn away more and more French territory and had annexed it to England. Edward III had several times invaded France, and his son, "the Black prince," in the battles of Crecy and of Poitiers (1336 and 1356) had wrecked France's military power.

The Black prince has come down through history as the very flower of chivalry; whereas, as a matter of fact, he was a brutal freebooter.

Later, Henry V of England had further subdued France, until, early in the Fifteenth century, England had conquered all the country north of the River Loire, and the infant son of Henry V was crowned not only king of England but of France as well—France, lying helpless, almost passive, in the grip of her British masters. Charles, son of the French king and rightful heir to the French throne, should have been crowned on his father's death, but he had no genius or ambition and was content to spend his time in idleness and dissipation, uncrowned, while his kingdom slipped away from his nerveless hands.

Affairs had reached this point when Joan of Arc appeared. She had passed her childhood in the forest of Domremy, at the edge of the province of Lorraine, where she tended her father's flocks, excelled at housewifely arts and repelled all offers of love. She could neither read nor write. But she had heard of the prophecy made of old by the magician, Merlin, that France, in the hour of direst need, should be saved by a maiden. Tradition had added that the maiden should come from Domremy. Joan brooded over this prophecy in her long hours of solitude in fields and woods until she hypnotized herself into the belief that she heard divine voices telling her she was the Holy Maid destined to rescue her country from ruin.

At this juncture the English captured Orleans, the way to all southern France. Joan declared that the "voices" bade her to wrest Orleans from the invader and to crown Charles at Reims. With this double aim in view, and backed by the clamor of popular feeling, she secured an interview with Charles. To deceive her, he decked out a courtier in his royal robes, and himself stood, disguised, in a remote corner. Joan at once saw through the imposition. So impressed was Charles that he gave her an army of about 4,500 men and sent her against Orleans.

She had no military knowledge, no education of any sort. Yet she had absolute faith in her own inspiration, and she inspired her soldiers with the same belief. Incidentally, she worked strongly upon the superstitious fears of the English. Clad in mail and carrying a sacred banner, she rode at the head of her fanatical army, captured Orleans, beat the English in battle after battle and drove them helter-skelter beyond the Loire. Then she returned and assisted at Charles' coronation at Reims.

Her double mission thus accomplished, she begged leave to go back to her flocks and the quiet life of her village. But Charles would not hear of it. He ennobled her and her family and sent her to wrest Paris from the English. In vain she pleaded that she had no further divine call. Charles relied on the fanatic enthusiasm of her soldiers to sweep all before them. So she obeyed. But she was henceforth no more than a mere woman. On September 8, 1429, she attacked Paris, but was beaten back and wounded. Her luck—or divine power—was gone. Soon afterward she was captured. Charles, who owed her his kingdom, made no effort to ransom or rescue her.

The English tried her as a sorceress and a heretic. Although no crime or deceit could be proven against her, they pronounced her guilty, and on May 30, 1431, burned her at the stake.

Thus died Joan of Arc, holy martyr-maid, and the bravest, purest patriot the world has ever known.

FREE AIR

Good Morning, have you had the grippe yet?

* * * *

If you haven't, consider yourself two things—lucky, and on the waiting list.

* * * *

Haven't heard any more about that broadcasting station since last week. Guess we won't have any, Joe says this town already has too many broadcasters.

* * * *

Now what do you suppose he meant by that?

* * * *

And he crabs because we said he would be ready for inspection last Saturday, in his newly decorated offices, and he wasn't ready, and folks kept pouring in and he couldn't live up to the promise.

* * * *

It wasn't our fault. He should have been ready. Any way, Joe solemnly swears he'll be ready to talk turkey or radio by this Saturday. Drop in and visit him; maybe he'll let you talk over his broadcasting station then.

* * * *

Which means he'll let you use his telephone, maybe.

* * * *

Next Wednesday is ground hog day. After the weather this week everybody is hoping the day will be dark and gloomy.

* * * *

Con Nissen says every day is ground hog day with them. You know—sausage.

* * * *

February is a great month. With fewer days, it has more birthdays of great men than the other eleven. Our birthday is in February, too.

* * * *

Up to date, the bolsheviks haven't gained control of this country. There's a lot of 'em here, tho; and some of 'em in Belmond. And just because a fellow supports long whiskers is no sign he's a bolshevik, either.

* * * *

Speaking of whiskers, in Sheller's barber shop the other day, Sheller was trying to sell O. L. Varland some hair tonic. "Why, do you know," says Sheller, "a fellow pulled the cork on a bottle of this tonic last week, with his teeth, and the next morning he had a mustache."

SHERIFF'S SALE—REAL ESTATE

STATE OF IOWA,
Wright County, ss.

To Essie M. Ferguson, William D. Ferguson, Alma Harris nee Alma Ferguson, L. R. Fitz, Tenants in possession of the Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) (less Chicago Great Western Right of Way) of Section Thirty-two (32) Township Ninety-two (92) North of Range Twenty-three (23) West of the Fifth P. M. Iowa, County of Wright, Maud Ferguson, Dan Harris, Gertrude Howell, M. L. Howell.

You are hereby notified that by virtue of a special execution, to me directed, and issued out of the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the State of Iowa, within and for Wright County, upon a judgment rendered in said Court in favor of Brotherhood of American Yeomen, and against Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) (except Right of Way of Chicago Great Western Railway) of Section Thirty-two (32), in Township Ninety-two (92) North of Range Twenty-three (23) West of the 5th P. M. Iowa, containing One Hundred Fifty-two (152) acres according to U. S. Survey, for the sum of Eleven Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-five and 32-100 Dollars debt and Ninety-one and 85-100 Dollars costs, and One Hundred Sixty-five and 35-100 Dollars attorney's fee, I have levied upon the following described Real Estate, to-wit:

The Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) (except Right of Way of Chicago Great Western Railway) of Section Thirty-two (32), in Township Ninety-two (92) North of Range Twenty-three (23). West of the 5th P. M. Iowa, containing One Hundred Fifty-two (152) acres according to U. S. Survey, and that on the 18th day of February, 1927, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at the front door of the Court House in Clarion, Wright County, Iowa, I will proceed to sell the same in satisfaction of said execution, together with all legal costs accruing.

Dated at the Sheriff's office, in Clarion, this 18th day of January, 1927.

FRED JOHNSON,
Sheriff of Wright County, Iowa.
H. W. Hanson, Attorney.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

IOWA STATE WELCOMES FARMERS

The doors of Iowa State College at Ames will swing open next week to the farmers and homemakers of Iowa for the twenty-fifth annual Farm and Home Week Short Course. Classes will begin Monday, January 31, and will end on Friday, February 5. Fare and a third "open" round trip rates have been granted by all railroads for Farm and Home Week.

Practically every phase of farm home problems are scheduled next week for discussion by leading specialists and authorities of the state as well as by national authorities from without the state. The latest information derived from experiments at the college and by practical farmers and homemakers will be offered to those who attend the sessions.

Among the general subjects to be dealt with are the following: agricultural economics, animal husbandry, agricultural engineering, automobile care, beekeeping, dairy farming, farm crops, farm forestry, horticulture, insect and crop pest control, plant diseases and weeds, poultry husbandry, psychology, public speaking, radio, sociology and soils.

The program for homemakers will center around the theme of "the home without static." The ever present problems of the homemaker will be dealt with specifically and suggestions given that may be taken home and put into immediate use. Many noted national as well as Iowa State specialists will appear on the homemakers' program.

As in former years, the state corn and small grain show to be held in the College Armory will be one of the big attractions of the week for short course visitors. Approximately $2,000 in cash prizes and about 90 trophies will be distributed among the winners in the corn, grain and other crop classes.

The short course program is so planned that farmers or homemakers may specialize largely in any special subject in which they are interested or they may take work in a number of different lines. For instance, lectures, judging work and instruction thruout the week will be given on livestock problems and the same is true of many other farm enterprises.

A carefully arranged program for the general farmer will be held from 8 to 12 each morning. Soils, farm crops, livestock and farm management topics will be taken up in the order named, giving a well rounded course on general farming.

Special speakers have been arranged for the evening mass meetings and for the banquet, Thursday night.

BEEF CLUBS BUY RANGE CATTLE

Six carloads of high grade Hereford calves that were raised on the range will make up a large portion of the baby beeves which will be handled by the boys' and girls baby beef clubs of Boone, Warren, Louisa, Muscatine, Woodbury and Franklin counties, this year, according to information which has been furnished the Iowa Department of Agriculture by John Day, Secretary of the Iowa Beef Producers' Association.

Three Iowa counties fed some range calves last year with good results and doubtless have been one of the reasons for the increased number this year. The entries in the club work this year are larger than ever before, the remainder of the calves being produced at home.

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

An Inducement for Early Orders

The Famous
John Deere Balance Riding Cultivator
At a Price on Delivery . . . $45.00

This Cultivator was regularly sold at $52.50 last season.

The Hummer Balance Riding Cultivator
This cultivator was regularly sold at $46.00 last season now only $39.50

See these cultivators at our store now---and place your order for summer delivery.

These Cultivators are guaranteed to be the latest 1927 models, and the price is guaranteed to be the lowest of the season.

GRIESY'S

PHONE 10. The Friendly Place BELMOND, IOWA

PUBLIC SALE

As I am moving to Minnesota, I will sell at Auction at the Courson farm 6 1-4 miles south and 1 mile east of Kanawha; 8 miles west of Belmond, on

TUESDAY, FEB. 1, 1927

At 12:00 NOON

13	HEAD HORSES AND MULES Including black Percheron Stallion, 11 years old	13
27	HEAD OF CATTLE Including 5 good milk cows.	27
35	HEAD HAMPSHIRE BROOD SOWS	35
250	HEAD CHICKENS	250

FULL LINE OF FARM MACHINERY

FREE LUNCH AT 11:30 A. M.

Usual Terms.

LeRoy H. Mikelson, Prop.

A. B. Erickson,
J. H. Munnis, Aucts. State Bank of Belmond. Clerk

Baby Chicks!

We have increased our incubator capacity to 29,000 eggs to meet the growing demand for baby chicks. Our machine is installed in an up-to-date incubator basement.

Realizing the necessity of pure, fresh air, we ventilated our basement by means of a Jamesway ventilating system. We are in position to supply you with chicks from healthy, standard bred flocks. We will start hatching on Monday, January 31st. Place your order now for future delivery.

"On Time Deliveries"---Our Motto

On all orders for 100 chicks or more received before March 1st we allow a discount of 10 percent off our regular price list and 25 percent cash payment must accompany the order, the balance to be paid when chicks are delivered.

	100	500	1,000
Leghorns	$12.00	$59.00	$117.00
S. C. Anconas	13.00	60.00	119.00
S. C. Black Minorcas	16.00	78.00	155.00
S. C. White Minorcas	18.00
Barred and White P. R.	15.00	70.00	138.00
Buff Plymouth Rocks	16.00	74.00	146.00
S. C. Rhode Island Reds	15.00	70.00	138.00
R. C. Rhode Island Reds	16.00	74.00	146.00
White and S. L. Wyandottes	16.00	78.00	155.00
Columbian Wyandottes	18.00
Buff Orpingtons	16.00	74.00	148.00
White Orpingtons	17.00	80.00	160.00
Rhode Island White	17.00	83.00	165.00
Jersey Black Giants	24.00
Heavy Mixed	13.00	60.00

Extra high grade Tom Barron White Leghorns, the big lop combed type at $13.50 per 100. Custom hatching 4c an egg. Each tray holds 180 eggs. Custom hatching to be paid for when eggs are placed in machine.

We handle a full line of Sargents chick feeds. You can not go wrong by raising your chicks on Sargents.

BALLUFF & THORPE HATCHERY

"The Personal Service Hatchery"
CLARION, IOWA
1 block east and 1 block north of Catholic Church

PUBLIC SALE

I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION, AT MY PLACE ONE-HALF MILE EAST AND ONE AND ONE-HALF MILES NORTH OF BELMOND, AND FOUR MILES SOUTH AND ONE-HALF MILE EAST OF GOODELL, ON

Tuesday, Feb'y. 1

COMMENCING AT 1:00 O'CLOCK P. M. SHARP

3 - Head of Horses - 3

1 GRAY MARE, 10 yrs. old, wt. 1700
1 BAY GELDING, 6 yrs. old, wt. 1200
1 GRAY MARE, 12 yrs. old, wt. 800.

4 - Head of Cattle - 4

2 COWS, one to be fresh soon, and the other a litte later. These cows are both good milkers.
2 HOLSTEIN HEIFERS, one year old. These are all T. B. tested.

18 - Head of Hogs - 18

12 FALL SHOATS
6 DUROC SOWS, bred to farrow in March and April.

Farm Machinery, Etc.

1 rake
1 buggy top
1 Moline corn plow
1 tank heater
Sled runners
1 8-ft. disc
1 sulky plow
1 walking plow
1 cultivator
1 surface plow
1 corn planter and 100 rods wire
1 three-section drag
1 Successful incubator, 170-egg size
1 scythe
1 set dump boards
1 single barrel shotgun
1 cold water cream separator
1 barrel churn
1 drag cart
1 endgate seeder
1 11-ft. seeder
1 6-ft. McCormick binder
1 mower
1 hay rake
1 manure spreader
1 wagon and triple box
1 wagon and rack
1 stone boat
1 bob sled
1 surry
1 buggy pole
2 hog troughs and 4 individuals
1 hog chute
1 hog crate
1 post auger
1 sledge
1 log chain
2 sets work harness
1 set single harness
1 grindstone
6 galvanized chicken coops, new

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

4 chairs
1 kitchen sink
1 sanitary cot
1 dining room table
1 cupboard
1 large iron kettle
1 wood heater
1 washing machine and wringer

SOME SUDAN GRASS HAY 150 BUSHEL "IOWAR" SEED OATS SOME CORN IN CRIB

TERMS—$25 AND UNDER, CASH. OVER THAT AMOUNT 10 MONTHS' TIME WILL BE GIVEN ON APPROVED SECURITY BEARING 8 PERCENT INTEREST. ALL PROPERTY TO BE SETTLED FOR ON DAY OF SALE.

Mc. J. THOMPSON, Proprietor.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND, Clerk H. BRUMMUND, Auct.

MESERVEY SECTION

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.

The monthly Missionary offering will be taken in the classes, and a talk on missions will be given at the close of Sunday School.

Morning Worship at 10:45 a. m. Subject, "The Christian and His Prayer Life." This week is to be observed throughout our church as Self-denial, and week of Prayer. We should be much in prayer for our Missionary work in the home and foreign fields.

Wednesday evening German prayer meeting, at the Jacob Nissen home.

Thursday afternoon the W. M. S. will meet at the H. Fischer home for the monthly missionary and business meeting. Every member should aim to be present at this meeting, as special emphasis will be put upon Self-denial and Prayer for the cause of our Missionary work.

Sunday, February 6 has been set apart as a day of prayer for Missions under the auspice of the Womans' Missionary Society. Every member of the W. M. S. is asked to bring her Self-denial offering and a general offering will be taken for the Albright Memorial Church in Washington, D. C.

Laurence Sohl, Pastor.

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30.
Morning Worship at 10:30 (Ger.)
Young People's Meeting at 7:15.
Evening Preaching at 8:00.

Senior Class in Catechism meets Tuesday at 3:20 at the parsonage.

Ladies' Aid will meet next Thursday at 1:30.

Catechetical Classes meet Saturday at 1:30 p. m. All try to be present. All parents are kindly exhorted to see to it that their children come with their lessons well prepared.

The Dorcas Society met last Tuesday evening at the manse. The annual business was transacted at this meeting. All old officers were re-elected. A constitution was adopted. Miss Grace Vierkant served refreshments.

The Ladies' Aid met last Thursday with a goodly number of members present. Mrs. A. Schlichting served refreshments.

Go to church while you can. Whatever you neglect, do not neglect your spiritual needs. The church is here to help you.

We extend a warm welcome to all who have no church home.

H. Pannkuk, Pastor.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

The high school declamatory contest will be held in the Evangelical church on Friday, January 28, at 7:30 o'clock. This promises to be one of the best contests ever held here for thirty-five percent of the high school people have entered. We have been very fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. E. J. Barlow, of Clarion who is training the contestants this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ralston motored to Hampton last Thursday and visited at the home of the latter's mother, Mrs. Sinson.

The Misses Irena Butz and Anna Pals and Luverne Butz were Belmond callers Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. C. Bier was in Mason City between trains, Saturday.

Rev. H. M. Raecker, of Sheffield, visited relatives here last Friday.

The Shipping Association held their annual meeting last Thursday. We did not learn the particulars, however, so cannot give result at this writing.

Henry H. Pals was pleasantly surprised last Thursday evening when about thirty of his relatives and friends gathered at his home to help him celebrate his birthday. The evening was spent in a social way, after which refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake were served by the hostess. Those present were Peter H. Pals and family, Geo. Vierkant and family, Tillie and Ollie Pals, Minnie Gruis, Martha Wolters, Fred and Alvin Wolters, John Ruiter, Albert Pals, Dick Dirks, Henry Pals, John and Louis Gruis.

H. F. Reif was in Belmond on business last Thursday evening.

The 4-H Club held their first meeting of the year at the home of Vonna Proost, with Mrs. Leland Jacobson in charge, last Thursday evening. Election of officers was held, resulting as follows: President, Harriet Sprau; vice president, Wilma Pals; treasurer, Arloene Janssen; historian, Bonita Muller; reporter, Neva Muller. Plans for the year's work were discussed. Delicious refreshments were served at the close, to which all did justice.

The S. O. S. Boys' Sunday School class met at the A. J. Nissen home, with Marvin as host. The following officers were elected for the year: President, Marvin Nissen; vice president, Wayne Waddingham; secretary, Harvey Quandt; treasurer, Norman Muller. G. Lauster is the teacher of this class. The evening was spent in a social way, following the devotional and business session. Refreshments were served and enjoyed as only boys can enjoy eats.

The Work to Win class of the Evangelical church held their first quarterly meeting of the year by gathering in the church basement at 6:45 last Tuesday evening for a pot-luck supper. Later in the evening the devotional and business sessions were conducted and followed by election of officers. An enjoyable evening was reported by those present.

H. B. Frey spent Thursday evening with Wilbert, who was not so well at different times the latter part of the week.

Word was received here Thursday by relatives from Rochester that Mrs. James Hemming had undergone her operation successfully and was getting along nicely, which will please her many friends.

The orchestra met at the Muller home last Friday evening for rehearsal.

Scout Executive J. C. Underwood and Mrs. Reynolds, president of the Cerro Gordo Scout Council, both of Mason City, were here on official business last Friday afternoon.

Ferdinand Halfpop was a Mason City, caller, Thursday.

The Helping Hand Society met at the home of Mrs. Theo. Wendel on Thursday afternoon for their regular monthly meeting. A large number were present and a pleasant afternoon was spent.

Gerald Braga, Frank Sprau and Gerald Janssen returned from their Illinois trip last Wednesday.

The Misses Olive Sherrard, Inez Obrecht, Anna Pals, Irene Guth and Hallie Ward spent last Thursday evening in Belmond.

Miss Mildred Gealow was a Mason City caller between trains last week on Wednesday.

F. C. Sprau left Saturday evening for Hayfield, Minn. to visit over Sunday at the home of his brother, Jake.

Henry VanOsten is visiting home folks for a week or two. He has been in the vicinity of Jefferson City, Mo., where he has employment.

Rev. and Mrs. Fred Pieper and daughter, Miriam, of Abbott arrived here Monday noon to spend a few days with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hafermann and son Albert and Miss Benz visited relatives in Rowan, Tuesday.

Mother Mayers was very ill Monday and still remains in a critical condition. Her many friends are hoping for a speedy recovery.

Miss Grace Bohning, of Belmond is spending the week at the Bruns home.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Strasburg were visiting relatives in Alexander, Sunday.

Aldrich Beenen and family were Sunday visitors at the Clay Klinefelter home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hy Peters were calling at the E. A. Strasburg home on Monday.

Mr and Mrs. Klaus and baby, of Emmetsburg were business calers in town, Tuesday.

P. H., H., Hilko and Hannas Pals helped their brother Henry, of Belmond, saw wood last Friday.

RED CROSS MEETING

The annual meeting of the Cerro Gordo county chapter of the American Red Cross will be held at 3:00 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, at the Y. W. C. A. club rooms.

All members and those interested are invited to attend for the purpose of electing Chapter officers and a Chapter board of directors.

Hon. C. G. Olliver, member of the legislature from Monona county tells about the interest in the proposed bridge across the Missouri river out in that section of Iowa. There is no bredge across that stream between Council Bluffs and Sioux City. Onawa is eight miles from the Missouri river and Decatur is the nearest town on the Nebraska side. There is a ferry boat that transports people and vehicles across the stream when conditions are favorable. When the river freezes over the same people that run the ferry act as guides as to ice that is safe for passage and exact the same fee that they do when they take people across on the ferry. A bridge at that point would shorten the Lincoln Highway about 100 miles on its westward journey, going west from Denison instead of south to Council Bluffs. The Missouri is the basic line for the adjustment of freight rates. Farmers in eastern Nebraska prefer the Iowa markets because they get more for live stock and two cents per bushel more for grain and that is the reason Nebraska is seeking to have a number of bridges constructed, Mr. Olliver says. Nebraska farmers would rather pay toll than to be deprived of the Iowa market.

Custer Battlefield Highway is to keep up its reputation next summer as the train for caravan tours according to a schedule of the Michigan Automobile tours. The caravan of about 50 cars is to reach Des Moines July 29. The tour starts from Battle Creek, Michigan on July 26 and traverses several highways before striking the Custer highway at this southern terminal point. Attempts are to be made the coming year to have the highway extended farther south. Florida is the final destination.

Supt. Roy L. Huddleston, of Martinsburg, Keokuk county, challenges the high schools of Iowa to produce a more youthful teaching force than a charge of the Martinsburg school. He says that "we think that we are the baby faculty of the state for a four year accredited high school. The average age of the high school teacher, including the superintendent, is twenty-three. There is not an experienced teacher in the corps; all have had from one to four years of experience."

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork
Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone—Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

We Handle
ATWATER KENT RADIOS
CROSLEY RADIOS
PATHE RADIOS
SLAGLE RADIOS
Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries
All kinds Cunningham Tubes
1st class—not "Seconds"
Phone 52 for Home Demonstration.
H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Economical Transportation

The Most Beautiful CHEVROLET
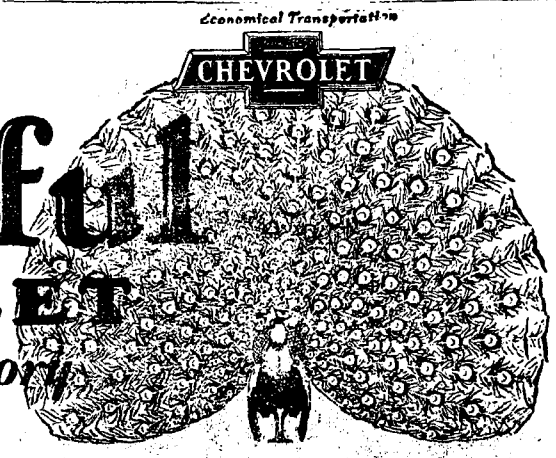
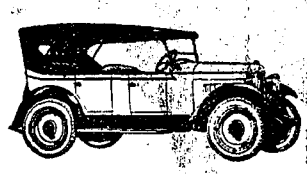
in Chevrolet History

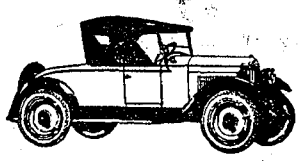


A Host of Improvements and Amazing Price Reductions

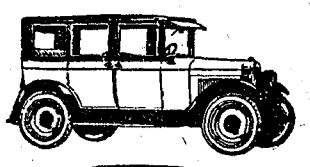
With its smartly paneled and beaded new Fisher bodies—with its distinctive full crown one-piece fenders, bullet-type lamps and "fish tail" modeling—with its AC Oil Filter, AC air cleaner, coincidental ignition and steering lock, remote control door handles and scores of other mechanical improvements, the Most Beautiful Chevrolet is the finest low-priced car ever presented the American public! And offered as it is at such amazingly reduced prices, it constitutes the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry! Never before has any maker of quality cars provided such beauty, such luxury and such modern design at such low prices! Come in. See the Most Beautiful Chevrolet—the outstanding triumph of the world's largest and most successful builder of gearshift cars!



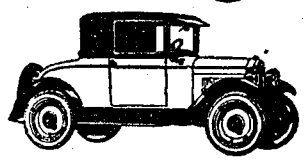
The Touring Car $525
Price includes balloon tires and steel disc wheels. Former price $535 with balloon tires only



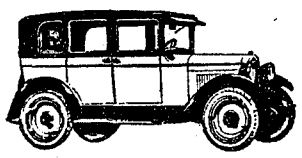
The Roadster $525
Price includes balloon tires and steel disc wheels. Former price $535 with balloon tires only



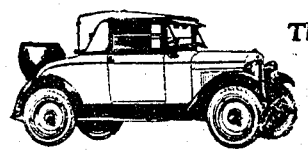
The Sedan $695
Former price $735



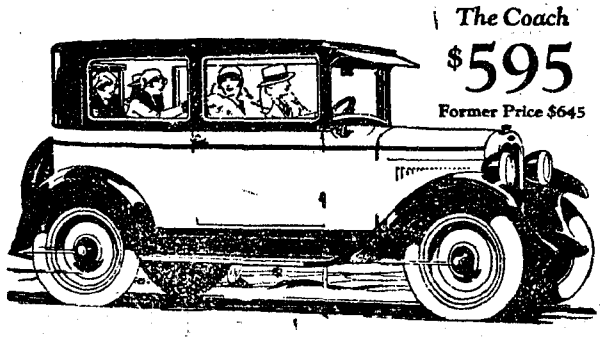
The Coupe $625
Former Price $645



The Landau $745
Former price $765



The Sport Cabriolet $715
Entirely new model with rumble seat



The Coach $595
Former Price $645

1-Ton Truck (Chassis Only) . . . $495
½-Ton Truck (Chassis Only) . . . $395

Balloon Tires Now Standard Equipment On All Models. All prices f.o.b. Flint, Mich.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

Co-operation for 1927

Co-operation means so to conduct yourself that others can work with you.

We are ready, willing and able.

LET'S GO!

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

Herb Hadley, of Belmond was a business caller in town, Saturday.

George Wessels Jr., who recently moved to Ft. Dodge with his parents, has enlisted in the navy and has gone to the Great Lakes Training Camp.

Charles Richards is able to sit up at this writing, having been confined to his bed for the past three weeks.

Miss Clara Andrews, of Coulter, is visiting at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Theo Hansen and incidentally assisting in the Hansen store during the sale.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Erickson, of Popejoy are the proud parents of a daughter of standard weight, arriving Monday, January 24. Mrs. Geo. Whitten is making the acquaintance of her new granddaughter.

Word has been received from Miss Florence Box that she has gone to Whittier, Calif. for a visit with her friend, Miss Lavonne Ballou.

Louie Winkeman, of Wall Lake was renewing acquaintances in town on Monday.

Henry Wenzel is quite ill of quinzy and had his throat lanced at Belmond last Tuesday.

Clifford Manning and family have moved into the Frank Drury tenant house.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rowan, of New Rockford, North Dakota arrived Sunday morning for a visit with the former's mother, Mrs. Georgia Rowan and other relatives. His sister, Mrs. C. W. Fowler will give a six o'clock dinner in their honor on Tuesday.

Miss Ida Ohlerking entertained the members of the "Booster" club, on Wednesday in honor of her father's birthday. Whist was played from two until four o'clock when the guests were invited to the hotel dining room where a bountiful birthday dinner was served. Mr. Ohlerking was presented with several splendid gifts and the friends departed wishing him many happy returns of the day.

Jim Ward shipped a Guernsey calf from Bruce, Wis. to Lem Rowan last week.

Fred Hackley purchased the Mert Myers share in the stock and is again sole owner of the store.

Rowan was a scene of excitement about 11:00 a. m. last Thursday when it was discovered, by some high school pupils who were looking out of the window that the roof of the Mrs. Mary Braden residence was on fire. The fire was soon under control due to the quick work of the high school fire team assisted by the business men and others.

A surprise birthday supper was given in honor of Henry Reitz's 75th birthday at the O. A. Pelly home Monday evening. The August and Bill Reitz families were guests.

Rowan School Notes

On last Tuesday evening the parents and teachers of the Rowan Consolidated School District met and organized the Rowan Parent-Teacher Club. After having several meetings during the year, the organization seemed desirable and a meeting is planned for each month. Supt. R. W. Adamson was elected chairman of the club with Mrs. Arthur Hanson chairman of the program committee; Mrs. W. G. Bingham chairman of the refreshment committee, and G. R. Sheldon secretary-treasurer. The chairman of each committee will appoint helpers each time and the work will be passed around as much as possible. The next meeting will be on February 15. All parents are urged to be present and all others interested are invited to all meetings. The program for the last meeting was planned as a surprise. All classes in high school were held and the parents acted as the pupils choosing the schedule they wished to follow. The classes were in session for ten minutes each and the instructors explained the subjects telling why and how they were taught.

Mr. Swenson and Mr. Adamson attended the Wright County School Masters Club meeting at Eagle Grove last Tuesday evening.

Mr. Bingham was off duty a few days last week with an attack of rheumatism. Duane Bingham took his place as janitor.

Some of the teachers are assisting the American Legion with their play which will be given at the school house in the near future. Mr. Swanson is coaching the play.

Our basket ball teams had another streak of bad luck at Williams last Friday night. Both games were lost, the girls score being 39 to 22 and the boys 19 to 8. The main difficulty seemed to be inability to find the baskets, while the Williams teams were efficient on that score. We do not wish to discredit the strength and good playing of the Williams teams for they played fast, clean games, but we believe the actual floor work of the teams of both schools did not warrant such a difference in scores. The courtesy shown by Williams to the visiting teams was certainly very fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Nels Hansen have rented the hotel and will take immediate possession.

R. Virden treated the school pupils and the public last Wednesday when the motion picture "What Happened To the Jones's," starring Reginald Denny was presented at the theatre. This courtesy was much appreciated.

Cecil Harris was a business caller in Eagle Grove, Wednesday.

Gilbert Rowan is able to enter school again having recovered from his recent illness.

Methodist Church Notes

Morning Worship—11:00 a. m.
Sabbath School—10:00 a. m.
Junior League—2:30 Saturday afternoon.
Prayer Meeting—7:30 Wednesday at the Henry Azeltine home.
Epworth League—6:30 p. m.
Evening Service—7:30 p. m.
Choir Practice—Tuesday evening at the A. C. Rietz home.

Congregational Church Notes

Sabbath School—10:00 a. m.
Junior Endeavor—6:30 p. m.

Rev. C. H. Pillasch, of Parkersburg has been tendered a call from the joint churches of Rowan and Galt.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Elsie Allen with the Mesdames A. E. Emerson and Louis Burt as assistant hostess.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

Alexander School Note

The following 7th and 8th grade pupils have received Palmer penmanship buttons for having completed satisfactorily the first twenty-five drills Rachel Schimp, Elsie Edens, Bob Rodemeyer, Minnie Freerks and Effie Bohman.

Miss Agnes Muhlenbruch, of Latimer visited high school last Monday.

The basket ball team lost both of its games last week, being nosed out at Geneva Tuesday night 17 to 13, and at Swaledale Friday night 26 to 16. In both games the boys did not play up to standard but hope to hit their old stride again when they play Dumont Tuesday night.

Following is the basket ball schedule for the remainder of the season. All are double headers:

Jan. 25—Dumont, here.
Jan. 28—Dows, there.
Feb. 1—Williams, here.
Feb. 4—Open.
Feb. 11—Sheffield, there.
Feb. 15—Rowan, here.
Feb. 18—Wiliams, there.
Feb. 22—Rowan, there.
Feb. 25 and 26—County Tournament at Hampton.
Mar. 3, 4 and 5—Boys' State Tournament at Mason City.

Plan to attend the dual Declamatory contest here with Dows Saturday night. There will be the first and second place winners from each school in each division, making a total of twelve speakers who will compete, which should make it a very good and closely contested program. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents and the contest will begin at 7:30. Let's beat Dows and have everyone out to let the contestants know that we are backing them up.

The next show entitled "Shore Leave" will be given Monday night at 7:30 instead of Saturday night because of the Declamatory contest.

The following people were honor students for the first semester: Seniors—Edith Edens 96, Susie Schulte 92, Letha Bohlen 90. Juniors—Pearl Thompson 92. Sophomores—Willard Latham 91. Wilbur Latham 90. Freshmen—Marie Wenzel 91, Bonnie Barker 90, Mildred Barth 90.

Second grade news: In the study of Holland we have made Dutch windmills, and discussed the country and lives of the Dutch people.

Mrs. Oscar Hensell and Mrs. Harold Smith were visitors Wednesday.

Lavon Ahrens won the prize for having the highest deportment the past six weeks.

The following were neither absent nor tardy the past six weeks: Lavon Ahrens, Raymond Eckhoff, Louise Kerch, Opal Smith, Harold Eckhoff and Carroll Hensell.

The following people had perfect attendance for the semester: High school—Susie Schulte, Letha Bohlen, Edith Edens, Lela Larsen, Ber- 7th and 8th grades—Bob Rodemeyer, Lois Buterbaugh, Evelyn Larsen, Verna Alford, Elsie Edens, Eugene Kelsey, Evanette Klinefelter and Lorene Weisgerber.

The United Church of Alexander
Lewis N. Moody, Pastor

During the eight days commencing next Sunday we shall celebrate the first anniversary of the dedication of our church building. Let us commence this celebration by all attending the service next Sunday morning.

Tuesday evening, Feb. 1 a Sunday School workers' conference will be held. All teachers and officers of the school are especially urged to be present.

The first anniversary of the dedication banquet will be celebrated by a social evening and supper on Wednesday, February 2.

Communion service Sunday morning, February 6. Any who would esteem it a privilege to unite with the Church at that time are invited to communcate with the pastor.

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Gaulke entertained the school faculty and the school board and their wives. A very pleasant evening has been reported.

Fred N. Larsen returned home on Sunday from the hospital at Belmond where he has been the past two weeks, being treated for infection in his hand.

Rev. George Bonte, of Ackley filled the pulpit at the Reform church, Sunday morning and evening. Rev Bonte has spent his boyhood days in our community, and the church people were pleased to have him preach for them Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Keislich and son Elmer and daughter Blanche were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Douglas at Alden on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vern Finkle and daughter, Leon, of Hampton visited at the Nels Larsen home, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Burma, of Ackley have been spending the past week with Mr. and Mrs. Jelto Pals.

Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Frerichs, of Chanchallor, South Dakota, are moving into the Reform parsonage this week. We are pleased to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Frerichs into our midst. He will take charge of the services at the Reform church next Sunday. All are cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Keislich were business callers at Hampton, Monday.

Menno Greenfield is a visitor at the George Peck and Henry Greenfield homes this week.

Mrs. F. D. Gillet, Miss Marjorie Webster and Rev. Moody were Hampton business callers on Saturday.

Mrs. Rudolph Beenen is visiting relatives at Hampton and Des Moines for a couple of weeks.

John Hill and Bonetta Barker were Belmond callers, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Larsen and Albert Larsen were business callers at Belmond, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rank Buss, of Goodell have moved onto the Charlie Longley farm two and one-half miles west of Alexander, the farm where Andrew Lieuwen has lived for several years. Mr. Lieuwen has moved onto his own place, this side of Belmond.

Master Eldon Beu is the new owner of a fine little Shetland pony, purchased of Forrest Gillett. A happy boy is Eldon.

Mrs. P. C. Bohlen is suffering with an attack of the quinsy.

Grace Boelman, of Meservey spent Sunday with her friend, Miss Alma Dorenkamp.

READ THE WANT ADS

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

Julius Ahrenkiel was born at Stobbum, Denmark, November 16, 1862, and died at Goodell, Iowa, January 16, 1927, aged sixty-four years and two months.

Julius had been failing in health for the past year, being troubled with heart trouble. He was about his work all day Saturday and seemed to be feeling better than usual. About midnight he was stricken with a heart attack, and passed away shortly afterward. He leaves two brothers, George, of Goodell, and August, of Denver, Colorado.

Mr. Ahrenkiel came to this country when about sixteen years of age and lived first near Cedar Falls, then farmed seven years near New Hartford, following which he came to Goodell and resided until his death. At Goodell he lived with his brother, John, and after his brother's death continued with the family. For some years he has conducted a grocery store in the same building where he had clerked for a number of years.

Julius was confirmed in the Lutheran church in Denmark, but uni-

(Continued on page seven.)

Kinseth's Store News

This week we are offering a dandy special on Fruits. Everyone likes fruit, and nothing is as good for you as good fruit. Pick your favorite from this list and have a dozen or so sent up.

Oranges, per dozen ---------29c

Grapefruit, each ----------8c

Apples, in baskets --------$1.95

Three cans of corn for 33c—corn that regularly sells for 15c a can.

Diamond Bread, 3 loaves for 25c.

Jello Powder, all flavors, at 9c a package.

18c buys a pound of good lard.

Large package oatmeal, 19c.

Two pounds soda crackers 34c; same for two pounds of graham crackers.

We are carrying a full line of cakes, all flavors and kinds, fresh every day for 10c, 13c, 15c, 25c and 30c.

Two lbs. Macaroni for 23c.

These are just a sample of the bargains to be found in The Store on the Corner. We are always at your service, and we like to have you drop in whether you buy or not, because this is a friendly store.

PUBLIC SALE

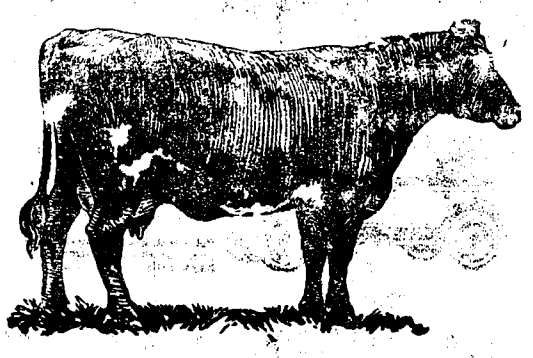
Having rented a farm down by Ottawa, Illinois, we have decided to sell at Public Auction on the farm located 1 1-2 miles west of Goodell; 5 miles north and 1 1-2 miles west of Belmond; 7 miles south and 1 1-2 miles west of Klemme; and 8 miles east of Kanawha, on

Thursday, Feb'y. 3, 1927

COMMENCING AT 1:00 P. M. THE FOLLOWING PROPERTY:

67 Head of Short Horn Cattle 67

ALL ARE T. B. TESTED



18 Head of Milch Cows

Some fresh and others will be soon

1 four-year-old Short Horn Bull, well Bred

9 two-year-old Steers; 10 two-year-old Hiefers; 10 year-and-a-half old Steers; 10 year-and-a-half old Heifers; 9 Calves.

FARM MACHINERY, ETC.

1 John Deere corn elevator
1 McCormick grain binder, nearly new
1 New Idea manure spreader, almost new
1 P & O double row corn plow
1 Janesville corn plow
1 John Deere corn plow
1 Emerson gang plow
1 P & O sulky plow
1 McCormick mower
1 Emerson 10-ft. disc
1 International corn planter, nearly new
1 International endgate seeder
1 Hoosier broadcast seeder
1 hay rake
1 wagon
1 buggy
1 International grinder
1 drag
1 hog waterer
1 hay fork
180-foot hay rope
1 fanning mill

Fordson Tractor and two bottom Oliver plows

in fine running order, newly overhauled.

About 8 tons Timothy Hay in Barn

Free Lunch at Noon

TERMS----CASH: Make arrangements with clerk before date of sale.

ALSVIG BROS., Owners

BRUMMUND & HAUGE
Auctioneers

OWEN F. CONWELL
Clerk

Local News

The Epworth League of the Methodist church held a social in the church parlors Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gartin were visitors, Tuesday, at the Henry Saatoff home in Hampton. Mrs. Saatoff is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gartin.

BARGAINS—Flour, hose, canned goods, coffee, onions, furniture. We deliver. Parsons' Store.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Forristal were guests at the Louis Kessler home, near Clarion, Sunday.

Some good used cars for sale at the Hub Motor Co.

SPECIAL FOR SATURDAY
Bread, 1 lb. loaves, 3 for 20c. Made from Occident flour.
Jelly Sponge Cake with nut meats, 20c.
Sponge Jelly Roll, 15c.
White Layer Cake, made from butter, with nut meats, each 20c.
Angel Food, 20c each.
Cream Puffs, 40c per dozen.
Jelly Bismarck, 30c per dozen.
BARBAN'S BAKERY

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Skovlin, of Mason City spent the week end with Belmond relatives.

A goodly crowd attended the annual Firemen's dance at the opera house last week Tuesday evening and the customary good time was enjoyed

Mr. and Mrs. Martin House have been enjoying a visit from their daughter, from Brainard, Minnesota, the past week.

WANTED!
50 BOYS AND GIRLS BY MONDAY, JANUARY 31
—TO WIN A PRIZE—
SELLING
Green Willow Brand Soap
FIRST PRIZE—$5.00
SECOND PRIZE—$3.00
THIRD PRIZE—$2.00
BESIDES A COMMISSION ON EACH CAN!
Contest Lasts Two Weeks—January 31 to February 14!
FOR FULL PARTICULARS SEE
FRANCIS BROS.
at the Dick Kenefick House, Five Blocks North of Library.

Dr. R. E. Porter
Belmond's Pioneer Chiropractor
Eight Years' Experience
Hundreds of Patients That Have Received Joyous and Tingling Health
Country Calls Answered Day or Night
Over Griesy's Store
Phone 21 :: Belmond, Iowa

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

The Independent's circulation is local. It is read by more people. And that's why its ads bring results.

WANT ADS PAY

FARMER SERVICE!
That's our aim---and we pride ourselves that we give it. Try us if you are not one of our regular customers. Let us grind your next order of Feed.

A car of Oil Meal on track at a very reasonable price is one of our New Year offerings.

We carry a full line of Flour, Feed, Salt and Wire, and buy Grain, Poultry and Hides, at top prices.

Truck service for those who wish it.

Farmers Grain Company
PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!
BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

BAKER STOCK FARM
Big Type Poland China
Spring Gilt Sale
Wednesday, Feb. 9, 1927
At 1:00 O'clock P. M.
In the Heated Foundry Building at Rock Island Yards
BELMOND, - IOWA

This splendid offering is featuring the get of REVENUAL A-26939, Herd Boar, he by Revenue A-379 out of Joker Lady 2nd. Twenty-one first, eleven seconds, four grand championships and three junior championships were won in 1925 at the Fort Dodge, Humboldt, Algona and Britt fairs and exhibitions. You will find the real Big Type in this lot of Gilts. All hogs have been treated and should be immune.

SEND FOR CATALOG!

M. J. Murphy, Mason City, Ia., Auctioneer.
State Bank of Belmond, Clerk.

BAKER STOCK FARM
Max Baker, Proprietor
BELMOND, - IOWA

Year 'Round Income

Autumn is the harvest time for many crops, but the farmer who has good dairy cows harvests a cash income the year 'round.

This creamery provides the market that allows you to harvest the largest cash income.

We want your cream during 1927. We guarantee prompt service and satisfaction.

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

PUBLIC SALE!
THE UNDERSIGNED WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION AT THE LATE LEWIS E. HELLAND FARM, 1 MILE SOUTH AND 3 1-2 MILES EAST OF BELMOND; 3 MILES WEST AND 1 MILE NORTH OF ALEXANDER, ON

Wed., Feb'y., 2, 1927
COMMENCING AT 1:00 P. M. SHARP

9 - Head of Horses - 9
8 Good Work Horses. 1 Colt

34 - Head of Cattle - 34
5 two-year-old STEERS 1 two-year-old HEIFER 14 CALVES
2 two-year-old HEIFERS 8 COWS 3 SMALL CALVES
1 four-year-old HEREFORD BULL

125 - HEAD OF POULTRY - 125

Farm Machinery, Etc.
1 corn sheller
1 Tractor and plow
1 grain binder
1 corn picker
1 two-row corn plow
1 corn planter
1 McCormick mower
1 International drag
1 new wagon box
3 sets of harness, with collars,
Numerous other pieces of agricultural machinery.

TERMS—ALL SUMS OF $10 OR UNDER, CASH. OVER THAT AMOUNT 10 MONTHS TIME ON BANKABLE NOTES BEARING 8 PERCENT INTEREST. ALL PROPERTY TO BE SETTLED FOR ON DAY OF SALE.

Helland Bros., Administrators

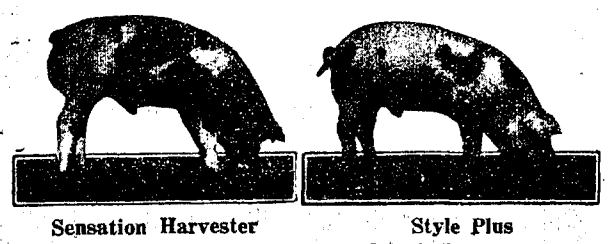
LEWIS HAUGE
Auctioneer

C. O. FITTS
Clerk

JENISON'S
SPOTTED POLAND CHINA SALE
50 BRED SOWS and GILTS 50
Tues., Feb. 8, 1927 At 1:00 P.M.
IN THE HEATED FOUNDRY BUILDING AT ROCK ISLAND YARDS

8 HERD SOWS 25 SPRING GILTS
17 FALL YEARLING SOWS
This Splendid Offering Is Mated To

Auctioneer's Peacock



Sensation Harvester Style Plus
(Pictures of Sensation Harvester and Style Plus were taken when they were pigs.)
SEND FOR CATALOG!

G. LEROY JENISON - - Belmond, Iowa

LYDIA of the Pines

by HONORÉ WILLSIE

W.N.U. SERVICE COPYRIGHT by FREDERICK A. STOKES CO.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With her baby sister, Patience, Lydia returns from play to the untidy home of her impoverished father, Amos Dudley, at Lake City. Her father's friend, and her own devoted admirer, John Levine, after discussing affairs with Dudley, makes up his mind to go into politics.

CHAPTER II.—Lydia, Patience and a companion, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw from the nearby reservation. Lydia gives her food. Margery, small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. In their play Margery falls into the water. She is pulled out, unhurt but frightened, and taken home by Lydia and Kent. Her father calls on Amos to complain, blaming Lydia for the mishap.

CHAPTER III.—Lydia explains the accident and asserts that because Margery is considered "stuck up" she is not a popular playmate. Marshall arranges for Lydia to teach Margery to swim and otherwise become "one of the crowd." Levine tells Amos his plan to take timber from the Indian reservation and ultimately have it opened for settlement. From an older boy, Billy Norton, Lydia gets a pair of wild ducks, and despite their poverty the Dudleys have a Christmas feast.

CHAPTER IV.—Patience succumbs to an attack of diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost and her small world has collapsed. She finds comfort in the loving kindness of John Levine. Lydia learns that a note of Amos', backed by Levine and held by Marshall, is due and cannot be met. The child pleads with Marshall, and for her sake he agrees to renew the note.

CHAPTER V.—Grieving for the loss of little Patience, Lydia's health fails. Levine, understanding the situation, gives her a pup, which the lonely child takes to her heart. Reaching the age of fifteen, Lydia enters high school, where she at once realizes that her homemade frock and general appearance of poverty set her apart from her better-dressed companions. She attends a party given by her teacher, Miss Towne. The other girls, smartly dressed, make fun of her makeshift costume.

CHAPTER VI.—Levine is elected sheriff. A sixteen-year-old Indian boy, Charlie Jackson, tells Lydia of numerous wrongs done his people, mainly by Marshall and Levine. Lydia defends her friend vigorously. Meeting Levine in Lydia's house, Charlie Jackson threatens and endeavors to attack him.

CHAPTER VII.—Levine is shot by an unseen assassin. Recuperating at the Dudley cottage, he learns the real extent of Lydia's loneliness and her shaken faith in God. The man and girl enter into a compact to start a "search for God" together. Levine, recovered, begins his campaign for congress.

CHAPTER VIII.—Lydia is unable to drive the hatred of Levine from Charlie's heart, and despite herself her faith in her old friend is shaken by the young Indian's stories. Levine has long realized that despite their disparity in age he is passionately in love with the young girl.

CHAPTER IX.—Levine is triumphant in his campaign for congress. Lydia earns enough money selling fudge to go camping with Charlie, Kent, Margery and two school friends, Gustus Bach and a girl named Olga. Miss Towne chaperons them.

CHAPTER X.—Walking with Kent in the woods, Lydia witnesses a meeting of Levine and some halfbreeds. Their conversation convinces Lydia that Charlie has been right in accusing Levine of plotting to rob the Indians.

CHAPTER XI.—A visit from the old squaw whom Lydia had befriended long ago causes Charlie to tell more of Marshall's and Levine's thievery. Lydia promises to talk to Levine. Billy Norton makes a boyish proposal of marriage to Lydia, who repulses him. In her talk with Levine the man avers his methods are lawful and really best for the Indians. The girl is only half convinced.

CHAPTER XII.—Charlie tells Lydia his father was killed by halfbreeds at the instigation of Levine, and she is miserable at the thought. The family poverty also weighs heavily on her. She is elected class valedictorian. Billy Norton takes her to the senior ball, where she has her first girlish "wonderful time."

CHAPTER XIII.—Congress passes Levine's bill for the opening of the reservation. At the celebration of the event the Indians, led by Charlie, make a disturbance. Billy Norton saves Lydia from harm. Amos arranges to get 120 acres of the reservation, through Levine. Billy tells Lydia he is going to expose Marshall's crooked deals.

CHAPTER XIV.—A congressional commission comes to Lake City to investigate Indian matters, and evidence involving most of the town's prominent citizens is produced.

CHAPTER XV.—Before the commission Charlie Jackson accuses Levine of complicity in the murder of his father. Lydia warmly defends Levine. Dave Marshall is exposed as the owner of the "Last Chance," a brothel which was also headquarters for the illegal selling of whisky to Indians.

CHAPTER XVI.—Kent asks Lydia to marry him. The girl refuses. To ob*tain a suitable frock for the "junior* prom" Lydia overworks and goes through a severe siege of pneumonia.

CHAPTER XVII.—After the removal of the Indians to another reservation Levine is shot by Charlie Jackson's sister and the old squaw Lydia had befriended. Levine dies in Lydia's arms. His "search" is ended. All his property is left to the girl. She refuses to accept the Indian lands.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Levine's estate is found to consist practically of 320 acres of land of the Indian reservation. Lydia finally agrees to accept this property, overcome by the importunities of her father and Kent.

CHAPTER XIX.—Billy succeeds in convincing Lydia that her heart really has always belonged to him. She announces her determination to homestead her Indian land, finally winning her father over to her view. Lydia is elected a member of the "Scholars' club," the highest honor the school can bestow, but she is prouder of Billy's love and the knowledge that in homesteading her land she is in a measure making up for the dubious methods by which Levine had obtained it.

Kent looked into the clear tender blue of Lydia's eyes. Then he said softly, "All right, dear! You know best. But will you give me just one kiss—for remembrance?"

"Yes," replied Lydia, lifting her face, and Kent pulled off his cap and kissed the warm, girlish lips, tenderly, lingeringly, then, without a word, gently turned Lydia homeward.

Kent's announcement that he had broken with Billy Norton did not amount to a great deal. As winter came on, he and Billy met constantly at the cottage and, outwardly at least, were friendly. The commission finished its sitting and turned its findings over to congress. Congress instructed the district attorney to carry the matter to the state courts. When this had been done all the incriminated heaved a vast sigh of relief, and prepared to mark time.

During all Lydia's junior year, but one fly appeared in her ointment. And this, of course, was with reference to clothes! that perennial haunting problem of Lydia's, which only a woman who has been motherless and poverty-stricken can fully appreciate. The latter part of February, the great college social event of the year was to come, the junior prom. Lydia felt sure that either Kent or Billy would ask her to go and for this the organdie would not do. And for this she must have a party coat.

Lydia knew if she took the matter up with Amos he would go out and borrow money for her. She shuddered at the thought of this. Then she heard of the "College Money-Making Bureau." She discovered that there were girls who were earning their way through college and that the bureau was one of the quiet ways used by the university to help them.

There was the mending department for example. Here were brought every week by the well-to-do students piles of mending of every variety from heelless socks and stockings, to threadbare underwear and frayed cuffs and collars. These were made into packages and farmed out to the money-needing girls.

Early in January, Lydia sneaked into the little room and out again with a neat but heavy bundle. She got home with it and smuggled it into her room without old Lizzie's seeing it. Socks, wristbands and torn lace—there was fifty cents' worth of mending in the package! Lydia calculated that if she did a package a night for thirty nights, she would have enough money to buy the making of the party dress and cloak.

The necessity for secrecy was what made the task arduous. Lydia finished her studying as hurriedly as possible each night and went off to her room. It was bitter cold in the room when the door was closed, but she hung a dust cloth over the keyhole, a shawl over the window shade, wrapped herself in a quilt and unwrapped the bundle. By two o'clock she had finished and shivering and with aching eyes, crept into bed.

Within a week she was going about her daily work with hollow eyes and without the usual glow in her cheeks, but she hung on with determination worthy of a better cause.

The third week she took cold, an almost unheard-of proceeding for Lydia, and in spite of all old Lizzie's decoctions, she could not throw it off. At the end of the fourth week she carried back her last bundle, and with fifteen dollars in her pocketbook, she boarded the street car for home. She was trembling with fatigue and fever.

When she reached the cottage, she stretched out on the couch behind the old base burner with her sense of satisfaction dulled by her hard cough and the feverish taste in her mouth. She was half asleep, half in a stupor when Billy came in.

"How's the cold, Lyd?" he asked.

"Socks," whispered Lydia, "bushels of socks, aren't there, Billy?"

Billy picked up her hand and felt her pulse, pulled the shawl up over her chest, put his cheek down against her forehead for a moment as he murmured, "Oh, Lydia, don't be sick! I couldn't bear it!" then he hurried to the kitchen where Lizzie was getting supper.

The next thing that Lydia knew she was in her own bed and "Doc" Fulton was taking the clinical thermometer from her mouth. She was very much confused.

"Where's my fifteen dollars?" she asked.

"What fifteen dollars, little daughter?" Amos was sitting on the edge of the bed, holding her hand.

"For my party dress—white mull—with socks—please, daddy."

Amos looked at Lizzie. "It's what she wanted for the junior prom, I guess," said the old lady, "poor child."

"You shall have fifteen dollars, just as soon as you get well, honey," said Amos.

"All right," said Lydia, hoarsely, "tell Kent so's he—" She trailed off again into stupor.

It was a hard pull, a sharp, hard struggle with badly congested lungs, for two weeks. Ma Norton took charge and "Doc" Fulton was there night after night. Margery came every day, with a basket, for Elviry practically fed Amos during the two weeks. Billy did chores. Kent was errand boy with the little car. And Adam sat on the doorstep for hours and howled!

But Lydia was splendidly strong. One night, after ten days of stupor and delirium, she opened her eyes on Amos' haggard face. She spoke weak-

"In a Day or So I'll Be Up and Around."

ly but naturally. "Hello, dad! Ask Margery to get me the pattern we were talking about. In a day or so I'll be up and around."

Amos began to cry for sheer joy.

Once she began to mend, Lydia's recovery was unbelievably rapid. On a Sunday, a week before the junior prom, she was able to dress and to lie on the living-room couch. During the afternoon, Kent came in.

"Hello, Lyd!" he cried. "Are you going to go to the junior prom with me, after all?"

"Kent, I can't go. I might be strong enough for one or two dances by that time, but I can't get my clothes done."

"Pshaw, isn't that hard luck! Kent's voice was soft with sympathy. "Never mind, old lady! I'm so darned glad to have you getting well so fast, that the prom doesn't matter. Say, Lyd, Margery's come out fine, since you've been sick! Er—Lydia, don't you think she'd go to the prom with me? Seems to me she's cut out society as long as she needs to."

"I think she ought to go if she wants to," Lydia said.

"Guess I'll ask her now," cried Kent, disappearing kitchenward.

Lydia lay watching snowflakes sift softly past the window. It was not long before Margery and Kent appeared.

"She's going!" cried Kent.

Margery's beautiful eyes were glowing. "Yes, I'm going, Lyd! And if nobody else will dance with me, Kent will take all the dances."

Lydia smiled at Kent.

Billy was the next caller. "I left dad and Amos saving the nation through free trade," he said. "Gee, Lydia, but you do look better! You don't suppose you could possibly go to the prom, just for one or two dances, do you?"

Lydia shook her head. "No clothes," she said, briefly. "Ask some other girl."

"There isn't any other girl," replied Billy. "If I can't go with you, I'll be hanged if I go at all! Lydia, I don't see why a sensible girl like you lays such stress on clothes. Honestly, it's not like you. Come on, be a sport and go in your usual dress, or let me lend you the money to get a complete party outfit with."

"Billy Norton, you know I wouldn't borrow money from a man!" exclaimed Lydia. "Besides, I've got enough money I earned myself!"

Lydia dug the little pocketbook from under the sofa pillow and spread the money proudly on her shawl. "There it is and it's the root of all my troubles."

Billy looked at her suspiciously. "Young woman, how'd you earn that money?" he demanded.

"Socks! Bushels of socks, mostly," answered Lydia with a chuckle that ended in a groan. She looked at Billy whimsically and then as the sureness of his understanding came to her again, she told him the story of her little midnight sweatshop.

It seemed for a moment as if he must gather the slight little figure to his heart, but he set his teeth.

"If that darned prom means as much as that to you—" he began, but Lydia interrupted him.

"It doesn't any more, Billy. I've learned a lot of things since I've been sick. I was a little idiot to work so hard for clothes! But I don't think it was all clothes. I wanted to be like other girls. I wanted to have the man that took me proud of my appearance."

The two young people sat in silence, Lydia watching the snowflakes settle on the already overladen boughs of the pine, Billy watching the sensitive lines in Lydia's face change with each passing thought.

"Billy," she said, "what would you say if next year I took the short course in agriculture?"

"I'd be speechless!" he exclaimed.

"I hate to think of teaching," Lydia went on, "and I'm crazy about the country and farming and so is dad. And there's more than that to it."

What more there was to it, she did not say then, for Ma Norton came bustling in.

CHAPTER XVII

The End of a Great Search

Lydia returned to her college work the Monday after the junior prom, a little thinner, and her color not quite so bright as usual, but in a most cheerful frame of mind. She was feeling, somehow, a new sense of maturity and contentment.

Kent was devoting a good deal of attention to Lydia but this did not prevent his taking Margery about. He was, he explained to Lydia, so sorry for her!

"You don't have to explain to me," protested Lydia. "I want you to go with all the girls you like. I intend to see all I want of as many men as care to see me. I told you this was my playtime."

Kent's reply to this was a non-committal grunt.

It was late in May that he told Lydia what John Levine had finally accomplished, in his silent months of work in Washington. The Indians on the reservation were to be removed bodily to a reservation in the Southwest. The reservation was then to be thrown open to white settlement.

"What will poor Charlie Jackson say?" were Lydia's first words.

Kent shrugged his shoulders. "Poor old scout! He'll have to make a new start in the West. But isn't it glorious news, Lyd! The land reverts to the government and the land office opens it, just as in pioneer days. Everybody who's title's in question now can re-enter under settlement laws. Isn't Levine a wizard! Why don't you say something, Lydia?"

"I don't know what to say," said Lydia. "I'm sick at heart for the Indians. But I'm glad that the awful temptation of the pines is going to be taken away from Lake City. Though how good can come out of a wrong, I'm not sure. When will Mr. Levine come home?"

"Next month."

On a Sunday afternoon, late in June, John Levine turned in at the gate as casually as though he had left but the day before. Lydia was inspecting the garden with her father, when she heard Adam bark and whine a welcome to some one.

"Oh, there he is, daddy!" she cried, and she dashed down the rows of young peas, her white skirts fluttering, both hands extended.

John seized her hands and for a moment the two stood smiling and looking into each other's face. Except that he was grayer, Levine was unchanged. He broke the silence to say, "Well! Well! young Lydia, you are grown up."

"It's my hair," said Lydia, "and my skirts."

The two men clasped hands. "Well, Amos?"

"It's been a long time between drinks, John."

"I know it, Amos, but my chore's done. Now, I'll stay home and enjoy life. Lydia, is it too hot for waffles and coffee, for supper?"

"It's not too hot for anything on earth you can ask for," returned Lydia, beginning to roll up her sleeves. "I'll go right in and start them now."

It was an extraordinarily pleasant supper. After the dishes were washed, Levine asked Lydia to stroll up the road with him while Amos did his evening chores. It was dusk when they turned out the gate to the road, Lydia clinging to John's arm.

John put a long, hard hand over the small thin one on his arm. "Have you missed me, young Lydia?" he asked.

"Yes," she answered, "especially as you never came near us after the hearing."

"How could I come?" asked the man, simply. "You had weighed me and found me wanting. Have you forgiven me, Lydia?"

"It wasn't a matter between you and me," replied the girl, slowly. "It was between you and your conscience and if your conscience approves, what's the use of asking me to forgive you?"

"Because, I can't stand not having your approval," said Levine.

They strolled on in silence, while Lydia considered her reply. "No matter if the destroying of the Indians were right, that wouldn't exonerate the whites for having been cruel and crooked in doing it. People will always remember it of us."

John sighed, then said abruptly, "Let's never discuss it again. What are you reading now, Lydia?"

"English essayists and Emerson. I'm crazy about Emerson. I learned one thing from—Friendship to quote to you. It's like you and me."

She quoted: "'Friendship—that select and sacred relationship that is a kind of absolute and which even leaves the language of love suspicious and common so much is this purer; and nothing is so much divine.'"

John stopped and taking Lydia's face in both his hands, he exclaimed huskily, "Oh, my dear, this is my real welcome home! Oh, Lydia, Lydia, if you were ten years older and I were ten years younger—"

Lydia laughed. "Then we'd travel—to all the happy places of the world. We must turn back. Daddy'll be waiting."

Levine was very busy with the details of the Indian removal for the next week or two. The exodus was accomplished in a businesslike manner. There were some disturbances on the reservation, but for the most part, the Indians were dazed and unprotesting. Before the concentration began, the precaution was taken of sending Charlie Jackson under guard to the new reservation in the Southwest. Lydia had never seen him after her day at the hearing. She always was to carry in her memory, his handsome bronze face, too early marked with lines of despair, as she saw it while she uttered her protest to the commissioners. And it was a hauntingly sad memory to carry.

In the evening Lydia sat with her Emerson open before her, but with her unseeing eyes fastened on the open door. It was a little after nine when the chug-chug of Kent's car stopped at the gate and in a moment Kent, white faced, appeared in the door.

"John Levine's been shot. He wants Lydia!"

Without a sound Lydia started after Kent down the path, Amos following.

Started Back Toward Town at Breakneck Speed.

Kent packed them into the little car and started back toward town at break-neck speed.

"How bad off is he?" asked Amos.

"Can't live," answered Kent. "That d—d sister of Charlie Jackson and old Susie both took a shot at him, just as the last carload was finished. The police and the militia got 'em right off. Shot 'em all to pieces."

"Where is John?" asked Amos.

"In Doc Fulton's office. They can't move him."

No one spoke again. Kent brought the automobile up with a bang before the doctor's house and Lydia, followed closely by the two men, ran up to the door, through the outer office to the inner, where a nurse and Doc Fulton stood beside a cot.

Levine lay with his face turned toward the door. When he saw Lydia he smiled faintly. She was quite calm, except for her trembling. She walked quickly to his side and took his hand.

"Looks like I was going to start traveling alone, young Lydia," he said feebly. "I just wanted to tell you—that Great Search—is ending all right—don't worry—"

"I won't," said Lydia.

"Only I hate to go alone—my mother—gimme something, doc."

The doctor held a glass to his lips. After a moment, Levine said again, "My mother used to hold me—" his voice trailed off and Lydia said suddenly:

"You mean you want me to comfort you like I used to comfort little Patience?"

"Yes! Yes!" whispered Levine. "It's going to sleep alone I— Mother—"

Lydia knelt and sliding her arm under Levine's neck, she pulled his head over gently to rest on her shoulder. Then she began with infinite softness the little song she had not uttered for so many years.

I've reached the land of corn and wine
And all its riches surely mine.
I've reached that heaveuly, shining shore
My heaven, my home, for evermore.

Suddenly the nurse shifted John's head and Doc Fulton lifted Lydia to her feet. "Take her home, Amos," he said.

John Levine had finished the Great Search.

* * * * * * *

Curiously enough, nothing could have done so much toward reinstating Lake City in the good opinion of the country at large as did Levine's tragic death. There was felt to be a divine justice in the manner of his taking off that partook largely of the nature of atonement. He had led the whites in the despoiling of the Indians. For this the Indians had killed him.

That a white life extinguished for a tribe destroyed might not be full compensation in the eyes of that Larger Justice which, after all, rules the universe, did not seriously influence the reaction of public opinion toward thinking better of Lake City. And John Levine, known in life as an Indian graft politician, became in his death a statesman of far vision.

After her first wild grief had expended itself, Lydia found that, after all, Levine's tragic death had not surprised her. She realized that ever since she had known Charlie Jackson, she had been vaguely haunted by a fear of just such an ending.

(Continued Next Week)

GOODELL NEWS

Continued from page 5

ted with the U. B. church at Goodell in 1915. He was a faithful member, always present at the services of the church unless prevented by very good reasons. He was a liberal supporter of the church and its organizations.

In the community he was a friend to all. He will be greatly missed in the community and church. Funeral services were held Tuesday at 2:00 p. m. at the church, conducted by the pastor, F. C. Scott. Mrs. Sneary, Mrs. McNutt, Harry Newgard and Monroe Graeber sang three beautiful quartets. Messrs. E. P. Hubbard, W. Mason, L. Wesenberg, W. Lamer, W. Thada and O. Sandberg were pall-bearers. Interment was made in the Amsterdam cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Koffman, of Iowa Falls were out of town people to attend the funeral. August Ahrenkiel of Denver was unable to come, due to his wife being quite ill.

Mrs. J. E. Savogue went to Sheldon for a ten-day's visit with her sister, Mrs. Ida Eldred. She will also visit her sister, Mrs. Eva McElfree, who resides at Hinton.

Reynold Kinseth Jr., of Belmond spent the fore part of last week here with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lew Avery.

A. M. Graeber went to Belmond on Thursday and will work for some time in the Goelz barber shop. Mr. Goelz has his hand hurt and is unable to work.

Lee Robbins had the misfortune to fall from a tree on Wednesday of last week, while cutting wood at the George Mikesh farm. He struck his head, cutting a deep gash.

Descom Bishop went to Belmond Monday to spend a couple of weeks at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bishop.

The declamatory contest was given at the U. B. church on Monday and Tuesday. Fifteen pupils gave readings. The oratorical and humorous divisions were given on Monday evening and the dramatic on Tuesday evening. The winners will be announced in the next issue.

The Al Mayhew family moved the fore part of the week to the Frank Clark farm.

Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel and daughter went to Belmond Friday and visited until Monday with the former's brother, Will Nelson.

Mrs. Ben Vierkant Sr. of Meservey is spending a few weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. L. Bishop.

A number of the Twin Lake and Avery farm bureau men met at the E. J. Schneider home Thursday afternoon and with the assistance of County Agent Nutty, and Mr. Walters, of Britt, and Mr. Boltman, of Ames, tested samples of the different soils in this surrounding vicinity. An interesting and profitable time was spent.

A feed grinder demonstration and lecture was given in the opera house Monday afternoon. Hackerson & Pandei, hardware men of Kanawha; C. Wendel, of Meservey; and Lew Wesenberg, of this place, had charge of it.

Miss Avis Wilson, who has been seriously ill is improving slowly at this writing.

Gus Okreug shipped four car loads of cattle to Chicago Saturday night.

The Frank Quigley family, Lewis Rierson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Avery went to Belmond Wednesday to attend the funeral of B. K. Kinseth.

Mr. and Mrs. William Voiles, of Belmond Sundayed at the Charlie Longley home.

Father Malloy, of Belmond was entertained Sunday at the Houghton home.

George O. Nelson, accompanied by Misses Grace Littchwager and Evelyn Thomas were entertained Sunday at the latter's home in Meservey.

The Harm Vierkant family, of near Rockwell spent Sunday with relatives here.

Mrs. Francis Quigley Jr. and son, Paul are spending this week at Belmond with the former's mother, Mrs. B. Kinseth.

Mrs. Joss Thorson and daughter, Grace, who were called home by the illness of Mrs. Thorson's sister, Miss Avis Wilson, returned on Tuesday to their home at Burt.

Mrs. Harve Christenson and daughter Iris spent Thursday at Thompson with her father, Mr. Wigfield.

Mrs. Ed Hughes, of Belmond spent Friday with her mother, Mrs. White.

Messrs. Francis and Tom Quigley accompanied by their uncle, Tom Gaffney, of Ireland, autoed to Corwith Sunday to spend the day with the latter's sister.

While Reginald Houghton was in town Saturday evening twenty White Leghorn roosters and about $16 worth of spreaders from his harness were stolen.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Clark and Richard, of Garner, Sundayed with her sister, Mrs. W. F. Beier.

Mrs. Harve Christenson is ill at the Hampton hospital.

Tom Burgess has been on the sick list the past two weeks. He has been going to Hampton to receive treatment at the hospital.

Frank Quigley, who is doing section foreman work at Estherville came home Saturday and visited until Monday morning with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sherman, of Torrington, Wyoming; Mrs. A. D. White and Mayme spent Wednesday at Klemme at the Allie White home and Sunday at Belmond at the Ed. Hughes home.

Semester examinations were given on Thursday and Friday of last week. A few students in each room found it paid to study hard, attend regularly and have a good grade in conduct as they were excused from taking the test.

Don't forget the apron and food sale that will be given by the U. B. Aid, Saturday, February 12. Aprons from non-members will be appreciated.

LOCALS

The American Legion is planning a dance at the opera house for the evening of February 8.

Ona Barton and Mildred Nelson spent the week end at the home of the latter's parents, at Kanawha.

Mr. Graeber, of Goodell, has been assisting in the Goelz barber shop the past week or so, during the illness of Mr. Goelz, who has been suffering from a skin infection on his hands.

Severt Enger, who has been quite ill the past week or so, is able to be around again.

Mr. and Mrs. Orick Rhoads, of Goodell spent Sunday with friends and relatives in Belmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Burdette Bell, of Clarion, are the parents of a baby boy, born last week Friday, January 21. Mrs. Bell was formerly Miss Lois Reed, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Reed.

The Belmond Shipping Association sold three cars of hogs Monday at $11.65.

Mrs. Van Buskirk left Tuesday morning for Mason City, with her son, Virgil, where the latter will have an operation on his head.

Anyone having cattle for sale, call Petersen Market. Phone 60. 113c

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Williams went to Sibley last week to attend the funeral of an aunt of Mr. Williams.

Miss Harriet Martin visited friends in Mason City a few days last week.

Some good used cars for sale at the Hub Motor Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dittmer left last week for Fort Dodge, where they will make their home. Mr. Dittmer has a position in the cement plant at that place.

Miss Mildred Veeder, who teaches at Clarion, spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Louise Veeder.

Mrs. W. H. Cassels and son. Herbert, returned Sunday to their home at Tagus, North Dakota, after a months' visit at the home of Mrs. Cassels' parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Rankins

The Volberding Farm Home Hatchery, of Latimer, Iowa, is now booking orders for High Quality Chicks of all popular breeds. Send for special prices on early orders. Phone 8816. 102*

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Lundberg, who are now living at Omaha, Nebraska, are the parents of a baby boy, Conrad Alfred, born December 27.

Miss Magdalene Johnson left the first of the week for Oelwein, where she will teach kindergarten for the remainder of the school year.

SPECIAL FOR SATURDAY

Bread, 1 lb. loaves, 3 for 20c. Made from Occident flour.
Jelly Sponge Cake with nut meats, 20c.
Sponge Jelly Roll, 15c.
White Layer Cake, made from butter, with nut meats, each 20c.
Angel Food, 20c each.
Cream Puffs, 40c per dozen.
Jelly Bismarck, 30c per dozen.

BARBAN'S BAKERY

Britt News-Tribune: We were advised to send Mrs. J. R. Stebleton's News-Tribune to Belmond this week where she will be for a visit with relatives, after which she will go to Des Moines to take up her new duties as matron of the capitol building. Her address at Des Moines will be 2702 Cottage Grove Ave.

MARRIED

On Wednesday afternoon, January 26, occurred the wedding of Miss Mary Riekens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Riekens, and Porter Faulhaber, son of Mrs. Bertha Faulhaber, at the Immanuel Reformed parsonage, Rev. O. G. Poppen officiating.

The bride and groom were attended by Miss Leona Collinson, of Clear Lake and Henry Riekens, brother of the bride.

The bride wore a lovely dress of pencil blue satin faced Canton crepe and the groom a suit of powder blue. The bridesmaid wore a dress of Liberty blue georgette, and the best man wore a blue pin stripe suit.

After the ceremony the wedding party went to the home of the groom's mother, where a delicious wedding dinner was served.

The happy couple will be at home two miles north of Belmond after February 1.

Sheriff Johnson was in town on Tuesday looking after some legal affairs for the county.

BARGAINS—Flour, hose, canned goods, coffee, onions, furniture. We deliver. Parsons' Store.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

FERTILIZERS

We are handling the right kind of FERTILIZERS for Alkali or Sour Soils; Peats or Mucks; and general farm lands. Sold by—
Farmers Grain Co., Belmond, Iowa
Farmers Elevator Co., Olaf, Iowa

NOTICE!

The Trustees of Pleasant township will meet at the Greenlander Lumber Co. office February 7th at 2:00 p. m. for the purpose of hiring a road superintendent, and letting the King dragging for the year 1927.

O. D. JENISON,
112 Township Clerk.

Father Molloy was called to Waterloo the first of the week by the serious illness of a brother.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

Good, modern home for sale, near Trinity church. Inquire at Independent. 113

FOR SALE—Northwestern Greening apples, $1.50 a bushel. Inquire of M. Halfwassen. 112c

FOR SALE—Good home-grown Early Ohio potatoes. While they last. Call 371. 112*

FOR SALE—My farm, 4 miles southwest of Belmond. For price and terms, inquire at State Bank of Belmond.—Aug. Hunst. 94*

FOR SALE—One Successful No. 5 incubator, and one Cloverleaf 300-egg incubator, in good condition. Phone 175. 112c

FOR SALE—Buick Coach, 1925 model, in good condition. Phone 206. 112c

FOR SALE—White Rock Baby Chicks, from my bred-to-lay, well-culled flock. $12.00 per 100. Also other breeds at different prices. Will do custom hatching. Mrs. Harold Smith, Alexander, Iowa. 112

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	20c
Springs	20c
Roosters	10c
Ducks	18c
Geese	15c
Eggs	25c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	53c
Oats	40c
Corn, No. 3 yellow	58c
Barley	56c

ATWATER KENT RADIO

Some people have been misled into believing that Atwater Kent Radios consume more battery current than the average.

This is not true!

Atwater Kent Radios consume less current than the average!

We have accurate meters that will tell you the actual A and B battery consumption of any radio.

It's the old story—
"Figures do not lie,
but liars do figure."

Call and see our radio display.

BELMOND STORAGE BATTERY CO.

Phone 46 Official 2417

JUST A FEW WORDS

To remind you to get your Orders in for

FRESH BAKED GOODS
Before 9:00 O'clock Each Morning!

DOUGHNUTS!
Fresh Every Morning—the kind that leave an impression.

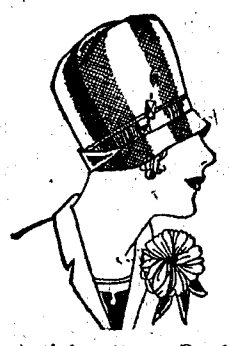
ORDERS TAKEN
For your Luncheon at Clubs, Lodges or other gatherings

We also sell Fresh Roasted Peanuts, Nut Meats, Home-made Divinity Fudge, Peanut Brittle, Candy Bars and Gum.

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

New Spring Hats



Arriving Every Day!
HEMSTITCHING DONE
New Spring Embroidery Packages

The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Opera House

THURSDAY, JANUARY 27
"Love's Bargain"
with Marjorie Daw and Clive Brooks, tells a fascinating, unusual story of a young and beautiful girl who marries in gratitude to repent when the right man came along! Here is a picture jam-packed with drama, alive with romance, scintillating with interest! It's unusual to the last degree and entertaining every second of the time!
Prices 10c and 20c
2 COMEDIES
"Horse Play"
"Robinson Crusoe"
Prices 10c and 20c

FRIDAY and SATURDAY
JANUARY 28 and 29
"THE OVERLAND LIMITED"
with Alice Lake, Malcolm McGregor, and Ralph Lewis. Fastest and most exciting railroad drama ever filmed. A mile-a-minute thriller with a punch in every scene.
2 COMEDIES
Felix in "The Globe Trotter"
Mermaid Comedy—
"Going Great"
Prices 10c and 25c

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Thursday - Friday - Saturday
January 27-28-29

Hamburger per pound..... 15c
Balogna per pound..... 15c
Liver Sausage per pound..... 15c

We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Why Pay More?

When you can buy your staple groceries here at our new Cash Saving Prices and buy for less? We have marked down our groceries under our Cash Sales system and offer you real money-savers. Just as a sample of the many bargains we are selling

	Each
CORN, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PEAS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
TOMATOES, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
KRAUT, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
HOMINY, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PORK & BEANS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, January 27, 1927. No. 42

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

You can generally tell a married man by the number of hands he uses on the steering wheel. We know a man in this town who never laces his shoes clear up to the top. He always ties the bow about half way down.

—

Sure you can motor to Mason City or any other city and buy goods. But when it comes to lumber you won't find it cheaper there — if as cheap. And gasoline and oil cost money.

—

Just about every "profit - sharing" plan we ever got into turned out to be a "profit-shearing" plan, so far as we were concerned.

—

Any scientist will tell you that the container must be larger than the thing contained But how about a small boy's pocket?

—

Said the shoe to the stocking,
"I'll wear a hole in you;"
Said the stocking to the shoe,
"I'll be darned if you do."

—

"Have you anything to say before the trap is sprung?"
"No, suh, boss, only jest this. This sho' is goin' to be a lesson to me!"

—

For the housewife, nothing better than a nice step ladder to do her spring house cleaning or any other odd jobs that are too high to reach without one. Only $2.50.

—

Lincoln's birthday, then Washington's, then the income tax!

Baby Chicks Announcement

The Hillandale Stock Farm Announces

The Opening of their Hatchery, February 1, 1927
WHITE PLYMOUTH ROCKS IOWA RECORD FLOCK
Iowa Accredited—Blood Tested—FISHEL Strain
We have been breeding up our flock for eight years, and intend to give our customers satisfaction.

We Sell BABY CHICKS from Our Own Flock!

Our Jamesway Mammoth Junior Incubator is now installed, and we are ready for your orders. Place your orders early and be assured of getting your chicks when you want them.

WE WILL DO SOME CUSTOM HATCHING

MRS. IRA L. CHRISTIE
Phone 3318 R. F. D. No. 1 Belmond, Iowa

WALL PAPER

If you have been thinking of sending for your Wall Paper, "Try the Drug Store First." We trim your paper for you and take back all full rolls. No parcel post or express charges. There is satisfaction in buying your paper where you can see it in the roll. It gives you a better idea of how it will look on the wall.

We have a number of room lots that we are selling at a big discount.

CLOSING OUT OATMEALS!

We are closing out the best grade of oatmeal papers, 30-inch wide, 3 single rolls to the bolt.....48c a bolt

We must have room for our new papers and we are selling last year's papers at a big discount.

10c A Roll and Up

Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

FINAL DEPENDABLE

This Is Your Bank

Use it. When you need financial assistance, advice on financial matters, when you have a lease to make out or a deal to put through, use your bank. Our officials are here for your service at any time. Their experience will be of help to you, and their services are gratis.

The State Bank of Belmond aims to be a friendly Bank. It wants to help you—and it will help you if you will let it. Any time, any thing, you will find this Bank ready and willing. It is your bank—use it.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND IOWA

Rathbun Mrs J E 11-27

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1927 | NO. 12

SCHOOL TO GIVE OPERETTA TONIGHT

"The Maid of the Golden Slipper" To Be Presented This Evening At Auditorium.

BY JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL

Thursday evening of this week the Operetta, "The Maid of the Golden Slipper," will be given in the High School Auditorium. The play is being put on by the members of the Junior High. Miss Waugh has been conducting the rehearsals and has reported that they have gone off smoothly. Since the first part of December the young folks have been diligently practicing and the presentation should be one of the best witnessed by Belmond for some time. In the afternoon a matinee will be given. The admission will be twenty-five cents for adults and fifteen cents for school pupils.

The cast is as follows:

Godmother ---------- Aileen Gibbs
Cupid ---------- Meryl Pfaltzgraff
Cinderella ---------- Marian Luick
Belinda ---------- Alice Nissen
Henrietta ---------- Lois Trafford
Stepmother -- Hildegarde Thormann
Prince ---------- Loran Hadley
Lords and Ladies:

Ethel McMannus, Alice McMannus, Freda Peterson, Lola Berghefer, Lorena Ersland, Marview Hanson, Elizabeth Blake, Arthur Dorr, Lyle Scheller, Harold McGuire, Peter Steenblock, Duan Packard, Edward McNulty, Herman Dorenkamp, Junior Goelz, Kenneth Galloway.

STORY:

The story of "The Maid of the Golden Slipper" is taken from the well known fairy tale, "Cinderella." The fairies are singing of joy in service and the Godmother tells them of the sad lot of Cinderella who has a wicked stepmother and two jealous stepsisters.

They all want to help her, and the Godmother tells them of the ball which is to be given by the Prince and how with their aid and that of Cupid she intends to let Cinderella attend.

Cinderella helps prepare her stepsisters for the ball and she is left alone in the kitchen.

The Godmother appears and magically changes Cinderella's rags to a beautiful gown of yellow and gives her golden slippers, but with the warning to leave the ball before the clock strikes twelve.

At the ball the Prince under the spell of Cupid, falls in love with Cinderella who escapes just as the clock strikes. In her haste she drops one slipper. After a long search, the Prince finds her and all ends well.

Junior High School Notes

Who is this mysterious maid in yellow? Who are the wicked stepsisters? You will find out Thursday night at 8:00 o'clock in the High School Auditorium where the Junior High Operetta "The Maid and the Golden Slipper" will be presented.

Mr. Hall's eighth manual training classes are making match holders.

All Junior High language classes are working on debate. It is very interesting work and some very good speeches have been prepared. A final debate will be held between the seventh and eighth grades in the near future.

The eighth grade held a class meeting last week to plan for a party.

Eighth grade arithmetic drill books have been ordered.

Mary Elizabeth Blake is the Junior High reporter for this six weeks.

Miss Sowerwine's eighth art classes are painting very attractive enameled articles. The three main aims of any art course are:

1. To increase skill and to maintain freedom in the use of drawing as a language.

2. To acquaint children with one fundamental means of securing harmonious color.

3. To give opportunity for originality and inventiveness.

In our public school art work, we strive to meet the needs of the nation not only for creative artists but for finer tastes in citizens. We hope to shape the tastes and develop the power of observation and appreciation in all of our students. All our life we have to make selections, and we aim to set up standards which will act as guides in choices involving color design and appropriateness. By giving our young people a creative interest in order, we hope to make them dissatisfied with chaos and discord.

A practice debate was held last Thursday afternoon with the Eagle Grove high school debating team. Belmond's affirmative team, consisting of Ruth Ramsay, Richard Gowdy and Harriet Martin debated at Eagle Grove, while the negative team, Randall Klemme, Helen Luick and Lucile Skouge, debated at home. Local judges were secured for each debate. The decision at Eagle Grove was 2—1 in favor of the Negative. The Belmond Negative also won by a 3—0 decision, thus giving Belmond four votes to Eagle Grove's two. It is possible that a couple more practice meets may be arranged in the future.

Mrs. O. T. Jacobson visited sixth grade Thursday morning.

Deloras Olson entered Kindergarten beginning of second semester.

Mrs. A. W. Hill visited the Kindergarten last week.

Mrs. Cortland Morse substituted for Miss Barry this week on Monday.

Miss Quigley's sixth grade pupils have organized a Good English Club. The officers for this week are Maxine Nordschow, president; Carol Jacobson, secretary.

The High School basket ball team lost two games last week. Friday night the Britt team gave about the best exhibition of basketball seen on the local floor for some time, winning 42—20. The Belmond boys put up a game and scrappy fight and made Britt extend themselves to keep ahead. The game was really closer than the score indicates for at the end of the half the score stood 18 to 23, for Britt. During the final quarter several baskets in quick succession put the visitors out ahead. The local fans and team have no reason to feel discouraged over the game as our team put up a good exhibition of the state. For Britt, Bartik, Hughes and Knowles played good games. All the local team put up a good scrap, with Don McNulty and

(Continued on page two).

GOOD FELLOWSHIP TONIGHT

Don Farran, of Rowan, will be the speaker at the Good Fellowship Club meeting tonight, Thursday, February 3, at the library basement. Mr. Farran is a young poet and writer who has been forging rapidly ahead in the literary world. He has been a consistent contributor to the "Line-O'-Type" in the Chicago Tribune, has broadcasted over the Tribune station, and has contributed to various literary publications in the United States. He has spoken before clubs and societies at Cedar Rapids, Marshalltown, Hampton, Clarion, and numerous other points, and has given splendid satisfaction. Mr. Farran has a fund of mirth and his talks are entertaining as well as instructive. Every man in Belmond should be present this evening and hear the genius from our neighboring town.

A splendid preliminary program has been arranged for this meeting, and the refreshments committee has something good planned. Good Fellowship meetings are always free, and open to every man in the community. They are enjoyable affairs, well worth attending, and the meeting tonight promises to be one of the best of the season.

MRS. WM. SHERIFF DIES

Mrs. Wm. Sheriff, 32 years old, died about 1:00 o'clock Wednesday morning at the Lutheran hospital, in Hampton. Death was due to complications following an operation for appendicitis about three weeks ago. She leaves three small children, the youngest a babe of 11 months. Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon, short services being held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs Chas. Gealow, and later at the M. E. church.

The M. E. Woman's Foreign Missionary society meets today with Mrs J. F. Snyder.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Dibble made a business trip to Marshalltown one day last week.

SALVATION ARMY SEEKING FUNDS

Annual Solicitation Of Funds To Be Made In Wright County.

Sacred Writ declares that pure and undefiled religon before God is to visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions and to keep oneself unspotted from the world. It has ever been the aim of the Salvation Army to emulate the Master by going about doing good. Their work may be characterized as "religion in action."

Once a year the Salvation Army asks each county to conduct the Home Service Appeal to furnish them with the needed funds to carry on in behalf of the poor and needy. Several reasons may be given why this claim should be met.

1. Because it is doing a wonderful work to uplift the lower classes.

2. Because it makes money for philanthropy go so far.

3. Because its workers give untiring energy toward reaching and helping those who are in dire need.

4. Because it reforms the drunkard and criminal and redeems the delinquent girl.

5. Because it cares for destitute children and aids them to wholesome and happy lives.

6. Because of its hospital and prison work.

7. Because it provides food and shelter for the homeless and destitute.

8. Because it utilizes waste materials and labor and fosters careful industry.

In fact its field of service is unlimited. Whether it is feeding and heartening the soldiers at the trenches in France, whether it is rescuing the dead and dying from the debris in some great calamity of devastating wind or fire or earthquake or still visiting the sick or feeding the poor in their own homes, it is all in the day's work with them. They are always on the job for others regardless of their own comfort.

Once a year the Salvation Army Advisory Board puts on the county wide appeal to aid them. It never comes but once a year and always is sponsored and promoted by the Board.

The dates for the county-wide appeal are from January 27 to February 12th.

The Advisory Board hopes for a very liberal response from Wright county.

The members of the County Board are John J. Henneberry, president; J. H. Martin, vice president; R. M. Smallpage, secretary; and J. H. Howell, treasurer. The other members are Mrs. Jennie Weeks, Dr. L. D. MacNaughton, L. D. Focht, Guy Hinkley and W. J. Robinson.

WEATHER FOR JANUARY, 1927

Temperature

Mean maximum 26.4. Mean minimum, 8.9. Monthly mean, 17.65.

Highest temperature of the month, 42 on the 29th. Lowest temperature of the month, .15 on the 22nd.

Greatest daily range of temperature, 32 on the 11th.

January, 1927, was 2.9 degrees warmer than the average of Januaries.

Precipitation

Total for month, .12 inches.

Total snowfall for month, 1.75 in.

January, 1927, lacked 1.14 inches of precipitation of coming up to the average January.

Sky and Wind

Number of clear days, 11.

Number of partly cloudy days, 5.

Number of cloudy days, 15.

Wind blew from Southwest 7 days, West 2 days, Northwest 9 days, Southeast 5 days, South 3 days, Northeast 1 day.

Other Januaries

Warmest day in any January, 53 in Jan. 24 and 29, 1919.

Coldest day in any January, .37 on Jan. 12, 1912.

Greatest amount of recipitation in any January, 2.87 inches in January, 1916.

Greatest amount of snowfall any January, 14.2 inches in 1910.

Least amount of precipitation any January, 1927.

Least amount of snowfall in any January, 1927.

MANY NEW CASES FILED

None Are Of Much Importance; Court Convenes Next Week

The February term of district court will convene in Clarion next Monday with Judge H. E. Fry presiding. A large number of cases were filed previous to the time of closing date last Thursday, though none of them are of such importance as to create any unusual interest in the session.

John L. Godfrey brings action to compel Jesse Radohl and Lena Radohl to fulfill contract entered into February 12, 1921, for the purchase of a residence property at 300 North Lucas avenue, Eagle Grove. The sum of $500 has been paid, and it is claimed that $2,000 is still due. Defendants had possession of the property from March 1, 1921, to July 1, 1924.

Globe Machinery and Supply company of Des Moines sues W. W. Frakes for $112.07 for merchandise delivered to him between April 15 and June 1, 1926.

State Bank of Woolstock asks recovery from George Scheppler and Mrs. George Scheppler for the sum of $180 represented by a note given by defendants to W. E. Daughenbaugh and which was purchased by plaintiff. It has run since April 5, 1921, and now amounts to $279.37.

Mrs. Hattie Short of Black Hawk county brings action against J. C. Passwater to compel payment of cash rent for a certain portion of a farm in 12-91-24 township for the year 1926. The Farmers Elevator company of Galt is made co-defendant, inasmuch as Passwaters delivered to them some of the grain raised on the farm in question.

E. E. Kitley asks authority of court to sell for $1800 a residence property in Woolstock, Iowa, for the benefit of the heirs of Frank C. Kitley.

Alsada Dziewanowski asks for divorce from Win J. Dziewanowski on the grounds of cruel treatment, alleging that he even went so far as to terrorize the entire family with a gun when he was drunk. These parties were married April 12, 1924. There are no children by this marriage, but plaintiff has two minor children by a former marriage. Plaintiff asks that all furniture be granted to her and that she may be restored the use of her former name, Alsada A. Reese. The parties have been living at Belmond.

W. F. Insel, as executor of the estate of W. C. Halsey, seeks to have authorized a re-appraisement of the estate of deceased Halsey. During his service as executor he has come to know more definitely the lack of value in some of the securities of the estate, and a re-appraisement on the basis of actual value would considerably reduce the inheritance tax due from the estate.

L. A. Andrews, receiver of the Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove, seeks recovery of $16,100 represented by two notes against Rose A. Woodard and John H. Woodard. A farm mortgage given as security is inadequate and they ask judgment and the appointment of a receiver to handle the business of the farm. A. W. Helmick is also made defendant, as he claims an interest in the farm.

J. W. Porter and his wife, Sadie A. Porter, are sued to determine title of an equity in a residence in the town of Eagle Grove which was given as security for a loan of $12,000 due March 10, 1925. Eight other persons, who hold debits which they claim are also a lien upon the property involved, are also made defendants. The bank receiver asks that a receiver be named to look after rentals from the property which is lots 11, 12, 13, 14, block 12, Eagle Grove.

Suit is brought against D. D. Matheson of Goldfield to recover $250 on a note given the Citizens State bank of Goldfield.

Mary E. Baker seeks divorce from James A. Baker on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment and failure to provide for the family. She is now living in Eagle Grove where defendant is tower man for the Great Western. She asks custody of two minor children.

L. A. Andrews, receiver for Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove, asks foreclosure of a mortgage against Rose A. Woodard and J. H. Woodard, on a residence property in Eagle Grove on which $704.88 is due thru a note given the bank.

Ed. Hawk was arrested Saturday by Deputy sheriff Dan Leonard on complaint of officers at Council Bluffs, charged with uttering a bad check. Defendant paid the amount of the check and accruing costs and was released.

The sheriff's deputies went to Cherokee yesterday in charge of two persons who had been committed to the state asylum there. One was Leonard Lee of Belmond and the other was Mrs. Margaret A. Cooper, a resident of Cerro Gordo county, who has been staying here at the Chas. Zeigler home.

Elmer Breckenridge, who has been in the treasurer's office during the rush of business incidental to making up the tax records for the year, resumed the first of the month his regular work with the office force of county engineer J. K. Hilton.

Five teachers of the county took the examination last week end for state certificates. Grades have not yet been received. Earlier in the month 71 normal training junior students over the county took examinations given by the county superintendent's office. Of that number 30 took the examination in Clarion.

Owners of dogs are admonished to get their licenses early in the year. If paid promptly tax for males is $1 and for females is $3, which is paid to the county auditor, but after the first of June, when the list of fees is turned over to the treasurer for collection there is a penalty of $1.30 on every dog.—Monitor.

GEALOW-WENDEL

Miss Mildred Gealow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gealow, of Belmond, and Ralph R. Wendel, of Meservey, were united in marriage, Monday January 31, at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Wendel, of Meservey, the Rev. L. Sohl, pastor of the Meservey Evangelical church, officiating. The wedding took place at 10:00 o'clock, in the presence of the groom's parents, and Mr. and Mrs. Nels Faaborg, who acted as best man and bridesmaid, respectively. Following the wedding, the party motored to Belmond where a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which the bridal couple motored to Des Moines for a short honeymoon.

The bride was attired in a dress of Alice blue canton crepe trimmed with beads, and with hat to match. The groom wore a gray suit. Mrs. Faaborg, the bridesmaid, was gowned in green georgette crepe.

Mrs. Wendel was born in this community, attending country school up to the eighth grade, and then attending high school one year at Carroll. She took a commercial course at the Hamilton University, in Mason City, and about six years ago entered the employ of the Farmers Savings Bank, of Meservey, as stenographer, which position she had held since.

Mr. Wendel was born at Meservey, attending country school and later the Meservey town school. For the past few years he has been farming with his brother, Henry, near Meservey.

Mr, and Mrs. Wendel will go on the Gealow home farm, southeast of Belmond, which they will operate this year and where they will be at home after March 1. The Independent joins with their large circle of friends in extending congratulations and best wishes for a happy, successful future.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week January 22 to 29, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
23	28	3	—	Clear
24	,37	6	—	Clear
25	25	4	—	Cloudy
26	13	-13	—	Clear
27	24	7	—	Cloudy
28	40	21	—	Clear
29	42	35	—	Pt. Cloudy

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Martin motored to Buffalo Center, Saturday, to visit over Sunday at the Charlie Pritchard home.

FIRE INSPECTION DAY MARCH 16

Iowa Fire Prevention Association Will Send Inspectors Here On That Date.

BIG MEETING IS PLANNED

F. E. Brake, advance representative of the Iowa Fire Prevention Association, met with a committee of citizens yesterday morning at the Belmond Savings bank, at which time plans were formed for a fire inspection day for Belmond, Wednesday, March 16.

On that day, the Iowa Fire Prevention Association will send some 25 inspectors to Belmond. These men will operate in teams of two, and each team will be accompanied by a local citizen. The inspectors will give a thoro inspection of the business buildings in about eight blocks, to the factories, churches and school. They will mark any defects showing fire hazards, and will make such reccomendations as they find necessary. A complete report of their inspection will be furnished the owner of each building inspected.

In the afternoon, a meeting will be held at the schoolhouse for the students, where a short talk will be given by one of the inspectors and possibly moving pictures shown to illustrate the talk. The evening of March 16, a mass meeting, open to all, will be held. Thru the public spirited co-operation and generosity of Mrs. Ella Cleveland and son, the opera house has been donated for this mass meeting. Talks will be given and a complete report of the findings of the various inspection teams will be presented. In addition, moving pictures illustrating the hazards of fire and the benefits from systematic and thoro fire inspection and prevention will be shown. Over $600,000,000 loss was caused by fire in the United States last year, and 17,000 persons lost their lives and were injured by it.

This inspection of the 16th has nothing to do with rates and insurance does not enter into it. That it will have a tendency to lower rates if the inspection is heartily carried thru and the recommendations followed goes without saying.

Details of this fire prevention and inspection day will be presented later. The town, thru Mayor Russell, and the Fire Department, Luncheon club, Boy Scouts, School and Parent-Teachers Association, thru their officers, are co-operating on the day and formally made application for the inspection at the meeting yesterday. O. L. Varland was appointed local chairman.

GILLESPIE-O'ROURK

Lloyd O'Rourk, son of Mr. and Mrs James O'Rourk of Kanawha, was united in marriage to Miss Marvel Gillespie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Gillespie, of Renwick, at the Catholic church at Belmond, Monday morning at seven o'clock by the Rev. Father Molloy. Mrs. P. R. Gilligan, sister of the bridegroom, and her husband, of Kanawha, were bridesmaid and best man. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served to the bridal couple at the home of the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Wm. Parker, at Belmond.

Lloyd is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. James O'Rourk. He was born in Britt and lived here until about ten years ago when the family moved to Kanawha. He graduated from the Kanawha high school in 1922 and the following fall entered the State University at Iowa City, where he finished a four year course last spring. His bride is also a graduate of the State University, graduating the year before her husband did. She taught school at Iowa City the following year but did not return last fall. She has been at home preparing for her wedding. —Britt News-Tribune.

About 8:00 o'clock yesterday morning the fire company was called to the Mike Barry residence where another roof fire had broken out from sparks from the chimney. Mr. Barry discovered the blaze before it had made much headway, and it was extinguished with little damage.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES

Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

The consolidation of the Eagle Grove Times with the Eagle Grove Eagle last week, was just another indication of the trend of the times. For the past five years, more and more consolidations in the newspaper field have been taking place. The weaker papers have been forced to go, the stringent financial period and quiet business in the middle west bringing about their suspension or consolidation with stronger competition. Running a newspaper now is not to be compared with running one twenty and thirty years ago. It takes money to conduct one now, and lots of it. Modern methods require expensive machinery; and the printer of today cannot afford to work for twice what he received twenty-five years ago. The Eagle Grove Times was not a weak paper; it could be counted as well established That the business men of the town demanded consolidation is significant. The two papers duplicated in a large measure the circulation of the field. With only the Eagle left, Editor Barnes will cover with one paper what the two formerly covered, and will cover it better and more satisfactorily to the Eagle Grove advertisers and readers, and at comparatively a small increase in cost of production. He will give Eagle Grove a better paper with the two combined than was possible for either to give separately before. This leaves only five newspapers in Wright county, one each at Eagle Grove, Clarion, and Dows and the two at Belmond. A few years ago there were eight.

Unless something is done in the near future to control radio broadcasting, the radio business is due for a decided slump in sales and popularity. Since the ruling that the Department of Commerce had no control over radio broadcasting and the installation of new broadcasting stations, the air has become a hash of howls, squeals and whines. Clear reception has become the exception. So many new stations have come upon the air, and changes in established wave lengths have been made upon the initiative of individual stations, that almost any point on the dial of a receiving set finds two or more stations going at the same time. The result is whining, whistling, fading, and altogether poor reception. Along with this, some of the broadcasting stations have taken to direct advertising on the air. Where the radio owner expects a program, he runs into a talk on superfluous hair, molasses feed, smoked salt, or a long gabble on tires, dress goods, lubricating oils and the like. We believe direct advertising over the radio is wrong in principle, and that stations now doing it will see the error. Radio owners buy sets for entertainment purposes largely, not to listen to some mail order house or manufacturing company extoll the merits of their wares. Radio direct advertising is unfair competition to the local merchant. We have heard direct advertising talks from a station in which the local merchant was indirectly accused of being a grafter and a robber, the implication being that he was charging his country patrons exhorbitant prices. After one has tuned into a few such talks and programs, one becomes disgusted and the "radio fever" is apt to cool down.

News About Iowa People and Events

The total value of products made in Iowa during 1926 is estimated at $800,000,000. There are approximately 3,500 factories in the state giving employment to nearly 80,000 workers. The pay roll for factory workers in 1926 was over $100,000,000. The growth of industries in the state during the last few years has been due not so much to increase in home markets that were not touched by western factories a few years ago. About 35 percent of the Iowa factories are engaged in producing food products. A few years ago most of this was consumed at home. Now it is consumed in every state in the union and many foreign countries. Iowa exported large quantities of manufactured products last year to countries that had never received Iowa products before.

* * * *

Ed M. Smith, of Winterset, makes mention of the stillness that prevailed in that region on Sunday, January second. He says that the air was a veritable sounding board. You could clearly hear the locomotives on the Rock Island at least 25 miles to the north. Off to the west you could hear the "music" of hounds baying on the trail, children's laughter could be heard as they played in the fields. In the valleys the cattle lie contentedly as they are pictured in Carnation Milk advertisements. Two miles to the south you can see the young orchard planted by A. B. Shriver—the largest orchard in this section of the state. Some day, that will be the orchard section of southern Iowa and some day the Great Western railway owners will put across a colonization campaign for fruit growing and vegetable growing in this section.

NOTES OF BELMOND SCHOOL

(Continued from page one).

Henry Johnson leading in the scoring.

At Clarion on Saturday night the boys showed the effects of the hard game the night before and being handicapped by the low ceiling were unable to connect up for any long shots. After holding Clarion for three quarters the defense weakened and Clarion made good on several close in shots, running the score up to 40 to 21.

Friday of this week Kanawha comes here for one of the big games of the season. The best crowd of the season turned out for the Britt game and it is expected still more will be out this week. There was plenty of pep in evidence on the side lines and the rooters gave a good exhibition of lung development. Two local volley ball teams put up a good preliminary. This week there will be two basket ball games, both first and second teams playing. The first game will begin at 7:15.

Advertisement by Athletics

If a school wishes nation-wide recognition it must excel in some major sport. It is in itself the greatest publicity agent in the world today. All of us know of "Red" Grange, the famous Illinois player who was the most widely known and lauded football player of his time. He was a national drawing card and the mere fact that he was to play brought thousands to the games. Is it then, any wonder that when he entered the motion pictures that he needed no publicity agent?

Another great athlete, if you would call him such, is "Babe" Ruth, the base ball "Swat King." No matter where you go, everyone knows of him. His name is to be seen and heard on every side. His place is reserved in the Sports Hall of Fame. All the popularity was brought to him through his athletic superiority.

Why was there such a stir when Suzzane Lenglen announced her intentions of coming to this country? It was because she was the one who beat our own Helen Wills. Through her games with Miss Wills she gained as much popularity as Rudolph Valentino could boast of.

Now to the point. We all wish to come from a well known school. In order to do so, as shown above, we must excel in some major sport. The question for each one of us is this: How best can I help my school? If you are able, you should help it by going out for all its sports and take an active part. If you could be out for basket ball and aren't, if you could attend the games and don't then you are deliberately hurting the school of which you are a part. We have lost three basket ball games in the past two weeks. Are you at least partly to blame? Let's all be as loyal to our school as we know how.

THE CHILD AND THE STATE

"Every child has the inalienable right to be born free from disease, free from deformity and with pure blood in its veins and arteries.

"Every child has the inalienable right to be loved; to have its individuality respected; to be trained wisely in body and mind; to be protected from disease, from evil influences and evil persons; and to have a fair chance in life. In a word, to be brought up in the fear and admonition of the Lord.

"That state is delinquent which does not ceaselessly strive to secure these inalienable rights to its children."

FASHION NOTES

Dame Grundy tells us that skirts are to fall three or four inches below the knee and not to be ten or twelve inches from the floor, as now. We wonder if the Dame will fool us again, just as we have ours short enough; or will she simply predict it but not be able to bring it to pass?

White is becoming more popular for evening wear and there is a new, bright blue which is a winner.

The "masculine trend" in women's wear, is something we read about, but which does not materialize. Women's dress-up fashions are really always feminine since the eternal feminine loves fine and dainty things. She dons more mannish wear for sports, but sheds it for a tubbing and her frills as soon as the tug of athletics is over.

New hats are of the softest felt, devoid of trimming, but folded, pulled, pinched and molded into many novel shapes. Crowns are very high, many bulging at the top; but rims are mere rims, if any.

Shoes are to be low heeled for street use and very high and narrow heeled to go with party gowns. Sandals blossom forth in many colors: tan, blue, violet, canary. Elk, alligator and fancy leathers are cut in novelty shpes and used for riotous trim.

Washable fabric gloves are a practical offering of the season. Brightly printed handkerchiefs cap the climax of the sporty styles.

CANNED GOODS

Don't store canned goods in a damp place. The cans will rust and the food become poisoned. Dont keep it where it is extremely hot or cold.

When you have opened a can, pour the contents out immediately lest the product react upon the tin and become dangerous to eat. If you do not care for the liquor of canned vegetables save it for soups. Beans, peas and corn have been cooked and need simply to be reheated.

Never use the contents of a can which is bulged or swelled. This indicates that the food has fermented and there is a possibility of ptomaine poisoning.

GIFT-A-DAY

If you have a friend who is going on a long journey or will be in the hospital, or in some trying experience, or away from friends, the gift-a-day box is a pleasant way to show your love and help to pass the time for your loved one. Such a box may be inexpensively assembled by inviting several other friends to share the occasion with you, each contributing some little, inexpensive thing just as a token of remembrance, or a joke to bring a smile. Such trinkets should be securely wrapped and so arranged that one gift may be drawn from the package each day.

A note-a-day, with a picture cut from a magazine, a joke or funny story, a helpful thought or interesting fact, makes a fine remembrance for a sick or shut-in friend.

THE HOT LUNCH

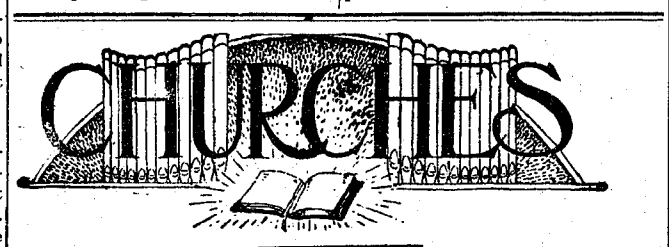
School children will have better digestion and study better in the afternoon if they have a hot dish at noon to eat with their sandwiches brought from home. Such a lunch gives an opportunity for the teacher to help the children learn many needed lessons. She can talk over with the children what should go into the lunch, what makes a balanced ration, and how meals should be served. She can work out a happy plan for the noon meals, dividing the school into groups, each of which brings the materials for the hot dish for one day or week.

The school lunch, served and eaten together, affords an occasion to practice good table manners, and to engage in pleasant conversation. "Breaking bread" together has always been a symbol of sociability.

Cocoa, potato or vegetable or bean soup, or any of a dozen other simple dishes are appropriate for the addition to the lunch brought from home. It puts spice into school life to have this little social feature with its possibility of surprises and generous actions.

It takes but simple equipment to manage the school lunch a cupboard made out of a goods box, a one-burner oil stove, a kettle large enough to hold a cup of liquid—for each pupil, a dish pan, a sauce pan, a large spoon, ladle, knife, fork, teaspoon tablespoon, measuring cup and a homemade fireless cooker. The fireless cooker gives an opportunity for the children to learn how to make one, and may be very inexpensive. Each child should have his own cup and spoon. In some schools, each pupil has an oil cloth cover or paper napkin for his desk, and a paper napkin for lap.

The money to get this equipment may be raised by an entertainment, or it may be donated by some club, or each child may earn and save money to contribute. Many of the school patrons will be glad to give milk, canned or fresh vegetables, cocoa, sugar and needed supplies. Have a donation party, letting the public know what are your needs.



TRINITY CHURCH

The Ladies' Aid will meet at the church parlors Thursday afternoon.

Prayer meeting Thursday evening at the church.

Sunday School Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

C. W. Stark, Minister.

10:00 a. m.—Bible Study Hour.

11:00 a. m.—Morning Worship and Sermon. "Missing the Mark," will be the subject. Surely none of us wish to miss the mark of life. To do so is a terrible thot. How then can we be sure that we are missing the goal for which God has placed us in this world. Whether you like sermons or not, you will find thots for your consideration in this sermon.

Remember that every sin, whether little or big, will help to turn you from that straight and narrow path that the Almighty Creator has opened for you. But if you leave the God-ordained path, then are you missing the mark? Is the way to heaven a straight or crooked path? What is the path over which you are passing? What do others think of you as a citizen and a Christian? We are not asking what you profess to be, but what to those who know you and deal with you think of you? "'Nuff said." Bring your friends with you.

METHODIST CHURCH

Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, February 6.

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. Your presence gratefully appreciated.

Divine Worship and Sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "Excess Baggage." Heb. 12:1-2.

Epworth League at 6:30. We note a steady increase in the League Society. Have you spent an hour with us?

The Boy Scout Service at the regular hour of worship. This is the Seventeenth Anniversary for Scouting. The work begins with a religious program in this church. In order that all may correctly understand this service is non-sectarian. Everybody is heartily welcome, shall not do, or say anything as pertains to one's religion that may be of an offending nature. Worship begins promptly at 7:30.

Standard Bearers will meet at Mrs. McBurney's Thursday evening at 7:00 o'clock, going together to the home of Ethel Hedges for the meeting. A full attendance is desired.

The Womans' Foreign Missionary Society will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. J. F. Snyder. Mrs. H. F. Luick associate hostess. Mrs. H. J. Williams leader of the lesson. Mrs. Calvin Johnson has charge of the Mystery Box.

Please note the Omaha Area Council meet in Des Moines in another column.

Everybody most cordially invited to all of our services.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Richard III

RICHARD III—hero and scoundrel; genius and degenerate, great king and greater criminal—stands out through all time as the "heavy villain" of medieval England's history drama: And that same drama was one of the bloodiest and most turbulent ever enacted.

During the four centuries since the Norman Duke William had conquered England many changes had come to the island kingdom. Most important of these was the substitution of English for French as a court and national language. The Normans had tried to make England a French-speaking nation. The stubborn Saxons had refused to give up their cruder native tongue. Little by little, thanks to this resistance, the earlier English, modified by certain French words and lingual forms, became the accepted tongue of the country. This was practically the same as the English we speak today.

The Black prince's son, Richard II, was deposed by his cousin, Henry of Lancaster (son of the Black prince's younger brother), who took the throne as Henry IV. The usurper's son, Henry V, conquered nearly all of France and died while still a young man. His infant son, Henry VI, was called king of France as well as of England. But while he was still a youth Joan of Arc roused France to cast off the British yoke. Then, having no longer a foreign foe on whom to vent their aggressive, warlike tempers, the English turned against each other in a series of civil wars.

The cause of these conflicts was as follows: Henry VI was weak and semi-imbecile. The powerful duke of York claimed descent from a brother of the Black prince older than the brother from whom Henry was descended. He therefore declared himself rightful heir to the throne, and went to war to make good his title. His followers adopted the white rose as their badge, while the Lancastrians (Henry's adherents) wore red roses. The contest thus became known as "The Wars of the Roses." It began in 1455 and endured off and on for thirty years.

The duke of York was killed at the Battle of Wakefield, 1460, but his three sons, Edward, George and Richard, kept up the strife. Success fell first to one faction and then to the other; and intervals of peace recurred; but in the main the nation had little breathing space. At length, at the battles of Barnet and of Tewkesbury, 1465 (where on both occasions Richard led the Yorkist's vanguard to victory), Edward wholly routed the Lancastrians and was undisputed king of England, with the title of Edward IV. His brother George, who had once turned traitor but had come back to the Yorkist cause, was duke of Clarence, and Richard, the youngest brother, was duke of Gloucester. To make Edward's throne more secure, Henry VI and the latter's son, Edward, prince of Wales, were murdered. The crime is generally laid at Richard's door, as is the subsequent murder of George, duke of Clarence. Edward IV died in 1483, leaving his two little sons under Richard's guardianship and appointing Richard "Lord Protector of the Kingdom" during the elder son's minority.

Richard thus found himself with only two lives between him and the crown of England. He laid his plans with a demoniac ingenuity and set out at once to fulfill them. His first step was to execute on various pretexts such noblemen as were adherents of Edward's two boys. Then, by lobbying, threats and false claims, he caused an irregular election to be held and had parliament proclaim him king. The two little princes, Edward's sons, were put out of the way, presumably by Richard's hired assassins, and the "Lord Protector," having waded to the throne through his kinfolk's blood, began his reign as King Richard III. To the surprise of all, he governed the country justly and wisely.

But the beaten Lancastrians were growing restive. Their party's only remaining claimant to the crown was Henry Tudor, earl of Richmond. Oddly enough, he also had a strong trace of the ancient British blood, thus uniting in himself the Norman and early English strains. He had been banished, but in 1485 he returned to England and drew to him a powerful faction. Richard, at the head of a large army, marched in person against him. The two forces met at Bosworth on August 22, 1485. After a hotly contested battle, in which the king performed prodigies of valor, Richmond won a decisive victory. Richard was slain on the field. Richmond came to the throne as Henry VII, and strengthened his cause by marrying Princess Elizabeth of York, thus uniting the rival houses of York and Lancaster.

Richard III is described by Shakespeare and other Sixteenth century writers as a dwarf hunchback. This idea is absurd. No man so handicapped could have performed the personal feats of strength and valor that were ascribed to him. His character presents one of the strangest paradoxes of history. He was conscienceless, devoid of scruple or honor, ferocious, cruel and bloodthirsty even for those iron times. Yet he was a wise and just king, a general second to none, a hero in battle, and of marvelous mental attainments.

FREE AIR

Feeling the need of restful entertainment and perhaps a worthwhile talk on some interesting subject, we tuned in the radio one night recently and this is what we heard:

* * * *

"—regular price is $2.00 a bottle, but for this radio special we are offering a bottle of this wonderful superfluous Hair Remover for only a dollar a bottle, with a jar of cold cream thrown in." "—orchestra will now play—Wheeeexxyzzzfff!!? ?! " "—smoked salt gives that zestful and—" "—molasses feed which tones up the system as well as—" "—Just a birdseye view of—" "—the real thing in dress goods, a material you can't buy in your home stores because they haven't got it, and they'd ask you a whole lot more money for it if they did." "—makers of noodles, oodles of noodles, made from eggs and—" "—solid rubber thruout with an extra heavy thickness in—" "—congress should appropriate a million dollars if necessary to stop this great menace to—" "—My Baby." "Wheeeerrrzztztttooooooo!!!

* * * *

Isn't that about it sometimes?

* * * *

If it keeps up we're going to learn to play a jewsharp and entertain ourself once in a while.

* * * *

What did you think of Aimee?

* * * *

Ever think about the difference in folks and things? 'Nawful lot of it. Maybe that's what makes life so interesting.

* * * *

Longfellow could take a worthless sheet of paper, write a poem on it and make it worth $2,500.—That's Genius.

* * * *

Rockefeller can write a few words on a sheet of paper and make it worth $5,000,000.—That's business.

* * * *

The United States can take an ounce of gold, stamp an eagle bird on it and make it worth $20.00.—That's Money.

* * * *

A mechanic can take material worth $50 and make it into watch springs worth $1,000.—That's Skill.

* * * *

A woman can purchase a 75c hat, but prefers one that costs $27.00.—That's a Fact.

* * * *

We can fill this Colyum full of stuff each week but you don't have to read it.—That's a Blessing.

SHERIFF'S SALE—REAL ESTATE

STATE OF IOWA,
Wright County, ss.

To Essie M. Ferguson, William D. Ferguson, Alma Harris nee Alma Ferguson, L. R. Fitz, Tenants in possession of the Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) (less Chicago Great Western Right of Way) of Section Thirty-two (32) Township Ninety-two (92) North of Range Twenty-three (23) West of the Fifth P. M. Iowa, County of Wright, Maud Ferguson, Dan Harris, Gertrude Howell, M. L. Howell.

You are hereby notified that by virtue of a special execution, to me directed, and issued out of the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the State of Iowa, within and for Wright County, upon a judgment rendered in said Court in favor of Brotherhood of American Yeomen, and against Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) (except Right of Way of Chicago Great Western Railway) of Section Thirty-two (32), in Township Ninety-two (92) North of Range Twenty-three (23) West of the 5th P. M. Iowa, containing One Hundred Fifty-two (152) acres according to U. S. Survey, for the sum of Eleven Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-five and 32-100 Dollars debt and Ninety-one and 85-100 Dollars costs, and One Hundred Sixty-five and 35-100 Dollars attorney's fee, I have levied upon the following described Real Estate, to-wit:

The Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) (except Right of Way of Chicago Great Western Railway) of Section Thirty-two (32), in Township Ninety-two (92) North of Range Twenty-three (23). West of the 5th P. M. Iowa, containing One Hundred Fifty-two (152) acres according to U. S. Survey, and that on the 18th day of February, 1927, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at the front door of the Court House in Clarion, Wright County, Iowa, I will proceed to sell the same in satisfaction of said execution, together with all legal costs accruing.

Dated at the Sheriff's office, in Clarion, this 18th day of January, 1927.

FRED JOHNSON,
Sheriff of Wright County, Iowa
H. W. Hanson, Attorney.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

HULLESS OATS NOT PRACTICAL

On a hulless oats basis, which was reached by deducting 30 percent from the weight of common hulled varieties of oats, the Iowa Experiment Station has found that even the lowest yielding of the common varieties used in a test, Swedish Select, produced over five bushels per acre more than the Liberty Hulless. Other common varieties had an even greater advantage than this.

In 1923, L. C. Burnett, farm crops investigator, Iowa State College, started experiments to determine the yielding power of a variety of hulless oats, the Liberty Hulless, when compared with several of the more common of the hulled varieties. Tabulations just recently completed cover a four-year period.

Figuring both the hulled and hulless on the hulled oats basis, Iogren yielded 1,716 pounds per acre for the four year average; Iowar 1,680, Green Russian 1,660, Minota 1,657, Silvermine 1,657, Kanota 1,610, and Swedish Select 1,757. Against these results the Liberty Hulless strain yielded only 1,382 pounds per acre for an average of four years.

STUFFED BAKED APPLES

Pare and core large apples. Fill the centers with chopped dates, or with seedless raisins. You may dust with cinnamon if you wish.

If you prefer to leave the peel of the apple on it, prick the apple to let out the steam that the apple may not burst. Add a little sugar and a dot of butter to the top of each apple; put the apples in a deep pan; add a small cup water and bake slowly, basting occasionally. Serve with cream.

POTATO ACREAGE ON INCREASE

Potatoes are coming back in Grundy county!

This is the announcement made by C. L. Fitch of Iowa State College, who attributes the come back to the fact that a few men in the county have had particularly good results with their potato crops in recent years, which, combined with the low price of corn and the prospects of a corn borer invasion, makes potato growing look doubly attractive.

In times past large crops of potatoes were shipped out of Grundy county. Mr. Fitch, who will be present at a meeting in Grundy Center on February 25, arranged for a discussion of growing problems, says that the first success of Grundy county was due to the superb quality of the soil and to the virgin root conditions. This root condition can be restored, by the use of sweet clover and alfalfa, he says, and the fertility can be renewed by a small amount of commercil fertilizer.

"The Grundy county farmer can do as well or better in potato growing as his father or grandfather, but he will have to do more thinking in producing his crop than was necessary in those days," Mr. Fitch believes.

READ WANT ADS for results

Closing Out Sale!

AS I AM QUITTING FARMING, I WILL SELL AT AUCTION AT THE FARM 5 MILES EAST AND 21-2 MILES NORTH OF CLARION ON

Thursday, February 10

COMMENCING AT 12 NOON

8—HEAD OF HORSES—8
9—HEAD OF CATTLE—9
300—WHITE LEGHORN PULLETS—300
1000—BUSHELS OF CORN—1000
10—BUSHELS OF SEED CORN—10
PORTABLE BROODER HOUSE, 12x24
FULL LINE OF FARM MACHINERY

— FREE LUNCH AT NOON —

USUAL TERMS.

Munnis & Cowley, Aucts.
Clarion Savings Bank, Clerk.

H. J. C. BOX, Owner

Kinseth's Store News

This week we are offering a dandy special on Fruits. Everyone likes fruit, and nothing is as good for you as good fruit. Pick your favorite from this list and have a dozen or so sent up.

Oranges, per dozen 29c

Grapefruit, each 8c

Apples, in baskets $1.95

Three cans of corn for 33c—corn that regularly sells for 15c a can.

Diamond Bread, 3 loaves for 25c.

Jello Powder, all flavors, at 9c a package.

18c buys a pound of good lard.

Large package oatmeal, 19c.

Two pounds soda crackers 34c; same for two pounds of graham crackers.

We are carrying a full line of cakes, all flavors and kinds, fresh every day for 10c, 13c, 15c, 25c and 30c.

Two lbs. Macaroni for 23c.

These are just a sample of the bargains to be found in The Store on the Corner. We are always at your service, and we like to have you drop in whether you buy or not, because this is a friendly store.

FARMER SERVICE!

That's our aim---and we pride ourselves that we give it. Try us if you are not one of our regular customers. Let us grind your next order of Feed.

A car of Oil Meal on track at a very reasonable price is one of our New Year offerings.

We carry a full line of Flour, Feed, Salt and Wire, and buy Grain, Poultry and Hides, at top prices.

Truck service for those who wish it.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

JENISON'S SPOTTED POLAND CHINA SALE

50 BRED SOWS and GILTS 50

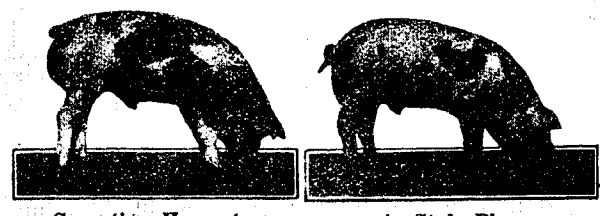
Tues., Feb. 8, 1927 At 1:00 P.M.

IN THE HEATED FOUNDRY BUILDING AT ROCK ISLAND YARDS

8 HERD SOWS 25 SPRING GILTS
17 FALL YEARLING SOWS

This Splendid Offering Is Mated To

Auctioneer's Peacock



Sensation Harvester Style Plus

(Pictures of Sensation Harvester and Style Plus were taken when they were pigs.)

SEND FOR CATALOG!

G. LEROY JENISON - - Belmond, Iowa

Closing Out PUBLIC SALE!

AS I AM QUITTING FARMING, WILL HOLD A CLOSING OUT SALE ON THE FARM KNOWN AS THE THOS. H. MYERS FARM, 2 1-2 MILES NORTH OF MESERVEY, ON THE VENTURA ROAD, AND 5 1-2 MILES WEST OF THORNTON, AND WILL SELL ON

Tuesday, Feb'y. 8

COMMENCING AT 11:00 O'CLOCK, THE FOLLOWING PROPERTY:

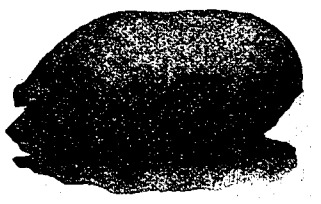
10 - Head of Horses - 10

1 GRAY MARE, 8 yrs. old, wt. 1400.
1 BAY GELDING, 7 yrs. old, wt. 1300.
1 BLACK MARE, 9 yrs. old, wt. 1400.
1 BAY GELDING, 12 yrs. old, wt. 1450.
1 GRAY GELDING, 10 yrs. old, wt. 1450.
1 GRAY GELDING, 13 yrs. old, wt. 1500.
1 BUCKSKIN MARE, 9 yrs. old, wt. 1100.
1 BLACK MARE, coming 2 yrs. old, wt. 1100.
1 BLACK MARE, 8 yrs. old, with foal, wt. 1600.
1 GRAY GELDING, coming 3 yrs. old, wt. 1400.

30 Head of Cattle

3 PURE BRED HEREFORD COWS. 8 MILK COWS, of good quality. 1 FIVE MONTHS' OLD BULL.
8 STEER CALVES. 3 HEIFERS, wt. about 400.
6 SMALL CALVES. 1 REGISTERED HEREFORD BULL.
These Cattle are T. B. Tested.

20 Head Poland China Bred Sows



CHOLERA IMMUNE, TO FARROW IN APRIL.

Farm Machinery, Etc.

1 McCormick 5-ft. mower.
1 P. & O. two-row cultivator.
1 John Deere manure spreader.
1 John Deere single row cultivator.
1 8-ft. McCormick grain binder.
1 John Deere hay loader.
1 International fanning mill.
1 International 16-wheel disc.
1 Osborne side delivery hay rake.
1 John Deere corn planter, No. 999.
4 wagons.
1 bob sled.
1 spring buggy
5 sets of harness.
1 Melotte separator.
Other articles too numerous to mention.

70 Shocks of Corn Fodder In Field

Free Lunch at Noon

TERMS—$10 AND UNDER, CASH. OVER THAT AMOUNT 10 MONTHS' TIME WILL BE GIVEN ON APPROVED SECURITY BEARING 8 PERCENT INTEREST. ALL PROPERTY TO BE SETTLED FOR ON DAY OF SALE.

CRA BAYLESS. Auctioneer.

A. J. NISSEN, Clerk.

L. A. MYERS

MESERVEY SECTION

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:45 a. m.

Morning worship at 10:45.

This day has been set aside as a Day of Prayer for missions under the auspices of the Woman's Missionary society. At the close of the service, an offering is to be received for the New Albright Memorial Church in our capital city, Washington, D. C. We are happy to have a church of our denomination in this city, and are grateful to contribute our gifts to this worthy cause.

E. L. C. E. at 7:00. Leader, Miss Lucile Paul.

Evening service at 7:30.

German prayer meeting at the C. Bier home Wednesday evening.

Thursday evening service and study of the Sunday school lesson for the following Sunday.

Let us be much in prayer for our missionaries and the cause they represent in the home and foreign fields.

Lawrence Sohl, pastor.

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.

Morning worship at 10:30 (Ger.)

Young peoples' meeting at 7:15.

Evening service at 8.

Senior class in catechism meets Tuesday at 3:20 p. m. at the parsonage.

Catechetical classes meet Saturday at 1:30 p. m. The attendance was very good last week. Let's keep it up.

Some of the children could be more faithful in attending Sunday school. Parents, allow us to remind you of duty to do your utmost that your boys and girls get Christian training. Avail yourself of every possible opportunity that is offered by the church to help you to bring your children to Christ. The training of your children is both a duty and a privilege.

The Ladies' Aid met last week, and in spite of the disagreeable weather a goodly number were present. Mrs. K. C. Ruigh served refreshments.

Go to church while you can in days of health and strength.

H. Pannkuk, minister.

SILVER WEDDING

Some 40 relatives and friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Pals last Wednesday evening to help them celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. A dinner was served and the evening was spent in a social way. The host and hostess were remembered with gifts and showered with good wishes for many more happy years of wedded life. To make the celebration more complete, about 30 young people hit upon the plan of forming a charivari party and reminding the couple of the original wedding 25 years ago. A delightful time is reported.

ANNIVERSARY DINNER

Last Sunday, upon returning home from church the C. F. W. Paul family were agreeably surprised to find a crowd of uninvited guests had taken possession of the house and had a sumptuous dinner awaiting them. The occasion was the 25th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Paul and needless to say the gathering was a joyous one. Those present were Mr. B. Banker and daughter Bernice and Geo. Paul, of Mason City; Elmer Paul and family and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Paul, of Sheffield.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Leland Jacobson and son, Keith, left last Saturday for a week's visit with relatives in Chicago. The trip was made by auto, with Clarence Agler, of Thornton driving.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hulsebus and son, Bobby, of Dows were visiting here Friday. Mrs. Hulsebus was also a Mason City caller between trains.

Albert Mayers, of Fort Sumner, New Mexico spent several days here at the home of his mother, who has been seriously ill. He returned to his home Sunday.

Mrs. Crist Enabnit, of Clemons, spent a few days at her mother's bedside the past week. She was joined here Saturday by her husband and two sons, and all returned to their home by auto, Sunday.

G. E. Raecker and his mother, Mrs. H. Raecker and sister, Mrs. H. Fischer were Mason City callers on Thursday.

Mrs. Albert Hartwig, of Thornton spent Friday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Hafermann.

Theo. Wendel accompanied his son, Ralph, Miss Mildred Gealow, Nelse Faaborg's and Mrs. Crist Enabnit to Mason City, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Avery are the happy parents of a son, born Monday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Waddingham and son, Lloyd, of Latimer, were business callers here last week Tuesday afternoon.

C. J. Wendel and A. E. Muller accompanied Harry Sondergaard, of Thornton, to Mason City last Wednesday on a business errand.

John Kolb and family, of Latimer spent Sunday at the Adam Kolb home.

James Hemming, of Thornton was a Sunday visitor at the Ed Foss home. We are pleased to report that Mrs. Hemming is speedily recovering from her recent operation.

I. A. Nissen and children, Arlene and Ardell, of Kamrar, visited at the Kolb home, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Matt Smith and the latter's mother, Mrs. J. Ahrenkiel, were calling on Mrs. Wilkins at the Central office, Monday afternoon.

Miss Fannie Bruns visited friends at Belmond from Saturday to Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Boelman were Mason City business callers Friday.

H. F. Reif, Geo. J. Fischer and Robert Gobeli motored to Fort Dodge Sunday, the latter calling on his wife who is at a sanitarium there. Mr. Fischer remained to visit relatives a few days.

H. K. Pals and son, Clarence, attended a farm bureau meeting at Hampton, Saturday.

H. B. Frey spent Thursday evening at the Park hospital with Mrs. Frey and Wilbert.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Schmidt from Belmond visited at the Ed. Foss home, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dorenkamp of near Belmond mourn the loss of their son, Bennie, since Sunday. Relatives from here attended the funeral, on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Muhlenbruck of Hampton visited at the Paul Hopkey home Monday.

The Cemetery society will meet at the home of Mrs. Fred Halfpop, Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 8, for regular meeting.

Rev. and Mrs. Pannkuk and daughter, Lydia, attended the reception for the new pastor and family, of the Reformed church at Alexander, last week Wednesday evening. The Rev. J. B. Frerichs recently accepted the call of the Alexander church, coming with his family from Chancellor, S. D. Short addresses of welcome were given and suitably responded to by the pastor. The remainder of the evening was spent socially and refreshments were served by the ladies.

F. C. Sprau, accompanied by Gerald Janssen, motored to Ames last Friday, spending the day there, returning in the evening with Olliver Sprau and H. Fischer Jr., who remained here until Sunday visiting with home folks and friends.

The tractor school put on by the John Deere Harvester Co. was very well attended here, at the garage last Tuesday. A free lunch was served at the hardware store at noon.

Ralph Paul accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Sam Paul to their home in Sheffield last Friday evening, remaining until Sunday.

News was received here of the sudden death of Mr. Jerry Blau last Friday, which occurred that afternoon following an accident while he was driving a car in Des Moines on his return home from his work in Valley Junction. The deceased was a dentist with offices at the latter place, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Blau, of Alexander. The remains were brought there and funeral services were held Sunday at the Reformed church. A goodly number from here attended the services. Burial was made in the Alexander cemetery.

Alvin Halfpop was a week end visitor with home folks.

The Misses Viola and Thelma Thomas and Ruth Herndon, of Waterloo and Cedar Falls were here for an over Sunday visit at the E. G. Thomas home.

Miss Evelyn Thomas, of Goodell, came home Friday evening to remain at the parental home until Sunday.

PRE-NUPTIAL SHOWER

Last Thursday evening at the home of Miss Irene Guth, a miscellaneous shower was given for Miss Mildred Gealow. A large number were present, and the evening was spent in a jolly, social way. Games were indulged in, and much interest and merriment was manifested when the time came for the honor guest to open the gifts showered upon her, which proved not only lovely but useful as well. Dainty refreshments were served and all left with best wishes for the bride to be.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Watermiller are the parents of a baby daughter, born last Monday.

Mrs. Anna Schroeder, Miss Carrie Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Curl, all of Fort Dodge, were Sunday visitors at the G. E. Raecker home.

The high school declamatory contest was held at the Evangelical church, Friday evening. A large audience was present. The winners were as follows: Oratorical, Dena Wieman, first; Hallie Ward, second. Dramatic—Wilma Pals, first; Bonita Muller, second. Humorous—Harriet Sprau, first; John Schlegel, second. The judges were Miss Zola Kramme, principal; Miss Margaret Clark, history teacher; Mr. Walter J. Ruther, debate coach, all of Hampton. Proceeds of the evening amounted to $53.

M. Halfwassen and Harm Groen were Fort Dodge business callers last Wednesday and Thursday.

C. J. Wendel was in Des Moines, Monday and Tuesday, on business.

News About Iowa People And Events

In a recent issue of the Chicago Great Western Magazine it is stated that "New Hampton, Chickasaw county, is the birthplace of Emery Albright, the famous artist, whose pictures are on display and have attracted considerable comment in the Art Institute of Chicago. It was he who built the famous log cabin studio near Chicago. It is also the birthplace of Commander J. V. Babcock, who was aid to Admiral Simms and who with Admiral Simms was sent to Europe as America's representative before America entered into the World war."

* * * *

Scores of world war veterans obtained loans from Des Moines banks on their adjusted service compensation certificates. January 1 was the date set as the earliest day when such loans would be permitted. Most of the loans were ninety days. Under existing government regulations, if the loans are not repaid when due or extensions granted, the banks must hold the certificates for six months and then turn them over to the government for collection. The government will then deduct the amount of the loan plus the interest due, from the total amount of the certificates and retain the paper until it is payable to the veteran or his heirs.

* * * *

Petty thieving is sweeping over the state in the form of an epidemic. At Waverly the Merchants' Association placed handsomely illuminated Christmas trees at either end of the bridge across the Cedar river. The first night a few of the colored lamps were stolen and each succeeding night more were taken, until on Monday all the lamps on the lower branches had been carried away. The others would probably have been stolen had it been possible for the thieves to reach them. In Grinnell, Charles K. Needham erected in front of his office a couple of beautifully illuminated Christmas trees. Not only the lights but the entire trees were stolen. At Avoca the electric lights were stolen off the Christmas trees on the sidewalks and at Griswold a lot of trees were stolen. These are but samples of what is reported from all section of the state. At Iowa City a student of the University stole a Christmas tree and was caught in the act, and the justice imposed a fine. The dean of men at the university heard of the incident and the result was that the leading foot ball player at the institution was expelled.

* * * *

At the junior short course held recently at Ames a record music memory contest was held by the 4-H club girls and Clay county won the honors. The Clay county girls had an average score of 120 out of a perfect score of 140. Muscatine county won second place with a score of 109 while Allamakee, Polk, Linn, Pottawattamie, Butler, Dallas, Harrison, Franklin, Jackson, Scott, Palo Alto and Greene counties received honorable mention. This was the first contest of its kind ever held in the United States according to Miss Josephine Arnquist, state girls' club leader. Iowa was the first state to introduce music appreciation in the girls' club work when it was taken up in 1922. In the recent contest eighty-three of the ninety-eight counties engaging in girls' club work took part. Wilma Zazel of Scott county was the only girl to make 100 percent in the test. Fayette county led in the number of representatives in the contest with forty-four with Linn county second and Polk third.

* * * *

Radio fans have been delighted in recent weeks to hear Miss Marie Sweet, noted vocalist of Chicago, whose elections were broadcasted from Chicago, in which city she is prominent in musical circles. Miss Sweet is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Sweet, of Davenport. She fills prominent engagements in Chicago and in other cities.

HEADACHES OR HEALTH

Headaches are danger signals. They are warnings of physical disorders which in many cases become very serious. That man or woman is wise who recognizes the serious import of Headaches and immediately visits a competent Chiropractor to discover their cause and correct the more deep-seated condition.

Start getting well today.

DR. R. E. PORTER
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17; Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

We Handle
ATWATER KENT RADIOS
CROSLEY RADIOS
PATHE RADIOS
SLAGLE RADIOS
Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries
All kinds Cunningham Tubes
1st class—not "Seconds"
Phone 52 for Home Demonstration.
H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

CHEVROLET
for Economical Transportation

Marks of Distinction made possible by
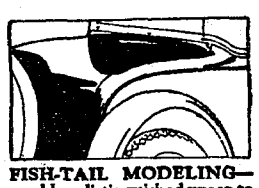
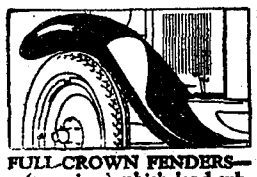
Volume Production
The Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History

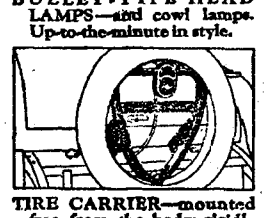


FISH-TAIL MODELING—adds a distinguished sweep to the rear of the Roadster, Coupe and Sport Cabriolet.



FULL-CROWN FENDERS—(one-piece) which lend substantial grace to the sweeping body lines.

BULLET-TYPE HEAD LAMPS—and cowl lamps. Up-to-the-minute in style.



TIRE CARRIER—mounted free from the body; rigidly supported by steel brackets

In addition to masterly new bodies by Fisher—in addition to a host of mechanical improvements typified by AC oil filter and AC air cleaner—the Most Beautiful Chevrolet offers certain features heretofore regarded as marks of distinction on the costliest cars. These are made possible at Chevrolet's amazingly reduced prices only because volume production results in definite economies and because Chevrolet now, as always, passes these savings on to the buyer in the form of added value.

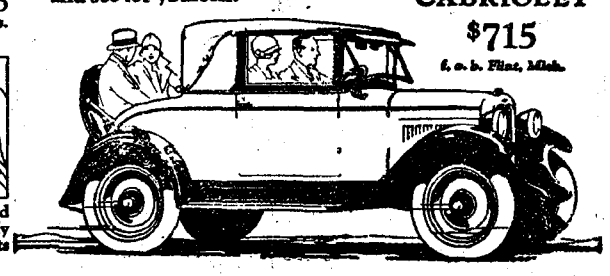
No other car, as low in price, offers such features as fish-tail modeling, full-crown one-piece fenders, bullet-type lamps and the like. Come in—and see for yourself!

Reduced Prices!

The Coach	$595
The Coupe	$625
The Sedan	$695
The Landau	$745
The Touring or Roadster	$525
1-Ton Truck (Chassis Only)	$495
½-Ton Truck (Chassis Only)	$395

Balloon Tires Now Standard On All Models
All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

The Sport CABRIOLET $715 f. o. b. Flint, Mich.



HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa
RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

Co-operation for 1927

Co-operation means so to conduct yourself that others can work with you.

We are ready, willing and able.

LET'S GO!

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

The high school declamatory contest drew a large crowd. It was given Monday evening in place of Monday and Tuesday as had been advertised on account of three of the contestants not being able to give their readings, due to illness. There were twelve readings given, making only one evening of entertainment. In the oratorical class, "Prepare," by Iris Sherwood, was judged first; "A Vision of War," by Lela Griggs, second; and "The Wandering Jew," by Wayne Wesenberg, third. In the dramatic class, "The Christus," by Eunice Wesenberg, first; "Humoresque," by Daphne Houghton, second; and "The Man In the Shadow," by Gertrude Cashman, third. In the humorous class "The Family Group" by Cholm Houghton, first; "P. A. I. L. W. R.," by Dale Conklin, second; "George Says," by Frederick Schneider, third. Doris Schneider, Floyd Scott and Joseph Burgess were unable to appear in the contest. Miss Evelyn Thomas, the coach, gave two splendid readings, and Eunice Wesenberg gave two piano solos. This proved to be an interesting contest and the pupils and their coach are to be congratulated on their undertaking. Three ladies from Belmond were the efficient judges.

The grade pupils will give a program at the Goodell high school on Friday evening. Admission will be free and everyone is cordially invited to attend.

The school orchestra will give a musical program Friday, February 11th.

The third and last number of the lecture course will be given at the U. B. church, Monday, February 14. Dr. Ira Berry will appear on the program and impersonate characters of the Passion Play.

Mrs. Reynold Kinseth and Junior, of Belmond spent a few days last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Avery. During their stay here Junior was quite sick.

Descom Bishop returned the fore part of the week from Belmond, where he has been the past two weeks at the home of his grandfather Bishop.

Miss Mattie Larson, of Williams, came last week to visit her sister, Mrs. Homer Ness.

W. L. Thada has held a sale at his grocery and dry goods store the past week. A ticket was given with every dollar purchase. The ticket allowed one chance on the three sets of dishes which were given away on Saturday evening. Rev. F. C. Scott received the first prize which was a 52 piece dinner set. A Burhow won the second prize, which was a 42 piece set; and Pete Steenblock the third prize, which was a 32 piece set.

Louise Mason went to Havelock on Friday evening to visit her cousins, the Misses Alice and Alythe Rhodda.

Mrs. Will Tanner, accompanied by John Tanner, of Klemme, autoed to Hampton Friday to spend the day with the latter's wife who is ill at the hospital there.

Mr. Woods, a music teacher of Iowa Falls, who has been coming here and giving piano lessons the past few months, has discontinued coming. Miss Harriet Ward, of Belmond has organized a class here and gives the lessons on Wednesday of each week.

Miss Lucile Boller went to Meservey Friday to spend the week end with relatives.

Mrs. Harve Christenson underwent a successful operation at the Hampton hospital Thursday of last week.

The A. C. Carpenter family were entertained Thursday to dinner at the O. Sandberg home, the occasion being to celebrate the birthdays of Mrs. Carpenter and Mrs. Sandberg.

The rural school, three miles north west was closed the fore part of last week as the teacher, Miss Esther Harberts was on the sick list.

Several students are absent from school as they are ill with the measles. The latest victims are Vogel Christenson, Floyd Scott, Nina Ahrenkiel, Iris Sherwood, Doris and Robert Schneider.

J. J. Cook was called to Berichnal, Wednesday, his mother being seriously ill.

John Lowenberg went to Hampton Friday to have a Xray picture taken of his arm which he had broken some time ago while cranking a car.

Harve Christenson autoed to Hampton Tuesday to spend the day at the hospital with his wife who is recovering from an operation.

Goodell friends have received the news through the Religious Telescope telling of the death of Mrs. Talbot at Chicago, on January 8th. She will be remembered by Goodell people as she lived here about twelve years ago at the time her daughter, Ruth Talbot taught here and her son-in-law and other daughter, Rev. and Mrs. Earl I. Doty had charge of the U. B. church. Burial was made at Toledo in the family lot.

Mrs. J. E. Savogue returned Tuesday from Sheldon where she has spent the past two weeks visiting her sisters, Mesdames Eldred, McAlfree and Stockwell.

The twelve leaders from Avery and Twin Lake Township Farm Bureau met Thursday afternoon at the Chelsvig hotel. Miss Merle Ramer, of Ames was present and gave the ladies a very interesting lesson in basket weaving. Delicious refreshments were served after the lesson.

The Shipping Association gave a fine entertainment at the Opera House last Tuesday. Mr. Thompson of Ames gave an interesting and profitable talk. A short business meeting was held in which A. C. Carpenter was re-elected as a member of the board of directors. County Agent Nulty, of Britt was present and showed a two reel movie comedy Coffe and sandwiches were served free of charge. An exceptionally large crowd enjoyed the evening.

Miss Mae Wigfield, of Thompson visited over Sunday at the Harve Christenson home.

Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel went to Meservey Sunday to spend the fore part of this week with her daughter, Mrs. Matt Smith.

Mrs. Hemenway, who has been visiting her son, Ed returned Monday to her home at Mason City.

The three contestants, Iris Sherwood, Eunice Wesenberg and Cholm Houghton, who won first place in the home declamatory contest will enter a contest to be held at Kanawha February 25th. Klemme, Belmond, Kanawha and Goodell will be represented in this contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sherman went to Belmond Wednesday and spent a few days at the Ed Hughes home.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Avery went to Belmond Monday to attend the wedding of Lloyd O' Rourke, of Kanawha to Marvyle Gillispie, of Renwick, Monday morning at the Catholic church. After the ceremony a breakfast was served at the Wm. Parker home. Mr. O'Rourke is a brother of Mrs. Avery's.

Dorothy Lackore went to Humboldt Monday to visit Mr. and Mrs. Milford Westree.

The pupils who won second place in the declamatory will speak in the near future at Garner with the schools of Garner, Klemme and Hayfield.

Mrs. Anson Avery spent last week at Kanawha at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O'Rourke. She returned home, Sunday.

Clement Houghton, of Iowa Falls Sundayed at the home of his mother.

The high school literary society gave a program at the school house Wednesday afternoon.

Church Notes

Don't forget the U. B. Ladies' Aid food and apron sale to be held Saturday, February 12th.

The girls' and ladies' missionary society will meet Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the U. B. church. A good program will be given. This will be the Thank offering meeting and a good attendance is desired.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

Don Farran has been invited to speak before the Good Fellowship club at Belmond, Thursday evening.

The Farm Bureau will hold an all-day meeting Friday, Feb. 4, at the Jake Aldinger home. Rev. Leinbach of Belmond, president of the Wright County Farm Bureau, will speak in the afternoon.

Mrs. Jess Steffens is expected to be able to be brought home from the Hampton hospital before the end of this week.

Clarence Whitten left Friday for a visit at the home of his brother in Tama.

The M. E. Ladies Aid will meet at the parsonage Thursday with Mrs. Fred Aldinger assistant hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cain spent Sunday at the James Easton home near Belmond.

H. E. Reese of Minneapolis, Minn., came Saturday for a visit at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Reese. He will return home on Wednesday.

Mrs. J. W. Sperry of Thompson was a week end guest of her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Richards, who has been quite ill the past week.

The Epworth Leaguers spent a social evening in the church parlors on Thursday last. A "Golden Hour" program was the outstanding feature of the entertainment.

Arthur Kappis of Waucoma came last week to remain at the home of his uncle, Geo. Liming, and attend school.

Miss Angie Baines and Laurel Baines were Dows visitors, Saturday.

The Milt Ramsey family of Belmond were guests at the Wilbur Lineweaver home Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hoke were the recipients of a fine radio last week, sent to them by Mrs. Hoke's son, Ira Hartinger, from Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. Ed. Richards of Alexander spent a part of last week with her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Richards.

The Chris Stadtlander family attended the funeral of a friend, Jerry Blau, at Alexander, Sunday. Mr. Blau was killed in an auto accident in Des Moines, last week.

Mrs. L. W. Hoke enjoyed a visit from her friend, Mrs. Mary Parris, of Burlington, last week. Mrs. Parris is spending this week with friends at Dumont and will return here in a few days after which Mr. and Mrs. Hoke will accompany her to Webster City and Hawkeye for a visit with old friends.

The Misses Gladys McGowan and Martha Kable of Dows spent the week end at the R. H. Keith home.

Repair work is being done on the schoolhouse furnace.

W. W. Bailey was unable to drive his school bus last week, Earl Bailey driving for his father.

Mrs. Carmichel of Clarion came Monday and will spend two weeks training the local declamatory contestants.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

The Camp Fire Girls have elected the following officers: President, Bonnie Barker; vice president, Marjorie Webster; secretary, Bernadine Klinefelter; treasurer, Ethel Schulte Miss Ann Edmonsen. He leaves to mourn his sudden departure, his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Blau, four brothers, George, Clyde, John and Dick; and six sisters, Mrs. H. Pals, Mrs. Otto Ostendorf, Mrs. Dick Smith. Mrs. John Modderman, Mrs. Charlie Nielsen, of Fort Dodge, and Marie, besides many other relatives and friends. One sister preceded him in death. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, first at the home of his parents and then at the Reform church, in charge of Rev. Fredericks. Interment was made in the Alexander cemetery. A large crowd attended the services. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of their neighbors and many friends.

Mrs. Henry Polmateer had the misfortune to slip on the ice and fall in such a manner as to bruise her elbow, which has been causing her much pain. She will have to carry her arm in a sling for a while. Fortunately no bones were broken.

Mrs. Welden, of Iowa Falls has been here a few days the past week directing the contestants for the declamatory contest which was held here Saturday evening. Duel between Alexander and Dows. The selections were fine and all given well, which gave honor to all the contestants. The decision of the judges were as follows: Oratorical — 1st, Susie Schulte, "Masterful Man of the Ages; 2nd Boyd Rodemeyer, "Prince of Peace." Both from Alexander.

Dramatic—1st, Sylvia Arends, "The Arena Scene from Quo Vadis," (Alexander; 2nd, Marie Oleson, "Michasl Stuonoff," (Dows).

Humorous—1st, Pearl LaRud "Naughty Zell;" 2nd, Ledah Specht, "The Wedding of Miss Bray." (Both of Dows.)

Dumont played a double header basket ball game here Tuesday evening. Alexander was winner in both games. Score was as follows, boys 9 to 17, girls 19 to 27.

Mr. R. Bowman, the impersonator and lecturer, gave a fine entertainment on Thursday evening. This was the last number of the lecture course.

A new baby girl came to gladden the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peters on Tuesday evening, the 18th.

Mr. and Mrs. Claas Symens and Wilbur Larsen were Mason City callers, Thursday. Wilbur went to consult the eye specialist.

Mrs. A. L. Nelson went to Illinois on Friday to visit her father for a couple of weeks, who has not been in very good health for the past year.

Mrs. Fred Bobst entertained the Delta Alpha Sunday School class in the church basement on Friday evening. A most enjoyable evening was spent in various games, after which a very delicious luncheon was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greenfield and son, Frederick were very pleasantly entertained on Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Cowley east of Rowan.

Fred Larsen, who is in the hospital at Belmond, suffering with blood poisoning in his hand, enjoyed a visit on Sunday afternoon from Ray Richards and George Dunn.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Klinefelter, of Brookings, South Dakota spent the past week with his brother, Elias.

St. John's Evangelical Church

Services Sunday, February 6, as follows

Sunday School at 2:00 p. m.

Preaching at 3:00 p. m., in the English language.

At the last business meeting John Walzing was elected trustee for three years.

Our Ladies' Aid meets Tuesday, the 8th, with Mrs. Will Mullenbruch. All are welcome to our services.

C. J. Barth, Pastor.

United Church of Alexander

Communion service next Sunday morning.

The Delta Alpha class will meet with Mrs. Lee Reed on Friday evening of this week.

The Ladies' Aid will meet in the basement Wednesday afternoon, February 9. Hostesses, Mrs. E. L. Klinefelter and Mrs. William Tinkey.

The Missionary Circle will meet with Mrs. Maude Peters Thursday afternoon, February 10. Program leader, Mrs. Henrietta Peters.

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

PUBLIC SALE

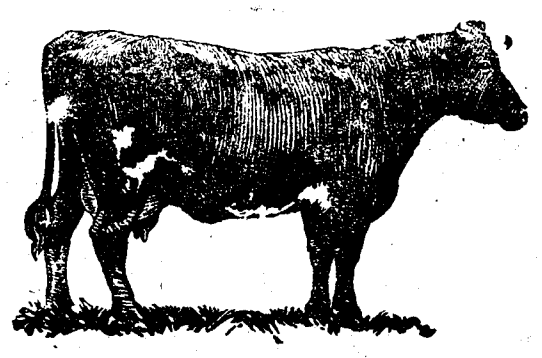
AS I HAVE DECIDED TO QUIT FARMING, I WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION ON MY FARM, LOCATED 4 1-2 MILES NORTH AND 1-2 MILE WEST OF MESERVEY, 5 MILES EAST AND 1 MILE SOUTH OF KLEMME, 10 MILES SOUTH AND 1-2 MILE WEST OF VENTURA, ON

Thursday, February 10

COMMENCING AT 10:30 O'CLOCK

11 - Head Horses and Mules - 11

1 BLACK MARE, 2 yrs. old. 1 BROWN MARE, 2 yrs. old. 1 BAY GELDING, 1 yr. old.
1 BAY MARE, 1 yr. old. 1 BLACK SPRING COLT. 1 SPAN BLACK MULES, coming 4 yrs. old, wt. 3,000.
1 BLACK MARE, 12 yrs. old, wt. 1500. 1 BLACK TEAM, 4 and 8 yrs. old, wt. 2700.
1 BAY MARE, 2 yrs. old, wt. 1400.



55 Head Cattle

11 MILK COWS, five fresh; the others will be soon.
9 CALVES. 17 yearling STEERS.
10 yearling HEIFERS.
3 two-year-old STEERS. 3 two-year-old HEIFERS.
1 pure bred roan SHORTHORN BULL, 2 1-2 months old.
1 pure bred roan SHORT HORN BULL, coming 2 yrs. old.
These Cattle are T. B. Tested.

54 - Head Summer and Fall Shoats - 54

ALL CHOLERA IMMUNE

FARM MACHINERY, ETC.

1 Dain hay loader.
1 20-ft. pounder drag.
2 Keystone 8-ft. discs.
1 McCormick 8-ft. binder.
1 5-ft. McCormick mower.
1 Case sulky plow, 16-inch.
1 Stoughton manure spreader.
1 John Deere gang plow, 13-in.
1 Deering corn picker, No. 3, with motor attached.
1 International grain drill with grass seed attachment.
1 Hayes corn planter, nearly new, with 120 rods wire and bean attachment.
2 bob sleds.
2 hay racks.
2 truck wagons.
1 spring wagon.
1 sweep grinder.
1 wagon with box.
2 single row cultivators.
1 two-hole corn sheller.
1 Moline two-row cultivator.
1 Moline endgate seeder with grass attachment.
1 International feed grinder, 10-inch.
1 John Deere two-row cultivator.
3 sets fly nets.
1 8-ft. steel tank.
1 Ideal hog waterer.
3 10-gal. cream cans.
Milk pails and cans.
1 set back pad harness.
2 sets breeching harness.
9 galvanized hog troughs.
1 DeLaval cream separator with power attachment.
1 Associated gas engine, 2 1-2 H. P.
Household goods and other articles too numerous to mention.

140 bushels Choice Seed Barley Some Corn in Crib

Free Hot Lunch Served At 11:30 O'clock

TERMS—ALL SUMS OF $10 OR UNDER, CASH. OVER THAT AMOUNT 10 MONTHS TIME ON BANKABLE NOTES BEARING 8 PERCENT INTEREST. ALL PROPERTY TO BE SETTLED FOR ON DAY OF SALE.

MILLER & REEMSTMA, Aucts.

A. J. NISSEN. Clerk.

G. GOBELI

Local News

Mrs. Oscar Gantin underwent a minor operation Thursday, for removal of her tonsils.

Mrs. M. I. Allen was hostess to the Chain of Ten, Tuesday.

L. Sharp and family moved Friday to the Lobdell farm, where they will make their home. Lew will continue to operate the oil wagon as before.

Howard Forristal and family moved to the Tyrrell farm, Monday. Leo Dorr moved to the house vacated by the Forristals, in the Barry addition.

Harold Wallace, who is employed in Des Moines, spent the week end with his family here.

The Misses Mona Smith and Lillian McNutt spent Saturday with Miss Smith's grandmother, Mrs. Wickersheim, at Meservey.

Mrs. C. O. Fitts and daughter left Friday to visit Mrs. Fitts' sister. Mrs. Barth, and family, at Boone. Mr. Fitts and son, Orvis, and Mrs. Newgard motored down Sunday, Mrs. Fitts returning with them.

Carl McIntyre left last week for Iowa City, where he entered the State University the first of this week. Caryl is beginning the course in medicine, studying to be a doctor.

Geo. Hardwick went to Ames to attend the 25th anniversary of the Corn Growers' Association. Mr. Hardwick helped organize this association twenty-five years ago.

Miss Agnes Hinman left last Friday for Iowa City, where she will take a course in nurses' training.

"The Maid and the Golden Slipper," Junior High Operetta, Thursday, February 3.

Mrs. Ralph Edwards returned to her home at Rockwell City Tuesday after a few days' visit with her mother, Mrs. Newgard and her sister, Mrs. C. O. Fitts.

Geo. Thompson, and son Richard, motored to Austin, Minnesota, Friday, to attend a pure bred Duroc Jersey hog sale. They purchased one of the top sows of the sale.

Chas. Thiltgen returned last week from Madison, Wisconsin, where he had been laying brick on a new building.

Mrs. E. F. Bailey returned this week from Wichita, Kansas, where she has been visit her son, Floyd, and family.

Second Annual Sale, 40 Head Spotted Poland China Bred Sows, Friday, February 11. Sale held at farm, 5 miles southwest of Goldfield, Iowa. Albin J. Nelson. 1*

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Congregational church met with Mrs. Geo. Elder, January 27th, with good attendance. Devotional led by Mrs. Thos. Cullinan. The president, Mrs. M. F. Christie, outlined our study for the next year, and also appointed her committees. Jean Elder and Amelia Greenlander each favored with piano solos, which were enjoyed by all. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Elder, Mrs. Christie, Mrs. W. A. Parsons and Mrs. Myrtle Trager.

Dr. J. J. Blau, of Des Moines, a dentist, was killed Friday when his automobile crashed into a safety island at 31st and Grand avenue. Dr. Blau, who was a young dentist, was a cousin of Theo Bonte, of Belmond, nd a roommate of Dr. Larson, of Belmond, when the latter attended college, Blau being located at Valley Junction where he was practicing at the time of his death. Funeral services were held at Alexander, his home town, Sunday.

Special for Saturday, Cinnamon Rolls and Coffee Cake.—Barban's Bakery.

Stella Pomes of Fort Dodge visited at the Pat Barry home over Sunday.

Mrs. R. E. Lee Aldrich was pleasantly surprised about midnight Monday, January 31, when her son, Nathan, called her up from St. Louis, Mo., to extend his birthday greetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Oren Hanson and son Roger, Mrs. Ralph Nelson and Ona Barton spent the week end with the latter's parents at Buffalo Center.

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

Send the Coupon

For a FREE COPY of our ILLUSTRATED BOOK and for the PARTICULARS of our 7 percent INVESTMENT

Central States Electric Company,
515 Merchants National Bank Building,
Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Send me a FREE COPY
your Illustrated Book and information concerning your 7 percent Investment for Customers.

Name .....

Address .....

Central States Electric Co.
CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

Perhaps You Don't Know It---

But you can get more money for your cream by selling it to the Creamery.

When you sell your cream to a station you receive the market price, and that's all.

When you sell your cream to the Creamery, you receive the Market Price—in cash, just as much as you would at the station—and, in addition, you receive the Profit on that cream at the end of the two-weeks' period!

Did you know that? Then, when you can get cash on the spot, and an extra dividend besides—

Why not patronize your own Creamery, Mr. Farmer, and get more money for doing it?

Think it over!

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

An Inducement for Early Orders

The Famous
John Deere Balance Riding Cultivator
At a Price on Delivery . . . $45.00

This Cultivator was regularly sold at $52.50 last season.

The Hummer Balance Riding Cultivator
This cultivator was regularly sold at $46.00 last season now only $39.50

See these cultivators at our store now---and place your order for summer delivery.

These Cultivators are guaranteed to be the latest 1927 models, and the price is guaranteed to be the lowest of the season.

GRIESY'S

PHONE 10. The Friendly Place BELMOND, IOWA

Sampson Stock Farm

Bred Sow

And

Gilt Sale

50 Head Spotted Poland Chinas

Sale held at the heated Foundry Building at Rock Island Yards

BELMOND, IOWA

Saturday, Feb. 12

Beginning Promptly at 1:00 O'clock P. M.

You will find in this sale some Old Sows, Fall Gilts and Spring Gilts, and you will be able to choose one or more of this offering for your next year's breeding stock.

Bred to The Prospect and The Pontiac.

This is not an ordinary farm, but a breeding establishment of pure bred Spotted Polands, Guernsey Cattle, and White Plymouth Rock Poultry. We invite your inspection at any time. Write for catalog, attend this sale---you will find the real Spotted Poland money-making type of good hogs.

COL. CHAS. TAYLOR, What Cheer, Iowa, Auctioneer
STATE BANK of BELMOND, Clerk
LEWIS HAUGE, Fieldman

Sampson Stock Farm

Owners

Here's a Feeder that soon Pays For Itself

Jamesway
Free Feed
CAFETERIA

EVERY farm flock in this locality should have one of these FIVE-IN-ONE Feeders; contains compartments for Mash, Grain, Oyster Shell, Grit and Charcoal. It's a great labor saver—only needs filling once a week and your flock can always eat what they want, when they want it. They balance their ration as nature dictates and as a result you get more eggs—your flock is healthier.

Saves Labor—Saves Feed

This practical feeder comes in two sizes—100 flock size and 200 flock size. Think what a convenience it would be to just fill this up once a week and know that you flock was provided with feed for an entire week. It's the busy farmer's friend. Built with a patented shaking device that always keeps feed down in feed troughs. Feed is always clean and absolutely no waste. Slanting tilting top prevents birds roosting on top. We guarantee that this feeder will pay for itself in one season in saved feed and labor. Let us show you this incomparable feeder.

Sold by
ANDERSON HATCHERY
Phone 27 Belmond, Iowa

BAKER STOCK FARM
Big Type Poland China
Spring Gilt Sale

Wednesday, Feb. 9, 1927

At 1:00 O'clock P. M.
In the Heated Foundry Building at Rock Island Yards
BELMOND, - IOWA

This splendid offering is featuring the get of REVENUAL A-26939. Herd Boar, he by Revenue A-379 out of Joker Lady 2nd. Twenty-one first, eleven seconds, four grand championships and three junior championships were won in 1925 at the Fort Dodge, Humboldt, Algona and Britt fairs and exhibitions. You will find the real Big Type in this lot of Gilts. All hogs have been treated and should be immune.

SEND FOR CATALOG!

M. J. Murphy, Mason City, Ia., Auctioneer.
State Bank of Belmond, Clerk.

BAKER STOCK FARM

Max Baker, Proprietor
BELMOND, - IOWA

LYDIA of the Pines

by HONORÉ WILLSIE

W.N.U. SERVICE COPYRIGHT by FREDERICK A. STOKES CO.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With her baby sister, Patience, Lydia returns from play to the untidy home of her impoverished father, Amos Dudley, at Lake City. Her father's friend, and her own devoted admirer, John Levine, after discussing affairs with Dudley, makes up his mind to go into politics.

CHAPTER II.—Lydia, Patience and a companion, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw from the nearby reservation. Lydia gives her food. Margery, small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. In their play Margery falls into the water. She is pulled out, unhurt but frightened, and taken home by Lydia and Kent. Her father calls on Amos to complain, blaming Lydia for the mishap.

CHAPTER III.—Lydia explains the accident and asserts that because Margery is considered "stuck up" she is not a popular playmate. Marshall arranges for Lydia to teach Margery to swim and otherwise become "one of the crowd." Levine tells Amos his plan to take timber from the Indian reservation and ultimately have it opened for settlement. From an older boy, Billy Norton, Lydia gets a pair of wild ducks, and despite their poverty the Dudleys have a Christmas feast.

CHAPTER IV.—Patience succumbs to an attack of diphtheria, leaving Lydia feeling that her trust in God is lost and her small world has collapsed. She finds comfort in the loving kindness of John Levine. Lydia learns that a note of Amos', backed by Levine and held by Marshall, is due and cannot be met. The child pleads with Marshall, and for her sake he agrees to renew the note.

CHAPTER V.—Grieving for the loss of little Patience, Lydia's health fails. Levine, understanding the situation, gives her a pup, which the lonely child takes to her heart. Reaching the age of fifteen, Lydia enters high school, where she at once realizes that her homemade frock and general appearance of poverty set her apart from her better-dressed companions. She attends a party given by her teacher, Miss Towne. The other girls, smartly dressed, make fun of her makeshift costume.

CHAPTER VI.—Levine is elected sheriff. A sixteen-year-old Indian boy, Charlie Jackson, tells Lydia of numerous wrongs done his people, mainly by Marshall and Levine. Lydia defends her friend vigorously. Meeting Levine in Lydia's house, Charlie Jackson threatens and endeavors to attack him.

CHAPTER VII.—Levine is shot by an unseen assassin. Recuperating at the Dudley cottage, he learns the real extent of Lydia's loneliness and her shaken faith in God. The man and girl enter into a compact to start a "search for God" together. Levine, recovered, begins his campaign for congress.

CHAPTER VIII.—Lydia is unable to drive the hatred of Levine from Charlie's heart, and despite herself her faith in her old friend is shaken by the young Indian's stories. Levine has long realized that despite their disparity in age he is passionately in love with the young girl.

CHAPTER IX.—Levine is triumphant in his campaign for congress. Lydia earns enough money selling fudge to go camping with Charlie, Kent, Margery and two school friends, Gustus Bach and a girl named Olga. Miss Towne chaperons them.

CHAPTER X.—Walking with Kent in the woods, Lydia witnesses a meeting of Levine and some halfbreeds. Their conversation convinces Lydia that Charlie has been right in accusing Levine of plotting to rob the Indians.

CHAPTER XI.—A visit from the old squaw whom Lydia had befriended long ago causes Charlie to tell more of Marshall's and Levine's thievery. Lydia promises to talk to Levine. Billy Norton makes a boyish proposal of marriage to Lydia, who repulses him. In her talk with Levine the man avers his methods are lawful and really best for the Indians. The girl is only half convinced.

CHAPTER XII.—Charlie tells Lydia his father was killed by halfbreeds at the instigation of Levine, and she is miserable at the thought. The family poverty also weighs heavily on her. She is elected class valedictorian. Billy Norton takes her to the senior ball, where she has her first girlish "wonderful time."

CHAPTER XIII.—Congress passes Levine's bill for the opening of the reservation. At the celebration of the event the Indians, led by Charlie, make a disturbance. Billy Norton saves Lydia from harm. Amos arranges to get 120 acres of the reservation, through Levine. Billy tells Lydia he is going to expose Marshall's crooked deals.

CHAPTER XIV.—A congressional commission comes to Lake City to investigate Indian matters, and evidence involving most of the town's prominent citizens is produced.

CHAPTER XV.—Before the commission Charlie Jackson accuses Levine of complicity in the murder of his father. Lydia warmly defends Levine. Dave Marshall is exposed as the owner of the "Last Chance," a brothel which was also headquarters for the illegal selling of whisky to Indians.

CHAPTER XVI.—Kent asks Lydia to marry him. The girl refuses. To obtain a suitable frock for the "junior prom" Lydia overworks and goes through a severe siege of pneumonia.

CHAPTER XVII.—After the removal of the Indians to another reservation Levine is shot by Charlie Jackson's sister and the old squaw Lydia had befriended. Levine dies in Lydia's arms. His "search" is ended. All his property is left to the girl. She refuses to accept the Indian lands.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Levine's estate is found to consist practically of 320 acres of land of the Indian reservation. Lydia finally agrees to accept this property, overcome by the importunities of her father and Kent.

CHAPTER XIX.—Billy succeeds in convincing Lydia that her heart really has always belonged to him. She announces her determination to homestead her Indian land, finally winning her father over to her view. Lydia is elected a member of the "Scholars' club," the highest honor the school can bestow, but she is prouder of Billy's love and the knowledge that, in homesteading her land she is in a measure making up for the dubious methods by which Levine had obtained it.

Billy, trundling up the dusty road from the law office on his bicycle, late each afternoon, would stop for a moment or two.

"The drought is something frightful," he said to Lydia one afternoon in late August, wiping the sweat and dust from his face. "Are you feeling any more cheerful, Lyd?"

"I shall always have a gap in my life, where he went out," she said, slowly. "I shall never get over missing him. Oh, he was so dear to me! And yet, Billy, it isn't at all like Patience's death. He didn't depend on me and I didn't live with him so that everything doesn't cry his absence to me. And I've got more resources than I had then—"

She laid her hand on the open book in her lap.

"What're you reading?" asked Billy.

"Emerson—Compensation. Listen, Billy—'We cannot part with our friends. We cannot let our angels go. We do not see that they only go out that archangels may come in.'

"And so," Lydia's voice trembled, but she went on bravely, "I'm trying to understand—trying to see how I can make something good come out of his poor lost life. Somehow I feel as if that were my job. And—and the idea helps me. Oh, my dear John Levine!"

The two young people sat staring at the distant hills.

"Don't you see," Lydia burst out, "that I've got to do something, be something, to make all the loss and trouble of my life worth while?"

"I understand," answered Billy.

Early in September, John Levine's will was found. He had left his entire property, unconditionally, to Lydia.

Amos, at first, was frantic with delight. Lydia was appalled.

"All my life," she half sobbed to her father, "I've been fighting to get away from Indian lands. And Mr. Levine knew how I felt. Oh, how could he do this to me!

"Don't talk like a fool, Lydia!" roared Amos.

"But don't you see how I feel?" cried Lydia. "Don't you see that all John Levine's lands up there are haunted by death—his own—and all the starved Indians? Oh, why did he do this to me! I won't have it, I tell you! I'd rather be poverty stricken all my life."

"Well, don't worry too much about that," said Kent. "Dave Marshall thinks there won't be anything left after the estate is settled, but the Indian lands."

"Oh, Kent, you aren't having anything to do with Dave Marshall, are you?" exclaimed Lydia.

Kent flushed a little. "Well, his advice can't hurt me. If it's bad, I don't have to take it. You ought to go out and see his farm, Lydia. They're getting the house all fitted with modern conveniences. Dave's going to make a model stock farm."

"Bought with money earned by the Last Chance!" said Lydia.

Kent looked at her quizzically. "A New England conscience must be something awful to own, eh, Lyd?"

Lydia chuckled. "It's pretty bad," she admitted, then she went on soberly, "but I won't take these Indian lands."

"You can give them to me," said Kent, cheerfully.

"She'll keep them," said Amos, shortly, "or Lydia and I'll have our first real row."

Lydia looked at Kent thoughtfully. Since the day under the willows, he had not made love to her, yet she had the feeling that Kent was devoted to her and she wondered sometimes why he liked to spend as much time with Margery as with herself. Then she gave herself a mental shake.

"I'm going to tell you right now, that until I have to I'm not going to worry. I'm going to try to be happy in my senior year."

CHAPTER XVIII

Cap and Gown

The fifteen dollars, after all, were disposed of in a highly satisfactory manner. They paid for Lydia's cap and gown. Perhaps there were other members of the class to whom their senior insignia meant as much as they did to Lydia, but that is to be doubted.

In a way, Lydia's conscience smote her. She knew that her father was worrying over her attitude on her inheritance, but she continued to avoid the issue with him while the estate was being settled. Lydia was doing heavy work in college. She actually had entered all the classes in dairying possible, while carrying her other college work. And she enjoyed the new work amazingly.

Early in December, the settlement of the Levine estate was completed. John's method of "shoestringing" his property was disastrous as far as the size of Lydia's heritage went. As nearly as she could understand, one portion of the estate was used to pay up the indebtedness of another portion, until all that was left was the cottage, with a mortgage on it, and three hundred and twenty acres of land on the reservation.

"Oh, daddy!" cried Lydia, "we can't take it! Don't you see we can't?"

"I can't understand why you act so like a fool," began Amos, querulously. "And I can't see why you set your judgment up as better than mine. I swan—even your mother never did that, except on borrowing money. We won't keep the land. We'll sell it and have the money to clear up the mortgage on the cottage." He took a turn up and down the room. "I can't see what's happened to children nowadays. In my day we obeyed. Lydia, I'm not going to discuss this any longer. You've got to take that land."

Lydia sat with her thin hands clasped before her on the table, her clear eyes fastened on her father's face.

Amos looked down at his daughter grimly. "Can't you see what a fool you are!" he shouted. "The land can never go back to the Indians. John took good care of that. If you don't take it, somebody else will. Can't you see!"

"I'll do anything you want but this, dad," she said.

"But this is all I want. It's what I've wanted for years, this little bit of land. And you haven't any idea what that feeling is."

Like a flash Lydia saw again long aisles of pines, smelled again the odor of the needles, heard again the murmuring call of the wind.

"Good God!" cried Amos, tossing his pipe on the table, "poverty's hounded me all my life—poverty and death. The only two people who cared about me. Patience and Levine're gone. Yet here's the chance for me to be independent. Here's a chance for me to make up for the failure I've made of life. A man with a little piece of property like this and a little bank account is somebody in the community. What do I care how I get it, as long's I can hold it? What's a lot of dirty Indians to stand between me and my future? But what do you care?"

"O daddy! O daddy! How can you talk so to me!" groaned Lydia. She put her hands over her eyes for a moment, swallowed a sob and then started for the outer door. She caught her coat from the nail and closed the door behind her.

An irresistible impulse had carried her from the house. She wanted to see Billy. It was still early and a lantern flickered in the Norton barnyard. She ran across to the shed door. Billy was whistling to himself as he began to bed down the cattle for the night. Lydia looked at him eagerly in the dim light. How big and strong he was!

"Billy!" she said, softly.

The young man dropped his pitchfork and came toward her. "What's the matter, Lydia!" he exclaimed.

"Dad and I've been having an awful quarrel."

"About the land?" asked Billy quickly.

Lydia nodded. "Oh, I don't know what to do!" And then, not having meant to do so at all, she suddenly began to cry.

"Why can't they let you alone, d—n 'em!" exclaimed Billy, furiously. "Come away from that cold doorway, dear." And he led her into the warm stable and over to a harness box. "There," pulling her down beside him on the box, and putting his arm about her, "don't cry, Lydia. I can't stand it. I'm liable to go over and say things to your father and Kent. I'll tell 'em both, some time, what I think of their bullying you this way."

A vague, warm sense of comfort and protection was stilling Lydia's trembling. She rose and looked up into his face gratefully. "I don't see why you're so good to me," she said.

"Do you want me to tell you?" began the young man eagerly.

"No! No!" Lydia began to move hastily toward the door. "Don't come home with me, Billy. I'll just run back alone."

Billy's face in the lantern light was inscrutable. "I'll obey tonight, Lydia," he said, "but the time's coming, when I won't," and he picked up the pitchfork he had dropped.

With the sense of comfort and protection sustaining her, Lydia went homeward under the winter stars. Kent's automobile was standing before the gate and Lydia's heart sank. It was the first time in her life she ever had been sorry at the thought of seeing Kent.

He was sitting before the base burner with her father and jumped up to help her take her coat off. He greeted her soberly.

"Your father's been telling me about your discussion, Lyd," he said. "You can't mean to stick by your decision!"

Lydia sat down wearily. "Oh, Kent, don't you begin at me, too."

"Now look here, Lydia," began Kent, "let's begin at the beginning and sift this thing out," and once more he began his arguments on the Indian question.

"Don't you see?" he ended finally.

"I see how you feel, yes," replied Lydia. "But just because you can list what you call average American business deals that are crooked, you aren't justified in being crooked, are you?"

Kent threw out his hand helplessly, and for a moment there was silence in the room, then he said, "Well, after all, there's nothing so selfish as your Puritans. Of course, every one but yourselves is wrong. And, of course, it doesn't occur to you that it might be a decent thing of you to sacrifice your own scruples to do a thing that would mean so much to your father."

Lydia looked at Kent quickly. This was a new angle. He would have followed this opening at once had not Amos spoken for the first time.

"Hold up, Kent," he said in a tired voice. "Don't heckle her any more. After all, I'm getting on toward fifty and I guess it's too late for me to begin over, anyhow. I'll plod along as I always have."

"Oh, daddy!" cried Lydia, "don't talk that way! You aren't a bit old. You make me feel like a beast, between you."

"Well, we don't mean to," Amos went on, "but I guess we have been pretty hard on you."

Amos' weariness and gentleness moved Lydia as no threats could. Was she selfish? Was she putting her own desire for an easy conscience ahead of her father's happiness? Amos went into the kitchen for a drink and Kent followed her to the window and took both her hands.

"Lydia," he said, "I'm awful sorry to press you so, but you're being unfair and foolish, honestly you are. You used to let me look out for you in the old days—the old days when I used to pull little Patience's carriage with my bicycle—why can't you trust me now? Come, dearest—and next year we'll be married and live happy ever after."

"Kent!" she cried with the breathlessness of a new idea, "if I should give in and agree to take the land, would you go up there with me and turn it into a farm?"

Kent smiled at her pityingly. "Why, Lyd, there's nothing in that! Why should we try to farm it? The money is in speculating with it. I could clear up a mint of money for you in a couple of years, if you'll give me the handling of it."

But Lydia's eyes were shining now. "Oh, but listen! You don't understand. Mr. Levine drove the Indians out, by fraud and murder. Yes, he did, Kent. And yet, he had big dreams about it. He must have had. He was that kind of a man. And if we should go up there and turn those acres into a great farm, and—and make it stand for something big and right—perhaps that would make up for everything!"

"Lydia," said Kent, "be sensible. Gee, easy money on one side, and a lifetime of hard work on the other! Yet you act as if there was a choice."

"Kent, can't you understand how I feel?" pleaded Lydia. "Have you got a blind spot in your mind where money is concerned? Are all the men in America money crazy like the men in Lake City?"

"Sure," replied Kent cheerfully. "Oh, Lydia, honey, don't be so hard! Look at your poor old dad! Think what it would mean to him. Don't be so doggone sanctimonious!"

Instead of looking at her father, Lydia looked at Kent, long and wistfully. How dear he was to her! What an inalienable part of her life he was! What was the use of always struggling against her heart. Kent smiled into her face. Her lips trembled and she hurried to look at Amos. Suddenly Lydia realized how gray and broken he looked, how bent his shoulders were with work, and there swept over her anew an understanding of his utter loneliness since her mother's and Levine's deaths.

With a little inarticulate murmur, she ran across the room and threw her arms about his neck. "Oh, daddy," she cried, "I'll do it! I'll agree to it! If only you'll promise me to be happy!"

Amos dropped his pipe. "Lydia! You don't mean it! Why, my little girl! Lord, Kent! Isn't she just all right! Make me happy! Why, Lydia, you've made a young man of me—I swan——!"

Kent was holding one hand now, Amos the other. Both looked at Lydia with radiant faces. And she could but feel an answering glow.

"We'll make this up to you, Lyd, old lady," cried Kent. "See if we don't." There was a little pause during which the ice boomed. Then,

"Well, what happens next, now you've settled me?" asked Lydia.

"Something to eat," exclaimed Amos. "I didn't eat any supper. I swear I haven't eaten for months with any relish. Lydia, make us some chocolate or something."

That night, after Kent had gone, Lydia stood long at the living-room window which gave on the front gate. The pine, its boughs powdered with snow, kept its lonely vigil over the cottage.

"Yes," whispered Lydia, finally, "your last friend has deserted you, but I guess I'm keeping faith with Kent and dad, anyhow."

Then she went to bed.

For a day or so Lydia avoided Billy Norton. But she was restless and unhappy and found it difficult to keep her mind on her college work. Finally, she timed her return from the dairy school, one afternoon, to coincide with Billy's home-coming from his office and she overtook him just beyond the end of the street-car line.

"Billy!" called Lydia.

He turned and waited for her with a broad smile. "Billy," she said without preliminaries, "I gave in!"

"Lydia!" he gasped.

"I couldn't stand their pleading. I hate myself, but dad looks ten years younger!"

"Lydia!" cried Billy again, and there was such a note of pain in his voice that she turned her face to his with the same dogged look in her eyes that had been expressed in her walk.

"Lydia, I can't believe it!"

"It's true," repeated Lydia. "I couldn't stand Kent and dad both. And partly I did it for John Levine's memory. I'm not trying to justify myself, Billy. I know that I'm doing something wrong, but I've definitely made up my mind to sacrifice my own ease of conscience to dad's happiness."

"You can't do it! You aren't built that way," exclaimed Billy.

"But I am doing it," reiterated Lydia.

"Look here," he cried, eagerly, "do you expect to keep my respect and yet go on with this?"

Lydia did not reply for some time. They were nearing the cottage, and she could see the pine, black against the afterglow, when she said:

"Well, I'm not keeping my own self-respect and yet I'm glad I'm making dad and Kent happy."

They paused by the gate. Billy looked down at Lydia with a puzzled frown.

"How about 'Ducit Amor Patriae' now, Lydia?" he asked.

"Oh, I don't know," she sighed. "Good night, Billy."

"Good-by, Lydia," said the young man heavily and he turned away, leaving her standing at the gate.

Lydia went over and over their conversation that night feverishly before she went to sleep. She tossed and turned and then, long after the old living-room clock had struck midnight, she slipped out of bed and crouched on her knees, her hands clasped across her pillow, her eyes on the quiet stars that glowed through the window.

"O God," she prayed, "O God, if You do exist, help me now! Don't let me lose Billy's respect, for I don't know how I can get along without it. God! God! Make me believe in You, for I must have Some One to turn to! You have taken mother and little Patience and John Levine from me! Oh, let me keep Billy! Let me keep him, God, and make me strong enough to keep on accepting that three hundred and twenty acres. Amen."

Shivering, but somehow quieted, she crept into bed and fell asleep.

CHAPTER XIX

The Youngest Scholar

If Amos was not happy after Lydia's concession, at least she never had seen him so interested in life as he was now. Nor had Kent ever been more considerate of Lydia.

All this, Lydia told herself, should have made her happy, and yet she was not. Billy came to see her as usual, and took her to an occasional dance. But he was not the friend of old. And the change was not in any neglect of things done, it was in his way of looking at her; in his long silences when he studied her face with a grieved, puzzled look that made her frantic; in his ceasing to talk over his work with her with any air of comradeship, and most of all in his ceasing to fully her—that inalienable earmark of the attitude of the lover toward the beloved.

March was long and bleak that year, but April came in as sweetly as a silver bugle call. Lydia heard the first robin call, on her way home from college. She had walked up the road ahead of Billy, her black scholar's gown fluttering. Once he would have run to overtake her, but now he plodded along a block behind, without a sound. Lydia did not pause at the cottage gate. The call of the robin was in her blood and she swung on up the road, past the Norton place and into the woods.

There was a log at hand and she sat down, threw her mortarboard on the ground and rested, chin cupped in her hands, lips parted, eyes tear dimmed. She was weary of thought. She only knew that the spiritual rightness with which she had sustained her mind and body through all the hard years of her youth had gone wrong. She only knew that a loneliness of soul she could not seem to endure was robbing her of a youth that as yet she had scarcely tasted.

Suddenly there was the sound of hasty footsteps through the dead leaves. Lydia looked up. Billy was striding toward her. She did not speak, nor did he.

He strode to the log, stooped, and drew Lydia to her feet. Then he lifted her, scholar's gown and all, in his arms and kissed her full on the lips, kissed her long and passionately, then looked deep into her eyes and held her to him until she could feel his heart beating full and quick.

For just a moment Lydia did not stir, then she threw her arms around his neck, hid her face against his shoulder and clung to him with an intensity that made him tremble.

Billy slipped his hand under Lydia's cheek and turned her face so that he could look into her eyes. At what he saw there his own firm lips quivered.

"Lydia!" he whispered.

Then he kissed her again.

"Now," he said gently, with a smile of a quality Lydia never had seen on his lips before, "now, sweetheart, are you going to be good?"

"Yes," murmured Lydia, with a contralto lilt in her voice. "What do you want me to do, Billy?"

"I want what you want, dearest. I want the old Lydia with the vision. Has she come back, or shall I have to look for her again?"

He started as if to take Lydia in his arms once more, but, with a sudden rich little laugh, she stepped away from him.

"She's here—oh, Billy, dearest! How could you let her wander around alone so long?"

"It didn't hurt my cause any for her to miss me," answered Billy, grimly, "though I didn't realize that till a moment ago. Stop your trembling, Lydia. I'm here to look out for you, for the rest of time."

They walked back to the cottage in silence, hand in hand. They paused at the gate and Lydia pointed through the dusk at the new moon.

"Let's wish on it," she said. "Close your eyes, and wish."

Billy closed his eyes. A kiss as soft as the robin's note fell on his lips and the gate clicked. He opened his eyes and stood looking up the path long after the door closed, his hat in his hand.

Lydia wandered into the dining room quite casually.

"For heaven's sake, Lydia!" cried Amos. "I was just going to start on a hunt for you!"

"I took a walk in the woods," explained Lydia, "and was gone longer than I realized."

"Supper's ready. Sit right down," said Lizzie, looking at Lydia intently. "Seen Kent today, Lydia?" she asked.

After a moment—"Did you speak to me, Lizzie?" Lydia inquired.

"Yes, I did. I asked if you'd seen Kent today."

"I? No, I haven't seen Kent. We had a quiz in chemistry today."

"What's that got to do with anything?" grunted Lizzie. But she asked no more questions.

Ma Norton came over during the evening to borrow some yeast. Amos was working over some figures on a bit of paper. Lydia was sitting with a text book in front of her. She had not turned a leaf in twenty minutes, to Lizzie's actual count.

"Spring's here," said ma. "Though there's still a bite in the air. Not that Billy seems to notice it. I found him sitting on the front steps with his cigar, as if it was June."

Lizzie gave Lydia a quick look and wondered if she only imagined that her cheeks were turning pinker.

"I can't sit down," ma went on; "I've got to set this sponge to rise."

"I'll walk home with you, Mrs. Norton," said Lydia, suddenly. "It seems as if one couldn't get enough of this first spring day."

"Do!" Ma's voice was always extra cordial when she spoke to Lydia.

Lizzie watched the door close behind the two. "I knew it," she exclaimed.

"Knew what?" inquired Amos, looking up from his figures.

"That there was a new moon," answered the old lady shortly, trudging off to her bedroom.

"Liz is getting childish," thought Amos, returning to his work.

Billy's mother went into the kitchen entrance and Lydia went over to the dim figure on the steps.

"Your mother told me to speak to you," she said meekly.

"I heard her." Billy gave a low laugh. "Come up here in the shadow, sweetheart, and tell me if you ever saw such a moonlit and starlit night."

The night was brilliant and Billy, responding to some little petitioning note in Lydia's voice, did not offer to touch her but stood looking down at the sweet, dim face turned up to his. She lifted her hand, that thin hand with the work calluses on it, and ran it over his cheeks, brushed her cheek against his shoulder, and then ran away.

She finished her studying and went to bed early, only to lie awake for hours. At last she crept out of bed and, as once before, she clasped her hands and lifted her face to the heavens. "Thank you, God!" she whispered. Then she went to sleep.

The next night Kent came out to the cottage. Lydia dreaded his coming so little that she was surprised. Yet this day had been one of continual surprise to her. She had wakened to a dawn of robin songs, and had dressed with an answering song in her own heart. She was as one who had never known sorrow or anxiety. Her whole future lay before her, a clear and unobstructed pathway.

For Lydia had found herself. She was a creature to whom a great love and devotion were essential as motive forces. In turn she had given this, in childish form to her mother, to little Patience and to Levine. One by one these had been taken from her and she had struggled to give this devotion to Kent, but she could not give where there was no understanding.

And now she saw that for years it had been Billy. Billy, who combined all the best of what her mother, her baby sister and Levine had meant to her, with something greatly more—the divinity of passion—a thing she could not understand, yet that had created a new world for her.

Kent tossed his hat on the couch and shook his head at Amos. "Dave's not going to get away with it. He's got some kind of a row going with the Whisky people and he says we might as well count him out. I don't know what to do now."

Amos groaned. "Lord, what luck!"

"Don't let it worry you," said Lydia calmly. "I made up mind today that I'd go ahead and enter on that land just as other folks are doing, in the good old way. I'm going to make a farm up there, that will blot out all memory of what Mr. Levine did. But I'm going to work for it as a homesteader has to and not take any advantage through Mr. Levine's graft. I'm going to homestead for that land."

There was no escaping the note of finality in her decision.

Kent's face whitened. He looked up steadily at Lydia. The sweat stood on his forehead.

"You know what that means, as far as I'm concerned," he said.

Lydia, chin up, gaze never more clearly blue, nodded.

"Yes, Kent, but we never would have been happy. You and Margery were meant for each other, anyhow. Go to Margery now and tell her, Kent."

Kent picked up his cap. "You aren't treating me right, Lydia. I'll talk to you when I'm not so sore," and he walked out of the house.

Lydia turned to Amos and Lizzie. "There," she said, happily, "I've got Kent settled for life!"

(Continued Next Week)

LOCALS

Vere Jenison, son of O. D. Jenison, was operated on for appendicitis at the local hospital yesterday. He is reported recovering nicely.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

Cinderella and the Prince appear in the Operetta Thursday evening in the school auditorium.

Mrs. Merril Galloway went to Wavery, Sunday, for a visit at the home of her grandparents.

Alfred Carpenter of Goodell was a guest at the James Trees home Sunday.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Alt Axen, of near Cornelia, died at Iowa City last week.

U. B. Tracy, of Clarion, visited his brother, O. G. Tracy, of this city, Sunday.

H. Mennenga and son, George, left Monday for Watford City, N. D., to visit at the F. Mennenga home.

Special for Saturday, Cinnamon Rolls and Coffee Cake.—Barban's Bakery.

See Cinderella in the Junior High Operetta Thursday evening.

Some good used cars for sale at the Hub Motor Co.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 8—Alsvig Bros., closing out farm sale.

FEB. 8—Roy Jenison. Spotted Poland sow sale.

FEB. 9.—Maxwell Baker, Poland China sale.

FEB. 10—G. Gobell, farm sale, location 4 miles north, 1-2 mile west of Meservey.

FEB. 12—J. M. Sampson, Spotted Poland bred sow sale.

FEB. 17—Harry Ziska, Duroc Jersey bred sow sale.

FEB. 18—Combination Sale, at the old Foundry building. Particulars next week.

FEB. 23—A. E. and T. A. Thompson, 3 1-2 miles northwest of Belmond, joint farm sale. Particulars later.

Some good used cars for sale at the Hub Motor Co.

Anyone having cattle for sale, call Petersen Market. Phone 60. 118c

Belmond seems doomed for another six weeks of cold weather, if the ground hog predictions count for anything. Wednesday the 2nd dawned bright and clear with plenty of opportunity for the ground hog to see his shadow.

About 10:50 Tuesday morning, a small fire broke out on the southeast side of the Cleveland Cafe building roof. The blaze was discovered by Mrs. Cleveland, who was upstairs at the time, and the fire department was called. The boys responded in record time and soon had the fire extinguished. Some damage, which is covered by insurance, was done to the roof and garret. It is thought that sparks from the chimney started the blaze.

A trial that created considerable comment was held before Justice of the Peace Rowen, at Rowan, Friday, when V. F. Mikesell sued Cato C. Griesy for an account alleged due him from the old Motor Inn Co., a garage. Griesy denied the account, and entered a counter claim against Mikesell for merchandise purchased from the Griesy store. The jury denied Mr. Mikesell's account, allowed Griesy the full amount of his claim, and assessed the costs of the case to Mikesell. It is reported that Mikesell will appeal to the district court. Atty. Bullard represented Mr. Griesy and Atty. Henderson Mr. Mikesell.

A SAVING TO YOU

Twenty Cents on the Dollar! We are now selling 12 Bread Tickets for $1.00. These tickets are good for anything in our Bakery Goods. Buy your Bread as you need it and still save 20 cents on that dollar. Ask us about these tickets.—Barban's Bakery.

Mrs. Ben Johnson is at the local hospital suffering from a sprained ankle and a broken leg, the result of a fall on an icy walk Monday of this week. She was on her way to a neighbor's when she fell, and it was some time before she could make her cries for help heard. She finally managed to drag herself to the porch of the Henry Sliming home where her cries were heard. She was immediately taken to the hospital where it was found the leg was broken in two places and the ankle sprained.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dorenkamp Jr. mourn the loss of their little son, who passed away Sunday. He was taken violently ill Friday with a septic infection in one leg, and an operation was performed Saturday. The disease had progressed so rapidly, however, that he could not be saved.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	20c
Springs	20c
Roosters	10c
Stags	17c
Ducks	18c
Geese	15c
Eggs	25c
Butterfat	48c
Creamery Butter	53c
Oats	38c
Corn	50c
Barley	58c

DON'T

BE MISLEAD

by high ratings on Storage Batteries offered at an apparent low price.

There are different ways of rating Storage Batteries, and one who is not familiar with batteries may be lead to believe they can purchase batteries with a high capacity rating at an apparent low cost.

Often, some off-brand battery comes into our shop with a rating of—for instance, 100 ampere hour printed on it, when in the same size battery in the Willard would be rated at 40 or 60 ampere hour.

The capacity of a battery is controlled by the quality, size and number of plates in each cell.

Much grafting of this nature is going on thruout the country. Get the advice of a competent battery man before buying a Storage Battery for your Car or Radio.

We carry a complete stock.

BELMOND STORAGE BATTERY CO.

Phone 46 Official 2417

JUST A FEW WORDS

To remind you to get your Orders in for

FRESH BAKED GOODS
Before 9:00 O'clock Each Morning!

DOUGHNUTS!
Fresh Every Morning—the kind that leave an impression.

ORDERS TAKEN
For your Luncheon at Clubs, Lodges or other gatherings

We also sell Fresh Roasted Peanuts, Nut Meats, Home-made Divinity Fudge, Peanut Brittle, Candy Bars and Gum.

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

Good, modern home for sale, near Trinity church. Inquire at Independent. 113

FOR SALE—Northwestern Greening apples, $1.50 a bushel. Inquire of M. Halfwassen. 112c

FOR SALE—Good home-grown Early Ohio potatoes. While they last. Call 371. 112*

FOR SALE—My farm, 4 miles southwest of Belmond. For price and terms, inquire at State Bank of Belmond.—Aug. Hunst. 94*

FOR SALE—One Successful No. 5 incubator, and one Cloverleaf 300-egg incubator, in good condition. Phone 175. 112c

FOR SALE—Buick Coach, 1925 model, in good condition. Phone 206. 112c

FOR SALE—White Rock Baby Chicks, from my bred-to-lay, well-culled flock. $12.00 per 100. Also other breeds at different prices. Will do custom hatching. Mrs. Harold Smith, Alexander, Iowa. 112

FOR SALE—Jamesway brooder stove with hover, in good condition. Used only two months. A. J. Fee. 1*

FOR SALE—About 6 tons tame hay. Alt. Riekens, Phone 1617.

FOR SALE—Barred Rock roosters, Ancona roosters and hens. Mrs. Ed Murphy. 1*

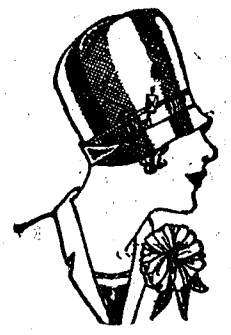
FOR SALE—1 team black mares, 9 years old, sound, wt. 1500 lbs. each; 1 set good work harness, 1 1-2 inch; 1 single harness; 1 3-section steel lever harrow; 1 thorobred Duroc boar, 10 months old, a good one; 18 new wood hen brooder coops, 2 x 3 feet, with removable bottoms; Japanese hulless popcorn, shelled, 6c a lb. Fred Kercheval, farm 6 miles south, 1-2 mile west of Belmond. Rowan phone 807. Belmond mail.

NOTICE!

The Trustees of Pleasant township will meet at the Greenlander Lumber Co. office February 7th at 2:00 p. m. for the purpose of hiring a road superintendent, and letting the King dragging for the year 1927.

O. D. JENISON,
112 Township Clerk.

New Spring Hats



Arriving Every Day!

HEMSTITCHING DONE

New Spring Embroidery Packages

The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

PLEASANT TOWNSHIP FARM BUREAU

The ladies of the farm bureau of Pleasant township will meet Thursday afternoon, February 3rd, at the home of Mrs. A. C. Lieuwen in School District No. 9.

The last lesson of the third year clothing project will be given by local leaders and is to be on "Care of Clothing."

Ben Moellering accompanied a car load of cattle to Chicago, Saturday, and while there is attending the auto show.

An unusual incident occurred at Alexander, Friday, when the three sons of J. C. Arends drove 25 head of cattle from Alexander to the Henry Miller farm south of Latimer. Richard, Mr. Arends' thirteen-year-old son, was one of the boys. Taking the cattle over, they traveled several miles on the M. & St. L. tracks, leaving the tracks at a point about two miles from Latimer. Mr. Arends was to pick up two of the boys on his return from a business trip to Hampton that afternoon. Richard started home on the pony. He cut over to follow the tracks back, but turned too soon and got onto the tracks a mile farther on than they had turned off going over. Coming to a bridge, he attempted to ride his pony across. The animal fell between the ties and could not get out. Richard walked to the nearest farm house, that of Jess Hagen, to secure help. Hagen phoned the M. & St. L. agent at Latimer, who with a number of Latimer men drove out to assist in getting the pony off the bridge. Mr. Arends, not knowing anything had happened, became worried over the non-return of Richard and was just starting out with some of the neighbors to hunt him about nine o'clock that evening when the boy walked in at home.

Belmond Opera House

WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY
FEBRUARY 2 and 3
TOM TYLER in
"Let's Go Gallagher"

A little boy and a dog with a sore foot, rolling down the track on a handcar toward the onrushing Express—the scream of a whistle—the hiss of steam—the grinding of brakes—the flash of a stalwart cowboy on a madly galloping horse. A big swirling, surging, smasher of the Western ranges.

"ETIQUETTE"
2-reel F. B. O. Comedy
Prices 10c and 20c

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 4
DANCE

Music furnished by Neota Ridder's Orchestra. This orchestra will surely be here.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 5
"Lord Jim"

with Percy Marmont, Shirley Mason, Noah Beery and Raymond Hatton. The greatest adventure story of the sea.

"GREAT GUNS"
2-reel Educational Comedy
Prices 10c and 20c

PFANSTIEHL OVERTONE RADIO

The importance of overtones in voice or music needs no stressing to the musical mind.

Radio tone is largely a matter of comparison. Many Radios are decidedly poor in tone. Others are fairly clear and not displeasing. But compare them with a Pfanstiehl Overtone Receiver and you will know the difference. It's tone is much richer and purer. That is all due to the perfect reproduction of the Overtones.

We are making Special Prices on Models 18 and 20.

Do not put off buying your Radio until next year. We can save you some money. You will enjoy having a Radio at this time.

Big Discount on Edison Phonograph and Victrolas.
Victor Records 29c Each. 4 for $1.00.
Edison Records 44c Each. 3 for $1.25.

Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Thursday - Friday - Saturday
February 3-4-5

Weiners, per pound	20c
Picnic Hams, per pound	20c
Spare Ribs, per pound	20c
Delicia Oleo, per pound	22c

We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Why Pay More?

When you can buy your staple groceries here at our new Cash Saving Prices and buy for less? We have marked down our groceries under our Cash Sales system and offer you real money-savers. Just as a sample of the many bargains we are selling

	Each
CORN, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PEAS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
TOMATOES, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
KRAUT, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
HOMINY, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PORK & BEANS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, February 3, 1927 No. 43

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

Do you realize that 1927 is one-twelfth gone?

—

A man who brings up seven or eight children these days deserves a lot of credit. In fact, he can't get along without it.

—

Are there any cross word puzzle fans present? If so can you give us an English word of four letters ending with "eny"? This is a purely mental test and it is no fair writing. Let us know if you get it.

—

They tell us this happened in one of our local churches the other Sunday. The Sunday school superintendent said "I'm glad to see so many bright and shining faces here this morning." And every lady in the audience grabbed for her powder puff.

—

We have a lot of sympathy for the central girls over at the telephone office. They give us fine service when you stop to think about it. Trouble is, not many of us stop to think.

—

Today you know everybody rides in automobiles or flies, plays golf, goes to a dance or show every night, and then spends the rest of the night trying to get BLAA on the radio, buys his B. V. D's. on installments and thinks he is having a heck of a time. These are days of prohibition, income tax, static, tourist camps and "no parking" signs, and if you think life is worth living you will KNOW that it is if you try some of our good coal.

—

We claim that shaving the back of her neck isn't half as hard as hooking her up the back used to be!

ALWAYS DEPENDABLE

March 1st

Will soon be here. Let this Bank help you with your settling up problems, your tax receipts or any financial problem you have to meet at that time.

Our services and facilities are at your command always. We want you to feel that this is your bank, and we want you to feel free to use it at any time. Every officer of this Bank is here to serve you; you will always find them ready and willing.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND
IOWA

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1927 | NO. 13

BIRTHDAY WEEK OF BOY SCOUTS

Local Troop Will Observe 17th Anniversary of Founding Of The Boy Scouts

SEVERAL FINE DISPLAYS

February 6, 1927, the greatest boys' organization in the world celebrated its 17th birthday. Seventeen years ago a national charter was granted to the Boy Scouts of America by a special act of Congress. It it worthy to mention that only two other organizations, the American Red Cross Society, and the American Legion, have the pleasure of this distinction.

Since that memorable day it has grown and expanded until today its active members number something over 800,000. Many of the old scouts are not active and it is conservatively estimated that nearly a million men and boys have at one time or another been connected with the national organization.

The week of February 6-13 has been set aside as the Anniversary Week. On these days all the Scouts in the United States and its possessions will celebrate the occasion with proper ceremony.

The Outline for the week is as follows:

Sunday—Church Day.
Monday—Home Day.
Tuesday—Community Day.
Wednesday—School Day.
Thursday—Merit Badge Day.
Friday—Vocation Day.
Saturday—Lincoln Day.
Sunday—Country Day.

Various days will be observed by Troop 1, of Belmond. Saturday, February 5th, displays will be placed in two store windows. These displays will be of great interest to the community and will give an idea of what the Boy Scouts are doing.

Sunday evening exercises will be held in the M. E. church. The entire troop will appear in full uniform at the service which will consist of addresses by Rev. Snyder, of the M. E. church, and Scouts of the local troop.

No other definite arrangements have been made except that Saturday, February 12, Lincoln's birthday, the Scouts will take charge of the raising and lowering of the Flag at the Library.

Belmond is proud of its Boy Scout Troop. It is but two years old and has already attained second place in the Cerro Gordo Council, which is composed of over thirty troops. The Belmond troop has in its short existence attained several honors, of which the community and the boys are proud. The first is the fine Boy Scout Cabin in Franklin grove. It is the largest and most complete log cabin of its type in the state. The cabin was made possible through the good will and help of H. F. Luick, to whom the boys are grateful both for making the cabin possible and for his help as Scout Master.

The second thing of note is the fact that Belmond has had the largest Court of Honor ever held in Iowa. This Court of Honor was held in Franklin grove, south of Belmond.

At present Troop 1 has 44 active members, 7 Tenderfeet, 24 Second Class, 13 First Class, 4 Star, 5 Life, 1 Eagle. There are 10 working on merit badges.

Belmond can be sure of the future generation's stability with such organizations as the Boy Scouts and others functioning. They will bring up the young people with respect for God and Country. We will find in the future that the time put in on this work will not result in naught. but those who are connected with the work will deem their time spent in this manner the most fruitful of their entire life.

Chas. Pritchard and Mrs. Finch celebrated their birthdays at the Pritchard home at Buffalo Center, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Pritchard were present, and they were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Martin, of Belmond.—Garner Leader.

Mrs. Herman Schultz left Tuesday evening for Chicago to visit a sister.

A. M. SHAFFER LOSES LIFE IN WYOMING STORM

A. M. Shaffer, age forty-two, traveling representative of the Denver Union Stock Yards Company, lost his life in a blizzard that swept over the plains of Wyoming last Friday. He was enroute from Green River, Wyoming to his home at Denver and his car stalled in the drifts about five miles from Hanna, Wyoming. He drained his car, locked it, and started afoot for Hanna but the fury of the storm was more than he could endure and he gave up his life in the attempt.

Mr. Shaffer had a number of acquaintances in Limon who will regret to hear of his untimely death, but to the writer his death brings that distressing sorrow that only boyhood friends can experience. Mr. Shaffer and the writer spent our boyhood together in the little town of Goodell, back in Iowa, but up until last March 9th when he came to Limon in the interests of his company to attend a "Hog-Cream-Clover" meeting of the Extension Department of the Agricultural College we had not seen or heard of each other for twenty-three years. Our visit naturally resulted in plans of a closer relationship in the future but fate had decreed otherwise, which leaves us to mourn the untimely death of a friend, lost—found—only to be lost again—forever.

This article was taken from the Eastern Colorado Leader, published at Limon, Colorado by Howard Africa, formerly of Kanawha.

SKAUGE GETS MEDAL FOR SECOND BEST TON LITTER

County Agent Paul Tomlinson received yesterday, for delivery to S. A. Skauge, a gold watch fob as a prize for his award of second place in a contest in raising ton litters through the extension service for Iowa State College.

Mr. Skauge grew thirteen Duroc Jersey pigs from one litter to a weight of 3112 pounds in six months, coming within a few pounds of the record made by the winner of first place. They were raised in a clean lot on his farm in Norway township, and would have made an even better record if they had been raised in green pasture, but instead they were confined in a dry lot where they were fed chiefly on grain. Of the eight males in this prize winning litter Mr. Skauge sold all but one, which he kept for use in his own herd.—Monitor.

OBITUARY

Benjamin Dorenkamp, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Dorenkamp, Jr., was born April 22, 1920, in Pleasant township. He was of a happy disposition and seemed to enjoy the best of health. Last Friday he attended public school as usual, altho a deadly disease was lurking in his system. An operation was undertaken but the desired results were not obtained. He quietly passed away Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, thus reaching the age of six years, eight months and 21 days.

Little Benjamin will not only be greatly missed at home but also in school and at Sunday school where he was a regular attendant. We comfort ourselves with that blessed assurance that God has never made a mistake.

Funeral services were conducted from the home last Wednesday at one o'clock, and then from the Immanuel Reformed church, Rev. O. G. Poppen officiating, assisted by Rev. J. B. Frericks, of Alexander. Benjamin's schoolmates acted as pall bearers, and also sang a song at the end of the services. Interment was in the family lot adjoining the church. Many and beautiful were the floral offerings brought as tributes to the one who is greatly missed.

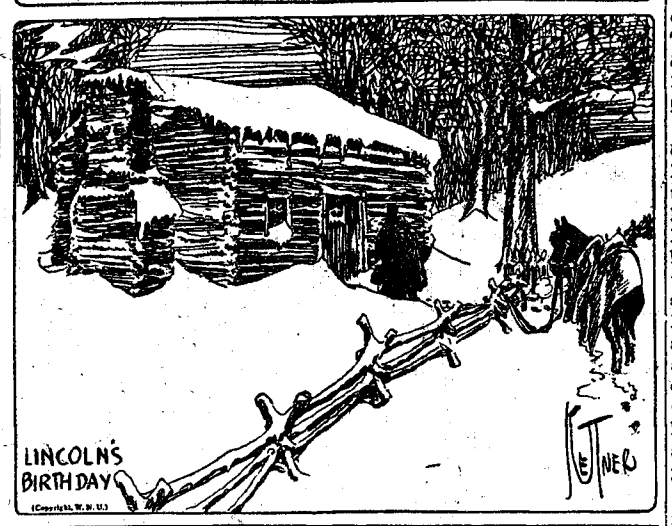
Little Benjamin leaves to mourn his early departure, his parents, three brothers, grandparents, and many other relatives and friends.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire most heartily to thank each and every one who so kindly assisted during the illness and death of our beloved little Benjamin, and for the beautiful flowers at his funeral.

John Dorenkamp, Jr., and Family.

February Twelfth, Eighteen Hundred and Nine



FEBRUARY TERM OF COURT OPENS

Judge Fry Presiding; Old Cases Will Take Up The Time

Faced with a calendar which carried 12 old cases, court convened Monday with Judge Fry on the bench, for a session that has 15 criminal cases, 58 appearance cases, 70 probate hearings and four widow pension matters to clear up. Not all of these, however, can be taken care of at this term. Yesterday was default day, during which judgments were entered against those defendants who did not make appearance in the notices which were served upon them.

A special assignment for next Wednesday is the case in which Amos Thompson seeks to prove an equity of one-half in property which his brother assigned to the defunct Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove. This is a case which will attract considerable interest over the county.

Altho the petit jury was dismissed until Feb. 21 there are enough matters to be tried before the court that there will be enough to fill all the available time.

The grand jury was impanelled with the following members: O. A. Overbaugh, foreman; H. M. Halsey, Thomas Tendall, H. A. Schroeder, Ole Holm, Frank Pester, and Geo. T. Johnson. They were excused until next Monday, without having heard any testimony the day court convened.

Early approach of another term of court, set for April 14, has caused several new cases to be filed, among which are the following:

Action is brought against A. Butterfield of Kossuth county for judgment on a note for $1,000 executed to the Farmers Savings Bank of Goldfield, dated December 23, 1921 With accrued interest the account amounts to $1566.85.

Edna Laura Doyle asks divorce from Howard J. Doyle, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment and drunkeness. The parties were married at Charles City, November 10, 1920 and have been residing at Belmond. She charges Doyle deserted her last July. She asks custody of a son who is nearly four years old.

Alphons W. Mescher brings action to quiet his title and secure delivery of warranty deed for residence property in the city of Eagle. Grove which he bought on contract from Louis D. Larson, who in turn had purchased it of Julius E. M. Puls. Puls has since died and tho the warranty deed is held in escrow by a bank pending completion of contract payments, the court must authorize delivery of deed before it can be done according to contract terms.

The office of County Superintendent L. G. Focht is being besieged these days by representatives of text book publication houses. On the 24 contracts will be left for supplying text books for another term, and of course all the publishers want to get in on this business.

Prevailing financial conditions are reflected in the number of chattel mortgages which are being recorded in the office of County Recorder Vaughn. Exact figures on the proportion of increase are not given out by the office, but it is making considerable addition to the work of the office.—Monitor.

ROWAN AUTHOR TALKS TO CLUB

Don Farran Gives Entertaining Talk At Fellowship Club

An interesting meeting of the Good Fellowship club was held Thursday evening at the library, when Don Farran, a rising young author from Rowan, gave the address. A preliminary program consisting of selections on the guitar by Dr. Larson, an "Irish solo" by Jack Dempsey accompanied by Louis Luick, and a vocal solo by Wm. Nelson accompanied by Thayne Bailey, was first enjoyed.

In his talk Mr. Farran, who is a frequent contributor to the Line O' Type column in the Chicago Tribune, gave brief sketches of some of the contributors to this column, and read some of the articles and poetry which has appeared in it. His talk was informal, but decidedly interesting, and those present feel that it was an evening well spent. The usual refreshments completed the evening.

DR. MOLLOY DEAD

Dr. Edward Molloy slipped and fell on the icy walk at his home at Waterloo, Sunday evening, fracturing his skull. He died at St. Francis hospital to which place he was taken after the seriousness of his injuries were ascertained. He was born in Ireland in 1867, came to the United States when seventeen years of age; attended Iowa State University and Northwestern at Chicago. He was a brother of Father John Molloy, of Waterloo, and Father Patrick Mollow, of Belmond; a brother Dennis in Chicago. His wife and three children survive, also his parents and one sister in Ireland.—Ackley Journal.

METHODIST MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The meeting for February was well attended, a number of visitors also being present. This was our first meeting, with Mrs. J. T. Snyder, at the parsonage. The association hostess was Mrs. H. F. Luick.

It was an enjoyable meeting. Mrs. H. J. Williams led an interesting lesson. There were the usual devotions and Mrs. Trafford sang a hymn.

Our annual Thank Offering service is to be held February 20. Dainty valentines contain the mystery questions. Mrs. Calvin Johnson conducted the quiz.

Dainty refreshments and a social hour closed the session.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week January 29 to February, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
30	37	19	—	Cloudy
31	36	24	—	Cloudy
1	40	28	—	Pt. Cloudy
2	43	25	—	Clear
3	43	31	—	Clear
4	36	28	.08	Cloudy
5	40	33	.33	Cloudy

Mrs. J. E. Wallace and daughter, Jessie, were called to Hampton, Sunday, by the death of Mrs. Wallace's sister-in-law. Mrs. J. S. White took them over in her car.

OBITUARY

Freda Elizabeth Gealow, fifth child of Charles Gealow and Mary Tiedman Gealow, was born in La-Salle county, Illinois, December 27, 1894, and died at the Lutheran hospital in Hampton, Iowa.

At the age of five months she came to Iowa with her parents, and lived in a farm west of Belmond for two years. For four years after she lived on another farm southeast of Belmond, and in 1901 moved to the home farm southeast of Belmond where she resided during her young womanhood. She attended school in Iowa township, District No. 2 until she finished the eighth grade. After about six year's at home she attended the Hamilton University at Mason City, taking a business course, following which she was employed with a bank in Oakland, Nebraska several years.

December 23, 1920, she was united in marriage to William H. Sheriff, and started farming. Three children were born to this union, namely, William Harrison, Jr., Donald James, and Arlene Ruth, the latter a babe of ten months.

At the age of two months she was baptized in the German Lutheran faith, in Illinois. Altho she never joined a church, she professed faith in Christ and was an attendant whenever opportunity offered of the Methodist church, in Belmond.

January 6, 1927, she was stricken with acute appendicitis. She was taken to the hospital at Hampton the next day, where an operation was performed. For a time she seemed to be recovering nicely, but about January 27 she became worse, and rapidly failed until the end came at 1:15 Wednesday morning, February 2, her husband and mother being at her bedside when death called.

There are left to mourn her loss, her husband and three children, her parents, eight sisters and two brothers, Mary (Mrs. R. A. Rankins), of Belmond; Emma (Mrs. Ray Brewer), of Belmond; Josie, of Washington, D. C.; Lawrence, of Belmond; Ella (Mrs. Percy Smith), of Montgomery, Iowa; Mildred (Mrs. Ralph Wendel), of Belmond; Jennie, of Belmond; George, of LaSalle, Illinois; Lillian, of Des Moines, Iowa; and Gertrude, of Belmond; besides various other relatives and friends.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the friends and neighbors for their kindly acts and words of sympathy in the death of our loved one, and for the beautiful floral tributes.

Wm. Sheriff and Children.
Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Gealow and Family.

ANNUAL CREAMERY MEETING HELD ON JANUARY 22, 1927

At the last annual meeting of the Farmers Creamery Company, Belmond, Iowa, showed a large gain in business for 1926. There were 234,134 pounds of butter shipped out of Iowa, 35,472 pounds of butter sold in Iowa, and 19,827 pounds of butter sold to patrons. There were $97,064.50 paid patrons in checks, $8,821.77 paid patrons in butter, $719.05 paid patrons in buttermilk, and $404.45 paid patrons in cheese, cans and salt, making a total of $107,009.77 paid to patrons, compared with $91,023.63 in 1925. Showing a gain of $5,986.14 for the past year.

The following officers were re-elected: Secretary, O. D. Jenison; Directors, Arthur Ruke, Guy Baker, Joe Sampson and P. P. Swenson. The officers holding over for another year are Arthur Hinman, President; Will Boalman, Frank Barry, Directors; Ole Thompson, Treasurer.

Mike H. Luick, Sr., who was eighty-three years old on that date, gave a short talk on creamery support. S. U. Leimbach gave a most interesting talk on co-operation.

Other facts and figures showed that it paid any farmer to give his support to the local creamery in getting a better price for his cream.

Dynamite was used to break up the ice in the Iowa river just below the temporary bride at the Barry bridge corner, Saturday evening. The high water was backing up the ice and the temporary bridge was in danger of being carried away, water running over the floor.

SCHOOL TO GIVE PROGRAM FRIDAY

Division One of High School Literary Society Will Present Literary Program

BASKET BALL TEAM LOSES

Friday afternoon, the Literary Society held a business meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the second semester. Following the regular business meeting, we held our election. After much nominating and balloting, Henry Weide was elected President, Edna Rust vice president, and Lucile Skouge secretary. Two of our first semester officers proved so valuable they were re-elected, namely: Carl Mennenga for treasurer and Mr. Hall critic. These newly elected officers were given a little work-out on extemporaneous speaking, by addressing a few words to the society. After these impromptu speeches were delivered, and duly appreciated, the meeting adjourned.

High School Literary Division One will give the folowing program Friday, February 11. Visitors are welcome at anytime.

1. Farce—Pyramus and Thisbe—— Paul McNulty, Theodore Johnson, Everett Pierce, Arthur Rierson, Robert Fetrow, Joseph Tiara.
2. Chorus ——— Uinta Packard, Ava Sandrew, Bessie Cullinan, Lois Hake, Helen Kinseth, Ruth Leavy, Luela Loats, June Norby, Vela Sturdevant, Ona Barton, Esther Dibble, Gladys Jacobmeyer.
3. Newspaper ——— Alpha Kallestad, Deane Hill, Everill Hauge.
4. Reading—"O Captain, My Captain" ——— Helen Luick
5. Piano Solo.

Friday night the Belmond boys met defeat at the hands of the Kanawha quintet at the Belmond gymnasium. Belmond boys were not up to their usual form and were unable to break up the strong Kanawha defense. The game was good however and we still have another chance at the Kanawha team. The final score was 30-8. In a preliminary game, the Belmond second team defeated the Kanawha second team by the narrow margin of 9-11. Both games were refereed by Mr. Martin, of Goldfield.

Last Thursday evening the Junior High School presented the Operetta, "The Maid of the Golden Slipper," in the High School Auditorium. This little play, woven about the old fairy tale of Cinderella. was very cleverly and effectively given by this delightful cast. Cinderella herself, in the person of Marian Luick charmed her audience, as well as the prince, by her lovely voice and sweet and charming manner. Loran Hadley, as the prince, gave a youthful portrayal of his part of the familiar story. Cupid and the little fairies, children of the second grade also entered into their parts most enthusiastically, and the two wicked step-sisters, Alice Nissen and Lois Trafford, portrayed the varying emotions of pride, disgust, anger and defeat, in a way which shewed both talent and skill. The Lords and Ladies completed the lovely and romantic atmosphere.

Junior High School Notes

The eighth grade have decided to have their class party Saturday, February 19.

Those receiving a score of ten in the seventh arithmetic drill books were: Corrine Johnson, Junior Goelz, Amelia Greenlander and Mona Schmidt. This is a very fine record as it requires a pupil to have twenty problems correct; the only time given is the twenty-five minutes' class period.

The eighth arithmetic classes have completed their first drill. Many received a score of nine.

The seventh A reading class is dramatizing the story of William Tell.

The eighth girls' Art class are making fancy dolls for their dressers this week.

Willie Smith was absent from the fifth grade last week on account of illness.

Mrs. Greenlander visited the fifth grade last week.

The fifth grade pupils are making

(Continued on page two.)

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 19, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES

Display, per column inch 25c
Locals, per line 10c
Classified, per word 02c

(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

SMALL TOWN STILL SUPREME

One frequently hears the complaint voiced by the very young members of the community that they are fed up with the small town and that they long to get out into the big world where they could do things and enjoy life to the full.

Only experience can teach that these juvenile hopes and aspirations are in the majority of cases doomed to bitter disappointment in the realization of what the great outside world holds in store. The majority of this juvenile army of longers after life and excitement come to the stage where they would give anything to get back to the simpler pleasures and real friends of the small town only to find that they are carried by a current which renders the backward swim a feat impossible of accomplishment.

Perhaps the restless youngsters are old enough, and big enough to care for themselves, but it usually is the case that those who brag about being able to care for themselves are the ones who need the most restraining.

While those who have gone thru the experience can sympathize with those who chafe at the confines and restrictions of the "little burg", yet they can assure the young people of today that they have in that "little burg" nearly all the things and nearly all the opportunities which the young folks of a couple of decades ago thought they had to go to the big city to get. Young folks of today have pleasures and opportunities manyfold greater than those which were presented to the young folks of yesterday. In the "little burg" today are all the things that would have made contented the young folks of yesterday.

The boy or girl of today who hasn't an automobile in the family feels that Providence has been very unkind to them. In days not so very long ago the two-horse rig that could be driven with one hand was thought quite sufficient for a Sunday afternoon's pleasure. We didn't get quite so far along the road, but the time didn't drag on our hands and the road seemed short enough.

When those now in middle age were young there were no moving picture theatres and unless they moved out of the "little burg" they had no chance to see a good show, but looking back thru the years the little family parties and taffy pulls, almost never heard of now, seem to have been far from unpleasant affairs and to have possessed pleasant features.

We got along pretty well with all our handicaps and there was far more sociability when there were fewer places to go than there is now when even staid folks who were raised under the more prosaic conditions of a couple or three decades ago have been partially carried away by the growing craze for amusement, to be entertained, to be doing something and to be going somewhere.—Hampton Chronicle.

Des Moines Capital: No matter what other statutes are enacted, the gasoline tax will see to it that the trucks and busses make large contributions to road funds. Those that use the roads the most must also make the greatest use of gasoline; and the more gasoline they use the more they must pay toward the construction and upkeep of roads.

Jefferson Bee: If you want to make an enemy, and a bad enemy at that, loan him more money than he can pay. That is illustrated by the French attitude toward America now. We would have the admiration and good will of France right now if they did not owe America a cent.

Rolfe Arrow: If Iowa can afford a hundred million dollar road band issue at this time it has no right to talk hard times or farm relief measures.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Continued from page one.)

health posters this week.

The pupils of Miss Purdy's room have begun work on maps of the New England states.

The Senior Normal Training class visited Miss Barry's room Tuesday, for Penmanship demonstration.

The pupils of Miss Barry's room started a "Tooth Brush Club" at the beginning of the school year. The idea was a contest between the girls and boys. The girls won for the first semester.

The children of the Kindergarten have made a post office, to distribute the rush of mail, expected on February 14. The children are all excited over the coming event.

THE BOY SCOUT AND THE SCHOOL

The school is the center of the educational life of the community. Anyone would be foolish however, to consider the school the only means of securing any education. There are many organizations and activities outside the school which are helping to broaden and increase the opportunities for education.

Unquestionably the greatest job of the school is to develop good citizens. The Boy Scout organization is one of the best aids the school has in this work. The democratic, non-sectarian feature of the Boy Scout troop makes it a parallel of the school in many respects. Many opportunities are offered through the Boy Scout training that the school cannot, or at least does not give. The loyal and conscientious Boy Scout will make a better student in school because of the lessons learned in Scout meetings.

The knowledge and experience gained in preparing for Merit Badge tests provides a general and practical knowledge of some subjects not covered in the public school. As long as the standard for these Merit Badge tests is kept high the school cannot fail to get a benefit from their use.

I would consider the actual knowledge gained by the Boy Scout of secondary importance however as compared with the moral and civic training he secures. It is this moral and civic training from which the school and community will see results.

The school is pleased to cooperate with the executives and members of Belmond Troop and to join with them in observing Boy Scout Week.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

January 31, Joan of Arc troop held a large court of awards. The following received awards:

Tenderfoot—Jean Elder, Velma Brewer.

Second Class—Elizabeth Tracy, Laura Belle Johnson, Uinta Packard, Gladys Jacobmeyer, Leola Forristal, Esther Dibble.

Merit Badges—Esther Jones, scribe Elizabeth Tracy, scribe; Mary E. Blake, scholarship and health winner; Muriel Luick, musician, scribe, pathfinder, hostess and laundress; Harriet Gowdy, cook, hostess, scribe, scholarship, health winner; Mary E. Blake received the silver attendance star and Harriet Gowdy the gold. Ruth Leavy received honorable mention because she has never missed a meeting since the organization was formed.

The following program was held: Music led by Lois Trafford. Music by Girl Scout chorus. Talk by Scout Gowdy on "What Scouting Has Done for Me."

Our visitors were Mrs. Gowdy, Mrs. Russell, Miss Knudson and Miss Ward.

Monday, Feb. 8, the meeting was held in the gymnasium. The meeting was opened, roll call and minutes given. The younger scouts were instructed in attention, right dress and place rest. Captain Bond then took charge of the bath contest. Almost every patrol was one hundred percent. We had inspection by the captain and the meeting was adjourned. Our visitors were Mrs. J. A. Ressler, Mrs. Ramsay and Miss Wilson. ***

Mrs. John McNichol and daughter Golda were in Garner last Thursday. They still live at Belmond but may not remain there if the sugar factory doesn't operate this year. Mrs. McNichol said that John had been laid up for some time with a beet infection, which is similar to blood poisoning but not so serious. This is the second time John has had this affliction.—Leader.

BRAINS AND MEALS

"Where's the cook?"
"Is suppr ready, the house trimmed, rushes strewed, cobwebs swept?"—Shakespeare.

It takes wise planning and careful working out of plans to serve a meal delightfully. One must first devise a balanced ration, enough of sweet, enough of sour, enough of hearty, enough of light, enough of hot, enough of cold—and must carry out the plan and see that each dish is as it was planned to be; the hot ones hot, and the cold ones cold.

One must begin in time and estimate the amount of time needed to prepare each dish and have them all come out at the same time, ready for serving. The table must be set in an orderly and artistic fashion, with nothing on the table which is not needed, but everything there which is needed. It spoils many a happy meal to have first one member of the family and then another constantly getting up for a supply of salt, or sugar, a large spoon, or a napkin. These should have been provided in advance. Have you ever been at table when half the family was up at the same time?

Many a meal is spoiled because it is not ready on time, and the cook got flurried and the rest of the household cross while they waited. If the food burns or is disappointing, that may set the family in wrong mood for the day.

It is the height of ill manners to bring your troubles or disagreeable mood to the table with you. Meal time should not be made a clearing house for family faults. If you must tell Dad or Johnnie, wait until they are both through eating.

Serve the meal in as quiet and orderly a fashion as possible. Pleasant conversation makes the mealtime enjoyable and aids digestion. You can contribute something to family welfare and happiness by saving up pleasant things to talk about at meal time.

"His cook once spoiled the dinner of an Emperor of men;
The dinner spoiled the temper of his Majesty, and then
The Emperor made history—and no one blamed the cook."

The members of our family are making history day by day.

The nature of it depends much upon the meals we serve.

GOOD SUPPER DISHES

Is there anything more heart-warming on a chill evening than good old-fashioned corn meal mush and milk. A hotel chef tells me, "You would be surprised at the number of people who ask for it and consider it a real treat." The right way to cook it is in a large iron kettle—like grandmother used—and over a slow fire for four or five hours, stirring occasionally and letting it simmer. Serve hot, in a bowl, with plenty of room for good rich milk and a dash of sugar over it. In the old days, they used to have mush-and-milk socials, and the people turned out for miles around and warmed their stomachs and their spirits in the food and the hospitality.

Another choice vivand for a winter supper is potato soup. Dice six good sized potatoes and slice six onions and cook together until they are tender and the water is nearly boiled out. Add salt, pepper, a chunk of butter and a quart of milk. Make the milk hot, but do not boil it. It is then ready to serve in a bowl, in order that it may retain it heat until the last spoonful.

At a fashionable restaurant the other day, I was amazed to observe that my hostess selected plain bean soup in preference to the rare and unusual viands listed on the menu card. When it came, she was not disappointed but actually "raved" over its deliciousness. Inquiry divulged the fact that it was nothing more nor less than the plain "bean porridge hot" you and I were brought up on, but it is rare now. We are missing something in forgetting these good, old-fashioned, simple and inexpensive dishes. One does not often find them in hotels but they may be served any day at home and give the family a surprise.

A HOME NIGHT

We have heard of one neighborhood in which every family undertakes to stay at home one evening of the week, enjoying a family "at home" just among themselves. Such a custom would give each family a chance to get acquainted, would draw the members into closer sympathy and understanding, would relieve the tension of modern strenuosity, would mean much in character building to children and youth, and would store up for all participants many priceless memories.

Next in value, to spending one night each week at home, is the other custom of the family going out frequently together to enjoy their pleasures in unison.

WOMEN'S CLUBS

At the recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Women's Clubs of the United States, Mrs. John D. Sherman, the national president, recommended work for the recognition of homemakers in the census and the gathering of data about the home as well as in regard to factories and other industries.

Club women believe that homemakers perform an income service, and their work should be recognized as a "gainful occupation." They believe that the recording in the census of their housekeeping equipment and labor saving devices "will bring about improved methods of housekeeping, and the wider use of gas, electricity and water, will reduce the manual toil of the housewife; will preserve the spirit of women and save them from exhausted physical or mental energies; and will add to the sum total of human happiness."

THE COOK STOVE

To have a clean cook stove, wipe it a little every time you wash dishes, not merely on some spasm of cleanliness. A little vinegar added to hot water, will cut the grease. Those parts which can be detached may be boiled occasionally in a strong lye water. This will clean out the gas pipes and holes in the gas burner, which will become clogged by syrups or coffe boiling over or grease and dust accumulations.

CHURCHES

TRINITY CHURCH

The Trinity Lutheran congregation are planning a reception for their new pastor, Rev. B. Guldseth and family, Tuesday evening, February 15.

Sunday School next Sunday morning at 10:00 o'clock.

Installation services Sunday evening by Rev. H. C. Holm.

Prayer meeting Thursday evening.

ST. OLAF CHURCH

Installation services Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock, services to be conducted by Rev. H. C. Holm.

North Ladies' Aid meets at the home of Mrs. H. O. Stockseth Wednesday afternoon, February 16th.

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, February 13: —

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. You can be a blessing to the School, and the School will prove a blessing to you.

Divine Worship and Sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of Sermon, "His Presence." Luke 24:32.

Epworth League at 6:30. Randall Klemme, Leader. Topic, "Missions." A very fine spirit is manifested in the League. Credit due our splendid young people. If you have not as yet visited us, come in Sunday evening.

Evening Worship and Gospel Message at 7:30. Subject, "Echoes from the Area Council Meeting." You will desire to know something about this great meeting.

Choir rehearsal in the parsonage, Thursday night at 7:15.

Everybody cordially invited to all of our services.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10:00 a. m.—Bible study hour. We are this quarter studying a course of lessons on "What It Means to Be A Christian," or how we can be like Christ. This in fact is the mission of the church, to help us to learn this the greatest of all arts, the art of living. Next Sunday the lesson will be, "Making Our Homes Christian."

11:00 a. m.—Morning Worship and Sermon. The thought will be "The Impossibility of Hiding Greatness." Lincoln could not hide the abilities that God had given to him. He is still influencing the world, even as the Christ did. How is it with you and me?

The regular business meeting of the Ladies' Aid will be held in the church parlors on Thursday afternoon of this week, at 2:30 o'clock. All ladies of the church and congregation are invited to come and enjoy a sociable time.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Robert Bruce

ROBERT BRUCE, of Scotland—a man without a home, a king without a throne, a ruler without subjects—lay hidden in a tumble-down hut one day early in the Fourteenth century, while the soldiers of King Edward I of England scoured the surrounding country under orders to capture the fugitive monarch dead or alive. As the luckless Bruce gazed idly about him he noticed a spider swinging from a strand of web that it was trying to affix to the opposite wall. Six times the spider swung and failed. The king grew interested. He had been half minded to give up his own useless struggle against England's mighty power. But, noting the insect's perseverance, he took heart. He resolved that if the spider should win in its task of fixing the web to the opposite wall, he himself would once more attempt to resist England's invasion. On the seventh trial the spider succeeded; and Bruce, true to his pledge, set forth to renew his own hopeless warfare.

North Britain, the country later known as Scotland, had never wholly been conquered in the Roman invasion. Its inhabitants, savages known as Picts and Scots, had for centuries resisted all attempts to crush them as other savage tribes had been crushed. But at last Scotland had fallen under English influence and had become a mere Anglo-Norman feudal monarchy.

A question arose in 1292 as to succession to the throne. Edward I, king of England, was asked to decide the matter; and, through his influence, a puppet of his own, John Baliol, was chosen. This strengthened England's power in Scotland, and the unhappy northern kingdom was almost passive under the English yoke. Baliol, urged on by malcontents, sought alliance with France and took up arms against England, but Edward speedily captured him, routed his armies and took Edinburgh and other Scotch strongholds.

Then, in the hour of Scotland's sorest need, when all her nobles were cringing at Edward's feet, a hero arose—a man of the people, William Wallace. Wallace raised a rabble of peasants and townsfolk, molded them into a well-trained, organized band, and in 1297 captured town after town from the English. The nobles held aloof from him, but the common people followed him devotedly. Edward sent a strong army to put Wallace down, deeming the revolt too petty for his own personal attention. Wallace, with a force many thousands inferior to the invaders, met the English army near Stirling.

Wallace's men were light-armed and ill-equipped and had less than 200 horses in all. The well-mounted English, in their heavy armor, looked for an easy victory. But, after a fierce battle, Wallace's peasants put them to flight. It was the first time in history that a disciplined feudal army was routed by a force recruited from the plain people. It was the beginning of the end.

Having repulsed the English, Wallace set to work reorganizing Scotland and reviving her shattered commerce.

Pressing his conquests he even invaded the north of England, thus carrying the war into the enemy's country. But, alarmed at the extent of the revolution, Edward sent a new army of 90,000 men against him. The nobles refused to help Wallace and his resources were only such as he himself could muster. Yet he won two battles against the stronger invader before the superior force overwhelmed and crushed his little army. Wallace was captured, sent to London and there, after a mock trial, the gallant patriot was hanged as a traitor.

Edward, as an example to future revolutionists, devastated Scotland, inflicting terrible penalty for England's former defeats. But the result was exactly opposite to what he had planned. A nobleman, Lord Robert de Bruce (or Robert Bruce) revolted, drawing about him the Scottish nobility. He was crowned King of Scotland in 1306. Edward at once attacked him, driving him from the throne, and again ravaging the stricken country. It was during this period that Bruce took his life lesson from the spider in the hut whither he had fled for refuge.

Almost at once, upon Bruce's resolve to try once more to save Scotland, the turn of fortune came. Edward I died and was succeeded by his weak, dissolute son, Edward II. Taking advantage of the latter's indolence, Bruce raised a strong army, and by 1313 had won back nearly all of Scotland. The next year the last and most decisive battle of the war was fought at Bannockburn (Bannock Creek). Bruce, by better knowledge of the marshy, uneven ground and by superior generalship, won the day. His Scottish spearmen fought on foot in a circular formation somewhat like the modern military "square," and through this circle of steel the English knights could not break. Again it was proven that the flower of chivalry could make no headway against well-generaled private soldiers. The English were utterly routed.

Never again, though many other conflicts arose, did England wholly subdue Scotland.

At last, in 1603, the two nations became one, under James I of England, who chanced to be natural heir to both thrones.

FREE AIR

After hearing Don Farran at the Good Fellowship club last Thursday, we sort of feel presumptious in writing this Colyum.

* * * *

There is solace in the fact that the Line O' Type must have been an infant once too. Or perhaps, like Topsy, it just growed.

* * * *

Anyway, not very many Belmond folks will compare it.

* * * *

We got a lot of kick of Farran's informal talk. It was in our line, you see, and we appreciated the little inside dope that went over the heads of the rest of 'em who didn't understand newspaper technicalities.

* * * *

Don is good, no getting around it, and he can contribute to Free Air any time he wants to.

* * * *

We are still waiting for Grant Tracy to get an idea. You know, he was going to contribute something to this Colyum as soon as he had an idea, but he hasn't had one yet. Maybe if he would read Splinters more often it might help.

* * * *

Splinters has some amazing statistics this week. Claims that 50 per cent of all married persons in the country are women.

* * * *

Don't doubt it. And at least 97 percent of the women are the boss. If the men deny it the women will admit it.

* * * *

Valentine's Day comes next Monday. Wonder if the kids still send as mushy valentines as they used to. We remember when—but maybe it would be better not to mention it. One of our kid-days sweethearts is still living in Belmond.

* * * *

Heard the latest one on Peterson? He was reading that advertisement of canned milk where it says the milk came from "contented cows." You know. That struck him as a fine slogan. Peterson goes right down to his shop, gets a pen and ink, and the first customer in was faced with a big sign that read: "Sausage From Hog's That Died Happy."

A MODEL CITIZEN

The country needs more John C. Nelsons.

"Who is he? you ask.

The answer:

John C. Nelson is a Worth county farmer. He lives in Hartland township and it's ten miles to Northwood.

Not long ago Mr. Nelson was drawn for jury service and ordered to report at a given time.

Snow and bitter cold were descended upon north Iowa and Mr. Nelson found it impossible to operate his automobile.

So with the thermometer registering 17 below zero—the coldest day this winter—he set out afoot for Northwood, arriving in three hours.

But here's the tragic note to this story: When he arrived in Northwood, he discovered that court had adjourned. Attempts had been made to notify him by telephone but without avail.

Mr. Nelson walked back home.

When city dwellers show this same devotion to duty—particularly jury duty—the problem of law enforcement and respect for constituted authority will be considerably more than half solved.—Mason City Globe-Gazette.

J. J. LEU, INVENTOR

Inventive genius is active in Iowa these wintry days. In a single week the patent office passed favorably upon the following list of inventions: Eggleston Smith, Sioux City, rotary well driller; Frank E. Mulroney, Fort Dodge, bow tie; Nicholas Barry, Muscatine, sheet metal pulley; J. F. Gallup, Jefferson, plow-shovel cultivator attachment; John J. Stark, Des Moines, surface for highways; Oliver B. Woodrow, Newton, castor locking device; William G. Dunn, Clarinda, condenser control for radios; Ernest S. Johnson, Webster City, automobile supply tank and holder; Jacob J. Leu, Belmond, fishhook.

THE INCOMING SHOES

The new shoes promise to be gayer than anything we have yet known, running through the spectrum from roseblush to parchment. Trimmings will be elaborate. Reptile hides will be as popular as last season. Shoes will match gowns in many cases. Tan will continue a favorite. Heels for dress will go higher and for sports will go lower.

POTATOES O'BRION

The other day, in a cafe, the menu listed "Potatoes O'Brion." To my astonishment, they were nothing but Irish potatoes, friend, this time.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

FARM BUREAU UPHOLDS PROPOSED STATE INCOME TAX BILL

Our attention has been called to an article being mailed throughout Iowa by the Dubuque Chamber of Commerce in opposition to the farmers' proposal to replace the State levy with a new Income Tax.

In the consideration of that circular we invite you to examine the following comment thereon by Representative G. W. Paterson, of Kossuth county:

"As far as the Dubuque Chamber of Commerce is concerned, it is natural that it will oppose this change for the simpler reason that it would increase the tax burden on the city of Dubuque, and of course would effect a corresponding decrease in the burden of the rural counties.

"Let me illustrate.

"Out of a total of $8,000,000,000 of Federal Income Tax collected in Iowa in 1925, Dubuque county paid 460,-058.90. The rural counties of Grundy, Hamilton, Hardin and Wright together paid only $44,323.41. According to the last report of the State Auditor, the State Tax on general propery in 1925 of these four rural counties was $420,685.06.

"Using these figures as a basis for estimate on what the result would be by striking off the state tax on property and replacing it entirely with an income tax, carrying the same tax rates and exemptions as the Federal Income Tax, we find that there would be a reduction in tax burden on the counties of Grundy, Hamilton, Hardin and Wright, of about $358,700.00, and there would be an increase in the tax burden on Dubuque of over $438,-000.00.

"This, of course, results from the fact that nearly all the big incomes are in the industrial centers Here we have the "fly in Dubuque's ointment." Of course the wealthy men of Dubuque would be greatly pleased if business in rural counties would "pull their chestnuts out of the fire."

"It should be evident, however, that the Dubuque Chamber of Commerce does not deserve to receive assistance from the business men of any of the rural counties, such as Grundy, Hamilton, Hardin and Wright, in this taxation battle between the owners of visible property and those recipients of great incomes who are now bearing their fair share of the burdens of the State government under which they have been remitted to build up their large earnings."

Respectfully yours,
Iowa Farm Bureau Federation
Chas. E. Hearst, President
Ray L. Gribbon, Secretary

PRODUCERS' CO-OPERATIVE COMMISSION IN THE LEAD

From January 22 to 28 the Chicago Producers' Commission Association handled 396 cars of livestock on the Chicago market. The three hundred eighty-six cars were made up of the following classes of livestock: cattle 83 caru, hogs 238 cars and 65 cars of sheep.

Clarion contributed two of the Producers' cars last week. If the co-operative shipping association of Iowa were one-half as loyal to the Producers as they ask their members to be their association, the commission association down in Chicago and on the other terminal markets would always be away in the lead.

The local association is but the first step in cooperative marketing and while it is absolutely essential that we have and keep the local association, it is likewise necessary that we have the real vision of co-operative marketing and understand that for real results, we must cooperate along the line. Our marketing ills are going to be corrected only when the producers have a word in the control of their product from their own farm clear down to the terminal markets, through the packing houses and back if need be to their own homes, or to the ultimate consumer.

STUDY SWINE DISEASES AT DOWS

A number of Wright county men spent Friday and Saturday, January 28-29 studying swine diseases, parasites and other problems confronting livestock farmers Dr. Craft of the Veterinary Extension Service, Ames conducted the work, which was organized through the Farm Bureau.

Of the parasites, Dr. Craft claimed the mange mite was making the greatest headway This parasite is hard to control, since it necessitates the premises as well as the animals. The mange mite lives under scabs on the flesh and tunnels beneath the upper layers of skin. When practical and weather will permit dipping in a limesulphur solution one to 75 of water is especially effective. This will have to be repeated from 8 to 10 days to get the new mites and generally a third treatment is necessary.

The various kinds of internal parasites were covered quite in detail. Showing the life history and life cycle of each. It was stated that some remedies were especially good against intestinal worms. That intestinal worms would be killed and burst open, revealing numerous smaller worms within the large worm. This is not the case as no young worms are reproduced in this manner. Round worms in the intestines may be somewhat eliminated by using certain remifriges, but these are rather hard on the pig and are worthless against the worms in lungs, liver, etc. These do greater damage than those found in the intestines.

Craft asked why raise wormy pigs and invite all the trouble and loss when raising pigs on clean ground would do away with the risk. Prevention, not cure is the cheapest and best. It was brought out that thumps in pigs was many times due to the presence of accaris (round worms) worms in the lungs. Of course the worm then is in its early stages. It gets to the lungs through the blood. It doesn't look as though a worm remedy would have much effect against these lung worms.

Dr. Craft said mineral were necessary. A hog had to get minerals some place, from the feed, soil or from some prepared mineral. Minerals are needed in the body but they do not eliminate internal parasites and should not be bought with that in mind.

Hog flu (so called) might be any one of several things. If we had it, it would be diagnosed as a cold, or some sort of lung trouble. Care or nursing and prevention are the things that count. In many instances its a matter of ventilation.

Tuberculosis in hogs, abortion, necro and cholera were discussed. The last disease according to Craft is the easiest to handle, since you have a definite preventative agent. Double treating hogs will guard against cholera. Will in most cases cause immunity from the disease.

While the fundamental purpose of the meetings was to enable those attending to secure a permit for vaccinating their own hogs, the chief good from the work is the securing of information on swine diseases in general.

WOMEN HOLD COUNTY MEETING ON POULTRY

Monday afternoon, February 14th, at 2:00 p. m. the Farm Bureau women of the county will hold a meeting in the Farm Bureau office to definitely arrange their poultry work for the coming months.

The work will follow the general plan of other women's projects, except that six or seven ladies will take the work from each township, instead of three or four as in the past.

E. J. Rood of the Extension Service will conduct the training schools starting March 21. Care of chicks will be the first work taken up. In April it will be housing and sanitation. May's work will take up marketing eggs and poultry. Later meetings will be on culling, feeding for egg production, etc.

This course is of no little practical value, as it takes up topics and phases of poultry work that mean dollars and cents to the poultry producer.

The meeting on Monday, Feb. 14, is for the purpose of getting each township leader definitely committed to the responsibility of organizing her township for the poultry work and for the purpose of arranging an achievement day for their work.

Mrs. Mary B. Gregg who was in the county last year will meet with the women to assist them in their organization and plans.

VACCINATION SCHOOL FOR BELMOND IN APRIL

A second hog cholera vaccination school has been scheduled for Wright county farmers. The first one was held in Dows in January, the last will be held in Belmond, April 12-13. This school will be conducted by Dr. S. H. Johnston, who has been selected to assist Dr. Craft in handling the work.

In all, over 190 farmers of the county hold vaccinating permits. Many do not use this privilege, but think well of the instruction given since it emphesizes the necessity for sanitation and proper management of stock.

January Report of Cow Testing Assoc'n

Thru better care and management, the highest records of the testing year were made this month. It is also an indication that better stock is taking the place of scrubs in this county. It should be remembered that these records are records made under farm conditions and the main object in view is economical production.

A few of the best herds were knocked off production on account of running in corn fields. This is to be discouraged. It is the very poorest place for a cow even tho she gets plenty to eat. She doesn't get a balanced ration and generally she gets too much corn and is put off feed.

Every dairy farmer should plan, on plenty of sweet clover and alfalfa as well as grain for dairy feed the coming year. Alfalfa is a good money crop as well as a feed.

The following are the high herds for January:

A. O. and E. G. Hauge owners, no cows dry, 15 milking, P. B. H. breed, 1169 average pounds milk, 41.8 average pounds fat, 3.58 per cent test.

Albert Clark owner, no cows dry, 11 milking, mixed breed, 898 average pounds milk, 36.6 average pound fat, 4.08 per cent test.

F. B. Mathias owner, 2 cows dry, 9 milking, P. B. and Gr. Gr. breed, 76 average pounds milk, 34.1 average pounds fat, 4.54 per cent test.

H. E. Poundstone owner, one cow dry, 7 milking, Gr. H. breed, 925 average pounds milk, 30.6 average pounds fat, 3.3 per cent test.

Schnug & Shager owners, no cows dry, 9 milking, mixed breed, 669 average pounds milk, 29.5 average pounds fat, 4.4 per cent test.

High herd under eight cows: T. H. Potter owner, no cows dry, four cows milking, P. B. J. breed, 766 average pounds milk, 38.1 average pounds fat, 5.0 per cent test.

The following are five high cows:

A. O. and E. G. Hauge owner, No. 30, age 3, fresh December 16, R. B. H. breed, 1677 pounds milk, 70.4 lbs fat, 4.2 test.

W. H. Helmke owner, Ideal Queen, Mutual, age 4, fresh November 14, P. B. H. breed, 1643 pounds milk, 62.4 pounds fat, 3.8 test.

A. O. and E. G. Hauge owners, King Segis Ott Spray, age 8, fresh December 7, P. B. H. breed, 1792 pounds milk, 60.9 pounds fat, 3.4 test.

Homer Mechem owner, Premier age 3, December 15, Gr. H. breed 1556 pounds milk, 59.1 pounds fat, 3.8 test.

T. H. Potter owner, June, age 5, fresh December 10, P. B. J. breed, 1308 pounds milk, 58.8 pounds fat, 4.5 test.

—Virgil Martin, Cow Tester.

HOG CHOLERA LOSSES IN IOWA

Deaths of Iowa hogs because of the cholera amounted to approximately 859,000 head during 1926. Losses by all other diseases were about 1,012,000 head. The number of hogs lost by disease would have been nearly sufficient to maintain the operations of any two packing houses in the state.

The Federal-State Crop and Livestock Reporting Service issues the above statement as based upon individual farm reports from a large proportion of the townships of the state. Mr. Leslie M. Carl, Federal Agricultural Statistician, estimates that the cholera death loss was greater than it has been since 1913. During that fall the death loss from cholera alone was estimated as 2,-708,000 head. Vaccination Campaigns, educational programs as to general sanitation of hog lots, and greater caution by farmers toward disease prevention reduced the death losses very rapidly. No estimate or losses appear to have been made in 1914, but the loss in 1915 was partly checked and was held to a total of 477,000 head. For the next two years the scourge of cholera was held a minimum, although in 1916 and 1917 enough potential pork and pork products was destroyed to have supplied the people of Iowa with a number of meals. Although vaccination training schools were held in various parts of the state and farmers were given the right to vaccinate hogs on their own premises, the bars of caution were let down and cholera spread quite rapidly in 1919 and 1919, and deaths increased nearly 73 percent in 1921 over the previous year.

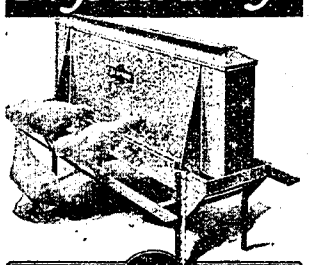
Unpreparedness and slowness to realize the seriousness of the 1926 siege of cholera were partly accountable for the severity of the disease during the past fall. The new crop of corn became available for feeding about the time that cholera had started to spread rapidly. Corn was of poor quality and induced various systematic troubles which lowered the resistance of the hogs to all diseases.

Although sanitation, local precautions and prompt quarantine are helpful in any outbreak of swine disease it is believed that many have learned the valuable lesson that it is folly to minimize the importance of preventive serum treatment of entire herds.

HEATING THE HOME

Unfloored attics, poorly constructed side walls, and loose foundations are to be blamed for the loss of heat in many houses. If your house gets cold quickly, investigate these parts of it and see if they are sound. With a little time and pains, you can pack yourself in and make your home much more cozy for winter.

Here's a Feeder that soon Pays For Itself



Jamesway
Free Feed
CAFETERIA

EVERY farm flock in this locality should have one of these FIVE-IN-ONE Feeders; contains compartments for Mash, Grain, Oyster Shell, Grit and Charcoal. It's a great labor saver—only needs filling once a week and your flock can always eat what they want, when they want it. They balance their ration as nature dictates and as a result you get more eggs—your flock is healthier.

Saves Labor—Saves Feed

This practical feeder comes in two sizes—100 flock size and 200 flock size. Think what a convenience it would be to just fill this up once a week and know that you flock was provided with feed for an entire week. It's the busy farmer's friend. Built with a patented shaking device that always keeps feed down in feed troughs. Feed is always clean and absolutely no waste. Slanting tilting top prevents birds roosting on top. We guarantee that this feeder will pay for itself in one season in saved feed and labor. Let us show you this incomparable feeder.

Sold by
ANDERSON HATCHERY
Phone 27 Belmond, Iowa

FEED GRINDING!

We are equipped to do your feed grinding and give you satisfaction. Give us a trial—bring your next order in to us.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS
FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

Farmers Grain Company
PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!
BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

Perhaps You Don't Know It---

But you can get more money for your cream by selling it to the Creamery.

When you sell your cream to a station you receive the market price, and that's all.

When you sell your cream to the Creamery, you receive the Market Price—in cash, just as much as you would at the station—and, in addition, you receive the Profit on that cream at the end of the two-weeks' period!

Did you know that? Then, when you can get cash on the spot, and an extra dividend besides—

Why not patronize your own Creamery, Mr. Farmer, and get more money for doing it?

Think it over!

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

A Word to Every Farmer--

Beginning next week Thursday, February 17, we will start a series of twelve talks to our farmer friends and customers on

What Good Farming Equipment Should Do

This series of twelve talks will appear each week for twelve weeks in this paper. We are taking the liberty of asking you to read them--each one of them--each week, for they will contain information of interest to you as a farmer--information which you as a farmer should know, particularly if you expect to purchase any new equipment this spring.

Good Equipment Makes a Good Farmer Better

Every piece of farm equipment has a certain work to do. If it will not do that work and do it right, it is not good equipment and you do not want it. We believe you will find each of these twelve talks of much interest, and that you will learn something about good farming equipment from each one of them.

Read the first one next week, February 17, in this paper and on this page. Then tell us what you think of it.

GRIESY'S

PHONE 10. The Friendly Place BELMOND, IOWA

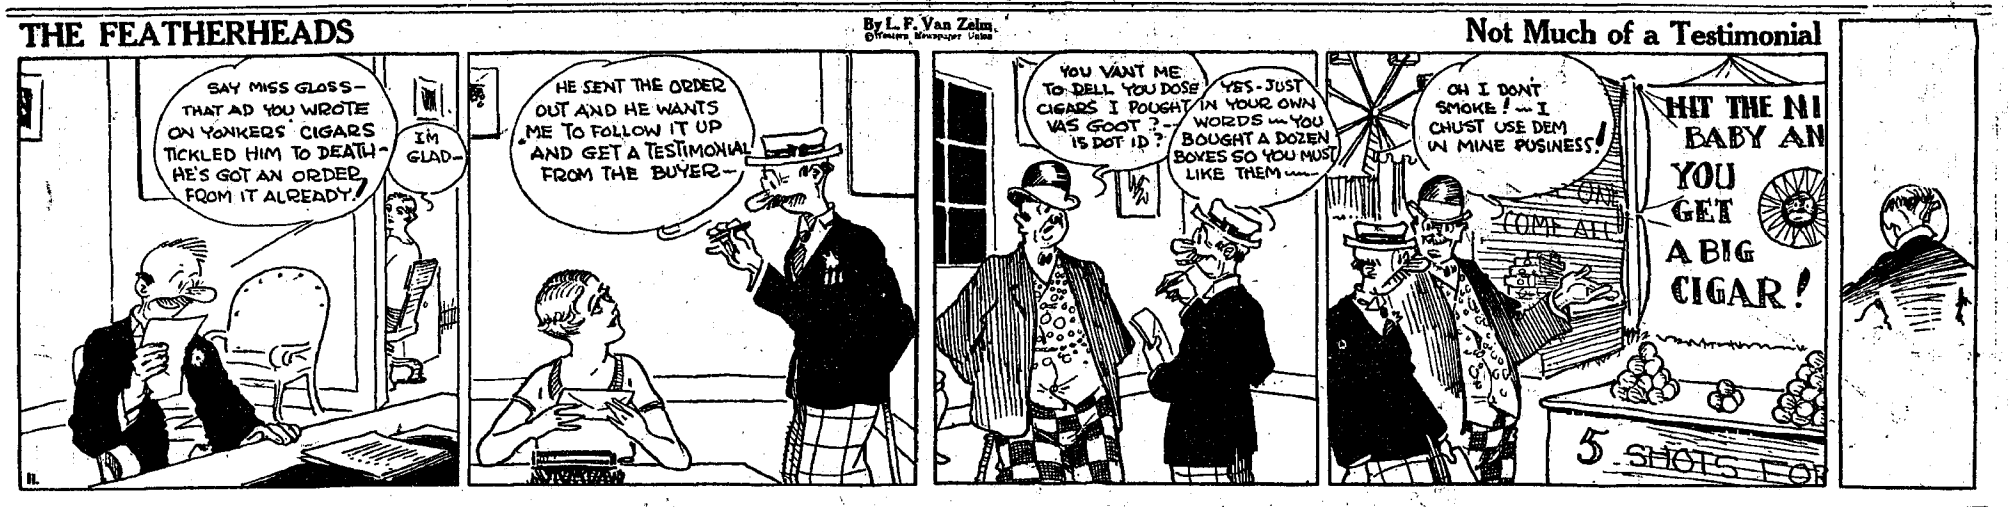
MESERVEY SECTION



EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:45. G. E. Raecker, supt.
Morning worship at 10:45.
Mission Band 10:45.
E. L. C. E. 7 p. m. Vern Schluter, leader.
Evening services 7:30.
German prayer meeting Wednesday at Edw. Foss home
Mid week services and study of Sunday school lesson for following Sunday, at 7:30 Thursday.
All are invited.
Come and worship with us.
L. Sohl, paston

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday school 9:30.
Morning worship (Ger) 10:30.
Young people's meeting 7:15 p. m.
Evening services 8:00.
Senior class in catechism Tuesday at 3:20 p. m. at the parsonage.
Classes in catechism Saturday at 1:30 p. m.
The Dorcas society met Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. at the parsonage with 18 members present. Miss Emma Boelman served refreshments.
The Ladies Aid met Monday with 13 present. Mrs. Harm Dirks served refreshments.
The heart of a child is precious and fruitful soil; what kind of seed are some parents planting in that soil. Next Sunday morning the seed, the Word of God, will be sown in Sunday school. Will your child be present to have the seed sown into its heart?
Whosoever thou art that worshipest in this church enter it not without the spirit of reverence, and leave it not without a prayer to God for thyself, for him who ministers and for those who worship here.
H. Pannkuk, pastor.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

News has been received here of the illness of the Rev. Dr. Masselink of Lafayette, Ind., a son of our former residents, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Masselink, who lived on the extreme southwest 40 acres of Cerro Gordo county, now owned by Harry Wolters. Dr. Masselink became ill on Friday, Jan. 21 and was operated on for appendicitis Saturday. It was found that the appendix was ruptured and peritonitis had set in. Sunday and Monday there were signs of recovery, but Tuesday morning his condition became so serious that a second operation was resorted to. Wednesday his condition was considered hopeless and a third operation was performed. For many hours his life hung in the balance and his strength was nearly exhaused. His entire congregation assembled for a special prayer service Thursday evening and the students of Hope college and Western Seminary were called together for the same purpose.

At the present Dr. Masselink seems to be recovering. The doctors declared that judging from a medical standpoint his recovery was nearly impossible, but that the improvement in his condition thus far was in answer to the many intercessions made for him.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Masselink are now living in Edgerton, Minn.

Mrs. H. B. Frey and son Wilburt, returned from Mason City the fore part of the week, where Wilbert has been receiving medical treatment for about a month. We are pleased to report he is gaining strength rapidly and will soon be able to be about again.

Clarence Pals returned from Mason City, Saturday where he had been in the Park hospital since Wednesday, having submitted to a nasal operation. He is doing nicely.

Mrs. Clare Smith arrived Monday from Naperville, Ill., for a visit at her parental H. Fischer home.

Gerald Braga has accepted a position with the Standard Oil Station in Garner. He began his duties last week.

Bob Custer in "Beyond the Rockies", a stirring, thrilling western, at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday night, Feb. 12. Don't miss it!

John Wieman took his daughter, Dena; also Wilma Pals and Harriet Sprau to Clarion last week, on Tuesday, where the girls received special training on their selections which they will render at Thornton February 10th.

Adrian Brogan was caling on old friends here one day last week. They reside at Whittemore.

Fred Halfpop and G. E. Raecker went to Mason City last Wednesday and heard Harry Lauder sing his famous Scotch songs.

Wm. Gealow and family attended the funeral of their niece, Mrs. Wm. Sheriff, at Belmond, Friday.

Mother Mayers suffered a relapse early Monday morning and is again in a serious condition. Later reports are more favorable.

Mr. C. Bier is kept at home from injuries sustained in a fall near his home the latter part of last week.

Mrs. B. Vierkant returned home Saturday from an extended visit at the Lloyd Bishop home in Goodell. (Mrs. Bishop is her daughter.

Geo. Grosz left last week for an extended trip thru New Orleans and the South.

John Langlitz is somewhat improved from his recent illness and able to be about again.

The Boy Scouts held a regular meeting last Monday evening with 9 members present. They report a good enthusiastic meeting.

J. C. Janssen was taken quite ill last Monday with a heart attack. He is somewhat improved at this writing and is at the home of his son, Heiko.

The Prayer Day offering at the Evangelical church last Sunday was $37.22.

A. J. Nissen and wife and Theo. Wendel and wife attended the funeral of Mrs. Wm. Sheriff at Belmond last Friday.

G. E. Raecker attended an automobile convention in Chicago several days last week.

Mrs. A. E. Muller and son Donald were in Mason City Thursday afternoon on business matters and having dental work done.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hulsebus and son Bobby, of Dows were visiting here last Thursday.

Mrs. Irv Bier and son, Avery, were Mason City callers last week, where the latter received treatment for his eyes.

Rev. H. M. Raecker of Sheffield motored here Monday accompanied by his brother, G. E. Raecker and Mrs. Clare Smith, who had arrived from Chicago to that point earlier in the morning.

Theo. Wendel and daughter, Mrs. Nels Faaborg, were called to the Ralph Wendel home near Belmond, Sunday, owing to the illness of the latter. He had contracted a siege of inflamatory rheumatism but at last reports is recovering nicely.

Miss Anna Pals was a passenger to Mason City, Saturday, and accompanied her brother Clarence home from the hospital that evening.

Alvin Halfpop was a week end visitor with home folks.

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

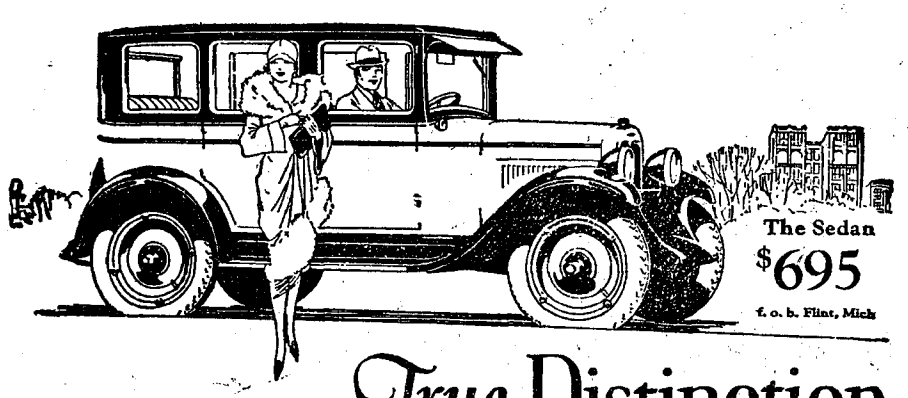
Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

THE MAN WHO DECIDED TO CATCH A GRIZZLY BEAR single-handed is no more foolish than the man who buys an off-brand Radio.
CROSLEY RADIO will not fight back, but give faithful service.
Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries On hand
H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Baby Chick ANNOUNCEMENT!
THE AERYHILL POULTRY FARM ANNOUNCES THE OPENING OF THEIR HATCHERY MARCH 1, 1927!
Having installed a JAMESWAY MAMMOTH INCUBATOR, we are ready for your orders. Increase your profits by improving your flocks with Healthy Chicks from America's greatest laying strain. If you want chicks that Grow, Lay and Pay you cannot go wrong when you order from us. Place your order early!
We sell the following:

	Per 50	Per 100
BARRED ROCKS	8.50	16.00
BUFF ROCKS	8.50	16.00
BUFF ORPINGTONS	8.50	16.00
R. C. RHODE ISLAND REDS	8.50	16.00
WHITE LEGHORNS	7.50	13.00

Will handle a complete line of Jamesway poultry equipment.
FRED W. PALS
Manager
MESERVEY, IOWA

CHEVROLET for Economical Transportation


The Sedan $695 f. o. b. Flint, Mich
True Distinction
The Most Beautiful Sedan in Chevrolet History!
A masterly example of the coachmaker's art, the Chevrolet Sedan with its Body by Fisher reveals a distinction usually found only on the costliest custom-built creations. It is literally true that no four-door enclosed car, priced so low, ever exhibited such marvelous beauty of line and color.
It is finished in rich Marine Blue Duco, gold striped, and its handsome proportions are emphasized by new full-crown one-piece fenders and bullet type lamps. In addition it offers the host of improvements which helped make the Most Beautiful Chevrolet the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry. AC air cleaner, AC oil filter, large 17-inch steering wheel, new frame-mounted tire carrier, gasoline gauge and many, many others.
Come in! You need only to see this new supremely beautiful and mechanically finer sedan to realize what amazing value it represents at its greatly reduced price.
Reduced Prices!

The Touring or Roadster	$525
The Coach	$595
The Coupe	$625
Sport Cabriolet	$715
The Landau	$745
1-Ton Truck (Chassis only)	$495
½-Ton Truck (Chassis only)	$395

Balloon Tires Now Standard On All Models
All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.
HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa
RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa
QUALITY AT LOW COST

Your Success and Ours!
Has it occurred to you that the success of a bank must necessarily be built not only upon the satisfaction but on the success of its customers?
And have you considered that your bank is therefore genuinely interested in co-operating with you in every practical way, to help promote your individual success?
When you open an account with us, therefore, you can be assured that we shall not only safeguard your interests as far as your deposits are concerned, but look forward to and welcome opportunities to be of further service to you.
"Service and Safety"
Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material
COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain
Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

Bob Custer in "Beyond the Rockies", a stirring, thrilling western, at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday night, Feb. 12. Don't miss it!

Mrs. Arley Blickendorf and three children, of Garner, visited Monday with her mother, Mrs. J. Christie.

Messrs. T. F. Matson and O. Sandberg attended Masonic lodge at Belmond Tuesday night.

Lela Griggs, oratorical; Daphne Houghton, dramatic; and Dale Conklin, humorous, went to Garner Tuesday evening, December 8th to give their readings in the declamatory contest with the schools of Garner, Klemme, Hayfield and Goodell. These pupils won second place in the local contest.

Joe Scott, of Belmond, spent Wednesday in this city installing an Atwater Kent radio at the Ahrenkiel home.

Several from here went to Mason City Wednesday to attend the program given by Harry Lauder.

James A. Hanson, of Hartland, Minnesota visited Wednesday at the O. Sandberg home with his son, Amos. On Thursday Amos took him to Kanawha to visit another son.

Ray Christie went to Hampton last week to have his tonsils removed. He returned home, Saturday.

Mr. Eagmo, of Cylinder, spent the fore part of the week at the home of his father-in-law, George Ness. The Eagmo family will move here March 1st and will live on the farm vacated by the Alsvig Bros.

Mrs. Pollock, of Garner spent Friday with her mother, Mrs. Thada.

Messrs Warner and Butts, accompanied by Jay Griggs and Bill Allaben autoed to Des Moines Friday and made Governor Hammil a personal visit.

The Tom Hamilton family went to Garner Friday to attend the funeral of Mr. Hamilton's sister's daughter, Miss Genevieve Roach. Goodell friends extend sympathy.

An exceptionally large crowd attended the Alsvig Bros. sale held Thursday. The sale was very successful. Jonas Alsvig and the Thor Alsvig family will move March 1st to Ottawa, Ill., where they have rented a farm.

F. W. McNutt substituted on the mail route on Thursday during the absence of Mr. Allaben.

Wayne Wesenberg, accompanied by George Nelson, Misses Evelyn Thomas, Grace Liittchwager and Eunice Wesenberg motored to Garner on Thursday evening and attended the declamatory contest.

The eighth grade county examinations will be given February 17th and 18th. Several pupils in Avery and Twin Lake townships will write.

Many from here went to Belmond Tuesday and attended the Mac Thompson sale.

Mrs. Will Cunningham was taken to the Lutheran hospital at Hampton on Tuesday of last week. She is very ill with stomach trouble but at this writing has not submitted to an operation.

The last number of the lecture course will be given Monday eve, February 14th, to be held at the U. B. church. Dr. Ira P. Berry will appear on the program and promises to give a wonderful impersonation of the Passion Play. He will show pictures of it and impersonate the voices of the leading characters. Every one is urged to attend this for their own personal good. Those who have not season tickets may purchase admittance at the door. Prices only 25c and 20c.

The grade program which was to be given free at the High School Friday evening was postponed due to the condition of the roads. It will be given Friday, February 18th.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Smith, who reside at Mason City Sundayed with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Johnson.

News has reached Goodell friends from Denver, Colorado, telling of the sad news of A. M. Shaffer, better known here as Boy Shaffer, the only son of Mrs. August Ahrenkiel. Mr. Shaffer was holding the position as traveling representative for the Union Stockyards out of Denver. On Friday, January 28 while traveling through Wyoming he was overtaken by a most terrible blizzard and when he did not come home on Saturday his wife became worried about him. About fifty men on horse back rode out from Hanna, Wyoming, where he had last been seen but they were unable to find him. A mail airplane came from Washington, D. C. and on Tuesday evening he was located about two and one-half miles from this town. It is thought he got out of his car, drained it and meant to walk for shelter. His body was found about ten feet from the car, frozen to death. Mr. Shaffer leaves a wife and six year old son, Kenneth, his mother, Mrs. August Ahrenkiel, and sister, Estelle Shaffer. When the word came to Goodell it certainly cast a gloom over the town. These people are very well known here, having lived here for many years prior to their moving to Denver some years ago and were prominent people of the community, and Boy Shaffer was considered one of the real boys of this town. Goodell people extend their sincere sympathy.

The school orchestra will give a program at the opera house Thursday evening, February 10.

The measles are as yet making their visit to various children in this community. The latest victims are June Remer, Morris Ahrenkiel, Vernon and Harriett Scott.

While Frank Quigley, Sr. and his brother-in-law, Tom Gaffney were coming to town Saturday they tipped over with the former's car. They and the car were only slightly hurt.

Mr. Paul VanBuskirk, who has been operating the Goodell garage the past year discontinued working there Saturday. Mr and Mrs. VanBuskirk will farm the coming year and will move March 1st to the VanBuskirk farm in Hickory grove. The Lloyd VanBuskirk family, who are now living on this place have rented the farm which will be vacated by George Luick, who moves to Thornton.

Mrs. Francis Quigley and son Paul who have been at Belmond the past two weeks with her mother, Mrs. Kinseth, returned to their home here last Tuesday

Heiko Brass was taken to the hospital at Hampton on Monday.

Plan to attend the declamatory contest at Kanawha, Friday, February 25. The schools represented in this contest will be Belmond, Goodell, Klemme and Kanawha. Goodell's representatives will be Iris Sherwood, Eunice Wesenberg and Cholm Houghton.

Dorothy Lackore returned the latter part of the week from Humboldt where she had enjoyed a few days' visit at the Westree home.

The Junior class of the Goodell high school will give a program and basket social on March 4.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Conlan entertained a large crowd of friends at their home on Sunday.

Sophronia Fuller wrote the teachers' examinations at Garner last week.

The literary society will give a very good Lincoln program at the high school Wednesday afternoon. The Lincoln essay medal will be awarded at this program.

Mrs. Houghton and Mrs. Conlan went to Mason City where the former had medical treatment.

The Kearney and Hemenway families autoed to Williams Monday to attend the funeral of a relative.

Miss Viola and Ruth Quigley spent the week end at Armstrong with their father who is acting as substitute section foreman at that place.

The Ulestad family are enjoying a visit with relatives from Story county.

Miss Marie Givens, local primary teacher was called to her home at Clarion on Saturday due to her mother being seriously ill. She was taken to Rochester to be operated on, the former accompanying here there. Mrs. Charles Conklin is substituting in the primary room during her absence.

Mesdames Conlan and Houghton spent Thursday afternoon at Hampton visiting the Goodell people who are ill at the hospital there.

A. M. Graeber, who has been working in the barber shop at Belmond the past three weeks, finished work there Saturday as Mr. Goelz is now able to return to his work.

Church Notes

Attend the food and apron sale of the U. B. Aid at the Goodell opera house, Saturday, at 2:00 p. m.

Ladies' Aid met Wednesday with a picnic lunch.

Missionary was postponed Saturday due to the bad weather.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

Bob Custer in "Beyond the Rockies", a stirring, thrilling western, at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday night, Feb. 12. Don't miss it!

The United Church of Alexander
Lewis N. Moody, Pastor

We shall expect to see you next Sunday at

THE CHURCH

Here's to the Church! the institution which,
In majesty, above all others stands,
Under its leader, Christ of Galilee—
Whose footsteps down the rolling centuries
Have marked the path of progress for mankind;
Whose voice has spoken peace to troubled souls;
Whose spirit has transformed the hearts of men,
Expelled the beast, and made them sons of God—
The Church, the fountain head of liberty,
The mother of the school, and every lodge
Andclub which is of benefit to man.
She rocks the cradle of democracy;
Gives birth to human brotherhood;
shall slay
All animosity of class and race,
Establish peace and love; till God shall reign
The undisputed sovereign of the world.
Here's to the Church!

Thursday evening, February 3 the United Church of Alexander celebrated their first annual dedication of the new church building, and the event of their uniting. About 175 were present, and the heavy roads prevented many more from being present. The basement was prettily decorated in pink and white and the tables well filled made a most inviting atmosphere, when the partakers marched down to take their places at the table. A very jolly time during the meal was kept up by jokes and sketches of songs, which had been prepared by the leaders of the program. At the close of the meal Professor Gaulke, who was appointed toastmaster, took charge of the program, which consisted of toasts of nearly all the branches of the church work, as follows, the Sunday School, and several of the different classes, Missionary Circle, Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls, Christian Endeavor, Junior Endeavor, and several other topics were represented when called upon by different individuals, and special music and singing, after which a good old social time was enjoyed.

John Hill and Fred Larsen were at Belmond Friday on business.

Mrs. B. K. Kinseth, of Belmond has been visiting at the home of her daughter's, Mrs. Clarence Bohlen the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jones, of Coulter visited at the Grant Smith home on Thursday.

Henry Polmateer moved a couple of loads of machinery to Renwick on Thursday and Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Polmateer and family will move to Renwick in the spring. Our community will be sorry to have them leave.

Hamfred Larsen, of Flaxton, N. D. came for a week's visit with his brother, Chris, and his sister, Mrs. Chris Stadtlander and families.

Roman Butterbaugh was at Dows Thursday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Alva Polmateer, of Grundy Center, visited at the home of Mr. Polmateer's people, Henry Polmateer, on Saturday and Sunday.

The side roads are getting unpassable for the autos, as the frost is nearly out, and many cars are being stuck in their efforts to pull thru the mud.

Miss Melba Tucker, a second grade teacher in our school spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edd Tucker, east of Hansell.

Albert Larsen, Louie Peters and Lewis Bell were business callers at Coulter on Friday.

Mrs. Thompson, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota is visiting at the home of Mrs. Nellie Pech. Mrs. Thompson has many friends here, having lived here for several years, when Rev. Tompson was living and was a minister of the Congregational church.

Mrs. and Mrs. Ed Tucker and daughter, Lois, of Hansell were callers at the John Bell home Sunday.

Lewis Bell and Fred Greenfield were at Dows Monday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Packard and son Bobbie were Belmond callers, Sunday

George Ables and John Douglas, of Alden were visiting the past week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Keislich.

Mr. and Mrs. Gaulke and daughters and Mrs. Albert Larsen attended the funeral of Elmer Star at Dows Friday.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

Bob Custer in "Beyond the Rockies", a stirring, thrilling western, at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday night, Feb. 12. Don't miss it!

The Wright County W. C. T. U. Institute will be held at the M. E. church in Clarion Tuesday, February 15th. Morning and afternoon session.

The Ladies division of the Farm Bureau will hold a meeting Friday afternoon, February 11th at the D. E. Harris home. Clothing considered. Local leaders.

Mrs. C. H. Lindsey has been quite ill of sciatica rheumatism. She is slightly improved at this writing.

The Foreign Missionary society of the M. E. church will meet Wednesday afternoon, February 9th at the G. R. Sheldon home.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ballou spent Wednesday and Thursday of last week at Ames attending a cattle convention. Mr. Ballou is still president of the state Ayreshire Cattle Association.

Messrs. D. W. Whitten and Fred Hackley are spending the fore part of the week in the capitol city on business.

Mr. and Mrs. Nels Hansen have taken possession of the hotel. Mr. Ohlerking reserved the west rooms for his own use.

The Womans Christian Temperance Union will meet Wednesday, February 16 at the D. E. Harris home with Mrs. Lem Rowan leader. This being Library Day, all members and friends of the Union are kindly asked bring a book or silver offering to replenish the standing W. C. T. U. library.

Geo. Liming and Fred Brinkman spent part of last week with the former's relatives at Corwith.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. McCallum, of Edgewood spent the fore part of last week at the home of their daughter, Mrs. James Burt.

Mrs. Frank Farley and daughter, of Marion are guests at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Whitten.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Keith and Margaret were Ft. Dodge business callers, Thursday.

Professor Ralph Adamson motored to Des Moines and Waukee, Friday evening. His wife and children who had spent the previous week with her parents at Waukee and with friends in Des Moines returned with him on Sunday.

Mrs. Etta Carr, who is making an extended visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Miller, at Latimer, spent Wednesday and Thursday of last week here to attend the Mite Box Opening of the Home Missionary Society and the M. E. Aid Society.

Chas. Rowan is quite ill. His sister, Mrs. Cady Templeton, of Clarion, arrived Saturday to assist in caring for him.

Relatives here received word Monday of the serious illness of Dave Fletcher at his home at Bruce, Wisconsin.

The Fred Webber family attended the funeral of Mrs. Wm. Sheriff last Friday at Belmond.

There will be preaching at the Congregational church next Sabbath morning at 11:00 o'clock.

The Mite Box Opening of the Home Missionary Society last week Wednesday at the J. D. Pritchett home was a pleasant social affair. The lesson was under the efficient leadership of Mrs. E. S. Tway. Mrs. D. E. French conducted a demonstration on Stewardship, and Mrs. Wm. Tresidder, who is Mite Box secretary very effectively presented the work of that department. Over $30 was realized. Lunch was served by the committee and enjoyed by the large crowd.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Cowley and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Ingraham attended the funeral of the latter's brother-in-law, Elmer Starr which was held at Dows last Friday.

The high school basket ball teams played two games last week. The first on Tuesday night with Dumont, here, and the last with Hansell there Friday evening. Both games resulted in favor of the Rowan girls while the boys lost both games to their rivals.

"DEACON DUBBS"
A Three-Act Comedy Drama
Presented by
Rowan American Legion
Rowan High School Auditorium
Wednesday and Thursday, Feb. 16-17
Directed by Prof. E. R. Swanson

CAST OF CHARACTERS

Deacon Dubbs ____Albert Moellering
Amos Coleman_R. E. Lee Aldrich, Jr.
Rawdon Crawley ____Fred Aldinger
Major McNutt _____Frank Retleff
Deuteronomy Jones ____Tommie Kew
Rose Raleigh _____Laura Aldinger
Miss Phillipena Popover
_____ Marian Trask
Emily Dale _____Martha Ruby
Trixie Coleman _____Nina Rietz
Yennie Yensen _____Vanessa Pruss

SYNOPSIS

Act. I. A Country Auction. The Deacon arrives from Sorghum Center, State o' West Virginny. The Deacon takes a drink of water.

Act. II. A Country Wedding. Shadows of the past.

Act. III. A Country Husking Bee. Escaped from the Penitentiary. The Deacon takes a wife.

Specialties by Male Quintette Between Acts.

The local High School Declamatory Contest will be held in the High School Auditorium Friday and Saturday evening, February 11-12.

Dramatic (Friday Evening)
The Death Disk ____Elsie Aldinger
Laddie _____ Louise Azeltine
How Christman Came to Crappy Shute _____Leona Bowers
The Lost Woed _____Ruth Bounds
Bobby Unwelcome ___Mabel Fanselow
Michael Strogoff ___Elsie Halbrook
Mother _____ Pearl Hiams
The Lady of the Blue Forget-me-nots _____Luelda McKinley
The Face of Christ _____ Josephine Mossman
Cigarette's Ride _____Lorine Liming
My Luttle Newsboy ___Helen Sellers
The White Hands of Telham _____ Evelyn Whitten
From Christmas to Easter _____ Gladys Whitten

Oratorical (Saturday Evening)
America First _____Vincent Bounds
The Unknown Soldier_Neva Hinckley
Lincoln's Supreme Sacrifice _____ Margaret Keith
Not Guilty _____Jeanette Moellering
Eulogy on Lafayette_Charles Sellers
The New South _____Ralph Patton
American Motherhood _____ Garnette Stumph
The Masterful Man of the Ages—Abraham Lincoln!_Linden Whitten

Humorous (Saturday Evening)
Jane _____Ruby Azeltine
Bill Smith _____Dale Farran
"In Swimmin" _____Pentz Ketchum
Hooking Up His Wife's Dress _____ Dorothy Knuths
Christopher Colombo _____ Louise Moellering
When Grandma Comes To Our House _____ Violet Patton
Sockery _____ Karl Rietz
A Football Fan _____Nina Rietz
A Pleasant Half-hour On the Beach _____ Kate Peddle
The Old, Old Story_LaVerna Simon

Music will be furnished by the High School Glee Clubs.

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

INDIGESTION OR HEALTH

How many of us put in several hours of each day in pain and suffering because we are distressed by the foods we eat. Results which Chiropractic has obtained on cases of indigestion are ofttimes astounding. The results are permanent because the Chiropractor locates the cause of Indigestion and corrects it.
Start getting well today.

DR. R. E. PORTER
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

Bargains!

GALLON CANNED GOODS—45c, 50c, 69c, 75c, 80c, 85c, 90c, $1.00, $1.10.
NO. 2 CORN, PEAS, per can 10c
CATSUP, large 20c
DIAMOND BREAD 8c
49 lbs. FLOUR $2.00
3 lbs. COFFEE $1.00
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES!
The above are good money savers while they last.

Parson's Store
BELMOND, IOWA

Kinseth's Store News

This week we are offering a dandy special on Fruits. Everyone likes fruit, and nothing is as good for you as good fruit. Pick your favorite from this list and have a dozen or so sent up.

Oranges, per dozen _____29c

Grapefruit, each _____8c

Apples, in baskets _____$1.95

Three cans of corn for 33c—corn that regularly sells for 15c a can.

Diamond Bread, 3 loaves for 25c.

Jello Powder, all flavors, at 9c a package.

18c buys a pound of good lard.

Large package oatmeal, 19c.

Two pounds soda crackers 34c; same for two pounds of graham crackers.

We are carrying a full line of cakes, all flavors and kinds, fresh every day for 10c, 13c, 15c, 25c and 30c.

Two lbs. Macaroni for 23c.

These are just a sample of the bargains to be found in The Store on the Corner. We are always at your service, and we like to have you drop in whether you buy or not, because this is a friendly store.

ALWAYS DEPENDABLE

A Great Lesson

There is no lesson more important than that of the power of intelligently controlled money. A savings account teaches anyone the earning power and growth of money—and it establishes a habit of life-long benefit. This is a friendly bank where your account will have every possible care and attention. Come in and see us.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND IOWA

PURE BRED
Duroc Jersey Brood Sow
SALE!

20 Head Sensation and Colonel breeding

Sale to be held at the farm, six miles south and one-half mile east of Kanawha; eight and one-half miles west of Belmond; eight miles north and two and one-half miles west of Clarion, on

Thursday, February 17
COMMENCING AT 2:00 O'CLOCK P. M.

Every pig listed is eligible to registry, is well grown, and has been fed a balanced ration including alfalfa hay. They are due to farrow in March, April and May. They are bred to Superior Royal, top fall son of Superior. They are all cholera immune.

20 - Head of Fall Pigs - 20

These pigs are in good, thrifty, growing condition, all pure bred and a real lot of Duroc Jerseys. They are all cholera immune.

TERMS: Cash, or make arrangements with your own bank for time. All hogs to be settled for day of sale.

H. L. ZISKA
OWNER
Lewis Hauge, Auctioneer
First National Bank, Kanawha, Clerk.

News About Iowa People and Events

The Missouri river is the most talked about stream now in the entire country. With Iowa and Nebraska seeking to construct a number of new bridges and a committee from the two states endeavoring to adjust the boundary lines between them the legislatures of each will be called upon for some recognition .There are 3,000 acres of Monona county land on the Nebraska side and a whole township of Nebraska territory on the Iowa side in Fremont county. East Omaha, a city of a couple of thousand inhabitants, belonging to Nebraska, is a suburb of Council Bluffs. In addition to local issues the government has appropriated $12,000,000 to make the river navigable as far up stream as Sioux City. Congressman Dempsey, chairman of the house rivers and harbors committee, strongly upholds the move to make the stream navigable. Mr. Dempsey holds that in addition to providing navigation and barge facilities which will be of great value to the Missouri valley region, the improvement of the Missouri will reclaim 40,000 acres of land worth $1,200,000 and will increase the value of other low lands $6,400,000.

* * * *

The Knights of Pythias organization is going to make itself felt in that it proposes to render service to the communities where lodges exist comparable with that now featured by Kiwanis, Rotary and other service clubs. The program includes among other activities a definite plan to increase the social features quicken interest in community service and to make a stronger appeal to worthy citizens to become members of the order. The lodge in Iowa has set as a mark in the increase of its membership under the general plan announced by the Supreme lodge the securing of a twenty per cent net gain during the year.

* * * *

Local high school girls are to be given an opportunity to win a university scholarship through competition in a national meat story contest, according to formal announcement of the event which has just been sent out to home economics teachers by the National Live Stock and Meat Board. Several scholarships are being offered. It is the fourth annual contest to be sponsored by this institution of research and education. To compete, a student must write a story or theme on some phase of the subject of meat or the live stock industry. The stories are to be judged by a committee of home economics authorities. Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the bureau of home economics, United States Department of Agriculture, who has been chairman of the judging committee for the three previous contests, will again serve in this capacity. The Board gives as the reason for this annual competition for scholarships a desire to stimulate a greater interest in the study of home economics, a subject which is considered of great importance to the coming generations of housewives. More than 10,000 girls competed last year, it is said, and the contest directors express the belief that even more will enroll for the present contest which will come to a close on March 15.

* * * *

A leak in the water tank at the pumping station in Leon brought the services of an expert, George Zika, a structural iron worker in the employ of the Ottumwa Supply and Construction Co. He went into the tank which had been drained about 4:00 o'clock one afternoon, using a block and tackle to let himself to the bottom from the opening in the roof. When he started to come out, he got tangled in the rope in some manner and the tackle went to the bottom and there he was unable to get out. He had nothing to make a noise with to attract attention except a pocket knife, and the very high wind prevented his cries for assistance being heard for some time. During the night nightwatch Frank Stanley heard him pound on the side of the tank, but supposed he was working and wanted to finish the job. A time or two Stanley turned the water on, thinking that Zika was signalling for water to test the tank. The wind was blowing a perfect gale all night, and no one could be found who would venture to crawl to the top of the water tower, to see what was the trouble, but the next morning three men went to the top of the tank and finally got the ropes adjusted so that Zika was drawn to the top [illegible] the worse for the ex-

[illegible] has [illegible]tory by publishing a book, recounting the activities of "the Northern Border Brigade," of the volunteer army raised in Iowa in 1862 for defense against the Indian menace on the north. Mr. Ingham has had access to many reports, private journals and newspaper articles of that day, and his story of those troubled times makes fascinating reading for any Iowan of pioneer ancestry. Mr. Ingham was born in Kossuth county, his father being among the first settlers of that region and prominent in helping protect the early settlers from the ravages of the Indians after the Spirit Lake massacre and after the more recent slaughter of 75 settlers in Minnesota. The little book tells an interesting and fascinating story. It hardly seems possible that within the recollection of men yet living such scenes could have been enacted. The span of a human life covers the time consumed in converting a wilderness into a happy, prosperous commonwealth.

* * * *

Sventy-five head of Colorado steers were "finished" on the Sigler farm in Warren county by Frank Jenner and when sold they brought $12 per hundred averaged 1,500 pounds, with a total for the bunch of $13,500. They were grade Herefords and were purchased at the Western Live Stock exposition in Denver. Don Berry says that they were bought for $9.25 per hundred and were billed from Denver to Chicago with a "feeding-in-transit" stop at Indianola, shipping via the Burlington route. They weighed 900 pounds and were two years old. When they reached the Sigler & Jenner farm they were put on a feed of two pounds of cotton seed meal per day for each steer with what ensilage they would clean up. During the summer they had the run of good blue grass pastures and clover meadow and a peck of shelled corn per steer each day. For the last 90 days they were finished on a diet of ear corn, all they would eat, with two pounds of linseed oil meal daily, and sheaf oats for roughage.

* * * *

There were shipped from the town of Audubon in 1926, according to Walter E. Williams. 615 cars of live stock, of which 183 cars were cattle, 411 hogs, 20 of sheep, and one of horses exceeding the record made in 1925 when 567 cars were shipped. including 382 cars of hogs, 170 cars of cattle, 8 of sheep and 4 of horses and mules. It also beats the 1924 record, when 575 cars were shipped, including 357 cars of hogs, 187 of cattle, 18 of sheep and 13 of horses. There are six other shipping points in that county. This gives some idea of the contribution Iowa is making to provide food for the peoples of the earth. Perhaps a hundred other shipping points in Iowa did as well as Audubon, and hundreds of others made large contributions. Before the days of the motor truck Oakland, Pottawattamie county, shipped more live stock to market than any other point on the C. R. I. & P. and its branches, and Walnut, in the same county, came next. In these latter days most of the hogs and cattle in that section of Iowa is hauled by motor trucks to the packing houses at Omaha.

A note of warning against the serious economic loss in Iowa thru the unwarranted destruction of the bob white or quail at the end of the present closed season, was sounded by Walter M. Rosen, resident of the Iowa Ornithological Union, who addressed the members of the Audubon Society at an open meeting in Des Moines. Mr. Rosen is a banker at Ogden. "The quail is the most important of more than 300 Iowa birds," Mr. Rosen told the society. "Prof. Bohumil Shimek of the State University is so concerned about the matter that he is quoted as saying that he would as soon shoot his neighbor's pony as a quail." The closed season is to end in November, 1927, it was reported at the meeting, unless something can be done before that time to make this impossible. Possible legislation along this line was suggested.

* * * *

President Homer H. Seerley, for forty years at the head of Iowa's great Teachers college at Cedar Falls, sends greetings to former students at the beginning of the new year through the "Alumni News." He says: "In these years nearly 100,000 students have received certificates, diplomas and degrees commending them as intelligent, reliable, well-trained teachers. Iowa could not absorb all these energetic, enterprising young workers and hence they have occupied other states, other countries and other occupations as well as other opportunities. But wherever they have gone and whatever they have done, they have all been universal teachers of the truth and interested trainers, of the young with the high aim of establishing a happier, a nobler and a more productive civilization in all the world. Greetings, good will and success to all in 1927."

* * * *

The final act completing Iowa's agreement to the transfer of land of the Upper Mississippi valley to the federal government for establishment of the Upper Mississippi game refuge was taken January 18 in Des Moines, when government representatives, meeting with state officials, approved of reservations made by the state. Dr. W. C. Henderson, assistant chief of the U. S. bureau of biological survey, and Glenn C. Leach of the division of fish culture of the U. S. bureau of fisheries, represented the government at the meeting. The state was represented by members of the state board of conservation, Governor Hammill and W. C. Albert, state fish and game warden.

* * * *

The responsibility of school districts for injuries received by pupils in foot ball and other games sanctioned by school authorities, will receive a judicial interpretation, it is said, by a contemplated court action in Benton county, resulting from the death of a high school boy a year or so ago from injuries received in a foot ball game. In this connection the action of the school board in Davenport is of interest. A report from that city says that when parents consent, orally or in writing, to their sons playing football, no responsibility will be assumed by the Davenport city schools for any injuries the players may receive in games or scrimmage. This ruling was laid down by the board of education in rejecting the request of William Moeller for assistance in defraying a $200 medical and hospital bill for his son who was injured last fall while playing football at the junior high school.

* * * *

O. E. Smith, of Spirit Lake, says that according to the actual figures from the County Recorder's office the story that there were fewer people at the lakes fishing during the past summer than a year ago is not true. From July, 1925 to January, 1926, there were 4,402 fishing licenses issued, and during the same period from July, 1926 to January, 1927 to date there has been issued 4,675 licenses or an increase of 273. In the non-residence license figures 872 for 1925 and 868 for 1926, a falling off of four licenses.

* * * *

O. E. Smith, of Indianola, who is at the head of the teachers' placement bureau in the office of the state superintendent of public instruction, is a graduate of Simpson college at Indianola and for 21 years was at the head of the public schools in that city. For ten years he was secretary of the Iowa State Teachers' Association. He served four years as a member of the Board of Educational Examiners, and for five years was teacher of education at Simpson college, doing work before and after public school hours and during summer vacations. For ten years he was a member of the State Sunday School Board, and for the same length of time a member of the Board of the State Y. M. C. A. In 1906 he organized the first High School Y. M. C. A. in the world.

Alabaster Lamps

by Margaret Turnbull.

COPYRIGHT 1925 by Margaret Turnbull

ROMANCE that satisfies. A love story that thrills. With mystery and humor for good measure. As old-fashioned in flavor as home-grown strawberries on biscuit-dough shortcake. As modern as a long, sleek speedster with balloon tires and a bob-haired driver.

* * *

Read this charming tale by the author of "Classmates" and "Looking After Sandy" as a serial in

The Independent

Starting This Week

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, February 10, 1927 No. 44

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLAND ER LUMBER COMPANY.

We heard an echo yesterday from "them good old days." A horse "whinnied". Right here in town, too!

—

Never strike a man when he is down. You don't know how big he might be when he gets up.

—

We could fill this space with invitations for you to "come in and see us." But we're asking that you take that for granted. Of course, we want you to come in—that's what we are here for.

—

Do you realize that February 14 is St. Valentine's Day? Remember when a little red heart with a cupid on it would thrill you for days?

—

Have you returned that ladder that you borrowed from your neighbor last summer? If so, better come in and buy a new one. All lengths carried in stock.

—

There's a man in this town—we won't tell you his name—who says he is thankful for the bob bed hair fad. He says it brought clean necks. But maybe the necks were clean before the fad came. The bobbed hair only proves it.

—

It is estimated by statisians that 50 per cent of the married people in this country are women.

—

We know some children who own a pet cat. The other day they discovered a rat near the premises and the cat was called upon to do its worst. It did. It turned tail and ran, with the rat in full pursuit.

—

Here lies the body
Of Benjamin Hurst,
He stepped off the curb
Without looking first.

—

Watch this space next week.

LA CON FARM

Bred Sow Sale!

Wednesday, February 16

40 HEAD, MOST OF WHICH ARE SPRING GILTS
Also One CHOICE HOLSTEIN BULL, of serviceable age.

We are not expecting any high prices at this sale. It will be bargain day for those in attendance. Every sow will sell within the reach of any good farmer. Why not give yourself a chance with a better sow and let the sow convince you of her superior value?

Let your boy or girl feed a litter for Club work.

Attend the sale and see these animals for youself. It will be a day well spent.

FREE LUNCH AT NOON!
Sale At 1:30 P. M., In Heated Pavilion.

LA CON FARM A. D. Severe, Mgr. DOWS, IOWA
Farm adjoins Dows on the Southwest.

There Is No Substitute

For circulation when it comes to advertising. Unless the circulation is there, your advertising cannot do you any good. To benefit from it, your message must get before the buyers.

That is why Independent Advertising brings such good results—because The Independent has the circulation. And its circulation has two of the first essentials for results—It is LOCAL, and it is PAID. There is no better circulation than the local, paid kind; it is gilt-edge, the best the local advertiser can use.

Others have found that Independent Advertising pays; many have contracted by the year. What it has done for them, it will do for you. Come in and talk it over.

BELMOND INDEPENDENT

Successful Advertising | News 115 | Quality Printing

LYDIA of the Pines

by HONORÉ WILLSIE

W.N.U. SERVICE COPYRIGHT by FREDERICK A. STOKES CO.

Amos sank into his armchair. "Lydia, have you lost your mind!" he groaned.

"No, I've found it, daddy. Poor dad, don't look as if you'd fathered a lunatic! Daddy, let's homestead that land! Let's quit this idea of getting something by graft. Let's do like our forefathers did. Let's homestead that land! Let's earn it by farming it."

Lydia's father looked at her, long and meditatively. He was pretty well discouraged about the probability of ever getting a clear title to the land through Kent or Marshall. And the longer he looked at Lydia the more his mind reverted to New England, to old tales of the farm on which he and his ancestors had been bred.

"A man with three hundred and twenty acres of land is a power in the community," he said, suddenly.

Lydia nodded. Amos began to walk the floor. "I'm still a young man. If I had the backing that land gives a man, I could clean out a lot of rottenness in the state. Even if I only did it by showing what a man with a clean record could make of himself."

"That's just the point," cried Lydia eagerly, "and your record wouldn't have been clean if you'd gotten it through Marshall."

"If I take Brown's offer for the cottage it would leave us enough to get a team, and I bet I could hire a tractor to get to the cleared portion of it this fall. A hundred acres are clear, you know. I might as well quit the factory now, eh, Lydia?"

With a laugh that had a sob in it Lydia kissed her father and whirled out the door. Billy was coming in at the gate. She flew down to seize his hand and turn him toward the road. "Let's walk! I've such quantities to tell you!"

Billy turned obediently, but paused in the shadow of the pine. "Lydia, I can't tell you what it means to me. No matter what bigger things may seem to happen to me, nothing can equal the things I've felt and dreamed today."

Then he put his arms about Lydia and kissed her, and she put her arms about his neck and laid her head against his shoulder. They stood thus motionless while the pine whispered above them. And in the intensity of that embrace all the griefs of Lydia's life were hallowed and made purposeful.

"Lydia," said Billy, "I want to tell mother and dad. Will you come over home with me now?"

"Yes," replied Lydia, "and then we must tell my father and Lizzie. Oh, Billy, I forgot," as they started down the road, "I've decided to homestead that land."

"But—why, Lydia, dear, you're going to be a lawyer's wife. For heaven's sake, let that beastly land go."

"No, I'm going to be a pioneer's wife!"

There was a little pause, then Billy laughed uncertainly. "Well, I'm not going to talk about it tonight. I'm in a frame of mind tonight where I'd promise you to be an Indian chief if you ask it. Mother and dad are in the kitchen."

They opened the kitchen door and stepped in. Pa Norton was sitting in his stocking feet, reading the evening paper. Ma was putting away the day's baking. She paused with a loaf of bread in her hand as the two came in, and pa looked over his glasses.

"Mother and dad," said Billy, uncertainly, "I—I've brought Lydia home to you! Look at her, dad! Isn't she a peach!"

Lydia stood with her back against the door, cheeks scarlet, golden head held high, but her lips quivering.

Ma dropped her loaf of bread. "Oh, Lydia," she cried, "I thought that numbskull of a Billy never would see daylight! I've prayed for this for years. Come straight over here to your mother, love."

But Pa Norton had dropped his paper when ma dropped her bread and had not paused for comments. He made three strides to Lydia, and gave her a great hug and kiss. Then he said, "First time I saw you carrying that milk for Billy's books I said, there's the wife Billy ought to have. Ma, wasn't she the dearest—"

But ma shoved him aside contemptuously. "Get over and talk to Billy. This is a woman's affair. Who cares about reminiscences now. Oh, Billy, do you remember I used to worry because she didn't keep the back of her neck clean!"

"Who's reminisencing now?" asked pa belligerently.

Everybody laughed. Then pa sighed. "Well, I feel almost reconciled now to Bill's giving up farming. When're you going to be married?"

Lydia blushed. "Oh, not for a long time. Now, let's go and tell my people, Billy."

Out in the night again! Curious how long the short walk to the cottage could be made! Curious how near the stars were—heaven just over the road where the lovers strolled. Not strange that such ecstasy cannot last forever. The human mind could not bear that heaven-born rapture too long.

Lizzie was mending. Amos was sitting in his arm chair, with a bit of paper on which he was figuring. Lydia flew across the room and dropped on her knees beside him.

"Oh, daddy dear, look at me! Billy's here and he's always going to be here. Tell us you're glad."

Amos looked up with a jerk. First at Billy, standing stalwart and grave by the table, his deep eyes as steady as the hand he held out to Lizzie. Then at his daughter, with her transformed face.

"But," protested Amos, "I thought it was to be Kent."

"Oh, it couldn't have been Kent," exclaimed Lydia. "We never would have understood each other. Kent was for Margery."

A frown gathered on Amos' face. He did not really want Lydia to marry anyone. All that had reconciled him to the thought of Kent had been Kent's relation to the Indian lands. And now he discovered that he didn't want to give his daughter to anyone. He threw a jealous arm about her.

"No, you can't have her, Billy," he said. "Nobody shall have her. She's too good for the best man living."

"Yes, she is," agreed Billy. "But that isn't the point. The point is that Lydia actually wants me. I don't understand it myself, but she does, and I know I can make her happy."

"I can make her happy myself," said Amos, gruffly.

"But you haven't," retorted Billy. "Look at the way you've acted about this land matter. And, God knows, she deserves to be happy at any cost. Good heavens, when I think of her, it seems to me that nothing could be too much for her. I think of her trudging those miles in her patched old clothes to buy her school books—what a thin, big-eyed kiddie she was. Why, even as a cub, I used to appreciate her. And then when she stood up before the hearing, the bravest man among us, and when she got sick trying to earn those silly prom-clothes— My God, Amos, if Lydia wants me, or the moon, or a town lot in South Africa, it's up to you to give it to her."

Amos did not reply for a moment. Down through the years he was watching a thin little figure trudge with such patience and sweetness and determination as he seemed never before to have appreciated. Slowly his hold loosened on Lydia's shoulders and he looked into her face.

"Do you want to marry Billy?" he asked.

"Oh, daddy, yes," whispered Lydia.

Amos looked up at the young man, who stood returning his gaze. "Take her, Billy, and heaven help you if you're not good to her, for John Levine's spirit will haunt you with a curse."

Billy raised Lydia to her feet and the extraordinary smile was on his face.

"What do you think about it, Lizzie?" he asked.

Lizzie, who had been crying comfortably, wiped her eyes with the sock she was darning.

"I'm thinking that anyone that can bring the look to Lydia's face she's been wearing for twenty-four hours, deserves her. Rheumatism or no, down I get on my old knees tonight and give thanks—just for the look in that child's eyes."

And now for a while, Lydia was content to live absolutely in the present, as was Billy. Surely there never was such an April. And surely no April ever melted so softly into so glorious a May. Apple blossoms, lilac blooms, violets and wind flowers and through them, Lydia in her scholar's gown, hanging to Billy's arm, after the day's work was done.

She seemed singularly uninterested in the preparations for commencement, though she went through her final examinations with credit. But the week before commencement she came home one afternoon with blazing cheeks. Billy was at the cottage for supper and when they had begun the meal, she exploded her bomb.

"Dad! Billy! Lizzie! They've elected me a member of the Scholars' club!"

"For the love of heaven!" exclaimed Amos, dropping his fork.

"Why not?" asked Lizzie.

"Lydia, dear, but I'm proud of you," breathed Billy.

"Professor Willis told me, this afternoon," Lydia went on, "and I laughed at him at first. I thought he was teasing me. Why only highbrows belong to the Scholars' club! Prexy belongs and the best of the professors and only a few of the postgraduate pupils But he says I was elected. I told him lots of students had higher standings than I, and he only laughed and said he knew it. And I've got to go to that banquet of theirs next week!"

"Fine!" said Billy.

"Fine! Why, Billy Norton, I never went to a banquet in my life. I don't know what forks to use, and I never saw a finger bowl!"

Amos grinned. "What's the use of being a scholar, if that sort of thing bothers you?"

"I might get a book on etiquette and polish up," said Lydia, thoughtfully. "I'll get one tomorrow, and practice on the family."

Amos groaned, but to no avail. Lydia borrowed a book on etiquette from the library and for a week Amos ate his supper with an array of silver and kitchenware before him that took his appetite away. He rebelled utterly at using the finger bowls, which at breakfast were porridge dishes. Lizzie, however, was apt and read the book so diligently while Lydia was in class that she was able to correct Lydia as well as Amos at night.

Ma Norton had insisted on making Lydia a white mull graduation dress. She would not let either Lizzie or Lydia help her. She had been daughter-hungry all her life and since she made her own wedding gown, no bit of sewing had given her the satisfaction that this did.

So it was that Lydia, wearing the mull under her scholar's gown, and with the precepts of the book on etiquette in her mind, attended the Scholars' banquet, timidly but not with the self-consciousness that she might otherwise have felt.

Billy left her at the door of the hall and Professor Willis took her in to dinner. There were only two other women there, but Lydia did not mind.

When Professor Willis was called on for his toast, which was the last one, he responded:

"My toast is to all scholars, 'everywhere, but also to one scholar in particular. It is to one who was born with a love of books, to one who made books—good books—so intimate a part of her life that she made poverty a blessing, who combined books and living so deeply that she read her community aright, when others failed to do so, to one who is a scholar in the truest sense of the word—a book lover with a vision. I drink to the youngest and sweetest scholar of us all!" and he bowed to Lydia.

How she got through the congratulations and out to Billy, patiently waiting at the main campus gate, Lydia was not sure, for she was quite drunk with surprise and pleasure. After she had told it all to Billy, and once more they were standing under the pine at the gate, she said:

"Billy, will you go up with father and Lizzie and me to open up the three hundred and twenty acres?"

Billy answered slowly. "There's nothing I'd like better. I was born to be a farmer. But, Lydia, it looks to me as if, as a lawyer, I'd be a more useful citizen, the way things are now in the country."

Lydia shook her head. "We've got too many lawyers in America. What I think America needs is real love of America. And it seems to me the best way to get it is to identify oneself with the actual soil of the community. What I want is this. That you and I, upon the ground where poor John Levine did such wrongs, build us a home. I don't mean a home as Americans usually mean the word. I mean we'll try to found a family there. We'll send the roots of our roof tree so deep into the ground that for generations to come our children's children will be found there and our family name will stand for old American ideals in the community. I don't see how else we Americans can make up to the world for the way we've exploited America."

Billy stood with his arm about the slender "scholar." Suddenly there flooded in upon him the old, old call, the call that had brought his Pilgrim forefathers across the Atlantic, the call that was as old as the yearning for freedom of the soil.

"Lord!" he cried, "how glad I'll be to go up there! Think of beginning our life together with such a dream!"

"I believe John Levine would be glad, if he knew," said Lydia, wistfully.

"I know he'd be glad. . . . Lydia, do you love me, dear?"

"Love you! Oh, more than all the world! You know it, don't you?"

"I know it, but I can't believe it." His arm tightened around Lydia and as on just such an evening, four years before, he said:

"What a wonderful night!"

A wonderful night, indeed! Sound and scent of bursting summer. Syringas coming as lilacs went. The lake, lap-lapping on the shore. The lazy croak of frogs and the moon sinking low over the cottage. Above them the pine, murmuring as of old. Life and the year at the full. A wonderful night, indeed!

[THE END.]

OUT DOOR SPORTS

Hardy northern people are delighting in vigorous and invigorating outdoor sports even when the thermometer is playing around zero. They dress the part and do not mind the weather. Skiing, skating, coasting, ice-boating, sleighing and ice-hockey are some of their activities. Where the weather is freezing, any neighborhood may have its corner lot ice rink, if the firemen will but turn on the hydrant and flood some vacant area. The cost of this is not exhorbitant and it would bring its compensation in the health of the community.

ALABASTER LAMPS

by Margaret Turnbull.

COPYRIGHT 1925, BY MARGARET TURNBULL W.N.U. SERVICE.

There was nothing especially romantic to contemplate about Claude Melnotte Dabbs, village grocer, unless it were the first two-thirds of his name. When his doting parents prefixed the cognomen of Bulwer Lytton's hero in the drama, "The Lady of Lyons," to his family name, it may have been an augury or at least an influence; for C. M. Dabbs, while sticking to the hard facts of life and wringing success from his career as a tradesman, nevertheless had romantic yearnings—desire to see existence through "the mists of alabaster lamps."

And his dream came true. Yes, came true to the extent that C. M. participated in a romance in real life that had chivalry, adventure, mystery, beautiful women and all sorts of interesting and delightful people and experiences mixed up in it in about as satisfying proportions as anyone could wish. Right in a little town in Pennsylvania, with its typical and lovable characters, the local butter and egg man became the chief actor in a drama of life in which his humdrum affairs were tinged by that aura of enchantment existing in "perfumed light stealing through the mists of alabaster lamps."

Margaret Turnbull, author of this engaging story, was born in Scotland, educated in New Jersey and lives at Rockwood, New Hope, in Bucks county, Pennsylvania. She has written several successful novels. Her "Looking After Sandy" is still a popular favorite. Her play, "Classmates," was and still is a big success. She has done a number of moving pictures for the big producers. The story, "Alabaster Lamps," was written at Rockwood, on a hill above the Delaware river, far removed from theaters, moving pictures or other accompaniments of city life; hence its peaceful atmosphere and fine strain of pure romance.

CHAPTER I

The grocery store of C. M. Dabbs, at the crossroads, Peace Valley, was astir. This was "late-closing" night. Parked before the door were vehicles of all sizes, sorts and description, from motors to old-fashioned farm wagons and buggies, the patient horses waiting, with drooping heads, while their masters finished their interminable marketing and equally interminable conversations.

Marketing took a long time in Peace Valley. In the first place, on late-closing night it was the custom to "go down along the crossroads and do your 'storing' at Dabbs'." In the second place, hurry was a vulgar habit that had not yet reached Peace Valley.

One was "in the way of knowing what was adoing" in the village and the surrounding countryside by going to the crossroads store. The news-gathering and distributing took time, for no subject was rashly broached or rapidly discussed. One has only to listen attentively to the apparently monotonous discussions in country stores to discover that, though illiterate and totally ignorant of grammar, these solons have read deeply in the Book of Human Nature.

Two men alighted from a car just outside the grocery.

One of them, the proprietor of the shop, said: "Leave the bags, Ned. The boy'll bring them in."

He was a dark-haired, rather thick-set man. He was not tall. His fine face was reddened like that of a sailor or fireman; round, full and clean shaven. The hair at his temples was graying a little.

It was his eyes that made you look twice at him. C. M. Dabbs' eyes were blue as any Italian sky, and as cold as ice, or as soft and deep as the same sky. It all depended on how Dabbs looked at you.

They were at their softest and deepest now, as he looked at his companion. He was a much younger man, not more than twenty-seven, with smooth brown hair. His clothes were all that clothes should be, and worn by one who thought about them before he put them on, and then forgot about them. He was not the type usually found in a country village and he looked about him with an interest that proved him a stranger.

"Peace Valley!" he said, softly. "It looks like it!" He glanced again at the crossroads, one of which led steeply uphill, while the other wound about the valley until it disappeared behind a tall wood. The grocery store was a great old stone house, the front part of which had been transformed from a dwelling. Next door, a long low building combined the business of blacksmithing, wheelwrighting and motor repairing. The old and the new were mingled peacefully together. The post office, the brightly lighted barber shop and the cobbler's little hovel were all grouped about the crossroads.

"I didn't exaggerate, did I?" asked Dabbs.

The young man shook his head. "Peace Valley," he repeated. "I didn't believe there was such a place!" He glanced at the sign over the door and turned to the older man with a smile.

"C. M. Dabbs, General Store," he read aloud. "You told the truth about that, too. But why C. M.? Come, what is it that distinguishes you from the rank and file of Dabbses? Is it 'Charles' or 'Cyrus' or—"

The older man blushed. "C. M., I generally sign myself," he admitted, "but if you really want to know what it stands for—why, Claude Melnotte Dabbs 's my name."

The young man laughed softly, repeating, "Claude Melnotte."

Mr. Dabbs smiled. "Do you blame me for sticking to C. M., or Mister?"

"I do not," his companion declared emphatically. "Tell me—"

"A traveling company, pretty good one, too, I believe," Mr. Dabbs began hurriedly, "with somebody celebrated as 'Pauline,' came to the county seat and played 'The Lady of Lyons.' My mother—"

"I didn't mean that," the young man assured him hastily, as though fearing obstetrical details. "I meant to ask is there a 'Lady of Lyons' in Peace Valley and is yours called 'Pauline,' too?"

Mr. Dabbs hesitated, shook his head thoughtfully, and said slowly: "I live alone, with Aunt Lyddy to keep house for me.

"'Course, I've always thought it was a blamed silly play. All about a poor boy marrying a lady under false pretenses. Good many years since I read it, though, but as I remember, he made good. I've often wondered if in real life—"

But his companion cared nothing about discussing Lytton's old play. "I say, Claude Melnotte," he interrupted, "is your Peace Valley home lit by 'alabaster lamps'?"

Claude Melnotte Dabbs hesitated. He was home again, after a week of the Wholesale and Retail Grocer's convention in New York. Behind that calm exterior he was greatly excited. Something in the young man's question faintly stirred his memory. Surely there had been mention of "alabaster lamps" in that old play. Vaguely feeling that there was another answer, he took particular pains to be exact.

"We've got an electric light plant for the store only, as you'll notice. In the house we burn coal oil. They're Rochester lamps."

He threw the door wide open and beckoned to his companion to enter, saying:

"Welcome home, Ned. Welcome to Peace Valley and our store."

With their entrance conversation stopped and all eyes turned toward Mr. Dabbs and his companion.

Ned saw what seemed an immense cavern, lit by crudely installed electric lights which shed a garish glow over the huge stock of canned goods, flower pots, cotton cloth, hams, bacon, tea, coffee and other staples which constitute a general store.

"Hello, Sim," Mr. Dabbs began, greeting the big-headed, pale-faced man behind the counter who was ladling out sugar for a bewhiskered farmer.

But before he could introduce Ned, a clear, girlish voice interrupted:

"I beg pardon, but could—will anyone tell me the road to Clover Hollow?"

The occupants of the store transferred their attention to the girl who, unnoticed, had entered just behind Mr. Dabbs and his companion.

She was a slender, vivid, dark girl. One might suspect, and find, red lights in the brown hair almost hidden by her close-fitting hat, and a fire in the blue eyes that looked out from under long, dark lashes. Everything about her spoke of money and care expended upon every article of her clothing. She had that curious air of responsibility and knowledge that is so oddly part of youth that the war has left us.

"I beg pardon," Ned began, but the girl looked past him and at the capable Dabbs, who had turned toward her and was pointing through the dark doorway as he spoke:

"Go straight along up that road until you pass Brook farm, which you'll know by the little covered bridge over the brook. Cross the bridge, turn to the right and keep on up the hill and away from Peace Valley and you'll be on the only road to Clover Hollow."

The girl thanked him briefly, though cordially, and went swiftly out. Ordinarily the crowd would have discussed her, her destination and her likelihood of being a "stayer" or just a visitor at Clover Hollow. But now there was another stranger present, and they turned their attention to Ned.

Mr. Dabbs introduced him briefly: "My nephew, Ned Carter, come to stay awhile."

Then, as the store began to wake up and get ready for speech, he turned to Ned with a curt, "Come in and meet Aunt Lyddy."

Ned followed without knowing that he had left behind a seething mass of curiosity. Dabbs knew it. That Claude Dabbs had an unknown nephew was unthinkable, and unsupported by the facts concerning the Dabbs family as known in Peace Valley.

Jim Farnum made one brave effort toward putting things on the proper Peace Valley footing. As Mr. Dabbs led Ned to the door, Jim found his voice:

"Didn't know you had a nevvy, Claude," he called out, "and don't exactly see how you can, either, seeing you're the only one of the hull Dabbs family left."

"My second cousin's boy from the West. He's always called me uncle, though, instead of cousin, owing to the difference in years. Come on, Ned," and Dabbs opened the door.

Ned found himself in a queer, bare little room, almost filled by a big table-topped desk of the vintage of 1860, quite as large as a modern dining table, and a vast armchair that looked even older, though both were in an excellent state of repair. There were no pictures on the wall, only a calendar.

"My office," Dabbs explained. "But come on and meet Aunt Lyddy, one of the best women God ever put breath in, but likely to be flustered if you bring anybody on her—suddenlike."

He opened a door leading into the interior of the house and ushered Ned into the family dining room. Aunt Lyddy sat at the table, a Rochester lamp in the center on an elaborately embroidered centerpiece. The lamp had a white shade, but after the harsh

"Come in and Meet Aunt Lyddy."

light of the shop, Ned was grateful for the softer glow. Aunt Lyddy was a personable old lady, handsome despite her sixty-odd years, with a great pile of the whitest hair Ned had ever seen. She looked up as Mr. Dabbs entered and scrutinized Ned from over the rims of her glasses.

"Well, Mister Dabbs, this is a pretty time to come home! Been ajoying around somewhere, as usual, I suppose."

"Brought you something, Aunt Lyddy." Mr. Dabbs patted her on the back and placed a small package in her lap. "Just a little something to satisfy that awful craving you've got for jewelry." Then, before the delighted old woman could open the box or speak, he continued, his hand on Ned's shoulder: "But I brought a bigger present than that back with me. Aunt Lyddy, this is my adopted nephew, Ned Carter."

"H'm, adopted!" As she spoke, Aunt Lyddy's eyes remained fixed on Ned.

"Yes, adopted. But remember, Aunt Lyddy, he's just 'nephew' to those gas bags in the store waiting to be filled and float round town with the news."

Aunt Lyddy nodded. "Well, you showed right good taste in selecting a nephew, Claude. He's a presentable-looking young fellow, I'll say that. If so be as he treats you as fair as you treat him, he can stay here and welcome."

"Thank you, Aunt Lyddy," and Ned smiled his friendliest. "I certainly mean well!"

"Meaning well's one thing; doing well's another." But Aunt Lyddy smiled back at him so that all sting was taken from the cautious sentence. "Now, what you two rampaging idiots mean coming home at this hour of the night, springing a brand-new relation on me and with no notice to get his room ready for him?"

"Oh, go along, Aunt Lyddy! You can fix the room next to mine in a jiffy while Ned and I are finishing a bite of your lemon pie."

"Pie? Finishing my pie! Who said a word about pie? Who said I made any pie?"

"I did. I smell it."

Aunt Lyddy laughed. "He smelled it. Boy," turning to Ned, "did you ever hear tell of a man like that? Set right down, both of you, and I'll have that pie brung on the table before you can get your hands out of your pockets."

"I don't think I can eat anything more," Ned began as she left the room. "Remember our dinner on the train."

"Jiminy! Even if you weren't hungry, could you resist that?"

Two highly decorated plates, borne by Aunt Lyddy on an old japanned tray, held the largest, thickest and most delicious looking pieces of lemon meringue pie that Ned had ever seen. Aunt Lyddy placed before them the remainder of the pie, a pitcher of cold milk, and a large wedge of cheese. With a hearty, "Enjoy yourselves, boys, while I fix Ned's room," she left them.

(Continued Next Week)

LOCALS

Mrs. Martin Nissen entertained 20 friends at bridge, Friday evening.

Valentine Dance at the Opera House, Friday night, Feb. 11. Music by Tom Wells Entertainers.

Mrs. F. O. Fitts entertained her division of the M. E. Ladies Aid, Wednesday afternoon.

J. F. Fetrow has been apointed as Justice of the Peace for Pleasant township, and has duly qualified, his bond being approved by the Board of Supervisors. Mr. Fetrow will make a good Justice, and his appointment fills a need in that line in the town.

A convention of the Wright County Music association will be held at Clarion, Friday, February 25, beginning at 8:00 p. m. at the Congregational church. For further particulars see H. G. Nordschow, local chairman.

Harry Wolle, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wolle, of Belmond, and his wife recently figured in an automobile accident at Bay Point, Cal., their home. One Ontone Bretto, a dairyman, smashed into the Wolle car on the highway. Harry refused to allow either car to be moved until a traffic officer arrived and trafic was blocked on the road for an hour until the authorities arrived. When the officer did arrive, Bretto became abusive to him and made threats which resulted in Bretto being arrested and heavily fined. Mrs. Wolle was thrown thru the windshield of their car in the crash and suffered several bad cuts and an injured back.

The Des Moines Daily Capital and the Belmond Independent, both one full year for $4.50. Regular price of the Capital is $4.00, and of the Independent, $2.00. Thru a special arrangement we are enabled to offer the two at a saving of $1.50. Place your orders at the Independent. This offer is good on both new and renewal subscriptions.

The American Legion dance Tuesday night at the opera house drew a crowded house and was entirely successful thruout. The Legion will clear something over $180 on the affair.

Cleveland & Son have dissolved partnership, Mrs. Cleveland retaining the restaurant and Bernard Moody taking entire charge of the opera house. Mrs. Cleveland has discontinued the lunch counter and has a stock of groceries.

Bob Custer in "Beyond the Rockies", a stirring, thrilling western, at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday night, Feb. 12. Don't miss it!

Discs, plows, shovels, etc. sharpened. See J. Underkofler, at the old Peter Stacy blacksmith shop. 1c

Miss Beulah Smith was a guest of Goodell friends, Sunday.

A good Old Time Dance will be given by the Catholic ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

The Monday Night bridge club met this week with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Martin.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Boelman are the parents of a baby girl, born Saturday.

Mrs. G. F. Elder and Mrs. E. W. Luick entertained the school faculty at a seven o'clock bridge dinner, Saturday evening.

Ed. Holm and family are moving to the farm with his brother, Anton, near Holmes.

Harry Larson and family have moved on a farm near Clear Lake, with the Wm. Guest family.

Merrill Galloway and wife have moved back to Belmond from Titonka, where Merrill has been employed in a garage.

We notice several unique displays in store windows this week, pertaining to the Boy Scouts. The Belmond Furniture Co. window pictures remarkably a camp scene made real by tents, signal towers, and camp equipment. In C. C. McGuire's window are articles made by the boys. The official uniform is also displayed. Bohning & Co. have an interesting display showing the contents of the first aid kit carried on all hikes. The displays are for the purpose of reminding the people that this is the week in which the Boy Scouts celebrate their 17th birthday.

Wednesday evening, Mrs. Henry Schultz left for Waterloo where she will attend a hair dressers convention. One of the chief objects of her trip is to witness demonstrations of permanent waving. Miss Sadie Frohling will be in charge of her beauty shop during her absence.

Wesley Stieninker, of Hayfield, has been visiting the past two weeks at the Steve Dorenkamp home, and at the home of other friends.

There will be a combination sale held at the Moe & Nelson barn, north of the Independent, Tuesday, March 8. Particulars later.

Plan to attend the annual Chicken Supper to be given by the Catholic ladies at the library, February 24.

The ladies of the Priscilla club will entertain their husbands at an annual banquet at the library, tonight.

List with Louie Moe or The Saving Bank, for the big sale February 16th. We will try to please you. Several high class auctioneers. Be sure to hear them.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, our valued and esteemed fellow Woodman, Chas. Gealow, has been called upon to suffer great sorrow and bereavement, in the death of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Sheriff, and

Whereas, The members of Iowa Valley Camp No. 1978, M. W. A., have the most profound sympathy for him and his family in their sorrow, therefore be it

Resolved, That we do hereby extend to him and his family this expression of our heartfelt sympathy in this time of heart ache and grief which only the Great Healer can allay, and be it

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be mailed to Chas. Gealow and family and that a copy hereof be published in the Belmond newspapers.

E. E. Sullivan, Clerk.

A good place to sell and a good place to buy, at the big Market Sale at the Moe sale barn, February 16. All kinds of stuff already listed.

The Luncheon club meets this noon with O. L. Varland and C. O. Fitts the committee in charge of the topic, "Fire Conditions."

The cereal plant at the Farmers Elevator is now completed and the firm is now shipping meal, graham, rye graham, buckwheat flour, self-rising pancake flour, and similar products. The Cloverleaf brand is used on all their products.

John Dorenkamp was quite ill last week with an attack of hiccoughs. For a couple of days he was in rather serious condition, but at this writing is reported much improved.

A good Old Time Dance will be given by the Catholic ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

Miss Gladys Glawe, a teacher in the public schools of Clarion, and a former friend and parishioner of Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Stark, came to spend the week end with them last Saturday and Sunday.

The Cemetery Aid Society will meet Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. W. Luick. The hostesses are Mrs. Luick, Mrs. R. C. Morse, Mrs. M. F. Ghristie, Mrs F. E. Snyder Mrs. Tom Bayliss. All members are urged to attend.

Last Saturday afternoon Mrs. Ellen Schultz mother of Mrs. R. C. Morse was pleasantly surprised when ten of her friends came in to spend the afternoon with her, bringing well filled baskets of good things to eat. A very pleasant afternoon was spent.

Joe White returned Sunday from Dakota, where he went to see his brother, Clair, who has been ill. Clair returned with him.

Anyone having cattle for sale, call Petersen Market. Phone 60. 118c

Mr. C. R. Trumbell, of Belmond, came Wednesday for a short visit at the home of his grandson, Sumner Trumbell and wife.—Klemme Times.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 10—G. Gobeli, farm sale, location 4 miles north, 1-2 mile west of Meservey.

FEB. 12—J. M. Sampson, Spotted Poland bred sow sale.

FEB. 17—Harry Ziska, Duroc Jersey bred sow sale.

FEB. 18—Combination Sale, at the ol Foundry building. Particulars next week.

FEB. 22—Iver Tofte and Lee Shahan, joint farm sale. Particulars next week.

FEB. 23—A. E. and T. A. Thompson, 3 1-2 miles northwest of Belmond, joint farm sale. Particulars later.

MARCH 8—Combination Sale. Particulars later.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	20c
Springs	20c
Roosters	10c
Stags	16c
Ducks	18c
Geese	15c
Eggs	22c
Butterfat	48c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	38c
Corn	53c
Barley	56c

The Combination Sale February 16 will start at 12:30 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Stadtlander and son Leonard, of Alexander, and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hosick of Holmes were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ekko Bekker.

Cyrus Loupe and family and G. W. Loupe of Baxter came Monday for a visit at the home of their sister, Mrs. E. E. Boughton, and to attend the Jenison hog sale.

The first program celebrating the 17th birthday of the Boy Scouts of America was given Sunday evening, Feb. 6, in the M. E. church. The Scouts marched in and took their places on the platform. Rev. Snyder gave the invocation. A quartette composed of H. F. Luick, H. J. Williams, E. A. Stapley and A. E. Chamberlin sang a selection. A short talk on scouting was given by Randall Klemme. "Plantation Echoes" was played by a saxaphone quartette composed of four Scouts, Richard Gowdy, Robert Luick, George Goelz and Max Elder. Rev. Snyder based his sermon on the text "Let no man despise thy youth." The sermon was followed by the candlelight ceremony and Wallace Cramer was made a Scout. The Scouts marched out after the Indian benediction was given.

A big Combination Sale is being planned at the Louie Moe sale barn, Wednesday, February 16.

Thursday afternoon, February 3, six Boy Scouts motored to Fort Dodge in charge of Scout Master Fred Fulton. The object of the trip was the swimming pool at the Y. M. C. A. The boys were given opportunity to pass the required swimming tests as outlined by the Scout Headquarters. They returned early in the evening. The boys are Max Elder, Hoyt Klemme, George Fetrow, Martial Holtzbauer, Clarence Vestweber and Russel Brewer.

Mrs. Wright, of Belmond, was a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Trumbell, Wednesday of this week. She is Mr. Trumbell's aunt. —Klemme Times.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Kaisely, of Belmond, visited at the Sumner Trumbell home Sunday afternoon and evening.—Klemme Times.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Skovlin are in Des Moines this week, where Adolph is attending a clothiers convention.

Mrs. J. W. O'Rourk, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Parker and two children, of Belmond, and Mrs. Anson Avery, of Goodell, featured in an auto accident last Thursday afternoon while on their way to Britt in the O'Rourk Chevrolet. The car skidded in the icy road and turned over into the ditch, landing on its top and facing the opposite direction from which it was headed. Mrs. O'Rourk had the misfortune to receive a sprained left wrist and other injuries, and all of the occupants were more or less bruised and scratched. The car was damaged but little.

The accident happened about six miles north of Kanawha.—Kanawha Reporter.

Plan to attend the annual Chicken Supper to be given by the Catholic ladies at the library, February 24.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

Good, modern home for sale, near Trinity church. Inquire at Independent. 11tf

FOR SALE—Three Bourbon Red Turkey hens.—A. W. Martin. 1c

FOR SALE—Big type brood sows, April farrow. Bred to pure bred boars. Cholera immune. Will sell by weight.—M. Halfwassen. 13tf

FOR SALE—Harris typewriter, in good condition. $10. Phone 148. E. Hazlett.

FOR SALE—Pure bred registered Hereford bull, Lad E. 2nd, 1350492. Coming 3 years old. E. Esk, Phone 1706. 1*

FOR SALE—1 team black mares, 9 years old, sound, wt. 1500 lbs. each; 1 set good work harness, 1 1-2 inch; 1 single harness; 1 3-section steel lever harrow; 1 thorobred Duroc boar, 10 months old, a good one; 18 new wood hen brooder coops, 2 x 3 feet, with removable bottoms; Japanese hulless popcorn, shelled, 6c a lb. Fred Kercheval, farm 6 miles south, 1-2 mile west of Belmond. Rowan phone 807. Belmond mail.

LOST—About July 1st last year, string of pearls, in Belmond. Finder will receive reward if returned to Independent. 1

LOST—Green plaid horse blanket between Belmond and the Kalkwarf farm, Sunday. Finder please leave at Independent. 1c

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

W. C. Tyrrell returned last week from Beaumont, Texas, where he has been for the past couple weeks on business and attending a family gathering. He returns this week and will bring Mrs. Tyrrell with him upon his return trip home.

DON'T

BE MISLEAD

by high ratings on Storage Batteries offered at an apparent low price.

There are different ways of rating Storage Batteries, and one who is not familiar with batteries may be lead to believe they can purchase batteries with a high capacity rating at an apparent low cost.

Often, some off-brand battery comes into our shop with a rating of—for instance, 100 ampere hour printed on it, when in the same size battery in the Willard would be rated at 40 or 60 ampere hour.

The capacity of a battery is controlled by the quality, size and number of plates in each cell.

Much grafting of this nature is going on thruout the country. Get the advice of a competent battery man before buying a Storage Battery for your Car or Radio.

We carry a complete stock.

BURGESS HEAVY DUTY
B-BATTERIES
No. 10308
$4.75

CUNNINGHAM TUBES
Cx-301-A
$1.75

BELMOND STORAGE BATTERY CO.

Phone 46 Official 2417

WE ARE USING THIS SPACE TO ATTRACT YOUR ATTENION TO THE WORD SERVICE!

WE HANDLE DIAMOND BREAD

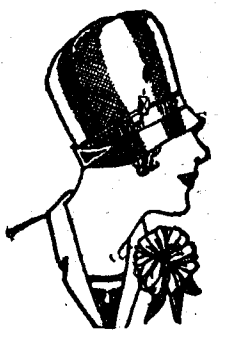
Potato Bread .....2 for 25c
Dinner Bread ...3 for 25c
Wholewheat 10c
Teabiscuit 15c

And we will take orders for Buns, Cinnamon Rolls, Coffee Cake, or any of the products of the Mason City bakery. Delivered every day to our store.

Leave your orders or phone 88.

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

New Spring Hats



Arriving Every Day!

HEMSTITCHING DONE

New Spring Embroidery Packages

The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
February 11-12
Friday and Saturday

Bacon, per pound..... 40c
Boiling Meat, per pound..... 22c
Delicia Oleo, per pound..... 22c

We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Opera House

Special Music on Saturday

Thursday, February 10
James Oliver Curwood's story
"THE ANCIENT HIGHWAY"
with Jack Holt, Billy Dove and Montagu Love. A great author's greatest book is now a greater picture. A swift-flowing tale of conflict and love in the picturesque lumber-logging camps along the St. Lawrence river.

"Dragon Alley"
2-reel Educational Comedy
Prices 10c and 25c

Friday, February 11
VALENTINE DANCE
Music by Tom Wells Orchestra

Saturday, February 12
Bob Custer in
"BEYOND THE ROCKIES"
A thrilling, fast moving western drama—one you'll surely enjoy. Also a
2-reel Educational Comedy
Prices 10c and 25c

Why Pay More?

When you can buy your staple groceries here at our new Cash Saving Prices and buy for less? We have marked down our groceries under our Cash Sales system and offer you real money-savers. Just as a sample of the many bargains we are selling

	Each
CORN, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PEAS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
TOMATOES, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
KRAUT, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
HOMINY, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PORK & BEANS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

SPECIAL SALE ON
AVALON FARMS COMPANY REMEDIES

HOG TONE, $1.00 size..... 59c
COW TONIC, $1.00 size..... 59c
HORSE TONE, $1.00 size..... 59c
HEAVE COMPOUND, $1.00 size..... 59c
DISTEMPER REMEDY, $1.00 size..... 59c
HOG PHYSIC BOLUSES, $1.00 size..... 59c
EGG TONE, a Tonic, Chicken Grower and Egg Producer, $1.00 size..... 59c

—$6.00 for a Dozen Assorted—

A large number of farmers have used Avalon remedies, and knowing what they are, should buy a supply at these prices.

PARKER'S WONDERFUL REMEDY, given in drinking water or food, rids fowls of lice, mites, bluebugs. 1,000 treated as easy as one. Bottles 50c and $1.

Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1927 | NO. 14

RED CROSS NURSE HERE MARCH 18

Local Chapter Makes Arrangemennts For Community Nurse For Belmond.

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES MANY

The Local Red Cross Committee has received notice from the National headquarters that a nurse has been assigned to Belmond for the months of March, April and May. This work is being financed by the local Red Cross Chapter in Cooperation with the Board of Education. While most of the time of the nurse will be occupied with the school, she will be available for other service in the community while she is here.

Miss Wilhelmine Giesemann, a graduate of Grace Hospital, Detroit, Michigan, and having had years of experience in all phases of health work, is being assigned to Belmond for this three months period. Miss Giesemann has been connected with the American Red Cross for a number of years. Since August 1926, she has served as Itinerant Nurse at Tellerude, Colo., Mancos, Colo, and is now at Strawberry Point, Iowa.

The work in the school this year will be a continuation of the work started last year, with more time for follow-up work and home visitation. There will also be more time for health instruction in the school. Among other phases of the work would be the conducting of a class for parents or adults, a clinic for pre-school age children, conferences with parents. Although the headquarters for Miss Giesemann will be at the school building she will be available for whatever duty the Red Cross Chapter feels necessary.

Friday night, the Belmond basket ball team on the local floor, defeated Rowan by a score of 17 to 9. Our boys played a good game, with their usual teamwork, and took some fifty odd shots at the basket. The fact that out of those 50, only 8 were good shows that our men still need some practice at caging the ball. The Rowan quintet also showed some neat passing, but were not quite up to the mark which our boys set.

Our offensive playing was led by McNulty and Henry Johnson, McNulty making 5 of the 17 points and Johnson 12. The game started with Holtzbauer, H. Johnson, Brewer, McNulty and Weide playing. Mennenga substituted for Holtzbauer during part of the game and L. Johnson went in for Brewer after the quarter.

The next home basket ball game will be played here Friday night when the Goldfield boys come here for a return game. Goldfield has had good teams for several years and this year's team seems to be upholding the record. Although our boys were defeated at Goldfield early in the season, with the home floor and home crowd, the boys feel they will have a good chance to even the series. The Junior and Senior girls basket ball teams will play a preliminary game beginning at 7 o'clock. The boys game will start immediately after this preliminary game in order to permit any who desire to take in the Good Fellowship Club meeting afterward. The latter meeting will not begin before 8:30 so local fans can take in both events.

Friday P. M. Division 1 of the Literary Society presented one of the best programs of the year. After the regular business meeting, with the new officers presiding, a group of boys gave an extremely clever Pyramus and Thisbe episode from "A Midsummer Night's Dream." These capable actors were: Theodore Johnson as Peter Quince, director in charge, Paul McNulty, alias Dick Bottom, the weaver, who was the thrilling young hero Pyramus, Everett Pierce, Francis Flute the bellows-mender, who had the feminine role Thisbe, Arthur Rierson as Robin Starveling, the moon, Robert Fetrow as Snout, portrayed a stone wall, and Joe Tiara the terrifying lion in a shaggy fur. Nearly every line brought forth a "laugh" from their fellow students, the audience, and it is needless to say that it was greatly enjoyed if it could be judged by the applause which followed. The

(Continued on page two).

TAKES I. O. O. F. FUNDS; GETS FIVE YEARS

Humboldt Independent: Monday morning at ten o'clock, the time set for sentencing Otto Windrath, quite a number of people gathered at the court house to hear sentence pronounced by Judge Coyle who had consented to do the same for Judge Deland as it was in the latter's court that Windrath plead guily to embezzlement of city funds and Grand Encampment I. O. O. F. funds. The sentence pronounced by Judge Coyle was five years on each of the two, sentences running concurrently. The Judge made it clear to those present that it was not optional with him that the law specified the sentence and that it remained with the parole board to reduce the time if in their judgment it was advisable.

Mr. Windrath left for Fort Madison Tuesday afternoon in custody of Clyde Coyle, his attorney.

IOWA'S WALLED LAKE

The following is copied from an old scrap book: "The greatest wonder in the state of Iowa, and perhaps in any state is called the 'Walled Lake,' in Wright county, twelve miles north of the Dubuque and Pacific railway and 150 miles west of Dubuque city. The lake is from two to three feet higher than the surrounding surface of the earth. In some places the wall is 10 feet high, 15 feet wide on top. The stones used in its construction vary in weight from 3 tons down to 100 pounds. There is an abundance of stones in Wright county, but surrounding the lake to an extent of five or ten miles there are none. No one can form an idea as to the means employed to bring them to the wall or who constructed it. Around the entire lake is a belt of woodland a half mile in width composed of oak. With this exception the country is a rolling prairie. The trees must have been planted there at the time of the building of the wall. In the spring of the year 1856 there was a great storm and the ice of the lake broke the wall in several places and the farmers in this vicinity were compelled to repair the damages to prevent inundation. The lake occupies a ground surface of 280 acres; depth of water as great as 25 feet. The water is clear and cold; soil sandy and loamy. It is singular that no one has been able to ascertain where the water comes from or where it goes, yet it is always clean and fresh."—Gorwith Hustler.

LUNCHEON CLUB MEETS

Thursday noon the Business Men's Luncheon club met at the hotel for the regular meeting. Several committees reported. The surplus from the Christmas tree fund was turned over to the treasurer. Dr. McBurney read a letter from the Rock Island railroad company concerning the crossing they intend to repair at the depot crossing. O. L. Varland announced the Fire Prevention Week.

The main speaker of the noon hour was W. C. Tyrrell, Jr., who spoke in regard to the new plan for attempting the operation of the sugar factory.

INDEPENDENT NOW OFFICIAL PAPER OF WRIGHT COUNTY

Last Friday the Board of Supervisors met at the court house to appoint an official paper to fill the vacancy caused by the consolidation of the two Eagle Grove papers. The two Belmond papers and the Dows Advocate were represented at the meeting. It became apparant that all three papers had certain claims, and that no agreement could be arrived at which would prove satisfactory, so the three papers represented agreed to take the appointment for the balance of the year and each publish the county proceedings. Wright county therefore now has five official papers, each paper in the county being an official one. This probably is a unique situation in the entire state.

The first county proceedings to be published will be found on page seven of this issue. More will appear next week.

The new pastor of the Trinity and St. Olaf churches, Rev. Guldseth, has arrived and was installed in his new charges Sunday by Rev. Holm. of Eagle Grove.

Washington the Surveyor

FELLOWSHIP CLUB FRIDAY

Rev. Clark of Fort Dodge Will Be Speaker Of Evening.

The Good Fellowship club is to meet tomorrow, Friday, evening at the library basement at the usual hour. Friday is not the regular and accustomed night for meeting, but this meeting is called for Friday as it was the only date open to secure the speaker.

Rev. W. P. Clark, of Fort Dodge, will address the club on the subject of "The Science of Estate-Building." Rev. Clark is a forceful speaker who has a message of much interest, and he comes to the club very highly recommended. Those who have had the pleasure of hearing him say that his address will be well worth going to hear.

As usual, a good preliminary program of music and entertainment is promised, and the evening will be finished off with the refreshments.

BOY SCOUT COURT OF HONOR AT MASON CITY

Thursday afternoon, Feb. 10, 32 Scouts with Scoutmasters Fred Fulton and Bert Anfinson drove to Mason City to attend the regular Court of Honor. Louie Moe, Ben Fetrow, Dr. Gowdy, George Brady, Bert Anfinson, Fred Fulton and E. F. Bailey drove cars.

The meeting was held in the armory. The main floor was reserved for the Scouts and the balcony for spectators. Over 450 Scouts and approximately 1,000 spectators were in the audience. This was the largest Court of Honor held in Mason City. The largest in the state was held at Belmond, Oct. 10, last year.

One hundred sixty-two Scouts were up for awards. Twenty-one second class, 43 for first class. In the merit badge field, 95 Scouts received 210 merit badges. All the awards were made at the same time, and the stand was so long that three boys fainted while receiving the awards.

The council champions in the following tests were next determined: Knot-tying, Robert Hill of Forest City; Bugling, Robert Bagley, Troop 15, Mason City; Fire-by-Friction, Earl Anderson of Forest City.

An archery demonstration followed. This new sport is being taken up quite extensively by the Scouts. Next was the ever-impressive candlelight ceremony. Those who saw this at the M. E. church in Belmond, Sunday Feb. 6, can realize how impressive it would be especially with 36 boys to be vested instead of one.

The last number was the presenting of troop charters to the troops of the council. Taps were then sounded and the meeting adjourned.

The Court of Honor is held every six weeks to make awards to those who have advanced in that time. The Belmond Scouts always have a healthy delegation present at most of these Courts.

A reception was held Tuesday evening in the Trinity church parlors in honor of the new pastor, Rev. Guldseth and his family. A goodly number were present to meet and welcome this new family, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

FARM WOMEN PLAN WORK

Farm Bureau Ladies Meet At Clarion And Make Plans.

Forty-three women from 13 townships of the county met Monday afternoon in the Farm Bureau office at Clarion to decide upon their Farm Bureau activities during the rest of the year.

It was decided to hold an achievement day during April. The county has been divided according to training school districts, and each of the five groups will demonstrate one of the five lessons given in the clothing course which was completed in 1926.

Mrs. M. L. Clark, of Lake township, was put in charge of the work. Mrs. Fred Allen of Troy is the leader for the southwest district. Mrs. O. A. Overbaugh the northwest, Mrs. Ralph Christie the northeast, Mrs. J. B. Waters of Wall Lake has the southeast and Mrs. John Fenninger the central district comprising the four townships surrounding Clarion.

Mrs. Ed. Kirstein of Woolstock was chosen county publicity chairman for the coming project.

Eight of the townships represented were interested in developing poultry club work and the leaders are working to find adults who will act as local club leaders for the boys and girls of their communities.

There is a great deal of interest thruout the greater part of the county in the poultry project which starts in March. The first work is on baby chick raising. When we consider the difference between the number of chicks hatched and the number raised to maturity, it would seem that there was occasion for everyone being interested in the work. ***

COUNTY MUSIC ASSC. TO MEET

The third annual meeting of the Wright County Music Teachers' association will be held at the Congregational church in Clarion, Feb. 25. Program of the day is as follows:

1:30 p. m. Registration.
2:00—Business meeting.
3:00—Round Table Discussions.
4:00—Boys' Program.
5:00—Pupils' Concert.
6:45—Banquet at Hotel Moore. (85 cents a plate).
8:15—Evening Concert.

If you have not already joined the association, a personal invitation is extended to become a member. Membership dues, which are $1.00 a year, admit you to all sessions of the meeting except the banquet.

Please make reservations for the banquet and send your numbers to me for printing by Monday, Feb. 21.

Pauline Kubitschek, President.

Further information and reservations for the banquet may be obtained from H. G. Nordschow, Local Chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Williams spent Saturday with Mrs. Williams' sister, Miss Krogh, at Mason City.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Skovlin from Mason City spent the week end with Belmond relatives.

Mrs. J. J. Flynn and Miss Thera Fitts left Monday evening for Los Angeles, California, to visit Mrs. Flynn's daughter, Miss Ialeen Flynn.

ROOT-KEW

William Kew and Miss Jennie Root, of Alexander, were united in marriage last Saturday afternoon at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. W. L. Dibble, pastor of the First Congregational church at Mason City.

The bride was raised in the Alexander community and for several years past has been one of the successful teachers in this county, and at the present time is a teacher in the Alexander consolidated schools. Sh is a young woman who is always active in the affairs of the community and a strong worker in developing the best traits in the young people of her home community. She is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Root, long time residents of Alexander.

Mr. Kew has been a resident of Alexander for several years, coming here from England following the war. He was a member of the allied forces during the world war, having been a member of the army from England, and he saw service in some of the great battles of the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Kew will make their home with her brother, William Root on a farm near Alexander, altho Mrs. Kew will continue her work in the Alexander school until the close of the present school year.—Hampton Chronicle.

ULSTAD IS ON IMPORTANT COMMITTEES

Hon. Oscar Ulstad is on the following committee in the Iowa senate:

Public Buildings and Lands, Chairman.
Rules, Vice President.
Agriculture.
Claims.
Constitutional Amendments.
Educational Institutions.
Elections.
Horticulture and Forestry.
Insurance.
Labor.
Mines and Mining.
Printing.

NOTICE TO FARM BUREAU LEADERS

Miss Gregg will address the meeting of the Belmond and Pleasant township leaders at the city hall, Thursday, Feb. 17, at 2 p. m.

As this is an important meeting in maping out the work, it is very necessary that each school district leader should attend, or in extreme emergency send a substitute.

Let us do our part in making a record attendance in Belmond and Pleasant townships.

Mrs. A. C. Hinman.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week Feb. 6 to 12 inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
6	38	29	—	Ptly cloudy
7	42	27	.02	Cloudy
8	35	5	T	Cloudy
9	11	.1	—	Clear
10	30	2	—	Clear
11	41	22	—	Clear
12	32	13	—	Cloudy

NO CHANGE IN SITUATION AT SUGAR FACTORY

Operation of the sugar factory is still a conjecture, no change having occured in the situation since last week. Mr. Dyer, of the Dyer Construction Co., was to have foreclosed his mortgage of $500,000 Feb. 15, but was persuaded to hold off a little longer. One possibility is reported as remaining, which sugar company officials are said to be working on this week. It is admitted this possibility is small, but hopes are still held that a way can be worked out. Definite word one way or another is expected by next week. Some sugar from the 1926 campaign which was stored during operation of the plant, is being shipped out as a market is found.

Henry Groen, who has been at the Rochester hospital, came home Friday to spend the week end with his family. He returned Monday for further treatment. Henry's many friends will be glad to know that he is improving in health.

FIVE DIVORCES ARE GRANTED

District Court Severs Matrimonial Ties of Five Couple In Last Week's Session

MANY CASES ARE SETTLED

Four divorces were granted in the opening days of this term of court. Ada Idene Wood was granted separation from Edward Wood with custody of a minor son, for whom she was allowed $35 a month for maintenance. Julia Culmer as awarded a divorce from Charles Culmer, with custody of two children. Property rights were stipulated in the agreement which was presented in court, with the provision that plaintiff is allowed $75 a month until the older child reaches 18 years of age, then $37.50 per month until the second child is that age. Mary E. Baker of Eagle Grove is granted separation from James A. Baker and custody of child. A stipulation provides for division of property and gives Mrs. Baker $60 a month alimony. Alsada Dziewanowski was restored to the use of the name Alsada A. Reese when she was divorced from Win T. Dzieanowski.

Marriage Licenses

Wayne Thomason and Eunice Morgan, both of Eagle Grove; married in Eagle Grove, February 9 by Rev. E. A. Anderson.

James R. Howieson, Clarion, and Vera Nelson, Galt, married in Clarion Feb. 10 by Rev. J. S. Pollock.

Walter Blake Beach to Ethel Leone Duerst, both of Goldfield, Feb. 14.

Feb. 15, Carlyle Edward Russell of Clarion and Catherine Ann Trausch of Eagle Grove.

District court resumed sessions Monday after having been adjourned since Wednesday. Such cases as are being heard are being tried before the judge. The grand jury resumed its session Monday and the petit jury will be expected to return next Monday, the 21st, to hear cases.

Ole Holm was excused from the grand jury Monday because of illness and E. E. Wolfe was drawn to take his place on the panel which is serving during the present term.

Brown-Camp Hardware Company was granted a judgment of foreclosure against W. W. Waddell, with a judgmest against lot 6, blk. 2 in Hewett's second addition to Eagle Grove.

Roy A. Henderson was appointed guardian ad litem for Agnes Katherine Boge, wife of Hans H. Boge, and was granted authority to deed property in which the wife, who is mentally incompetent, had an equity.

Court approved compromise of a claim of $10,928.84 of the defunct Citizens State bank of Goldfield against Whyte Motor company for $8,000.

Earl Anderson was allowed offsets of $174.50 thru partnership deposit accounts, to apply on an obligation which he owed the Citizens State Bank of Goldfield when it closed.

Citizens State bank of Goldfield was given judgment against T. B. Askvig for $4,153.30 and costs and against Lester Askvig for $2,976.35 and costs.

Twenty-seven cases were removed from the calendar by being dropped, dismissed or settled.

Approval of the sale of 103 acres in Liberty township by the Citizens State bank of Goldfield to Lloyd Lerdel was given. Terms were not stipulated in the decree of the court.

E. R. McGrath was named guardian ad litem of James Burns and his estate for the purpose of looking after interests of the estate in an action to quiet title in George Gilbert of 200 acres in section four, Grant township.

Farmers State bank of Dows was granted a decree of foreclosure against residence property in Dows held by Charles Kughn.

Authorization was issued for the sale of lots in the town of Woolstock owned by the Kitley minors to J. M. Thompson for a consideration of $1800.

B. J. Fritze, W. B. Fritze and H. M. Fritze ask judgment against Anno Terhark for $360, being rent of land in Norway township during the year commencing March 1, 1926, under an oral lease.—Monitor.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

In the February 12 issue of the Saturday Evening Post appears an article which every American citizen should read, and read carefully. It is entitled "The League of Debtors" and is by Garet Garrett.

In "The League of Debtors", Mr. Garrett has set forth the puzzling debt problem of Europe in a dazzling white light of facts that give the average American citizen more honest, clear information on the question than any other article we have read. And the facts can leave but one impression on the thoughtful reader: The impression that Europe is trying to make Uncle Sam the goat in the settlement. There is no sentimentalism, no theorizing in the article; it is cold, brutal facts and figures which cannot be denied. Europe with its propaganda for cancellation of debts has renamed Uncle Sam "Uncle Shylock," and the facts in the article will convince any fairminded person that America has been more than liberal, more than fair in cancelling European debts to America and in arranging easy terms of settlement. In fact, probably the average American citizen will think that his government has gone farther in the way of being easy than it should have.

We have cancelled half the European debt to us. On the balance which we are insisting they pay, we have given more time than they asked for. It was agreed during the war and before America entered the war, that this money was a loan, that it was to be paid back at the same rate of interest which our own Liberty bonds drew. The French did not ask for a gift of this money or of help. In fact they requested us not to give it. On April 11, 1917, the American embassador to France cabled our Secretary of State as follows:

"The French premier personally expressed to me the hope that no resolution would be introduced in congress tending to make a gift to France from the United States."

When time was talked of settlement, the French Embassador asked for 15 years. Later the French government insisted on 25 to 30 years. America has extended it to 62 years and still they call us Shylock.

Before America entered the war, the allies had an agreement among themselves that what they bought of one another was to be purchased on credit. That is, if England bought in France, France would loan England the Francs with which to buy; when France bought in England, England would loan France the pounds necessary. At the end of the war, the allies would match credits, and then settle the balance due. But America was not given this privilege. What we bought of the allies during the time we were in the war we paid in cash. And we paid them four and a quarter billion dollars for things we bought of them and the services they rendered us.

We paid England $90,000,000 for the use of her transports to carry our men to a foreign land to fight, and we paid her in cash. We had to buy English pounds sterling when we bought goods in England; we had to buy Francs when we purchased anything in France. As the dollar was worth more than either the pound or the franc, both countries made a profit on us thru the exchange of money, England of $50,000,000 and France of $250,000,000. We paid the French for port dues. We paid for the railroad transportation of our men, for what they ate, for what they used, for what they damaged. And we paid cash. Consequently, when the war ended we owed them nothing because we had paid as we went. They owed us, we were the creditor nation, because they had not paid by cash, they had borrowed.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Continued from page one.)

other numbers were a piano solo by Mildred Jacobson, H. S. newspaper by Everill Hauge and Dean Hill read by Dale Kessler, (the newspaper by the way brought forth a few blushes from the victims) chorus, Velva Sturdevant, Luella Loats, Uinta Packard, Kathryn Sandry, Bessie Cullinan, Lois Hake, Helen Kinseth, Ruth Leavy, June Norby, Ona Barton, Esther Dibble and Gladys Jacobmeyer, and a "Comic Valentine scene" dedicatedto a few individual students and the faculty, by John Baker, Martha Baker, Minnie Groen, Leola Forristall, Henry Johnson, Arthur Traeger and Raymond Trees. Bertha Eliason read the introductions and verses Helen Luick gave Walt Whitman's memorial poem to Lincoln "O Captain, My Captain." The critics report was given by Mr. Hall, and the meeting adjourned.

One can ascertain specific opportunities, and the approximate basis was inadequate; however the conception of statistics on the technical pamphlets accompanying the guarantee was scientifically acceptable. Of course you will want to know what it's all about. So did the Freshmen Monday morning when we took what is known as a Minimum essential test instead of tormenting the whole school with our melodious (?) voices at our regular assembly .

Those were a few of the sentences that we were requested to write for the first part of the test. After the first spasm, we were told to turn the sheet over and several sentences were to be marked right or wrong, with an R or W respectively. It was a 50-50 guess in this latter case, so the underclassmen are living in hopes of obtaining a passing grade. The rest of the high school are consulting dictionaries, or teachers, as the case may be, to find how little or how much we really know when it comes to English.

Saturday night the Senior Class held their much talked of and much envied Valentine party. The evening was spent in playing games with hearts and Valentine favors.

Four Freshmen girls served a dainty two-course luncheon after which three members of the faculty gave impromptu speeches. Miss Waugh led us in singing everything from High School songs to Goodnight Ladies. It is believed by the committees, that almost as much fun was had in the kitchen washing dishes afterwards. The Senior boys afforded keen competition for leftovers, and the girls are convinced that they have had previous experiences with dirty dishes .

Rev. Muhleman of the M. E. Church of Eagle Grove and also Scout Master of the Eagle Grove Troop of Boy Scouts spoke to the Senior and Junior High School Assembly Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 9th. The Boy Scouts of Belmond were the guests of honor. Rev. Muhleman spoke on the scout and his school. He kept his entire audience interested for over an hour and a half with his very good lecture.

Mrs. George Goelz and Mrs. Peterson visited in Miss Barry's room Wednesday.

The second grade held a Valentine party in Miss Smith's room Monday.

Orvis Fitts and Walter Stacy were absent Monday, from the second grade.

Keith Madsen returned to school after a weeks illness.

Mrs. Ressler visited Friday P. M. in Miss Purdy's room.

JUNIOR HIGH NOTES

All pupils in Junior High were weighed this week by Miss Bond in preparation for the work of the school nurse.

On Monday the Junior High held a Valentine party. The story and origin of St. Valentines Day was told by some of the pupils after which valentines were delivered by several carriers.

All the penmanship classes, under Miss Sowerwine's direction are starting to work for Palmer pins. The eighth grade classes are making designs for this work.

The eighth grade party has been postponed from February 19th to February 26th.

First student: "Professor Jones brings things home to me that I never saw before."

Second student: "That's nothing. So does my laundryman."

"I saw Charlotte on the street dressed very modestly."

"That girl will resort to anything to attract attention."

HEALTH

H—is for Height.
Be as tall as you can
Weight up to height
Makes a healthy, strong man.
E—is the excellent,
Edible Egg.
One daily, at least,
Dear Children, we beg.
A—is for apples
And also for Air
Children need both
And we have them to spare.
L—is for luncheon
Served hot in the school.
We wish all the teachers
Could follow this rule.
T—is a topic
Which Trouble begins.
Both Tea and Coffee
For children are sins.
H—is for Health,
And this thing you need
To grow up so healthy
You're bound to succeed.
—Harriet McShuly

MIDDLE AGE

One knows life—as much as it can be known—by the time he has arrived at middle adge. He is then able to sift his dreams and see if they are practical and to carry out those which are. Middle age is the time of doing things, without "fumbling." If one has wisely chosen his companionships and hobbies, middle age may be the happiest time of life. Illusions are gone, but realities are richer than youthful dreams pictured them. The accomplishments of middle age are different in kind from those planned in youth, but they are often greater than those rainbow tinted fancies.

By middle age, one has settled the three greatest problems of life—marriage, life work and religion—and is ready to steam ahead on the track he has chosen. By this time, he has learned to accept things gracefully and to cease beating his wings in resentment against the inevitable. He has learned the great art of facing facts as they are and adjusting himself to make the best of them, and, in spite of everything, to be happy.

One has learned confidence and dares attempt things, by the time he has reached middle age. He no longer holds back because of inexperience and out of deference to older heads, but has the courage of his own convictions. Nothing but years can give this. Youth has its rosy tints but these are not nearly so rich as the golden maturity of middle age.

GINGHAM'S THE THING

In keeping with the present peasant influence in interior decorating, the rage for gingham effects is sweeping the country, and with good reason, say decorators. In gingham, the homemaker finds a drape fabric that is sunfast, tubfast, easy to keep fresh and reasonable in cost. To those prone to think of gingham in terms of checks, stripes and plaids, there is a wondrous revelation in the assortment of new colorings, both plain and in design, now being brot out to meet this new demand for interiors, as well as for clothing.

The sunfast, tubfast qualities of gingham are due to the fact that the yarn is dyed before the cloth is woven. For this reason there is no right or wrong side, an economy in cutting. The finer grades, generally known as 'French," but really manufactured in America, are of selected, smooth yarns woven firmly together so they do not shrink from washing, and drape more softly than the coarser grades. A heavier grade of gingham, suitable for upholstery of chairs and other furniture, is now being manufactured.

WINTER SALADS

For vitamins; mineral salts, such as calcium, phosphorus iron and lime; for acids, which neutralize body poisons; and for bulk, which encourages elimination—use more fresh fruits and vegetables in the winter time. Being out of season at this time of the year, and consequently harder to get and higher priced, one is likely to neglect the use of them with the result that he comes to spring full of poisons and ready for the "spring fever."

With mayonnaise dressing, any of the following are good: cabbage with celery or green pepper or pimento or salmon or tuna fish or beets or nuts; celery with nuts and apples; cooked carrots with peas or with string beans; raw carrots with raisins and nuts; potato with onion or celery or hard boiled egg and pickle; spinach; apple; cottage cheese; cherry; orange; prunes stuffed with cottage cheese and canned pear, peach or pineapple—or any of a thousand and one other combinations you may invent.

BATH ROOM FIXTURES

All-white bathroom fixtures are relieving the bath room of the tarnish dangers which have been the bane of many a housewife, who has spent many hours polishing nickel. Not only does the modern bathroom have the all-white tub, but the all-white lavatory, the all-white closet, all-white faucets, towel racks and fixtures of every kind. Gay blue or green rugs and the colored silk curtains about the shower bath may add a touch of gaiety to this room, once so plain and ugly that the door was closed when company was about, but now so beautiful that it is left open for the admiration of guests.

CARE OF THE SKIN

When the blasts of winter roughen and dry the skin and make it chap, try keeping it better lubricated. Cold creams and vanishing creams are too thin to do much good. One needs a heavy oil and should apply it at night and once or twice during the day. Rub it well into the skin to keep it soft. Largec otton gloves may be worn at night to protect the bedding and also to keep the oil from rubbing off.

To keep the skin from drying, avoid strong soaps and preparations containing borax or alcohol. If one is very thin, an extra portion of oil and fatty foods in the diet will improve the complexion. But such fattening foods are to be avoided by those who are trying to reduce.

NEAT HOSE

Do not fasten your stockings up snug and tight, or do you allow them to wrinkle at the ankles? Perhaps, if they wrinkle, it is because of ill fitting hose. Try another make and see if that remedies the difficulty. When putting on stockings, one should take care to have the seam in the middle of the back of the leg, running straight up and not wavering, and should fasten the stocking so securely that it will not slump down in a bedraggled fashion at the ankle.

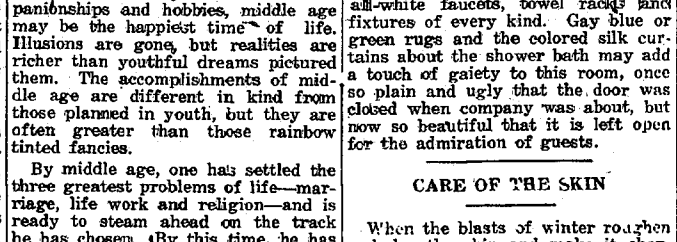
CANNED FOOD CAUTION

It is not safe to eat any canned food as soon as the jar is opened—whether the food is home or factory canned. It should be boiled at least five minutes before it is used, to make it absolutely safe. Boiling makes canned foods safe, if the food is in good condition.

GOOD GUESS

Young Man to Clerk: "I—er—um, ah—"

Clerk to assistant: "Charles, bring me one of those marriage license blanks."



METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, Feb. 20:

Sunday school at 10 a. m. Our motto, The Other Fellow.

Divine worship and sermon at 11. This service is under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society, it being the annual Thank Offering service. Indeed, we have a great many reasons to be thankful.

Sermon subject: Recognizing Our Stewardship. 1 Cor. 4:1. May we not look forward to this hour with great expectancy, supported by our faith and prayers.

Epworth League at 6:30. Leader, Miss Wilson. Subject: Missions. We would like to have you in our League.

Evening worship and gospel message at 7:30. Subject of sermon, Blocking Traffic. Galatians 3:4.

Ladies Aid meeting with Mrs. Gus Johnson, Thursday afternoon. A full attendance is desired.

Mrs. Davenport's division of the Aid will hold a bake sale at the City Market, Saturday, begining at 10:30.

Everybody most cordially invited to all of our services. We preach "Christ the power of God unto Salvation."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10 a. m. Bible study hour. Subject: Serving in and thru the Church.

11 a. m. Morning worship and sermon. The theme for the morning will be in harmony with the Sunday School lesson, or The Healing and Life-Giving Power of a Good Man's Shadow, or Influence, as it falls upon his fellow men.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Tamerlane

A LAME man, sinister and swarthy of face, and magnificent of attire, stood in a chariot, drawn by five other men. Behind the chariot, trundling along in an iron cage, was a gorgeously attired prisoner.

The sinister charioteer had a strong, ugly Mongolian face. He lashed the five luckless men who drew his chariot, and at every lash his watching army applauded. For he was Timour the Lame, commonly known as Tamerlane, conqueror of the East. And the five men who drew his chariot were kings whom he had captured and whose countries he had subdued. The man in the cage was Bajazet, the once mighty sultan of Turkey.

Tamerlane was in the full glory of his career. He chose the foregoing way to celebrate his achievements.

In 1336 this unprepossessing, ugly son had been born to the petty chief of a Mongol tribe near Samerkand. The lad was brought up more as a student than as a warrior, but before he was twenty his wild fighting blood, inherited from his great ancestor, Genghis Khan, broke out and he threw aside his scrolls and inkhorn for sword and helmet.

Handicapped by lameness, in a country and age when physical perfection counted for far more than now, he nevertheless, by sheer force of character, won early laurels as general and tribal chief. On his father's death Tamerlane and his brother-in-law, Hussein, were chosen as joint rulers. Tamerlane, without hesitancy, murdered Hussein and made himself sole chieftain. But this by no means satisfied his boundless ambition. He had laid out a plan of action worthy of Charlemagne or Caesar, and with his scimitar proceeded to carve his name upon the map of the world.

He began at home, by changing the semi-savage lawlessness of his own people into an established, firm government, worthy of a much later day; then started on his carefully prepared campaign of world conquest. Persia was the first object of his attack. It is an odd fact that nearly every great conqueror of early times, from Alexander to the Tartar, chose that powerful but ill-disciplined land as a primary goal of his achievements. Tamerlane swept Persia, his fiery tribesmen carrying all before them. He captured the Persian king and laid the country waste.

Cheered by his easy victory over a country so much stronger than his own, the Mongolian invader next subdued all of Central Asia and carried his conquests from the Great Wall of China to Moscow. Had he been a European his first idea would doubtless have been to conquer Europe, and he would have left the East for a later expedition. But, to his Oriental mind, Asia seemed the most important part of the earth. It was, perhaps, due to this notion of Tamerlane's that Europe was not overrun by the Eastern hordes and Western civilization and character tinged forever with Orientalism. Europe was probably reserved for subsequent invasion—an invasion which fate averted.

Rumors of the wealth of India reached Tamerlane. In 1398 he marched his vast armies thither, plowing a bloody furrow to the Ganges, overcoming all opposition, and looting millions of dollars' worth of native treasure. Here his native barbarity cropped out more strongly than ever before, and he left behind him a name for mercilessness that lives to this day. In one Hindoo district alone he massacred 100,000 prisoners.

The Turks, under Sultan Bajazet, were menacing the Eastern empire. Learning of this and jealous that any other man should emulate himself as an invader, Tamerlane hurried back from India and marched against the Turkish dominions. Like an army of ants his countless hordes overran Turkey, seizing Syria from the brave Mamelukes, and, on June 20, 1402, meeting Bajazet's army on the plain of Angoria. After a fiercely contested battle Tamerlane routed the Turks and took Bajazet prisoner. Not content with subduing Turkey, he vented his hate against Bajazet in a unique fashion. He caused a great iron cage to be built. Into this he thrust the beaten sultan and carried him about as a sort of human menagerie exhibit until the broken-hearted prisoner died of shame.

The conqueror next planned a mammoth expedition against China. When he should thus have subdued the last Asian power he would be free to turn his attention to Europe. But, in 1405, on the eve of the Chinese campaign, he died, and the "yellow peril" was checked.

Had Tamerlane been wholly a barbarian his feats would have been less far-reaching in their effect on the history of the world. But he was also a patron of science and the arts, a promoter of culture at home and abroad, an author and a man who built up civilization even while he destroyed nations. By forwarding the cause of learning, as much as by wholesale slaughter, he left an indelible mark on all the Orient.

Gamblers Advertise

In China the gambling houses are among the largest advertisers.

FREE AIR

We had a dirty trick played on us last week: fellow gave us a bum two-bit piece. Having too much conscience, we couldn't give it to friend wife to put in the collection plate, and we didn't think we could slip it to any of the business folks on the main drag. So we've decided to invest it in some appropriate way.

* * * *

Been wondering whether we couldn't buy some stock with it. Anybody in this neck of the woods got any stock that's worth, say, about two-bits? If they have, we might stock up on some.

* * * *

Buying stock is quite a gamble. We don't mean live stock—altho that's a gamble, too, both when you raise it and sell it—but not as large a one as investing in some other kinds of stock—we mean stock in some big corporation, say like some packing plants, cement plants, molasses mills, or something.

* * * *

Sometimes it's a sweet proposition, and again it's a sweet proposition, depending altogether on how you place the emphasis when you say it. Sometimes you take a lot of stock in a stock and take a lot of stock because you take a lot of stock in it. You know what we mean. Afterwards maybe you wish you hadn't taken so much stock in the stock; then maybe you wouldn't have taken so much stock. Lots of folks have learned that it's better not to take too much stock even if you do take stock in it, that is, not to stock up too heavily. Sounds sorta mixed.

* * * *

Preferred stock is a stock you think you prefer to have at the time, but which afterwards you wish you hadn't preferred so much. Common stock is the kind your preferred stock is afterwards—just as common as every other fellow's.

* * * *

After you've stocked up, you find you're overstocked.

* * * *

When a merchant overstocks, he can put on a sale and reduce his stock. Some stocks reduce without any sales.

* * * *

In fact, there doesn't seem to be any sale for some stock.

* * * *

A share of stock is a piece of paper to begin with. Afterwards it may become a scrap of paper.

* * * *

And scraps of paper often become famous.

* * * *

Stock is always beautifully engraved, and embellished with designs, scrolls and whirligigs. It makes a fine diploma from the School of Experience.

* * * *

No stock should ever be thrown away. It should be kept around as a reminder.

* * * *

And it makes a big showing in your will.

* * * *

We know a fellow who left a lot of stock in a Florida addition. It sounded big, but the lucky heir found the addition was all under water. There is lots of water in some stocks.

* * * *

If you could sell the water it would be all right.

* * * *

But most everybody has a well of their own.

* * * *

When buying stock, the best way is to follow Davy Crockett's motto: "Be sure you're right—then put it in a savings account!"

EDITOR'S BEATITUDES

If an editor has Beatitudes, we think they should read something like this:

"Blessed are the merchants who advertise because they believe in it and in their business; for their proeperity shall increase manyfold.

"Blessed are the country correspondents who send in their well written items every week; for fame of their friendly neighborhood shall go abroad in the land.

"Blessed is the woman who sends in a written account of a party or wedding; for she shall see the details of the function and the names of her guests correctly reported.

"Blessed are those who do not expect the editor to know everything, but who call up and tell him whenever an interesting event occurs to them; for they shall occupy a warm place in the editor's heart.

"Blessed are those who co-operate with the editor in his efforts in behalf of the community; for their town shall be known far and wide as a good place in which to live."—Ex.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

GIRLS PLAN "TREE YEAR" WORK

Camp Fire girls thruout the entire nation, as well as in Iowa, are planning an extensive conservation project for the coming year, which has been officially designated as "Tree Year" in Camp Fire work.

The same general outline as drawn up by the national organization will be adopted by the Camp Fire girls in Iowa, according to I. T. Bode, forestry extension specialist, Iowa State College. The program calls for actual planting projects, which include planting individual trees, raising planting stock and planting for reforestation.

More general work will also be done in spreading the conservation idea by means of Arbor Day, Bird Day, Forest Week and other celebrations and by lantern slides and movies sponsored by the Camp Fire girls. Work is also planned in song bird protection and native plant life protection, as well as in forest fire protection and eradication of insect enemies.

BETTER SOWS NEEDED IN IOWA

Iowa needs not more, but better brood sows, in the opinion of E. L. Quaife, animal husbandry extension specialist, Iowa State College. Increasing the production per sow increases the efficiency. Little attention has been paid to the production per sow in the past, Mr. Quaife says.

The McLean system of hog production is recommended by Mr. Quaife because it is one method of increasing the effciency by checkng losses due to diseases that are contracted by the young pigs from filthy lots.

"Not only does this system produce more pork per sow, but it also puts the pigs on the market earlier and, in the majority of cases, at a higher price," according to Mr. Quaife.

"We have found at this station that the movable hog house that hold two, three or even four sows is preferable to the individual house. At this station we prefer a house 8 feet by 11 feet with two partitions in it to hold three cows. A house like his can be constructed for about $35.

In the past, ton litter contests have not proven very satisfactory. Farmers do not like to bother with one sow and her litter alone, so this year we have a contest in which all sows may be entered. When the pigs are six months old they are weighed and the amount of pork per sow is calculated. This station is offering prizes totaling $1,000 for the winners of the contest."

The growth of the State Agricultural College and its environs is set out in a recent paragraph which states that the college at Ames was established by a legislative act in 1868. At that time 640 acres comprised the site, and its teaching and executive staff consisted of five persons. Now Iowa State college, including the Iowa experiment station, has grown into an institution representing a property valuation of $8,185,189, 1,984 acres of land, a faculty numbering 597, and an alumni body of approximately 34,000. Formally opened at Ames fifty-eight years ago the college began with two courses of study in the curriculum and with a faculty of two instructors in agriculture and one in mechanic arts.

Quality Printing Pleases. That is the Independent kind. Get yours here

BABIES FED MORE REGULARLY

Following lessons on nutrition given in Dickinson and Adams counties thru the Farm Bureau, a good many farm babies are reported to be receiving more regular and careful feedings. In Dickinson county, 21 mothers reported that they have changed the feeding process, while 11 in one township of Adams county similarly reported. Instruction in infant feeding was given in these counties by an extension specialist from Iowa State College.

Money Making

CHICKS

Special low prices on vigorous, healthy chicks from selected heavy layers. Real money makers and certified by us. Reds, Wyandottes, Leghorns, Orpingtons, Rocks and broilers. One pen special mated Ancomas. Get prices on eggs and chicks. Get our prices on insured chicks guaranteed to live or replaced. 10 percent reduction on all orders received before February 15. 100 per cent live delivery guaranteed. Expert custom hatching in Hancock county's oldest and mosts successful hatchery. Six years' experience. Place your order with either place listed below:

Klemme Hatchery, Klemme
Garfield Ridge Hatchery, Garner

A. Bickenderfer, Prop.

Wall Paper headquarters

Drastic Reductions

To make way for our

New Spring Wall Paper

We are closing out hundreds of rolls of 1926 patterns.

These are perfect papers. Only a limited number of rolls of some patterns but in all cases sufficient for a room.

Beautiful bedroom papers—some remarkable living room patterns.

Schultz Drug Co.
BELMOND, IOWA

Here's a Feeder that soon Pays For Itself

CAFETERIA

EVERY farm flock in this locality should have one of these FIVE-IN-ONE Feeders; contains compartments for Mash, Grain, Oyster Shell, Grit and Charcoal. It's a great labor saver—only needs filling once a week and your flock can always eat what they want, when they want it. They balance their ration as nature dictates and as a result you get more eggs—your flock is healthier.

Saves Labor—Saves Feed

This practical feeder comes in two sizes—100 flock size and 200 flock size. Think what a convenience it would be to just fill this up once a week and know that you flock was provided with feed for an entire week. It's the busy farmer's friend. Built with a patented shaking device that always keeps feed down in feed troughs. Feed is always clean and absolutely no waste. Slanting tilting top prevents birds roosting on top. We guarantee that this feeder will pay for itself in one season in saved feed and labor. Let us show you this incomparable feeder.

Sold by
ANDERSON HATCHERY
Phone 27 Belmond, Iowa

Kinseth's Store News

This week we are offering a dandy special on Fruits. Everyone likes fruit, and nothing is as good for you as good fruit. Pick your favorite from this list and have a dozen or so sent up.

Oranges, per dozen 29c

Grapefruit, each 8c

Apples, in baskets $1.95

Three cans of corn for 33c—corn that regularly sells for 15c a can.

Diamond Bread, 3 loaves for 25c.

Jello Powder, all flavors, at 9c a package.

18c buys a pound of good lard.

Large package oatmeal, 19c.

Two pounds soda crackers 34c; same for two pounds of graham crackers.

We are carrying a full line of cakes, all flavors and kinds, fresh every day for 10c, 13c, 15c, 25c and 30c.

Two lbs. Macaroni for 23c.

These are just a sample of the bargains to be found in The Store on the Corner. We are always at your service, and we like to have you drop in whether you buy or not, because this is a friendly store.

FEED GRINDING!

We are equipped to do your feed grinding and give you satisfaction. Give us a trial—bring your next order in to us.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS
FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER COMING! Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company
PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!
BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

Combination

SALE!

FRIDAY, FEB. 18

At the Foundry Building, at the Rock Island Yards

BELMOND, IOWA

Starting Promptly At 1:00 O'clock P. M.

A variety of articles have been listed for this sale, including

A NUMBER OF HORSES

CATTLE—Including some dandy Yearling Heifers and Steers.

HOGS—Among them some BROOD SOWS and FALL SHOATS.

Many Items of Farm Machinery

Numerous Household Goods

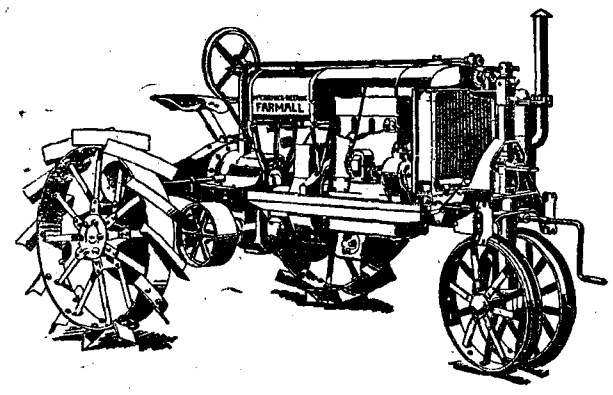
LIST YOUR ARTICLES FOR SALE—With State Bank of Belmond, phone 16; or with David Kelley, Mgr., phone 228.

TERMS—Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

DAVID KELLEY, Mgr.

J. M. Munnis, Auct. State Bank of Belmond, Clerk

The Farm Tractor



WHEN YOU BUY A TRACTOR THINK OF THE WORK IT SHOULD DO FOR YOU. THE TRACTOR YOU BUY SHOULD:

Have power for all work for which it is intended and an ample surplus, or reserve power which often times is so desirable.
It should be so constructed that it is easily used on every job on the farm because a tractor that is not flexible in its uses is a liability instead of an asset.
It should be so constructed that any necessary adjustment or repair will not make it necessary to dismantle the entire tractor to get at the work which must be done.
It must be so constructed that it will eliminate as far as possible undue wear in the bearings and other movable parts.
It must have an oiling system that will work in all kinds of weather and conditions without fail.
It must have an ignition system that will not fail and that will start the tractor on the coldest morning without effort.
It must be made by a company that provides ample and quick service both as to parts for replacement and adjustment by expert service men.
It must have the necessary weight and balance of weight so that the power developed by the motor will not go to waste thru slippage of the rear wheels or stall the tractor by raising the front wheels from the ground on a heavy pull which might also cause serious injury to the operator.

WE INVITE YOU TO SPEND AT LEAST PART OF SATURDAY (THIS WEEK), FEBRUARY 19TH, WITH US AT THE AIGLEY GARAGE, IN BELMOND, WHERE WE WILL HOLD OUR ANNUAL TRACTOR SCHOOL. Factory men will be here to answer any questions you might care to ask regarding any make of tractor. Regardless of what tractor you own or intend to own, this school will help you. School starts promptly at 10:00 a. m. and continues until 3:30, when we will show free of charge a series of moving pictures to which all are invited FREE, at the Lyric Theatre. These pictures will prove educational to men, women and children.

GRIESY'S

PHONE 10. The Friendly Place BELMOND, IOWA

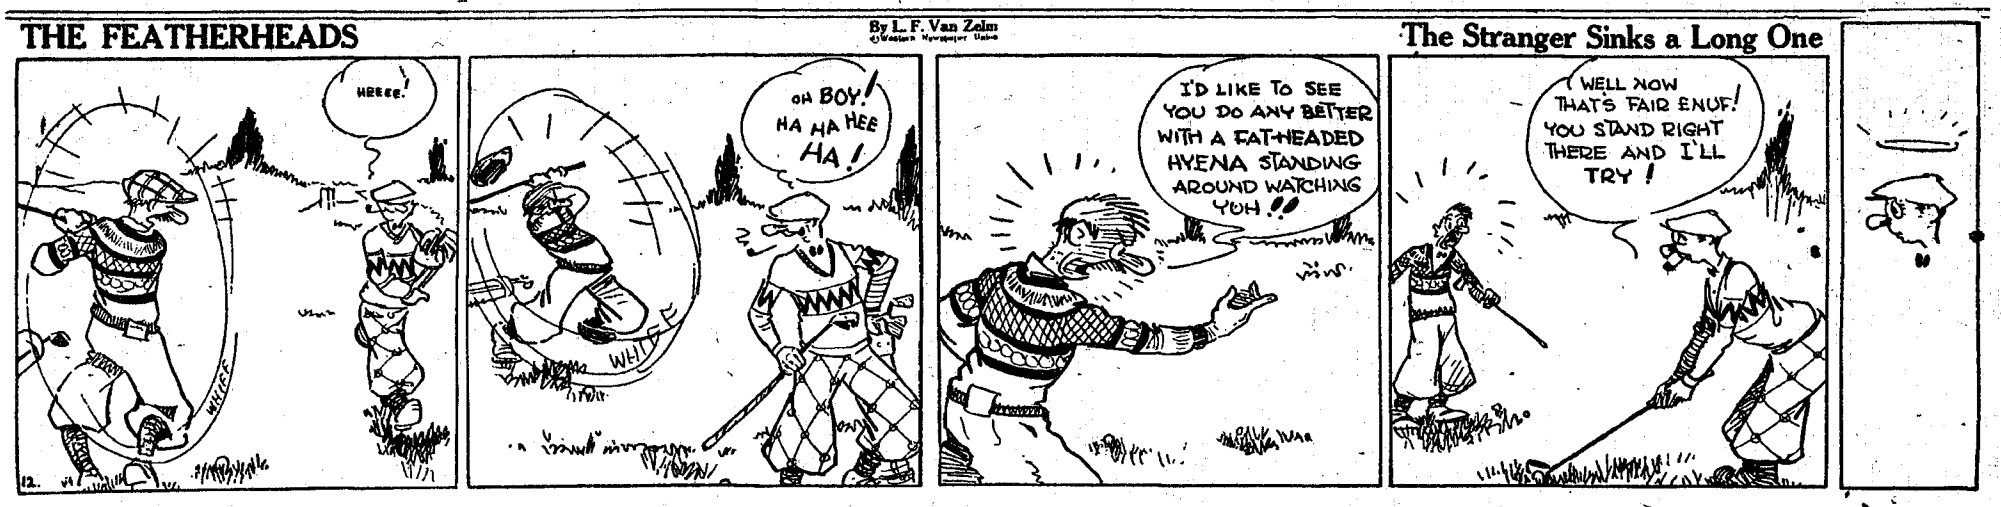
MESERVEY SECTION



EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:45. G. E. Raecker, supt.

Serving in and thru the Church. Matt. 5:13-16; Acts 2:42-47.

Morning worship 10:45.

Subject: Glorying in the Cross. Gal 6:14.

E. L. C. E. 7 p. m.

Subject: Our Duty As Christian Citizen. Isa. 62:6-12. H. Fischer, leader.

Evening worship 7:30.

German prayer meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. at the Theo. Wendel home.

Mid-week services Thursday 7:30, and studying Sunday school lesson for the following Sunday.

All are invited.

Laurence Sohl, pastor.

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:30.

Morning worship at 10:30 (Ger).

Young people's meeting at 7:15.

Evening preaching at 8.

Senior class in catechism meets on Thursday at 3:20 at the parsonage.

Classes in catechism meet Saturday at 1:30 p. m.

Welcome to all.

H. Pannkuk, pastor.

PRE-NUPTIAL SHOWER

Last Monday evening 19 members of the Dorcas society carried out a pleasant surprise when they met at the Reformed parsonage and rendered a miscellaneous shower for Miss Grace Vierkant, who will be married in the near future. The evening was spent socially and games were indulged in. Miss Vierkant was the recipient of many lovely gifts. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. Robert Gobeli and two daughters, of Lidderdale spent the past week visiting at the G. Gobeli home and assisting with the work of the sale held Thursday. The Gobeli family will move to Klemme in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wendel were visitors at the Ralph Wendel home near Belmond last Friday afternoon.

A goodly number from here attended the county preliminary contest held at Thornton last Thursday evening, and we are pleased to announce that our representatives carried off two first places. Harriet Sprau won first in the humorous division and Wilma Pals in the dramatic, while Dena Wieman took third place in oratorical.

Donald and Norman Muller and Gerald Janssen were Thornton business callers last Friday afternoon.

Enno Ostendorf and Miss Irene Guth were callers at the Ralph Wendel home Thursday evening.

Chas. Kieneberger and Wm Eimbrink and family, of Belmond called at the Reif and Langlitz homes last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Pals and sons Harold and Myron motored to Austinville last Saturday and spent the day visiting at the home of the former's sister.

Miss Alma Dorenkamp spent Sunday at the home of her mother.

Miss Lucile Paul visited with relatives and friends at Mason City from Thursday to Sunday last.

Miss Irena Butz and brothers were Mason City business callers Saturday.

E. E. Butz and family of Clear Lake were Sunday visitors at the home of his mother.

Louis Foss, accompanied by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Foss, and their granddaughter Jeanette Raecker visited at the James Hemming home Sunday p. m. They report Mrs. Hemming to be recovering nicely considering the seriousness of her operation.

Irv. Nissen and children of Kamrar were here Sunday, visiting at the Adam Kolb home.

Alvin Halfpop was a week end visitor with home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wendel from Belmond were Saturday visitors in Meservey.

Mrs. H. Wilkins and daughters were Saturday visitors at Belmond.

Ralph Strasburg of Humboldt visited a few days last week at the home of his father.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sorenson visited Sunday at the parental G. Lauster home.

Firemen's Benefit Movie, "One of the Bravest," Belmond Opera House, Fri. & Sat. Feb. 18-19. 10c and 25c.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

The annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, Feb. 24.

Senor Smith of Chicago is visiting at the home of his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilko Pals are the parents of a baby girl, born Monday last.

Twelve members of the King's Daughters class met with Bonita Muller last Monday evening for their regular monthly class meeting.

Last Monday afternoon four members of the building committee of the Reformed church at Titonka were in our city, calling at the Rev. Pannkuk home. The purpose of their visit was to look over the local church, in view of a good plan as the congregation which they represent are contemplating an addition to their church. We understand they were well pleased with the result of the plan here.

H. B. Frey and wife were in Belmond last Monday evening.

Harm Groen returned to Mason City Tuesday to be present for jury duty.

Mrs. Arthur Fillenworth of Sanborn came Monday for a visit at the home of her parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. Raecker, and other relatives.

H. K. Pals accompanied his daughter, Wilma, and Harriet Sprau to Clarion, Tuesday where the girls received special coaching on their selections which they will give at Mason City this evening.

CONSTIPATION OR HEALTH

Constipation is a condition wherein the body is constantly subjected to poison and the effects of this disease are very far reaching. The Chiropractor discovers the cause of Constipation and corrects it so that the bowels can properly eliminate waste matter from the body.

Start getting well today.

DR. R. E. PORTER
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

THE MAN WHO DECIDED TO CATCH A GRIZZLY BEAR single-handed is no more foolish than the man who buys an off-brand Radio.

CROSLEY RADIO will not fight back, but give faithful service.

Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries On hand

H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Baby Chick ANNOUNCEMENT!

THE AERYHILL POULTRY FARM ANNOUNCES THE OPENING OF THEIR HATCHERY MARCH 1, 1927!

Having installed a JAMESWAY MAMMOTH INCUBATOR, we are ready for your orders. Increase your profits by improving your flocks with Healthy Chicks from America's greatest laying strain. If you want chicks that Grow, Lay and Pay you cannot go wrong when you order from us. Place your order early!

We sell the following:

	Per 50	Per 100
BARRED ROCKS	8.50	16.00
BUFF ROCKS	8.50	16.00
BUFF ORPINGTONS	8.50	16.00
R. C. RHODE ISLAND REDS	8.50	16.00
WHITE LEGHORNS	7.50	13.00

Will handle a complete line of Jamesway poultry equipment.

FRED W. PALS
Manager
MESERVEY, IOWA

CHEVROLET
for Economical Transportation

An Entirely New Conception of "Quality at Low Cost"

The Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History!

Because it carries the lowest prices ever placed on a truly fine automobile, the Most Beautiful Chevrolet brings into existence an entirely new conception of "Quality at Low Cost."

Never before at Chevrolet's amazingly reduced prices has any manufacturer provided so many fine car features, so many marks of distinction and so many mechanical improvements. These are typified by new bodies by Fisher finished in Duco colors, full-crown one-piece fenders, bullet-type lamps, AC oil filter, AC air cleaner, improved transmission, larger radiator and many others.

You need only to see these supremely beautiful cars to realize why all America is proclaiming them as the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry! You need only to compare them with the finest the market affords to see that they represent the biggest dollar-for-dollar value ever offered! Come in today and get a demonstration!

Reduced Prices!
The COACH
$595

The Touring or Roadster	$525
The Coupe	$625
The Sedan	$695
Sport Cabriolet	$715
The Landau	$745
1-Ton Truck (Chassis Only)	$495
½ Ton Truck (Chassis Only)	$395

Balloon Tires Now Standard On All Models
All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa
RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

Your Success and Ours!

Has it occurred to you that the success of a bank must necessarily be built not only upon the satisfaction but on the success of its customers?

And have you considered that your bank is therefore genuinely interested in co-operating with you in every practical way, to help promote your individual success?

When you open an account with us, therefore, you can be assured that we shall not only safeguard your interests as far as your deposits are concerned, but look forward to and welcome opportunities to be of further service to you.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

OBITUARY

Surilda A. Staley was born in Boone county, Iowa, June 4, 1872. Her early life was spent in and near the old home in which she was born. While a very young child there were found traces of spiritual advancement, having no doubt inherited it from her grandfather, as he was a minister of the gospel according to the Baptist faith. The very beginning of her womanhood was ladened with high ideals and never during the period of her young womanhood did she lay them aside for the frivolities of the world. She was a lady of sterling worth and was always ready to lend a helping hand wherever such a need as found. The main practice of life which brought her joy unspeakably great was to treat others as she desired to be treated.

Jan. 18, 1889, she was united in holy marriage to William Cunningham at Boone, and to this union three children were born, Herman and Clyde of Goodell, and one son having died in infancy. She was converted and joined the Baptist church but since coming to Goodell she became a member of the local church. Mrs. Cunningham has always been a conscientious christian, ready to help and liberally support in the church, and the several organizations of the church where she was one of the most faithful members.

She had been in poor health for the past few years and for some time had been failing in health. On Monday of last week, she submitted to an operation for stomach trouble at the Lutheran hospital at Hampton from which she never rallied and could not recover. God having a better place for her, called her to her spiritual home Feb. 8, at about 5:30 p. m. at the age of 54 years, eight months and four days. She leaves to mourn her going, her husband, a real companion; two sons, Herman and Clyde; one twin brother, two half brothers, one sister and three half sisters, two grandchildren and a host of friends.

The Cunninghams formerly lived at Boone, where Mr. Cunningham was a fireman for a railroad, and later farmed. About eight years ago they moved to Goodell and purchased the Will Rhodes farm where they have lived since. During their residence here, they have won the friendship and respect of everyone. Mrs. Cunningham will be greatly missed in the church and entire community where she always did the best and had a good influence. She was the type of woman everyone enjoyed to come in contact with.

Funeral services were held Saturday at 2 p. m. at the church, with Rev. D. W. Thompson, of Marshalltown, former pastor, and Rev. F. C. Scott, officiating. Interment was made in the Amsterdam cemetery. The esteem in which the Cunninghams are held here was manifest by the beautiful floral offerings and the large funeral, the church being filled with her many friends.

Those from out of town to attend the funeral were her twin brother and his wife of near Mason City; her sister and husband of Redfield, Mr. Cunningham's brother and wife, of Boone, Mrs. Cunningham's mother of Moingola, and several nieces and nephews of Boone county.

The entire community extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our many friends for the many acts of kindness and sympathy administered to us during the recent illness and death of our beloved wife and mother.

Will Cunningham
Herman Cunningham and Family.
Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Cunningham.

Hazel LaRue, who has been working in Dows, came Monday and will make her home with her parents. The LaRue's moved here last fall, Mr. LaRue being section foreman.

Clifford Estelle is working in Sigourney, where the Estelle's formerly resided.

Mrs. Will Tanner accompanied by Mr. Sharper of Charles City, motored to Hampton, Tuesday, to see the latter's sister, Mrs. John Tanner, of Klemme, who has been at the hospital for treatment. Wednesday she was taken to Cherokee to the hospital for further treatment.

Avery township trustees met Monday p. m. to elect township road men and cemetery caretaker. Messrs. P. C. Lowenberg and W. Robbins as road men and R. Estelle as cemetery caretaker were reelected for the coming year.

The Misses Gladys Kemp and Fern Sutecliffe of Ft. Dodge visited relatives of the former here last week.

Miss Alva Matson went to Iowa Falls, Wednesday, to visit at the Hokum home. Friday she went on to Des Moines to visit over Sunday at the Turner home, former friends whom she became acquainted with while attending school there.

Mrs. Harve Christenson returned Wednesday from Hampton where she has been the past two weeks recovering from an operation. She is getting along nicely and her friends are hoping for a speedy recovery.

Mrs. Albertina Lemke of Garner, is enjoying a visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. F. Beier.

Many families gathered at the Alsvig home Monday night and held a farewell surprise party in honor of Jones Alsvig and the Thor Alsvig family who are moving March 1 to [illegible], Ill. A most enjoyable evening was spent and all enjoyed the delicious lunch which the ladies brought prepared. The Alsvigs have lived here about six years and have a host of friends who wish them much success in their new home.

The Herman Cunningham family are enjoying a visit with her mother from Moingola. She arrived Monday of last week.

Alex Early motored to Hampton, Wednesday, and brought home Heiko Brass who had been at the hospital a few days recovering from a tonsil operation.

Firemen's Benefit Movie, "One of the Bravest," Belmond Opera House, Fri. & Sat. Feb. 18-19. 10c and 25c.

Lewis Rierson spent a few days last week at the home of his brother near Dows.

The school folks gave a very pleasing orchestra program at the opera house Thursday evening.

Wm. Tanner, manager of the Farmers' elevator, accompanied stock to Chicago, Saturday evening and expects to take in the sights for a few days.

Arley Blickendorfer, of near Garner spent the fore part of the week in this vicinity, purchasing different kinds of eggs that he will use in his electric incubator. Mr. Blickendorfer is a son-in-law of Mrs. J. Christie.

The grade program which was to be given February 4th and postponed due to the bad weather will be presented free of charge at the high school auditorium, Friday, February 18. All the grades are taking part in this entertainment and talks will be given by the three grade teachers and Mr. Blau in regard to library books.

Lela Griggs, oratorical; Daphne Houghton, dramatic; and Dale Conklin, humorous, were the local school's representatives who took part in the contest which was held at Garner Tuesday evening with the schools of Garner, Hayfield, Klemme and Goodell. We are very pleased to report that Miss Daphne Houghton won first in the dramatic division and was ranked first over all the contestants of the contest. Lela and Dale did exceptionally well also, but the firsts in these divisions were won by Garner. Daphne goes to Britt Wednesday evening and competes with the winners of the entire county.

Iris Sherwood, oratorical; Eunice Wesenberg, dramatic; and Cholm Houghton, humorous will go to Kanawha March 1 to give their readings with the contestants of Kanawha, Goodell, Belmond and Garner. This contest was advertised to be held on February 25th, but was postponed to Tuesday, March 1. Several should plan to go over to this contest and help boost our school and pupils.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Jensen, who have been staying at the Harve Christenson home the past three weeks while Mrs. Christenson was at the hospital, returned before part of the week to their home at Thompson. Mr. Jensen is a cousin of Mrs. Cristenson. The Misses Iris and Phyllis Christenson accompanied them home and will visit at the home of their grandfather, Mr. Wigfield.

Rev. D. W. Thompson, of Marshalltown, came Friday, called here to deliver the funeral sermon of Mrs. Will Cunningham. He remained over for the Sunday services and visited until Tuesday with his many friends.

Miss Louise Mason returned Monday from Cedar Rapids where she has spent the past two weeks visiting her cousins, the Rhodda twins, of Havelock, who attend school there.

Mrs. Frank Clark returned Wednesday from Thornton where she had visited her brother and family the DeMerrits'.

Mrs. Rose Houghton entertained a large crowd of friends Monday evening to a card party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sherman, of Wyoming.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

The annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, Feb. 24.

Mrs. Eiler and children, of Clarion returned Sunday to their home, having visited a few days at the former's home, Mrs. Longley.

Neighbors and friends lent a helping hand Friday and finished husking corn for the Landon family. Mr. Landon has been sick since last fall suffering with rheumatism and has not been able to work.

Harry Newgard, accompanied by his mother, of Belmond were business visitors at Forest City, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerhart Johnson and Donna Jean of Belmond Sundayed with Mrs. Johnson's mother, Mrs. C. Longley.

Mr. and Mrs. Kahrs of Ventura were Sunday guests at the Will Lamer home.

Mr. Nelson, accompanied by Misses Grace Luttchwager and Evelyn Thomas motored to Cedar Falls Friday to spend the week end with friends of the latter.

The Freshman class of the high school gave each of their teachers a bar of candy for Valentine's day.

The rural 8th graders of Avery and Twin Lake townships will write the county examinations Thursday and Friday. The 8th graders of this school will not write.

The Junior students wil give a program and basket social at the high school March 11. A prize will be given to the prettiest basket. Everyone invited.

Goodell Church Notes

The apron and food sale was postponed to Saturday, Feb. 19.

A large crowd attended the fine missionary program Sunday p. m. About $86 was taken in for the offering and more is expected as all of the boxes have not been turned in.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

At Mason City last Saturday afternoon occured the marriage of Miss Jennie Root and Wm. Kew. This was a great surprise to their friends as they had been thinking that this young couple would likely be married in the spring. A write-up of the wedding will be found on page one. The best wishes of their many friends go with them for a long and happy life.

Mr. Sorleon of Mason City was a business caller here Monday.

Mr. Crosby of Hampton was a business caller here Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Larsen and Albert Larsen were calling at Belmond Friday.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

The annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, Feb. 24.

A most enjoyable evening was spent last Friday in the church basement when a crowd of young folks and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Kew, the bride and groom of a week, gave them a surprise in the way of a shower, which included many beautiful and useful gifts. The evening was spent with amusing games of various kinds, under the direction of several of the young ladies. Refreshments were served.

The Busy Bee society will hold a bake sale in W. P. Aldinger's store Saturday, Feb. 19.

Fred Rodemeyer spent a couple of day at Ft. Dodge the latter part of the week, in attendance at a convention.

Miss Wilma Foughty spent a few days at the home of her father, Will Foughty, the last of the week.

Alfred Ammerman and Bennie Arens, who are attending school at Mason City, visited with home folks over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. John Arends, Mr. and Mrs. Gaulke, the Misses Susie Schulte, Sylvia Arends and Bernadine Klinefelter went to Geneva, Wednesday to attend the county declamatory contest. The young ladies were the contestants from our own.

Miss Gertrude Schmidt has been suffering with acute rheumatism the past two weeks.

Firemen's Benefit Movie, "One of the Bravest," Belmond Opera House, Fri. & Sat. Feb. 18-19. 10c and 25c.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

ROWAN DECLAMATORY

On account of the large number in the class it was necessary for a part of the declamatory contest to be held Saturday evening. Accordingly, Friday evening the dramatic class was presented. First place went to Elsie Halbrook with "Michael Strogaff." Second place was won by Elsie Aldinger in "The Death Disk," and third place to Evelyn Whitten in "The White Hands of Telham."

Saturday evening the oratorical and humorous classes were presented. First place was given to Vincent Bounds in "America First," second to Linden Whitten in "The Masterful Man of the Ages, Abraham Lincoln," and third to Ralph Whitten in "The New South."

In the humorous class, first place went to Nina Rietz who gave "A Football Fan," second to Ruby Azeltine in "Jane," and third to Violet Patton in "When Grandma Comes to Our House."

Judges Friday evening were Mrs. E. A. Morrison, Principal Miss Miriam Hillyard, and C. W. Hammond, all of Dows, and Saturday evening Supt. and Mrs. E. A. Marrison and Miss Laura Timmons who is dramatic coach at Dows. Mr. Morrison, in presenting the decisions, paid high tribute to all of the contestants, as excellent work was done by all.

Mesdames R. L. Fitz, Dan Fletcher and Gay Fletcher motored to Ft. Dodge, Thursday, to see Mrs. Fitz's brother who is very ill in the hospital there. Mrs. Dan Fletcher remained for a visit at the M. A. Sullivan home, returning Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hyde and Mae and the Rolland Harris family spent Sunday at the Merle Bangs home near Dows.

The Fred Williams family moved to Galt Thursday. Mr. Williams will take the examination for mail carrier.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Baines left Monday for their home at Spirit Lake having paid their sister, Mrs. Hannah Whitten, a week end visit.

Harry Nihoof was a Belmond business caller, Wednesday.

Alt Banwell of Dows has rented the L. W. Stevenson building and is putting in an implement stock.

Tom Ross attended the Spotted Poland China hog sales at Westgate and Waverly last week.

Rev. Bounds spent part of last week attending the Methodist men's council at Des Moines.

Harry Lancaster is moving from the Henry Burt farm west of Rowan to a farm northeast of Popejoy.

Messrs. Fred Hackley and D. W. Whitten returned from Des Moines, Thursday where they attended the Iowa Clothiers convention.

J. W. Azeltine was on the sick list last week. Murtell Myers took his place as hog buyer.

The Fred Krugers family of Dows and the C. W. Bailey family were Sunday dinner guests of Mrs. Esther Andrews.

Mrs. Geo. Whitten went to Popejoy Sunday to assist in the care of her grandson, Ivan Erickson.

Firemen's Benefit Movie, "One of the Bravest," Belmond Opera House, Fri. & Sat. Feb. 18-19. 10c and 25c.

Mrs. Henry Rietz is quite ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. A. O. Pelly.

Harvey Lineweaver had the misfortune to drop a drag on his foot last week, causing a painful injury.

Mr. and Mrs. James Rowen of Clarion announce the birth of a baby girl born last week.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

The annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, Feb. 24.

Mrs. Joe Rowen and Gilbert were on the sick list last week.

Chris Johnson of Clarion has purchased the Stevenson meat business. He has moved into the Pritchett building and is bringing a fine equipment which will insure an up-to-date market.

Mrs. Jess Steffens returned to her home Saturday, having spent about two months in the Hampton hospital.

Henry Williams had the misfortune to have his car quite badly demolished by a runaway team in Galt last Thursday, when he was assisting his brother Fred in moving his household goods to that place.

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

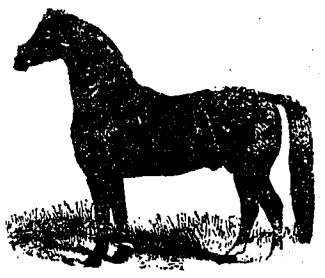
PUBLIC SALE

AS WE WILL FARM TOGETHER AND HAVE TOO MUCH EQUIPMENT FOR ONE FARM. WE WILL SELL AT PUBLIC AUCTION AT THE A. E. THOMPSON FARM, 1 MILE NORTH AND 2 MILES WEST OF BELMOND, ON

Wednesday, Feb'y 23

COMMENCING AT 1:00 O'CLOCK P. M.

5 Head of Horses



1 BLACK GELDING
1 GRAY MARE, 8 yrs. old, wt. 1600.
1 BLACK MARE, 6 yrs. old, wt. 1500.
1 BAY TEAM MARES, 7 and 8 yrs. old, wt. 2800.

40 - White Wyandotte Pullets - 40

FARM MACHINERY, ETC.

1 Dain hay stacker.
1 McCormick mower.
2 wagons.
1 John Deere manure spreader.
1 Little Boy corn plow with surface attachment.
1 8-ft. disc.
1 beet drill.
2 sets 1 1-2-inch harness.
1 300-egg Successful incubator.
2 hay buckers.
1 single row corn plow.
1 Deering binder.
1 10-ft. tandem disc.
1 10-ft. Deering hay rake.
1 beet lifter.
Gas barrels and numerous other articles.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

4 beds.
2 dressers.
1 library table.
1 9x12 wool rug.
Bed springs.
1 commode.
1 Duofold couch.
1 8x10 wool rug.
Mattresses.
6 dining room chairs.
1 9x12 Axminster rug.
Various other household goods.

TERMS

Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

A. E. & T. A. Thompson

Owners

STATE BANK OF BELMOND, Clerk. A. B. ERICKSON, Auct.

There is smartness in the profile of the Buick motor car which never grows tiresome, no matter how many Buicks you see.

Buy a Buick! It is a car you will be proud to own, and delighted to drive.

THE GREATEST BUICK EVER BUILT

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

Hub Motor Co.
BELMOND, IOWA

Local News

M. E. Aid Food Sale at Nissen's Market, Saturday.

Chas. Peterson and family from Hampton were Sunday guests at the home of his mother, Mrs. P. J. Peterson.

Dr. Wallace returned to his home at Iona, South Dakota, Tuesday.

Plan to attend the annual Chicken Supper to be given by the Catholic ladies at the library, February 24.

Mrs. G. F. Elder was hostess to the Kensington club, yesterday afternoon

The M. E. Ladies Aid will meet this, Thursday, afternoon at the home of Mrs. Gus Johnson.

Every farmer is invited to attend Griesy's Free Movie at the Lyric Theatres, Saturday afternoon.

Lawrence Gealow and Miss Jennie Gealow motored to Des Moines, Saturday, where Miss Gealow attended a banquet of the University of Des Moines.

Mrs. Cato C. Griesy entertained the Delphian club, Monday evening, at a six o'clock dinner. In place of bringing valentines to exchange, each member brought a 25-cent gift.

Mrs. Sam Crabtree left Sunday for Rochester, Minnesota, to go thru the clinic. She will be remembered as Gaezena Frohling.

Chester Johnson of Little Rock, Ark., came Saturday for a visit at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs Lud Johnson.

The Royal Neighbors with their husbands and invited guests held a basket social in the library basement Friday evening.

Mrs. Harry Bohning was hostess to the Chain of Ten, Tuesday.

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

Perhaps You Don't Know It---

But you can get more money for your cream by selling it to the Creamery.

When you sell your cream to a station you receive the market price, and that's all.

When you sell your cream to the Creamery, you receive the Market Price—in cash, just as much as you would at the station—and, in addition, you receive the Profit on that cream at the end of the two-weeks' period!

Did you know that? Then, when you can get cash on the spot, and an extra dividend besides—

Why not patronize your own Creamery, Mr. Farmer, and get more money for doing it?

Think it over!

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, February 17, 1927 No. 45

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

Washington's birthday, February 22. All honor to the Father of our Country. And we just wonder, if George were living today, what kind of an automobile he would be driving.

—

We've just read about a Kansas man who dropped dead while helping his wife wash the dishes. That ought to be a warning for every married man in Belmond.

Two sheep are standing in a pasture. One faces south, the other north. How can they look at each other without turning their heads? This is purely a mental test; let us know if you get it.

—

Embarrassing moments: When the man you owe happens along just as you are paying cash for your gasoline.

—

"Them good old days" we so often hear the pioneers tell about, were the hardest kind of days. We are living right now in better times than this country has ever seen before. Let's make the most of it.

—

Waiter: "Did you have coffee or chocolate?"
Customer: "I'm not sure, but it tasted like paste."
Waiter: "That was the coffee. The chocolate tastes like glue."

—

The man who says he runs things at his house may mean the washing machine or the vacuum cleaner.

—

We have three good lumber yards here in Belmond. Ours is the one next to the Rock Island depot, on Main street.

PUBLIC SALE!

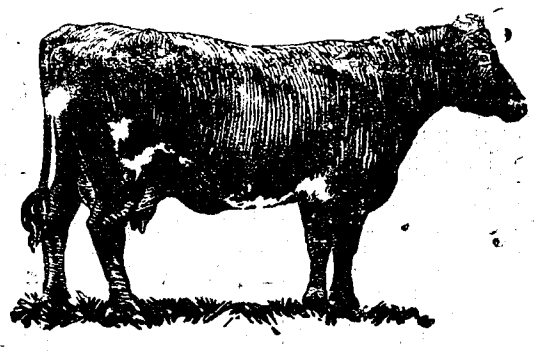
AS I AM QUITTING FARMING, I WILL SELL AT AUCTION AT THE LEE SHAHAN PLACE, KNOWN AS THE OLD SCHWARTZ FARM, 4 MILES WEST OF BELMOND, ON

Tuesday, Feb'y 22

COMMENCING AT 1:00 O'CLOCK P. M.

6 - Head of Horses - 6

1 BAY HORSE, 8 yrs. old.
1 BAY MARE, 12 yrs. old, in foal.
1 COLT, 1 yr. old.
1 ROAN MARE, 7 yrs. old, in foal.
1 SORREL MARE, 12 yrs. old.
1 BAY MARE, 7 yrs. old.



30 high-grade Shorthorn Cattle

2 YOUNG CALVES
6 BULL CALVES
13 HEIFER CALVES
4 TWO-YEAR-OLD HEIFERS
5 YEARLING HEIFERS

These cattle are Consigned by Lee Shahan.

Farm Machinery, Etc.

1 hay rake.
1 Wagon and box.
1 two-row beet plow.
1 hay rack with wagon.
1 Waterloo Boy tractor with John Deere 3-bottom plow.
1 8-ft. disc.
1 Seesaw cultivator.
1 John Deere 4-section steel harrow.
1 Hayes corn planter with 140 rods of wire.
2 sets work harness.
1 set buggy harness.
1 McCormick mower.
1 240-egg Successful incubator.
Various other articles.

TERMS

Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

LEWIS HAUGE, Auct.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND, Clerk.

LEE SHAHAN
IVER TOFT, Props.

PUBLIC SALE!

At the Stole farm, 11 miles west and 2 miles south of Belmond, at 12:30 p. m., on

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 22

10 — HEAD OF HORSES — 10
15 — HEAD OF CATTLE — 15
60 — HEAD OF HOGS — 60

Including 20 purebred S. P. C. gilts, April farrow; 24 Hampshire gilts, April farrow; 16 fall pigs.
Farm Machinery, Etc.

JOHN ENGH

New Offering

ONE TO FIVE YEAR
GOLD NOTES
6 percent Interest
Central States Electric Company
CARRYING VALUABLE CONVERSION CERTIFICATE
ISSUED IN AMOUNTS FROM $100 UPWARD
SOLD AT PAR DURING FEBRUARY
WITH FULL INTEREST FROM FEBRUARY 1ST
IDEAL FOR SHORT TERM INVESTMENT

See Any of Our Offices
Or Write
SECURITIES DEPARTMENT
Central States Electric Co.
515 Merchants National Bank
Cedar Rapids, Iowa

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With a stranger, whom he introduces as his nephew, Ned Carter, Claude Melnotte Dabbs returns from New York to his general grocery at Peace Valley, Pa. To "Aunt Lyddy," his housekeeper, he explains that Carter is a chance acquaintance, veteran of the World war, whom he had met and taken a liking to.

CHAPTER II.—Carter tells Aunt Lyddy he has broken with his family and his sweetheart because of his resentment of their ultra pacific tendencies. With Dabbs Ned visits Clover Hollow, abiding place of a "collection of good-natured cranks," according to the grocer. They almost run over a dog belonging to a girl whom Carter apparently recognizes. Ned delivers a grocery order, and in his absence the girl, Dorothy Selden, reveals that she knows him to be Ned Carter Rangeley, son of Loren Rangeley, New York banker.

Presently Ned could hear her she tramped about the "next room to mine" presumably "fixing it." By that time he had tasted Aunt Lyddy's pie. Though she trod like an elephant, yea, even though she snored, he knew now that he would always love her.

"Good, ain't it, Ned?" Mr. Dabbs asked, as Ned took a second helping. Ned nodded, mentally noting that whatever he might have to suffer from country table manners in others, Mr. Dabbs would never offend.

"Aunt Lyddy likes you or she'd never put out the whole pie," Dabbs offered.

"How can you tell? You practically hurled me down her throat."

"Down Aunt Lyddy's throat! You don't know her. Why, I couldn't make that woman give you any more than a measly little bit of pie if she didn't cotton to you. Aunt Lyddy's a fine woman, but a terror for having her way. She isn't my own aunt. She's an old friend of my mother's and when Mom died Aunt Lyddy made up her mind that I needed looking after and just came along and took possession. I couldn't get along without her now."

Aunt Lyddy returned, announcing that the room was ready and advised Ned to "turn in early." He followed her along the hall. The "room next mine" was a big, airy room, overlooking the garden at the side of the house and far removed from the noises of the shop. Its deep-seated windows indicated the age of the house. The furniture was really old, consequently good and unobtrusive, and the wall paper was a deep cream, with a little border of yellow roses.

The old four-poster looked inviting. Aunt Lyddy padded heavily away and Ned leaned out of the window, conscious of the soft, sweet, damp smell of a springtime garden.

As he left the window he was conscious of voices near him. But the room was empty, so was the hall outside his door. After a moment he concluded that the voices came through an old-fashioned hot-air register in the floor of his room. He heard Aunt Lyddy say:

"Claude Dabbs, I'm a dear lover of truth, and the truth I'll have out of you if it takes me all night. My usual hour for bed is 8:30 sharp, and here it is nearly ten, and gifts of amethyst brooches, though pretty and tastefully chosen I must say, won't blind me to my duty. I've ever been a kinda gardeen for your home since your Mom died. Who's this young man?"

"Why, he's a young fellow I met up with in New York. He's been in the army—just discharged. The very name of Peace Valley sort of hypnotized him. He can't settle down to anything yet, so I asked him down here to look around and—"

"Suffering Saints!" Aunt Lyddy's voice rose to a sort of wail, then sank again. "Where'd you meet him?"

"Well—I was walking on Riverside drive and—"

"You picked him up! A bum! A park bum!" Aunt Lyddy exclaimed with conviction. 'You probably treated him to that there awful swell suit."

Ned, his hand on the register waiting a fitting opportunity to close it unheard, noted that she refused to listen to Claude's protests.

"I know you," Aunt Lyddy announced, "and nothing you do ought to surprise me now, but I declare by Peter and Paul it does at times. Well, don't say no more, nor fix up any pleasant kinda half-lies for me. You don't know nothing about him, and there were some awful bad characters got in the army. We're lucky if our throats ain't slit by morning. I'll lock my room and bolt it, tonight!"

Feeling that he had heard enough, Ned closed the register quietly, sure that the sound would be unnoticed as Aunt Lyddy trod heavily out into the hall.

CHAPTER II

Ned woke next morning to the sound of life and activity below stairs. His first thought was that he was back in camp again. Then he remembered. His watch told him it was seven. Thinking he would surprise Claude Dabbs by his early rising, Ned dressed leisurely and went downstairs.

Aunt Lyddy greeted him without enthusiasm, informing him dryly that Claude had been up for two hours. He was at that moment superintending the unloading of the new Irish potatoes.

The food was delicious, and Aunt Lyddy waited and watched over him at the breakfast table, anticipating his wants as though he were a small boy; yet Ned felt that he was delaying the important affairs of the household.

Still with the air that he was company, Aunt Lyddy informed him: "Claude said to take the car and sail around, or do anything you've a mind to do."

"Thanks, Aunt Lyddy, but I think I'll help Uncle Claude in the shop."

Aunt Lyddy's eyes showed surprise and approval.

"Claude Dabbs could do with a little help," she announced. "There's a many leans on Claude, and but few as offers a shoulder themselves occasionally. Not that Claude needs anything to lean on, but the fact that a shoulder is handy kinda keeps a man from feeling lonely. I'm going to say this—you don't look as though you needed any special help to get along in this world. Maybe you do. I ain't inquiring. All I'm saying is that never, since I've known him, has Claude Dabbs shown such admiration for any living soul as I've seen him show for you. Well," her apron waved, expressing what she was unable to put into words, "let me see you worthy, young man. Let me see you worthy."

"Aunt Lyddy," Ned put down his knife and fork, "I don't know that I am exactly worthy, but I will be frank. Uncle Claude can't begin to have the admiration for me that I have for him. Why, he saved my pocketbook, possibly my life, the other night. I was in the park just off Riverside drive, weary of everything. I'd stretched myself along the bench to look at the stars and think out what I should do with my life, when along came Claude Dabbs and sat down on me."

Aunt Lyddy giggled in a peculiarly young and girlish way.

"Of course that went a long way toward making us friendly. While we were sauntering along talking we were ordered to put up our hands. If army experience has taught me anything it is to be leery of pistols in unknown hands. Mine went up at once. But C. M. stumbled accidentally, I thought, which brought him a few steps in front of me, and nearer the other fellow. Of course, C. M.'s hands went up as he recovered his balance. What I didn't notice, nor did the other fellow until it was too late, was that one of his feet went up, too. First thing I knew the other man was down and Claude was sitting on him!"

"And by Peter and Paul, I'll wager Claude never called a policeman!" broke in Aunt Lyddy.

Ned shook his head. "We just took his pistol and blackjack and left him. He was knocked out—stunned by the fall."

They surveyed each other, smiling.

"I suppose you'd like to know a little more about me," Ned said tentatively.

"I kin wait till you tell Claude."

"Claude knows something, and you'll be miserable until you know as much, won't you?"

Again Aunt Lyddy gave her peculiar giggle, and settled back in her chair.

"Get it off'n your chest, son, and don't smooth over nothing for me."

"I drove an ambulance for six months before this country got into the fight." Ned began. "I was hurt a little and had to come home. Tried for a commission in our army when I got well. Had to throw over everything to do it. Family and—girl. My girl was in with a professional pacifist bunch. Da—confound them all, they acted as though the rest of us liked war, and had arranged it for our own amusement.

"Well, after I got my commission I was ordered down South to one of our camps. I went, thinking I was on my way to France. When I got there, they told me my resignation had been accepted. I swore by everything holy and unholy that I had never resigned. They listened, bored but patient, and repeated that my resignation had been accepted. I'd better see Washington, I was told.

"I went to Washington. They told me there my resignation had been accepted. I told them I'd never resigned. They listened and said 'maybe not,' but the War department was too busy to bother about my case, just then, or to correct any mistake, if there was a mistake. They advised me tenderly to go home like a good boy, and, maybe some time later, they'd look me up. I went swearing. I had no home to go to. So I enlisted in a New York regiment and was discharged some two or three weeks ago."

"Satan's trumpets!" Aunt Lyddy exclaimed. "The armistic signed in November and they kep' you in all this time. Well, you certainly got the rough end of the stick. As for that girl, wisht I had her within arm's reach. I'd shake a little sense into her."

"Oh, she's all right," Ned said a little awkwardly. "Don't make the mistake of treating me like a returned hero, because I never got over. I was railroaded to an O. T. C., and kept there. I never got over.

"You can understand, can't you, why the very name of Peace Valley drew me like a charm, and you'll forgive my coming here in this way?"

"Suffering Saints! You're more'n welcome to stay, and as far as I'm

"Suffering Saints, You're More Than Welcome."

concerned—" Aunt Lyddy broke off suddenly, and trod heavily kitchenward, for Claude Dabs had entered from the office.

"Morning. It does me good to see you sitting there as though you were home."

"I feel at home," Ned assured him.

"Hope you really do." Claude's scrutiny was wistful but understanding. "What's the program? Want one of the cars?"

"The cars! Why, C. M., for a simple country grocer, aren't you rather laying it on'?"

Claude blushed. "Old Man Wolf hasn't knocked at the grocery door for a number of years—a considerable number. But what good's my money to me, if no one shares it?"

Ned rose and put a hand on Claude's shoulder. "Did you adopt me to squander your surplus? I thought you were going to make me work!"

"I will, if you think you'll stay awhile," Claude replied eagerly.

"Of course I'll stay, and what's more, I'm going to help. Motoring means nothing to me. Let me tag after you and look things over; be of use, if I can."

Dabbs looked immensely pleased. "By Jiminy! That'll be great! Suppose you drive with me to Clover Hollow with the orders. You can always pretend you are a stranger getting a lift, or you can jump off and admire the scenery when we get there. You don't look like the grocer's boy, you know."

"Well, I am," affirmed Ned. "My looks may be against me, but it isn't kind of you to rub it in. I'm your man for delivery or anything else." Ned watched Claude Dabbs handle the reins. Like everything else he did, he drove skillfully, but apparently without giving it all his attention.

On the way, he told Ned that the car was out and Sim needed the truck for the express stuff—an explanation of why they were using Jenny and the wagon. But Ned was secretly convinced that the wagon was being used as a test of his own endurance, and smiled to himself at C. M.'s guile.

Ned was the target for many curious, unwinking stares before they left the short main street. At last the village lay behind them and the road ran winding past quaint homesteads and inviting side roads.

Winding Willow road was its name, Claude informed Ned as they neared the top of the hill. Ned looked about him, absorbed in the panorama of comfortable farmland and wooded hills. He realized that the lovely road lived up to the first part of its name. It wound on and on and not too smoothly. There were steep hills and sharp turns before them, but Claude had arrived at a place where he might relax and talk.

"By Jiminy! It's good to be out of doors! I make a break once in so often and take out a lot of orders, so's not to get too fat and lazy."

Ned smiled. He had suspected that C. M., was trying him out, and now he was sure.

Dabbs turned and looked at the young man's face with great content.

"You do like Peace Valley. Just as I felt you would. Grand country, isn't it?"

(Continued Next Week)

Proceedings of Wright Co. Board of Supervisors

Clarion, Iowa, January 13, 1927.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Wright, in the State of Iowa, met at the court house in Clarion, Iowa, as per adjournment.

Members present, E. E. Kitley, Chairman, and Supervisors James Mehl, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder, and J. D. Baker, with County Auditor in attendance.

Minutes of January 8, 1927, read and approved.

Moved and seconded that Mrs. McCallum's allowance be reduced one-half. Motion carried.

Moved by Mehl, and seconded by Schroeder, that County Attorney Blue be and he is hereby authorized to appear and defend the appeal of L. A. Andrew, Superintendent of Banking, as Receiver of the Farmers State Bank of Goldfield, Iowa, in the case of L. A. Andrew, Superintendent of Banking, Plaintiff, vs. Farmers State Bank of Goldfield, Iowa, Defendant; Wright County, Iowa, Intervenor, and do all things necessary in said cause to protect the interests of Wright County. Motion carried.

Board rechecked the cash in the Treasurer's office and find on the 31st day of December, 1926, at close of business: on deposit in the various banks, $361,642.16; cash in office and vault, $678.70; checks, $6750.76; and cash Items, $86.42, making a total of $369,158.04.

On motion the following bonds were approved:

M. B. Miles, Justice of the Peace, Clarion; G. A. Triggs, Justice of the Peace, Clarion; C. I. Rowen, Justice of the Peace, Iowa Township; S. H. Williamson, Justice of the Peace, Eagle Grove; Will Tillman, Treasurer of Wright County Farm Bureau; Frank B. Champlin, Secretary of Soldiers' Relief Committee; W. S. Flower, member of Soldiers' Relief Committee; C. O. Fitts, member of Soldiers' Relief Committee; W. F. Beyer, Clerk of Vernon Township; W. J. Hagie, Clerk of Dayton Township; Lester O. Olson, Clerk of Eagle Grove Township; H. B. Vanderlip, Clerk of Blaine Township; and the following assessors: C. J. Baxter, Belmond Township; Chris Nelson, Boone Township; J. E. Patterson, Blaine Township; Harry Sumners, Dayton Township; Henry T. Larsen, Eagle Grove Township; Leroy G. Hill, Grant Township; Fred Aldrich, Iowa Township; F. J. Knight, Lake Township; R. B. Martin, Liberty Township; Fred Morford, Lincoln Township; Pete Enge, Norway Township; W. A. Gartz, Pleasant Township; Severt Nervig, Troy Township; John P. Sutton, Vernon Township; Chas. A. Carpenter, Wall Lake Township; F. L. Kirstein, Woolstock Township; Osbon Young, Belmond; D. W. Stewart, Clarion; W. F. Weekin, Dows; Wm. Fisher, Eagle Grove; H. O. Kellogg, Galt; Charles Troyer, Goldfield; W. H. Azeltine, Rowan; R. F. Hirt, Woolstock.

On motion adourned to meet February 7, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY,
Chairman.
F. W. WALKER,
County Auditor.

Clarion, Iowa, February 7, 1927.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Wright, in the State of Iowa, met at the court house in Clarion, Iowa, as per adjournment.

Members present, E. E. Kitley, Chairman, and Supervisors James Mehl, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder and J. D. Baker, with County Auditor in attendance.

Minutes of January 13, 1927, were read and on motion approved.

On motion February 11, 1927, at 2 o'clock P. M., was fixed as time and date for the appointment of third official county paper, vacancy caused by the consolidation of the two Eagle Grove papers.

On motion oil letting was continued to February 8, 1927, at 10 o'clock A. M.

Time and date having arrived for lumber and culvert letting, board took up the same. Bids were received from the following: Lampert Yards, Inc., Frudden Lumber Co., Wheeler Lumber Co., Barton and Warner Co. and Klauer Mfg. Co.

The bid of the Wheeler Lumber Company was found to be the lowest and best bid on lumber and on motion they were awarded contract and chairman was instructed to sign the same.

The bid of the Klauer Mfg. Co. was found to be the lowest and best bid on culverts and on motion they were awarded contract and chairman of the board was instructed to sign the same.

On motion adjourned to meet February 8, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY,
Chairman.
E. W. WALKER,
County Auditor.

Clarion, Iowa, February 8, 1927.

Board reconvened as per adjournment, members all present, with County Auditor in attendance.

Minutes of February 7, 1927, read and approved.

Petition of W. E. Bullard, et al, requesting that Board appoint J. H. Fetrow of Belmond, as Justice of the Peace in Pleasant Township, was presented.

On motion J. H. Fetrow was appointed Justice of the Peace in Pleasant Township for the term ending December 31, 1928, and his bond approved.

The following resolution was presented:

WHEREAS, Wright County, Iowa, had on deposit to the credit of H. B. Hallock, Treasurer of Wright County, Iowa, at the time that the State Bank of Renwick, Iowa, was closed on July 15, 1926, and at the time that L. A. Andrew, Supertintendent of Banking of the State of Iowa, was appointed by the District Court of Humboldt County, Iowa, as Receiver for said bank, the sum of $335.27, and

WHERAS, on the 15th day of January, 1927, at a hearing before Judge D. T. Coyle, Judge of the District Court of Iowa, in and for Humboldt County, the claim of Wright County, Iowa, was duly established and allowed in the case of L. A. Andrew, Superintendent of Banking of the State of Iowa, plaintiff, versus State Bank of Renwick, Renwick, Iowa, defendant, wherein Wright County, Iowa, appeared as Intervenor, and

WHEREAS, said Court at said hearing allowed the claim of Wright County, Iowa, and established the same against the State Bank of Renwick, Renwick, Iowa, and L. A. Andrew, Superintendent of Banking, as Receiver thereof, in the amount of $335.27 as that of a common deposit claim and as a claim legally payable in full from the State Sinking Fund, created under the provisions of Chapter 173 of the Acts of the Forty-first General Assembly of Iowa, and

WHEREAS, in order to receive payment for the amount of said claim from the State Sinking Fund it is necessary to assign the claim of Wright County, Iowa, for its pro rata share of dividends in the State Bank of Renwick, Renwick, Iowa, to the Treasurer of the State of Iowa for the use and benefit of the said State Sinking Fund.

NOW, THEREFORE, be it hereby resolved by the Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, in session duly assembled, as follows:

Section 1. That the claim of Wright County, Iowa, in the sum of $335.27 against the State Bank of Renwick, Renwick, Iowa, and L. A. Andrew, Receiver of said bank for its pro rata share of dividends to be received from said Receiver from assets of said bank coming into the hands of said Receiver, be assigned to the Treasurer of State of the State of Iowa, and the Auditor and the Treasurer of Wright County, Iowa, are hereby authorized and directed to assign and transfer to the Hon. R. E. Johnson, Treasurer of State of the State of Iowa, for the use and benefit of the Sinking Fund created under the provisions of Chapter 173 of the Acts of the Forty-first General Assembly of Iowa, the claim of Wright County, Iowa, against the State Bank of Renwick, Renwick, Iowa, and L. A. Andrew, Receiver thereof, in the total sum of $335.27.

Section 2. The Treasurer and Auditor are further authorized and directed to certify to the Treasurer of State of the State of Iowa, that no dividends have been received by Wright County, Iowa, on its claim against the said State Bank of Renwick, Renwick, Iowa, and said Receiver, and also certify that Wright County, Iowa, and said H. B. Hallock as Treasurer of Wright County, Iowa, had no depository bond or security of any kind securing and protecting the deposit of said Wright County, Iowa, in the said State Bank of Renwick, Renwick, Iowa, at the time that said bank was closed on July 15th, 1926, and placed in the hands of L. A. Andrew, Receiver thereof.

Roll call resulted, Ayes: E. E. Kitley, James Mehl, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder and J. D. Baker; Nayes: None. Call carried and on motion was declared adopted.

Time and date having arrived for oil letting, Board took up the same. Bids were received from Standard Oil Co., Wright County Oil Co., Advance-Rumely Co., and Black Hawk Oil Co.

On motion the Black Hawk Oil Company was awarded a one-year extension of their 1926 contract.

Moved and seconded that the Board recommend the payment of $50.00 to the Soldiers' Relief Commission as part payment of funeral expenses of Mrs. D. E. Brooks. Motion carried.

Petition of J. E. Oler, et al, to establish a road district for the purpose of surfacing with gravel the following described road: beginning at the ¼ corner on the south line of Section 36-91-23, running west ¼ of a mile to the west ¼ corner on South line of said Section, thence South 2½ miles to west ¼ corner on the East-West center line of Section 13-90-23, was presented.

On motion said petition was referred to Engineer for his report.

On motion G. A. Triggs was awarded compensation insurance for 1927.

Yearly reports of G. A. Triggs, Justice of the Peace, and Will Robinson, Justice of the Peace, were presented, examined and ordered filed.

Moved and seconded that Supervisor Baker be authorized to buy a Fordson Tractor with rubber tires, and a Ford Truck with Ruckstell axel, and chairman was authorized to sign contract.

Roll call resulted, Aye: Peterson, Mehl, Kitley; Nay: Schroeder and Baker. Call carried.

Moved and seconded that one Wehr Fordson road grader, fully equipped, be purchased and chairman of the board was instructed to sign contract.

Roll call resulted, Aye: Schroeder, Baker, Peterson, Mehl and Kitley; Nay: None. Call carried.

Moved and seconded that Kitley and Mehl act as a committee to investigate the John Voog Matter. Motion carried.

On motion the following Township Clerk's Bonds were approved: C. M. Clausen, Liberty; A. M. Axen, Grant; A. H. Worra, Lake; Anthony Rapp, Wall Lake; D. H. Huff, Woolstock; Hjalmar Janson, Norway; Will Tillman, Lincoln; F. H. Allen, Troy; and J. E. Rowen, Iowa.

On motion the following claims were audited, allowed and warrants ordered drawn on the proper funds for their payments:

LIST OF CLAIMS FOR PUBLICATION
COUNTY FUND

H. G. Bowman, Exp. co. car	$ 28.65
Birdsall, McGrath & Archerd, Services	185.00
J. D. Baker, Supervisor	100.10
Blaine Twp. Trustees, Meeting	12.00
E. A. Breckenridge, Extra help in Treas. office	75.00
Central Iowa Power & Light Co., Lights—c.h. & jail	33.07
W. M. Coons, Vit. Stat.	2.25
J. K. Baker, Vit. Stat.	7.25
D. H. Huff, Vt. Stat.	2.75
A. A. Diederich, Vit. Stat.	5.50
Guy Byers, Vit. Stat.	10.00
R. V. Goslin, Vit. Stat.	9.25
Crescent Printing Co., Supplies	42.75
Callaghan & Co., Supplies	10.00
Clarion Oil Co., Gas & oil for co. car	24.44
Eagle Grove Eagle, Bd. pcds., Bar Docket & ptg.	139.97
Eagle Grove Times, Bd. pcds.	38.79
L. G. Focht, Office expense	11.15
J. H. Fagan, Repairs—c.h.	9.20
R. V. Goslin, Office expense	6.87
M. L. Goslin, Salary	55.00
H. B. Hallock, Office expense	45.33
D. D. Matheson, Supplies	86.40
J. K. Hilton, Salary	86.02
J. K. Hilton, Office expense	31.00
Fred Johnson, Bd. pris.	188.00
Fred Johnson, Mileage & office expense	58.94
E. E. Kitley, Supervisor	89.40
H. W. Kennedy, Court Reporter	13.48
Klipto Loose Leaf Co., Office Supplies	10.74
Liberty Twp. Trustees, Meeting	12.00
S. A. McCreery; P. M., Env. for Supt.	9.01
S. A. McCreery, P. M., Env. for Treas.	44.32
S. A. McCreery, P. M., Env. for Supt.	10.99
Messenger Printing Co., Office supplies	107.55
J. C. Middleton, Bd. of Education	4.20
Rose McGrath, Extra help in Treas. office	100.00
R. A. McGrath, Extra help in Treas. office	17.28
James Mehl, Supervisor	144.70
Wright County Monitor, Bd. pcds., supplies & ptg.	138.65
A. MacEachron, Justice fees	10.50
Matt Parrott & Sons Co., Office supplies	161.03
Perkins Bros. Co., Office supplies	204.75
J. C. Peterson, Supervisor	59.30
Pleasant Twp. Trustees, Four meetings (1926)	48.00
Wallace Ramsey, Bd. of Education	8.40
J. H. Ramsay & Son, Supplies for jail	6.00
Will Robinson, Justice fees	10.50
F. B. Sheldon, Bd. of Education	2.60
Chas. N. Smart, Office Supplies	6.50
L. C. Smith & Corona Typewriters Inc., Repairing typewriter	10.00
Ben Suiter, Bailiff	3.00
Shupe & Son, Supplies—c.h. & jail	17.40
Dr. J. H. Sams, Medical aid (Pris.)	41.60
L. W. Schroeder, Supervisor	72.60
G. A. Triggs, 10 percent of del. tax collections	82.80
G. A. Triggs, Adv. prem. on Ins. Policy	50.00
G. A. Triggs, Justice fees	20.00
Fred Johnson, Mileage	17.00
Edith M. Vaughn, Office expense	2.10
Western Elec. Tele. Sys., Phone rent and Aud. toll	20.90
W. A. Walker, Balance of Salary (1926)	65.83
Dr. H. P. Walker, Coroner's fees	6.10
Wright County Pay Roll, Officers and clerks	2186.64
R. F. Hirt, Assessors' meeting	5.30
W. H. Azeltine, Assessors' meeting	4.50
H. O. Kellogg, Assessors' meeting	4.50
Chas. Troyer, Assessors' meeting	4.50
Wm. Fisher, Assessors' meeting	4.50
W. F. Wedekin, Assessors' meeting	5.20
D. W. Stewart, Assessors' meeting	3.60
Osbon Young, Assessors' meeting	4.90
F. L. Kirstein, Assessors' meeting	4.40
Chas. A. Carpenter, Assessors' meeting	5.50
John P. Sutton, Assessors' meeting	5.40
Severt Nervig, Assessors' meeting	5.10
W. A. Gartz, Assessors' meeting	5.80
Pete Enge, Assessors' meeting	4.70
F. J. Knight, Assessors' meeting	4.80
Fred Morford, Assessors' meeting	4.20
R. B. Martin, Assessors' meeting	4.50

(Continued next week.)

LOCALS

Rev. and Mrs. Buriff of Goldfield, spent Tuesday in Belmond visiting at the A. H. Skovlin home. Rev. Buriff spoke to the Masonic lodge that evening.

There will be a combination sale held at the Moe & Nelson barn, north of the Independent, Tuesday, March 8. Particulars later.

R. E. Webb has been suffering with a carbuncle on his neck the past week.

Howard Crane and family from Dows visited at the Nels Stockseth home, Sunday.

Mr. Baker and family of Goodell visited at the Weide home, Sunday. Mrs. Baker is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Weide.

Ed. Rahl and family from Rowan were guests at the Tom Bayliss home Saturday.

Bernard Moody, manager of the opera house, gave a Sunday evening showing of a moving picture, Sunday of this week, the show starting about 9:00 o'clock. It is understood it is his intention to show regularly Sunday evenings for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Braner and family visited at the H. Mennenga home Sunday.

The Immanual Reformed church is planning on redecorating the interior and repainting the church and parsonage.

About 15 friends of Miss Thera Fitts gave her a farewell party and shower at the home of Mrs. Mikesell, Friday evening.

Free movies will be given by the Griesy Implement Store, Saturday afternoon of this week, Feb. 19, at the Lyric Theatre. Every farmer is invited to attend and see these picturs.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Saatoff from Hampton were Sunday guests at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gartin.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Luick came over from Clarion, Monday. They will rent their house and move to Clear Lake to live with the Clate Huntley family this summer.

Miss Josie Gealow returned Friday to Washington, D. C., to resume her duties in the income tax department. She had been called home by the death of her sister, Mrs. Wm. Sherriff.

M. E. Aid Food Sale at Nissen's Market, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wolle received word last week that their son, Howard, is in St. George's hospital in Bombay, India, with Enteric fever. He has two day nurses and one night nurse, all English, caring for him, but the crisis of the disease has been passed and he is now on the road to recovery. The letter telling of his illness came from a doctor friend of Howard's, Dr. Geo. A. Watkins.

Mrs. O. L. Varland and Mrs. H. F. Peterson drove to Iowa Falls, Friday.

A good Old Time Dance will be given by the Catholic ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

ANNOUNCEMENT!
—PHONE 78—

I am opening a repair shop in Belmond and will be known as the

GALLOWAY AUTO SERVICE

Located at the Nordschow Motor Co. building. Phone 78.

MERROLD H. GALLOWAY
Official Willys-Overland Hudson-Essex Service

A good Old Time Dance will be given by the Catholic ladies at the Belmond Opera House, February 24.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Goelz entertained a number of the teachers at a seven o'clock dinner, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Walton of Iowa Falls were Sunday guests at the E. F. Bailey home.

Miss Tapager of Lake Mills spent last week at the Fred Mortimer home.

Mrs. Floyd Mortimer has gone to Aredale, to spend a few weeks with her parents.

The State Bank of Belmond and the Belmond Savings Bank will remain closed Tuesday, Feb. 22, in observation of Washington's birthday.

Fire Saturday night destroyed the millinery store of Mrs. Frank Rossman at Dows. A poultry house and panatorium establishment were also destroyed.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Big type brood sows, April farrow. Bred to pure bred boars. Cholera immune. Will sell by weight.—M. Halfwassen. 13tf

FOR SALE—Some Holstein cows and heifers, from an accredited herd. Will be fresh soon—M. J. Kernan, Belmond. 1c

FOR RENT—Five-room house, water, lights and furnace. $22.50 per month. Inquire at Independent. 1c

FOR SALE—Team of black mares 9 years old, wt. 1500 pounds each, sound. Price $250 for team, or choice for $125.—Fred Kercheval, farm six miles south, one-half mile west of Belmond. Rowan Phone 807. Belmond mail. 14tf

FOR SALE—Some good wild hay, also some mixed hay. Some timothy seed for sale.—Claude Veeder, Phone 2010. 142*

LOST—Green plaid horse blanket, between Belmond and the Kalkwarf farm, a week ago Saturday. Finder please leave at Independent. 1*

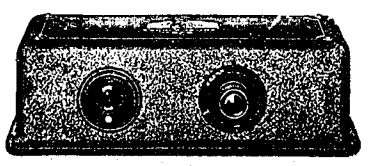
Money Counts!

THOMPSON SEEDLESS RAISINS, 15 oz. package 10c
No. 2 can CORN and PEAS 10c
4 lbs. CORN MEAL 15c
Gal. OREGON BLUE PLUMS 65c
Gal. EASTERN APPLES 50c
Gal. PEARS 75c
6 lbs. BULK OATMEAL 25c

We have many other Bargains in store for you.
EGGS TAKEN AS CASH
WE DELIVER

Parson's Store
BELMOND, IOWA

THIS



is a duplicate of the 1,000,000th Radio Receiving Set produced by the Atwater Kent Mfg. Co., Philadelphia, Pa., Friday, December 3, 1926.

On the same day 5,317 other sets, 11 per minute, were completed.

Local Authorized Dealer

BELMOND STORAGE BATTERY CO.
J. W. Scott, Prop. Phone 46

Marie, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Jones, is ill with pneumonia.

Mrs. B. K. Kinseth is visiting at the home of her parents, in Bode.

WE ARE USING THIS SPACE TO ATTRACT YOUR ATTENION TO THE WORD SERVICE!

WE HANDLE DIAMOND BREAD

Potato Bread ..... 2 for 25c
Dinner Bread ... 3 for 25c
Wholewheat 10c
Teabiscuit 15c

And we will take orders for Buns, Cinnamon Rolls, Coffee Cake, or any of the products of the Mason City bakery. Delivered every day to our store.

Leave your orders or phone 88.

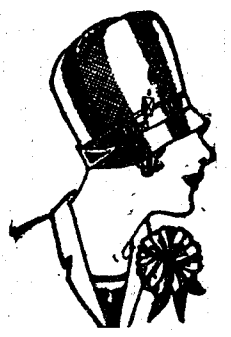
Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

NOTICE!

All our customers and patrons are hereby notified that after 30 days, any person owing an unpaid account will be placed on a strictly cash basis.

F. P. Dibble.
D. Bishop.

New Spring Hats



Arriving Every Day!

HEMSTITCHING DONE

New Spring Embroidery Packages

The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

Two-pant SUITS for SPRING

An early shipment of Spring Suits has just arrived. Beautiful patterns in new designs and colorings.

They are all wool, finely tailored and guaranteed to give satisfaction.

SMITH SERVICE & SKOVLIN SATISFACTION

Phone 50 Belmond, Iowa

George Washington

1732-1799

Let us pause today to honor the memory of that handful of men whose untiring struggle against great odds brought victory to a weak nation and laid deep the beginnings of our happiness and prosperity. Let us remember with reverence the man who forsook wealth, ease and influential friends to lead his countrymen in the war for liberty: George Washington, American.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND
IOWA

Editor and Mrs. Rankins leave this morning, accompanied by L. W. Gealow, for Des Moines where they will attend the annual meeting of the Iowa Press Association held at the Hotel Fort Des Moines this week.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	21c
Butterfat	48c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	38 1-2c
Corn	52c
Barley	56c

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Friday and Saturday
February 18-19

Beef Roast, per pound 18c
Boiling Meat, per pound 12½c
Hamburger, per pound 15c
Delicia Oleo, per pound 22c

We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Discs, plows, shovels, etc. sharpened. See J. Underkofler, at the old Peter Stacy blacksmith shop. 1c

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 17—Harry Ziska, Duroc Jersey bred sow sale.

FEB. 18—Combination Sale, at the old Foundry building. See ad on page 3.

FEB. 22—Iver Tofte and Lee Shahan, joint farm sale. See ad on page 6.

FEB. 23—A. E. and T. A. Thompson, 3 1-2 miles northwest of Belmond, joint farm sale. Particulars on page 5.

FEB. 25—E. C. Boren, 1 mile south of Goodell. Particulars next week.

MARCH 8—Combination Sale. Particulars later.

Why Pay More?

When you can buy your staple groceries here at our new Cash Saving Prices and buy for less? We have marked down our groceries under our Cash Sales system and offer you real money-savers. Just as a sample of the many bargains we are selling

	Each
CORN, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PEAS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
TOMATOES, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
KRAUT, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
HOMINY, was 2 for 25c, now	10c
PORK & BEANS, was 2 for 25c, now	10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

"One of the Bravest"

A BELMOND FIRE DEPARTMENT BENEFIT MOVING PICTURE

Friday and Saturday, FEBRUARY 18-19

Belmond Opera House

Ralph Lewis in the greatest fire picture ever made. A powerful photodrama of the men who pursue the most dangerous of all peaceful occupations---FIRE FIGHTERS.

TWO SHOWS EACH NIGHT
First Show At 7:30.

CHARLESTON CONTEST
Between Shows, with first prize of $2.00; second prize of $1.00; and a third prize a Box of Candy. Open to All.

Good Comedy Picture In Addition

Admission 10c and 25c

Tickets On Sale At
SCHULTZ DRUG COMPANY
CITY MEAT MARKET ELITE CAFE
BELMOND VARIETY STORE
BRADY'S BARBER SHOP

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 — BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1927 — NO. 15

DECLAMATORY TO BE HELD TUESDAY

Preliminary Round Of State Contest Will Be Held At Kanawha, March 1st.

LAST HOME GAME FRIDAY

The preliminary round of the State Declamatory contest will be held next Tuesday evening, March 1. Belmond's contestants will meet speakers from Kanawha, Klemme, and Goodell, at Kanawha. Belmond will be represented by the winners of the respective classes in the home contest, Leo Ayres in Oratorical, Lucile Skouge in Dramatic, and Mildred Jacobson in Humorous. Of the 12 contestants, one from each class will be chosen to represent the group in a sub-district contest later in the season. Several Belmond enthusiasts are planning to attend the contest and we are exceedingly hopeful concerning our speakers, of whom all three show considerable training and talent.

The girls' and boys' glee clubs will go to Clarion, Friday, to sing at a meeting of the Wright County Music Teachers' Association, which will be held at the Congregational church. The boys' selection will be "Aura Lee," Old Melody, and the girls will sing, "'By the Waters of Minnetonka," by Lieurance and "I Passed By Your Window" by Brake.

Friday evening of this week the basketball team will play their last game of the season on the home floor. Eagle Grove will come to provide the opposition. The Eaglets have a strong team, with the entire team of last year back again. Goldfield defeated Eagle Grove in one game this season, and after the close game last Friday evening, our boys will put up a real battle to wind up the season. Last year Belmond downed Eagle Grove in two games, winning each by a one point margin. Three regulars, Don McNulty, John Holtzbauer, and Henry Weide will make their last home appearance in this game. Next week the team goes to Mason City for the sectional tournament.

The Freshmen girls will play the Sophomore girls' class team in a preliminary game Friday before the Eagle Grove game, at 7:30.

Ione Peyton and Miss Tiara visited the 5th and 6th grades Friday of last week.

Orvis Fitts, Beulah Ramsey, and Donald Finn have been absent from the second grade on account of illness.

Visiting the 4th grade Friday were Mesdames Stadtlander, Gowdy, Zeiger, Davenport, Bergefer, and Roosevelt.

The third grade has started a contest in spelling. They have chosen sides with Waunita Brewer and Bennie Ruiter as leaders. The purpose is to see which side gets the most perfect papers. So far Waunita's side is ahead with a score of 23 while Bennie's side has only 16.

Ricard Gowdy is wearing the typing medal this week.

Neal Miller, Adene Fitts, Elnora McMannus and Maryon Mielson were absent from first grade all last week on account of sickness.

Josephine Anderson and Harry Sheller have been absent from the third and fourth grade room because of sickness.

Thirty-eight eighth grade pupils of the rural schools took the county examinations at the high school last Friday.

Miss Knudson's father visited school Monday.

Junior High Notes

Hildegarde Thorman, Duane Brady, Frances Ramsey and Alice McMannus in 8 A received a scoring of 10 in the Arithmetic Work Books. This is a fine record, let's keep it up.

Marie Jones of 8 A has been absent from classes last week on account of a serious illness and the Junior High sent her flowers.

The Girls' Physical Training classes have started a basket ball tournament to determine the champion team of the Junior High.

The seventh grade are making booklets in History and Reading.

The eighth grade and seventh grade held their class debates Monday morning. The seventh grade team is composed of Duan Packard, Jean Elder and Edward McNulty. The eighth grade team is composed of Mary E. Blake, Aileen Gibbs and Hildgarde Thorman. The seventh and eighth grades will hold a Junior High debate soon.

The eighth grade class party will be held Saturday night in the gymnasium.

Friday night, Goldfield took home the big side of a 24-14 score in a fast basket ball game with the Belmond quintet. During the first half, the game was one of the closest and most exciting played this season. The two teams seemed to be more evenly matched than in the previous games this year played with Goldfield. Belmond did some splendid work with their quick, accurate passing, and repeating the defense smashing of this former game. Several substitutions were made, due to fouls, in both teams, and the splendid team work of our boys was broken up long enough for Goldfield to pile up the score with some long shots. Belmond tightened up and played their best, but the score was too one-sided for a B. H. S. victory. Mr. M. H. Sims of Mason City refereed. In a preliminary game the Junior girls defeated the Senior girls 16-19. Miss Cambier refereed this game.

PROGRESS CLUB BANQUET

The annual dinner party of the Progress club held at the library basement Tuesday evening, Feb. 22, was very enjoyable. Red carnations and smilax formed the center pieces on the tables and other decorations on tables and about the hall were in keeping with the day, in red, white and blue and with flags. A very delicious four-course dinner was served after every one had found his "sole-mate" and clever favors had been distributed. During the dinner hour fortunes and prophecies were read. Following this, a "flathead" contest was held, also a beauty contest, the latter being won by Mr. Courson and his artist, Mrs. H. J. Williams. Suitable prizes were awarded. The happy evening drew to a close with the presentation of the one-act pantomine, "The Lamp Went Out," by Mrs. Elder, Dr and Mrs. McBurney, and Mr. and Mrs. Skovlin. The committee in charge deserving much credit for the lovely party, was Mrs. A. E. Martin, Mrs. C. I. Williams and Mrs. C O. Fitts, and we wish to express our appreciation to Miss Hiehman, demonstrator, and the Electric company for the use of the Hot Point ranges.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP CLUB ENJOYS FINE ADDRESS

Rev Clark of Fort Dodge delivered the address before the Good Fellowship club last Friday night, his subject being "Building An Estate." His talk was greatly enjoyed, and some sound facts were left for his audience to think about. A splendid preliminary program was given, and the usual refreshments completed the evening.

Former Old Settler Dies in Seattle

Mrs. Fred Thompson, died at Seattle, Wash., Feb. 12. She with Mr. Thompson were residents of Belmond some 30 years ago where Mr. Thompson conducted a wagon shop. Mr. Thompson was a son of Allan Thompson, the man who had the first grist mill in Belmond, on the Iowa river. Mrs. Thompson was before her marriage, Ella Zager.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

FEB. 25—E. C. Boren, 1 mile south of Goodell. See ad this week.

FEB. 26—Ole A. Sharp. Closing out farm sale. See ad in this issue.

MARCH 3—Marwell Baker. Closing out farm sale. See ad in this issue.

MARCH 8—Combination Sale. Particulars later.

MARCH 12—Horse and mule sale. Bailey & McLaughlin, props. Particulars later.

Andrew Larson returned Saturday from the farm near Kanawha where he has been staying with his daughter, Mrs. Harry Ziska, and family for several weeks.

More proceedings of the Board of Supervisors will be found this week on page seven.

Lion or Lamb?

MAKING PLANS FOR FIRE DAY

Thoro Inspection Will Be Made Of All Business Buildings

Representatives of the Lum[illegible] met recently with members [illegible] scout committee of the [illegible] State Fire Prevention associa[illegible] when plans were made for an [illegible] sive inspection and educational [illegible] paign to be conducted in Belmo[illegible] March 16. The Parent-Teachers' [illegible] sociation and the Community [illegible] are co-operating in the work.

The work to be carried out here [illegible] the date in question is a part of [illegible] nation-wide war on human and [illegible] nomic losses thru fire, and, no m[illegible] ment deserves more whole-hea[illegible] support on the part of the citizen[illegible] Belmond than this campaign to [illegible] duce fire fatalities and the dest[illegible] tion of property by fire.

Several members of the Asso[illegible] tion will take part in the inspect[illegible] and the various business hou[illegible] churches, schools, and public bui[illegible] ings will be inspected by these me[illegible] who are the field representatives [illegible] various fire insurance companies, an[illegible] who are trained fire preventionists.

This inspection will have nothing to do with fire insurance rates, and neither will the men engaged in the work try to sell insurance to our citizens while here at this time. The members of the Association take it for granted that Belmond does not want fires, and they will do all they can in preventing them, by pointing out existing fire hazards and offering suggestions for their removal or correction.

The visitors will not attempt to inspect the dwellings here; this work being accomplished most effectively by means of what are known as "home inspection blanks" in the hands of the school children.

In addition to the actual inspections, there will be two speakers at the mass meeting in the evening at the opera house, one of whom will discuss general fire prevention, and the other fire prevention on the farm. Two films—"Fire" and "Flaming America"—will be shown, as a visual-education plan of bringing home to the people the ravages of the fire demon.

COMMUNITY CLUB ANNUAL MEETING

The annual business meeting and election of officers of the Community Welfare club will be held Friday afternoon of this week at the library. The annual drive for members is now on, and if you have been overlooked and have not been asked to join, you will be more than welcome to attend the annual meeting or any other meeting, bringing one dollar which is the annual membership dues.

Mrs. Glenn Klemme is chairman of the serving committee for Friday afternoon.

LUNCHEON CLUB TODAY

The last meeting of the winter schedule of the Luncheon club will be held this noon at the hotel. The topic for discussion is Parks and City Beautiful, the committee being H. F. Luick, chairman, Dr. H. L. Gowdy, C. I. Williams, Rev. Stark.

ELECTION

Notice is hereby given to the qualified electors of the Independent School District of Belmond, County of Wright and State of Iowa, that the Annual Meeting of said School District will be held at Belmond City Hall on the second Monday in March, 1927, commencing at one o'clock p. m. closing at Six o'clock p. m.

A director will be elected for a term of three years [illegible]

[illegible]

BIBLE CLASS ENJOY PARTY

A very pleasant afternoon was spent in the parlors of the Congregational church, February 17, in the form of an indoor picnic, by the ladies of Mrs. G. F. Elder's Bible class. Each lady of the class invited a guest making about 30 present. The afternoon was spent in playing games, guessing contests and general getting acquainted. About 4:30, each member having brought a covered dish and sandwiches, and with hot coffee a most delicious supper was served. All left feeling a very pleasant afternoon had been spent.

ROWAN FARMER HANGS SELF

James Brannon, 65 years old, residing four miles south of Rowan, committed suicide Tuesday morning as a result of melancholia. His body was found hanging in the barn by his son after dinner. Brannon suffered a mental trouble several years ago and had been showing signs of a disturbed mental condition lately.

CAR STOLEN IN DES MOINES

A Hudson Brougham, belonging to the Nordschow Motor Co. was stolen in Des Moines Tuesday night. The car was driven to Des Moines by C. O. Fitts, Cato G[illegible] and Wm. Parker who attended a Legion meeting there Tuesday. The car was taken about 6:00 o'clock in the evening. It was locked, and the keys were in Mr. Griesy's pocket. Cato secured a taxi and he and the taxi driver motored around the city looking for the car. Late that night they found it, parked on a side street near the river where it is thought the thieves had towed it and left it until a more opportune time for disposal. Nothing about the car had been disturbed and nothing was missing.

two years, he is known and well liked by everyone. He is a man of sterling character and worthy of the girl he has won as his bride.

After a few days of travel they will make their home with the bride's father, Mr. Newgard being employed in Goodell as manager of the Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Co. Goodell friends extend heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a long and happy life.

Belmond friends will join in wishing Harry and his bride the best of good things in life.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Co-operative Observer, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week Febrhary 13 to 19, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
13	30	20	.03	Cloudy
14	30	17	.09	Clear
15	36	4	—	Cloudy
16	38	26	—	Cloudy
17	33	9	T	Cloudy
18	23	-5	—	Clear
19	35	11	—	Cloudy

MUSICIANS INVITE PUBLIC TO BANQUET

The third annual meeting of the Wright County Music Teachers' association will be held at the Congregational church in Clarion Friday afternoon and evening, Feb. 25. The program is as follows:

1:30—Registration.
2:00—Business meeting.
3:00—Round table discussions.
4:00—Boys' program.
5:00—Pupils' concert.
6:45—Banquet, Hotel Moore, 85 cents a plate.
8:15—Evening concert.

The public is invited to attend every session of the meeting. Full information may be secured from H. G. Nordschow, local chairman for Belmond.

BRING BANKER BACK TO TESTIFY

Former Banker Thompson Of Eagle Grove Brought Back By Sheriff Johnson.

LOCAL CASE IS APPEALED

Ernest J. Thompson, serving a term of 20 years at Fort Madison for fradulent banking was in Clarion during the past week as a witness before the grand jury.

Sheriff Fred Johnson arrived here last Thursday morning with Thompson, having brought him from Fort Madison. He returned the prisoner there Monday evening.

The grand jury is still occupied with matters that have been placed in their hands, and it is likely that the session will continue thru the week.

Amos Thompson is seeking to recover what he claims as his interest in property which Ernest Thompson turned over to the banking department in partial settlement for some of his shortages. The case was opened last Thursday, and Amos Thompson was on the stand practically a day before court was adjourned Friday afternoon to allow Judge H. E. Fry to go to his home in Boone in response to news of the illness of his daughter. It is now expected that case will be resumed Wednesday afternoon at which time Judge Fry will be back.

Last Tuesday, Judge Fry entered formal order approving the selection of Judge E. E. McCall as assistant county attorney during the February term.

Lewey LaRue, charged with the theft of poultry at Dows, was sentenced to nine months in jail, the sentence to be suspended after 60 days. His appeal bond was set at $[illegible].

[illegible] court approved sale of lot [illegible] 1, and the west 10 feet of [illegible] block 2, Odenheimer's addi[illegible] Eagle Grove by the Citizens [illegible] Bank to Sophia C. Houch for [illegible].

[illegible] Brown-Camp Hardware com[illegible] was granted a judgment of [illegible] of A. W. Waddell on a mort[illegible] for $6,514.78 and costs.

[illegible] Nagle was allowed compen[illegible] of $100 a year as trustee for [illegible] minors under the workmen's compensation act.

Members of the petit jury were excused until the 28th, and it is doubtful whether there will be service required of them on that date.

Irvin P. Nichols brings action for divorce from Sophie Nichols, alleging that she has grown abusive and that in October, 1925, defendant assaulted the plaintiff with intent to kill or seriously injure him; that "said assault was made in the nighttime with a hammer." He alleged that because of the quarrelsome disposition of the wife his health has become broken and his farm work has suffered. He asks custody of four children, the oldest of whom is 15 years of age. The parties to this suit were married December 27, 1910 at Rowan.

Hector A. Nelson sues D. C. Abel for $168.48 for husking corn, doing chores, etc., during the past winter, alleging defendant is preparing to leave the county without making settlement.

V. F. Mikesell and Cato C. Griesy are in a tangle over an accounting at Belmond. They had a hearing before Justice C. J. Rowen, who gave Mikesell a judgment for $22.95, but he does not think that enough and has appealed to the district court. Mikesell rendered accounting service to the Motor Inn Company, conducted by Griesy, and in turn the Motor Inn charged the accountant with many items of merchandise.—Monitor.

SMALL FIRE TUESDAY

A small fire broke out on the Foster Cafe building about 7:30 Tuesday evening, presumeably caused from sparks. The fire company responded in remarkably quick time and had the blaze, in the cornice near the rear of the building, extinguished with chemical in a few minutes, no water being used. Damage was small.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 8, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------.10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

The big question now in the minds of the Middle West is Will the President sign the McNary-Haugen bill? The issue at last is squarely up to Coolidge; there can be no crawling or passing the buck, and Coolidge is not a crawler, whatever one may be inclined to think of him. He faces all issues squarely. Both the senate and house of representatives have passed the bill. There were votes to spare in both. The question now is what will he do with it? Whatever Coolidge does, whether he vetoes or signs it, he is going to be criticized by certain parts of the country. The agricultural sections of the country demand some consideration, and that he sign it; the industrial East will be against it. The president is in the position where he is damned if he does and damned if he don't. The opinion is divided as to whether he vetoes or signs. This paper believes he will veto it. Above all else, Coolidge is a politician, and a smart one. He will consider which section of the country will deliver the greater support, the East or the Middle West, and with his training and point of view, considering what he has done in the past, we believe he will take the Eastern viewpoint on the question of agricultural relief, and refuse to sign. And it is very doubtful whether the bill could be passed over his veto, altho probably an effort will be made to do it. The policy of the government toward agriculture, and the shaping of political issues in 1928, will be largely determined by what the president does with this bill.

Eagle Grove Eagle: We may be wrong but our sympathy in the Peaches-Browning case goes to Peaches. She may be hitting him pretty hard but apparantly he cannot be bled more than he deserves. A man of 52 years when marrying a girl of 15 years should give her fatherly care and consideration instead of subjecting her to the debaucheries of a beast. The simple fact of such a disparity in their ages makes impossible any sympathy for Browning in his self-invited troubles. If a moiety of the testimony of the poor girl is true she should not only be awarded a good portion of his fortune, but he should be sentenced to the pentitentiary as a sexual moron.

So far as sympathy for Browning is concerned, The Independent is inclined to agree with the Eagle, but as for having sympathy for the girl, we have none. No one who read any portion of the case, but realizes that Peaches married Browning in the first place with the sole idea of getting all the money she could from him, and then ditching him with sufficient alimony or separation money to keep a large pack of wolves from the door. Peaches is no fool, neither is Browning. She simply put one over on him. The whole affair is just a rotten mess of too much money and too little decency. Neither party to the case deserves or is entitled to any sympathy.

Hampton Chronicle: One of the most notable newspaper consolidations of the times took place last week when the Des Moines Tribune and the Des Moines Capital were consolidated. The Capital, the oldest evening daily paper in Des Moines, was purchased by the Des Moines Register and Tribune Company, publishers of the Des Moines Register and the Des Moines Tribune, morning and evening newspapers at the capital city. The new evening consolidated newspapers will be known as the Tribune-Capital, altho the Capital will probably be dropped a little later, as was the name of the Leader when the Register was consolidated with the Leader. One name is enough, anyway.

The Des Moines Register and Tribune Company had built up two great newspapers, and were really giving Des Moines and Iowa splendid newspaper service. Now, owning the only newspapers in Des Moines, the subscribers of those newspapers will receive even better service, if that is possible.

When Des Moines, with 125,000 population, has only one newspaper it is evident that newspaper consolidation is growing more popular than ever, both with the people, and with the owners of newspaper plants who expect returns on their investments.

Muscatine Journal: The agricultural committee of the United States senate has reported out favorably the McNary-Haugen farm bill. Our judgment is that the bill will not only pass both houses, eventually, but that it will be signed by the president and become a law.

Sioux City Jaurnal: The outlook at the moment for farm relief before this congress goes out of existance is believed to be brighter. The element of uncertainty, however, is powerful. The McNary-Haugen bill aready has been defeated and it may suffer the same fate again. There is just one hope the Journal believes of its success and that is based on the fact that a presidential campaign is in the offing.

Local News

Henry Goeman. W. M. Rabey, Erv. Dippel and Carl Dorenkamp attended the auto show at Des Moines, Tuesday of last week.

Cato C. Griesy, C. O. Fitts and Wm Parker went to Des Moines, Tuesday, to attend a state Amerian Legion meeting held at the Hotel Fort Des Moines.

Miss Lora Timmons and Miss Marie Hennessey, teachers in the Dows school, were the guests of Miss Bernetas Wolle over the week end.

Recent word received by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wolle states that their son, Howard, who has been ill with enteric fever at Bombay, India, had developed pneumonia, but that he was holding his own and is expected to recover.

Miss Myrtle Hawley, who teaches at Renwick, spent the week end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Hawley.

About 30 of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Will Lester gave them a surprise party Saturday evening. The Lesters are moving to a farm near Clarion next week.

Martin Thoe, Reynold Kinseth and Roy Jenison drove to Des Moines last week to attend the auto show.

George Baldridge came up from Ames last Wednesday to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baldridge.

Louie Baldridge visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baldridge, last Friday. He was on his way to his home in Waterloo from Lake Mills, where he had been working for a Waterloo firm which had the contract for the installation of the heating plant in the new Lake Mills high school building.

Will Knisely, who has been clerking at the W. W. Goetz store for the past couple years, has resigned his position and will farm this year on the place now occupied by John Kessler.

Wesley Stieniker of Hayfield was calling on friends and relatives in this community last week.

The following clipping from the Sioux City paper concerns a former Belmond boy, Carl Wolle, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wolle, and will be of interest to many local people. Carl is making a fine success of his business in Sioux City, and is rapidly becoming known as one of the leading business men of that place. The clipping is as follows:

"Carl J. Wolle, the originator of the ice cream bungalow in Sioux City has purchased for a reported consideration of $8,500, the exceptional bungalow at 4226 Garretson avenue, and with his family will occupy it as a home. The house is unusually arranged, having seven rooms, including a long living room, with a sunroom at one end and a radio room at the other, a dining room, kitchen, breakfast room, two bedrooms and hall."

THE FAMILY'S FAVORITE AUTHOR
By Howard Hilles

She doesn't write for profit or the praise of fellow men,
But no author of "best-sellers" plies a more persistent pen.
You may find her in the morning, or at noon-time, or at night
Seizing pen and ink and paper and relentlessly she'll write.
Ask her, "Why so literary?" and her secret she unfurls:
"Oh, I had a little time to spare, so I'm writing to the girls."
So with ink and pen and paper these odd moments she beguiles
In banishing by mother love the long dividing miles.
Father feels he's far too busy—bosom friends may seldom write
So Mother plies her patient pen, morning, evening, noon or night,
In "writing to the girls" today—tomorrow she'll employ
Yet more time and ink and paper in writing to her Boy!
Though her literary labors may lack studied grace of style,
They are vitalized by virtues that are vastly more worth while,
"Bread," not "stones" can feed love's yearnings, and the writer's empty arts
Are no sustaining bill-of-fare for hungry human hearts.
For the "vitamins" they starve for, seek among no poet's pearls,
But in Mother's loving letters to her boys and to her girls.
Oh, the mountain peaks of paper and the pools of flowing ink
That bind mothers and their children by love's eternal link;
To them—our best-loved Authors—inspiration never fails,
And with messages and memories they crowd the speeding mails.
And a monument more lasting than the crumbling Pyramids
Are these matchless masterpieces—"Mother's" letters to "the Kids."

THE NEGLECTED AGE

Ignorant mothers are prone to have their babies continually in their arms, up to the run-about stage, and then, like a lower animal they let him shift for himself. Thus the age from arms to school, the "preschool" age, has come to be recognized as the neglected age.

In these years the child is laying the foundation of his health and is growing rapidly. He needs at this stage, the right diet, regular habits, plenty of exercise and sunshine and long hours of sleep.

Besides three glasses of whole milk and other nourishing foods the preschool child needs his regular ration of orange juice. He does not need it strained, but may eat the orange "as is." The orange is valuable for mineral salts, vitamins, as a tooth preservative, and as a mild laxative. Do not give him candy or artificial sweets, but feed him a diet of cereals, fruits and vegetables and let his sweets be such as figs and dates. With these, constipation, that mother of ills, will not have a chance.

Don't put off training the child in the daily use of the tooth brush. Though the child's first teeth are not permanent, they can cause much trouble if allowed to decay. Such teeth can spread poison through the body just as easily as permanent teeth.

School makes more or less of a tug at one's teeth. It is important that the child enters this new life with good habits and one hundred percent fit.

TABLE LINEN

The fancy and color-bordered table linen is for her who can have quantities of it. Pure white is more appropriate for one who has not a large supply, for one does not tire of it so quickly, and it is not so easily recognized as the same piece off which you ate before.

Pure damask linen is again on the market, at reasonable prices, since the war, and it is worth its cost in wear, outlasting imitations many times. A floral or scroll design is a good buy, as it is inconspicuous and may be bought by the yard. If you are buying a pattern to fit your table, you may indulge in a satin band on all four sides. Most housewives love the satin stripe.

The table cover should drop over the table edge about twelve or more inches. A silence cloth, under the table cloth, gives it a graceful appearance and saves noise when dining and prevents the table top from being marred by warm dishes.

Good table linen deserves to be hemmed by hand. This dainty work is usually the delight of the housewife, as spare time labor. The hem in the table cloth is a half inch deep, while the napkins have the narrowest hem possible. The plain hem is richer than the hemstitched one for real linen, and it is put in by overcasting along the folded hem. Scallops, lace edging and hemstitching are only for novelty table linens.

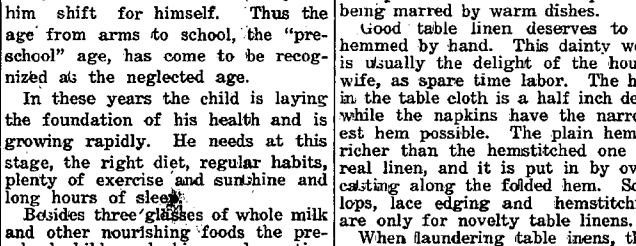
When laundering table linens, they shoud not be starched. Good linen has a stiffness of its own and should be well dampened for ironing. Do not press the folds always in the same creases, or the linen will crack along those lines. Pieces rarely used should be wrapped in blue tissue paper to prevent their yellowing. If table linen is to be mended, do it before it is laundered and it will scarcely be noticed afterward.

BRAN BREAD

For two delicious loaves of bran bread, use the following recipe: Mix two tablespoons of shortening, a half cup of brown sugar, two eggs, a fourth cup of molasses, and a quart of sour milk or buttermilk. Mix separately the following dry ingredients: one and one-fourth quarts each of whole wheat flour and of bran, three teaspoons of soda, one teaspoon of baking powder, one teaspoon salt, and one cup of floured raisins. Blend the wet and dry ingredients and allow the mixture to rise quickly, then bake in a moderate oven for an hour and a half.

COOKING MEAT

To roast meat usually requires about fifteen or twenty minutes per pound. Pork takes longer than other meats. To bake a whole fish usually consumes an hour. Fried and boiled meats may be cooked in ten minutes. Tough meats may be made tender by first searing them to keep the juices in and then simmering in a little liquid, tightly covered, for a long time.



METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, Feb. 27:

Sunday school at 10 a. m. A glad hand extended in our school. Come we may be able to help you.

Divine worship and sermon at 11. Subject of sermon: Individual Impacts. John 7-37.

Epworth League at 6:30 p. m. Two splendid leaders. Come, and enjoy this fellowship with us.

Evening worship and gospel message at 7:30. Subject of sermon: Damaged Goods. Rev. 2:4. Special singing by the choir.

Local conference and reception for our new district superintendent Monday night, Feb. 28. Every member of the church costituency is most heartily invited. Please bring at least one covered dish. Will eat supper together as one large family, which we really are, at 6 o'clock or shortly thereafter. Please do not forget, this is important.

Pastor's Penticostal retreat at Algona Feb. 23-24. Please do not forget to ask for your "Good Will Bag."

We preach redemption thru the blood of Jesus Christ.

Everybody most cordially invited to all of our services.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10 a. m. Bible study hour. The subject is "Making the Community Christian." Who is to do this, and how can it be done? All of us want it to be so, then let us all live and act in such a manner that we shall help to make it so. Are my life and actions in harmony with the teachings of the Christ?

Morning worship and sermon at 11. The thought of the sermon will be, "Nicodemus coming to Christ by Night." What did he come for, and why did he come by night? Was it cowardly on the part of this great student to come by night? Think about it.

The Ladies Missionary society will be held at the home of Mrs. Hildebrand, Sr. Thursday afternoon of this week. Mrs. C. P. Luick will be the leader of the lesson for the day, and Mrs. Hildebrand, Mrs. Bullard, Mrs. Hinman and Mrs. Stark are the entertaining committee. A cordial invitation is extended to all of the ladies to attend his meeting.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Magna Charta

A MAN lay writhing among the rushes and straw that covered the floor of his palace on the night of June 15, 1215. He was foaming at the mouth, biting the rushes to fragments and filling the spacious apartment with blasphemy and lamentations.

The man was John, king of England. He had that day been forced to sign a document that cut down his own tyrannical powers and granted certain just rights to his people. How unwillingly he had affixed his signature was proven by the babyish rage he gave way to as soon as he reached his own abode.

Nearly a century and a half had passed since the Norman conquest. Norman and Saxon were becoming blended into one consolidated English race. It needed but a mutual grievance to make that blend complete. And the grievance was at hand.

Richard, the "Lion Heart," descendant of the Conqueror and John's predecessor as king of England, had passed most of his life in France. His courage and rough integrity had made him a popular monarch, although he knew no word of English. He had done brilliant, if ineffective, work in the Crusades, and, on his way home, had been captured and thrown into an Austrian prison. John, his brother, had taken advantage of his absence to make an effort to seize the English crown. Richard was the typical knight errant, the highest type of chivalry. John, on the contrary, was a coward and an all-around scoundrel. The nation raised money for Richard's ransom and he returned home, only to be killed in battle soon after.

Richard died without leaving any children. The natural heir to the throne was thus Prince Arthur, son of Richard's next younger brother, Geoffrey. But John threw Arthur into prison, had his eyes put out with hot irons and at last murdered him, thus securing the crown for himself. Having done so, he launched out on a career of tyranny, oppression and misrule worthy of Nero. But the people of England were not so submissive as had been those of Rome. They grumbled at John's exactions and recalled with longing the fair and semi-socialistic laws that had governed England in the good old Saxon days of Edward the Confessor. For by this time the many grave faults of the Saxon rule were forgotten and only its virtues remembered.

Yet in their discontent Norman baron and Saxon farmer were at one, the king and his tyranny being their common foe. The barons, representing alike the nobility and the people, drew up a modified sort of Declaration of Independence. This document they called the Magna Charta (grand charter), and they presented it to King John for signature.

This charter was the keystone of Anglo-Saxon liberty, and was in a way the basis of many of our most important laws. Among other things it put an end to unjust punishment and provided that every prisoner receive a fair trial by a jury of his peers. It also authorized resistance to arbitrary royal power and put law and the will of the people ahead of the mere dictates of the king.

Naturally John refused point-blank to sign a document that would cut his power in half and give justice to the plain people, whom he despised. But the barons were prepared for such a refusal. They rose in arms and intimidated the cowardly sovereign into granting the people their rights, and demanded that he sign the document.

On June 15, 1215, John and the barons met at Runnymede, a little island in the middle of a river. There the Magna Charta was read aloud to the king, while a circle of stern men, armed to the teeth and in no mood to listen to refusal, stood threateningly about him. The scared monarch signed the charter under this force and then rushed home in a paroxysm of impotent fury.

Recovering his senses, he cast about, like a cornered rat, for some way to undo what he had done. A brilliant idea came to him. Some time before, being frightened by a papal threat, he had become formally a liege servant to the pope. He now sent to the Vatican, explaining his ill-luck and begging for aid. In reply the Pope at once issued a decree declaring the Magna Charta null and void, and excommunicating all who should seek to uphold it.

But the barons and people of England were too thoroughly aroused to be affected by even this command. They stood by the Magna Charta and prepared to defend their rights to the death. With a vast army of foreign mercenaries, John ravaged his own kingdom in a mad effort to secure submission to his tyranny. In retaliation the barons declared he was no longer their king, and invited Louis, king of France, to come and reign over them.

The deadlock was broken by John's death. His infant son, Henry III, succeeded to the throne, and a new era of honest law slowly dawned, based on the charter's principles.

To the courage and manhood of her barons and plain people England owes her rise to greatness. But for them she might for centuries longer have wallowed in the slough of despotism and oppression.

FREE AIR

There's no getting around it, this town has too good a fire company. We'll never get very many new buildings as long as this company is hanging around.

* * * *

If we were running a lumber yard we'd try to get the fire company dissolved or disbanded or something, so there would be some new buildings erected once in a while.

* * * *

And if we had a hardware store, we would immediately complain to the city council about the company stealing ladders.

* * * *

It's a pretty pass when the company has to go out and steal a citizen's ladder. Something ought to be done about it. If the city can't buy 'em ladders, then either take up a collection for some or disband the department.

* * * *

We know there are fellows in that company who would do most anything, but we never thought any of 'em were mean enough to take a ladder from an innocent bystander.

* * * *

And if we were a fireman, and a fire broke out, and we dropped everything and ran like the dickens to get there as soon as we could, and we tried to put out the fire with the least possible damage, and then a lot of well-wishers who didn't belong to the company and didn't know any more about fighting fire than Rich Thompson knows about who stole his trailer butted in and smeared up the surroundings with mud and advice and themselves, why we'd either tell 'em to come into the department and learn or take a bath before Saturday night.

* * * *

Rich Thompson, you know, lost a trailer, an auto trailer, and Rich is on the trail of the traler. If he ever finds the fellow who led it away, business ought to be good for some doctor.

* * * *

We don't want to say anything, but there's something funny about Corri Fitts, Cato Griesy and Bill Parker losing that car in Des Mones. And something still more queer in finding it again.

* * * *

The boys will have a good story all framed up about it when they get home, you can bet on that, but there is quite a bit of time between Tuesday night and Thursday, too, and a lot of things can happen to a fellow or three fellows, in that space of time.

* * * *

After listening to Henry Field talk over the radio, we can't help but think that Henry is full of prunes.

* * * *

Between the question of whether Coolidge will veto the farm bill and whether curfew shall ring or not, we are all worked up.

* * * *

It's a great life if you don't weaken, but sometimes we sorta feel ourself slippin'.

SECRETARY'S ANNUAL FINANCIAL STATEMENT, 1927.

School District of Belmond, Wright County, Iowa, for Year Ending Feb. 1, 1927.

GENERAL FUND

On hand Feb. 1, 1926 ----	$ 7,392.53
Received from District Tax	25,185.26
Received from semi-annual apportionment --------	2,162.69
Received from state ----	691.16
Received from tuition ----	8,450.50
Received by transfer of school funds ----------	526.00
Received from sale of text books and supplies ----	59.65
Received from other sources ----------	27.65
Total ----------	$44,495.44
Paid teachers since last report ---------- Males	$ 5,771.65
Females	23,773.53
Paid Secretary ----------	125.00
Paid for library books --	280.34
Paid for fuel, rent, repairs, insurance, janitor, general supplies ----------	6,165.64
Paid for records and apparatus ----------	990.62
Paid for other purposes --	541.26
Amount on hand --------	6,887.40
Total ----------	$44,495.44

SCHOOL HOUSE FUND

On hand Feb. 1, 1926 ----	$ 1,690.92
Received from district tax	6,306.56
Total ----------	$ 7,997.48
Paid for school bonds ----	$ 3,000.00
Paid interest on school bonds ----------	2,498.15
Amount on hand --------	2,499.33
Total ----------	$ 7,997.48

INDEBTEDNESS FEB. 1, 1927

Total outstanding bonds...	$58,000.00
Total interest-bearing warrants outstanding -----	None

It is estimated that the following amounts will be necessary to meet the requirements of the District for the next year:

General Fund ----------	$36,000.00
School House Fund ------	$ 6,000.00

I hereby certify that the foregoing report is correct.

CATO C. GRIESY,
Secretary.

Dated Feb. 18, 1927.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

FARM BUREAU FIGHTS ROAD BOND ISSUE

The Iowa Farm Bureau is preparing to throw its entire support back of the bill introduced in the legislature last week, requiring 65 per cent vote to make a bond issue legal, as a further bulwark against the possibility of a state paved roads bond issue.

The Farm Bureau's legislative committee issued their weekly report on the legislative situation yesterday, and in it they urged the Farm Bureau thruout the state to support the bill.

The report also favors passage of the bill to collect a road tax, in addition to regular auto tax, from trucks and busses which are not operating on regular schedules. The committee asserts that this class of vehicles has been escaping over a million and a half dollar in taxes each year.

It also favors the bill for taxing all tobacco sales, and possibly the taxing of face powders and cosmetics—the proceeds to go for the relief of school taxes.

The committee urges farm bureau members thruout the state to gather their energies to support the state income tax measure when it comes up for vote in both house and senate. Strong opposition is expected, but it is believed that the bill can be passed if the farmers make their demands known.

On the bank guarantee law action is at a standstill until the legislative investigating committee make their report. Then farm leaders are preparing to push this measure aggressively.

FERTILIZERS PAY ON PEAT BEDS

Just what fertilizers and fertilizing methods should be used on peat and muck soils in Iowa, which many farmers are using for potato and vegetable growing, is a question which has confronted the owner of such land. Not until recently has there been any definite investigational work done in this line.

Recent work shows, according to C. L. Fitch, in charge of vegetable extension work, Iowa State College, that such soils need both phosphorus and potash added in commercial fertilizer in order to secure the best yields of potatoes and vegetable crops. In the Hollandale district in Minnesota, an area comprising 17,000 acres, farmers started their fertilizing practice with a 600 pound application of 0-9-27 fertilizer. As the soils grew blacker and heavier from continued cropping, the phosphorus applied was reduced while the potash application was increased.

On applications following shortly afterward, a 0-10-20 fertilizer is used, Mr. Fitch said, and still later the ration is cut to 0-12-12, which means cheaper fertilizer costs with equally as good results. In 1926 the Iowa State College Horticultural Section conducted tests at Burt and Humboldt with Cobbler potatoes in which a 500 pound application of 0-12-24 fertilizer was used. The tests showed gains of 39 and 42 bushels per acre, respectively, on the two test plots.

READ THE ADS

ALFALFA CONTEST TO BE HELD

County agents of twelve states—Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, New York and Pennsylvania— will be given an opportunity to compete for free trips to the 1927 International Livestock Exposition, Chicago, in a record contest on alfalfa promotion, according to an announcement just made at Iowa State College, Ames.

A state champion will be chosen on the basis of records and activity, who will be sent to the International as a reward for his effort, by a group of large alfalfa seed producers. In addition a champion of champions will be chosen from the twelve state winners, who will be given a two-weeks' trip thru the alfalfa seed producing regions of Kansas, Idaho, Utah, Montana and South Dakota.

Scoring for the contest is based on 20 percent for the total number of farmers individually counselled on the use of alfalfa between January 1, 1927, and June 15, 1927 (the closing date of the contest); 20 percent on the number of meetings held between the two dates mentioned above at which alfalfa problems were discussed; 20 percent on the number of people present at these meetings; 20 percent on the increase of alfalfa acrage per farm in the county, and 20 percent on the number of farmers who sowed alfalfa for the first time on their farms during this period.

SHEETS

It is an economy stunt to make the hems the same width in both ends of your sheets. With such hems, either end may be used for the top and this distributes the wear and makes them last longer. Be sure to make the sheets long enough, for there is nothing more annoying than to have sheets so short that they will not snuggle up around the shoulders and at the same time tuck under the mattress and keep your toes covered. From two and a quarter to two and a half yards is the usual length of the bed. It never pays to buy a cheap quality of sheeting. A firm, substantial sheeting is more economical in the end.

Quality Printing Pleases. That is the Independent kind. Get yours here.

FEED GRINDING!

We are equipped to do your feed grinding and give you satisfaction. Give us a trial—bring your next order in to us.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS
FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER COMING! Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - - IOWA

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, February 24, 1927. No. 46

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

An English doctor claims you can get rid of face and neck wrinkles by standing on your head. If any of you Belmond folks try it, let us know how it works. The same treatment ought to be good for broken arches.

—

She — "Statistics show that women are better drivers than men."
He — "Well, they ought to be. They haven't anybody in the back seat giving orders."

—

Taxes are high. We know they are. But look what we get for them. Personally we wouldn't want to live in a country that had no taxes.

—

T. L. Finn says: "Tell people they can't have something, and watch them get it."

—

Here's one that actually happened the other day: A book agent stopped at a certain house (we're not saying whose) and tried to sell a set of history books. The lady was much interested. Fact is, she was tempted to buy. Then she said, "But we have some history books," and she brought one from the bookcase. It was the same set the agent was trying to sell!

—

He who buys what he does not need, may later need what he cannot buy; but he who buys what he actually needs, is an economical sort of a guy.

—

The other day a very pretty lady came in to collect a bill. It amounted to $13.01. "What's the one cent for?" we asked, and she replied, "That's our profit." All we can say to that is that her firm is working on a wider margin of profit than some other businesses we know about.

—

Kentucky is the state, you know, of beautiful women, fast horses and good coal. It does everything you'd naturally expect an extra good coal to do, and then does just a little more. Phone your order to 22. We deliver promptly.

THE CREAMERY IS DOING NICELY

Thanks to you, Mr. Farmer, the Creamery is doing nicely. It is your creamery, and you should be interested in its growth and welfare. It is your business—farmer owned, farmer managed, farmer controlled—and the more interest you take in your own business, the better that business will be.

Give your business—your creamery—the same good support in 1927 that you gave it in 1926, and your business will continue to prosper. Just remember that in patronizing the creamery, you are patronizing yourself—and getting more money by doing it.

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.

BELMOND, IOWA

PUBLIC SALE!

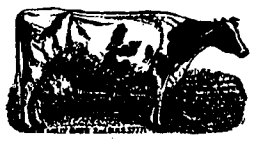
HAVING DECIDED TO QUIT FARMING, I WILL SELL AT AUCTION AT THE FARM 6 MILES WEST OF BELMOND; 7 3-4 MILES NORTH OF CLARION; 1 1-4 MILES SOUTH OF ST. OLAF CHURCH, ON GRAVELED ROAD.

Saturday, Feb. 26

COMMENCING RIGHT AFTER NOON

7 - Head Horses and Mules - 7

1 BLACK MARE, 9 yrs. old, wt. 1200.
1 BAY GELDING, 4 yrs. old, wt. 1100.
1 GRAY TEAM, 12 and 14 yrs. old, wt. 2800.
1 GRAY GELDING. 12 yrs. old, wt. 1200.
1 BAY GELDING, 13 yrs. old, wt. 1150.
1 MULE COLT



3 - Head of Cattle - 3

1 BULL CALF.
2 MILK COWS, good ones.

10 - Head Duroc Jersey Brood Sows - 10

CHOLERA IMMUNE

100 Head of Good Hens

1,000 bushel Corn In Crib

25 bushel Yellow Seed Corn

Picked three weeks before frost.

Some Hay In Barn

Farm Machinery, Etc.

1 hay rack.
1 buck rake.
1 Gale 2-row corn plow.
2 single row corn plows.
1 14-inch Emerson gang plow.
1 Hayes corn planter with 140 rods of wire.
1 McCormick binder, 6-ft. cut, in good working order.
1 5-section drag.
1 9-ft. round disc.
1 Sandwich No. 1 feed mill.
1 steel truck with triple box.
1 5-H. P. gas engine, on trucks, in good condition.
1 McCormick mower, 5-ft. cut, nearly new.
1 International spreader, No. 1, nearly new.
1 buzz saw.
1 pump jack.
3 brooder chicken coops.
1 100-gal. hog fountain.
2 sets 1 1-2-inch work harness.
Several horse collars, different sizes.
1 DeLaval separator, No. 15, in good condition.

HOUSEHOLD GOODS

1 dresser.
1 bed and spring.
1 kitchen cabinet.
1 dining room table.
1 organ, in good condition.
Many other articles.

LUNCH WILL BE SERVED AT NOON AT A NOMINAL COST BY THE SOUTH ST. OLAF LADIES' AID

TERMS—Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

OLE A. SHARP, Owner

A. B. ERICKSON, Auctioneer. JOE RICHARDSON, Clerk

MESERVEY SECTION

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

This evening there will be an illustrated temperance lecture given in the Evangelical church. All are invited.

Sunday school at 9:45 a. m.

The monthly missionary offering will be received in the classes, followed by a missionary talk.

Morning worship at 10:45.

E. L. C. E. at 7 p. m. Mrs. C J. Wendel, leader

Evening service at 7:30.

German prayer meeting at Aug. Guth home Wednesday evening.

English prayer meeting Thursday evening followed by the study of the Sunday school lesson for next Sunday.

Friday, March 4, will be the world wide interdenominational day of prayer. Our U. M. S. meets that afternoon (instead of Thursday) at the A. E. Muller home for the regular monthly business meeting and study of missions. Let us make this a great day in the interest of the missionary cause.

Laurence Sohl, pastor.

COUNTY CONTEST

A goodly number from here attended the county declamatory contest, held in the high school auditorium at Mason City last Thursday evening. Plymouth had the distinction of winning first place in all three classes and those who were present report the selections were all well rendered.

Music was furnished by the Thornton and Meservey high school community orchestras and several other musical selections and vocal numbers were also much enjoyed.

FAREWELL PARTY

Last Friday evening about twenty friends and neighbors met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gratus Cooper to give them a farewell surprise party. The plan worked out well and the surprise was complete. The evening was spent in a social way, the principle diversion being cards. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper will make their future home near Kanawha.

ANNIVERSARY SURPRISE

Last Wednesday evening, a number of relatives and friends pleasantly surprised Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Muller by calling at their home to remind them of their 22nd wedding anniversary. The occasion was also the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Muller. The evening was spent in a social way. Light refreshments were served.

CELEBRATE SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Butz were reminded of their 25th wedding anniversary when upon their return from church Sunday, they found relatives and friends awaiting them as a surprise for the occasion. A dinner had been planned by Miss Irena, and was thoroly enjoyed by those present. Needless to say the day was spent in a pleasant way and the surprise successfully carried out.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Wm. Gealow went to Colfax the fore part of last week and is taking treatments for rheumatism.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Frey were Mason City business callers Monday.

Mrs. H. Meinderts, who has been making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Verner Nelson of Klemme, had the misfortune of breaking her left leg just above the knee while assisting with the housework, last Saturday morning. Mrs. H. Wilkins accompanied her to a Mason City hospital where she will be cared for until she is able to return home.

Announcements have been received here of the marriage of Miss Anna Obrecht, eldest daughter of Mrs. Wm. Obrecht, and Jessie Althen, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Althen, both families residing east of town. The newlyweds will move on the Olthen farm which they will operate, this spring. They have a host of friends who wish them happiness and prosperity.

H. Fischer and family and Mrs. Clare Smith motored to Waterloo last Sunday to spend the day with Miss Agnes. Mrs. H. Raecker accompanied them to Waverly where she visited relatives. Miss Alice Schoenweiss of Waverly returned with them and is spending a week at the Fischer home.

Mrs. Clare Smith returned to her home in Naperville, Ill., Sunday, from Waterloo. She visited her brother Herman at Ames Wednesday.

Rev. L. Sohl attended a Sunday school convention in Des Moines several days the fore part of this week.

Mrs Verner Nelson and baby from near Klemme visited Mrs H. Wilkins the fore part of this week. They motored to Mason City, Tuesday, to visit their mother, Mrs. H. Meinderts at the Mercy hospital, whom they reported getting along as well as can be expected.

Miss Mabel Paul is spending a few days at her parental home assisting with extra work.

The Misses Olive Sherrard and Hallie Ward accompanied Lydia Pals and Phyllis Agler to Mason City. Saturday, where the two latter represented the 7th and 8th grades of our school at the county spelling contest.

Mrs. D. Wenzel visited at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walt Braga, several days last week, returning to Thornton, where she has been making her home recently with her son, Dan and family.

M, A. Smith continues to be quite ill and is again confined to his bed.

A deal was made last Tuesday whereby the Reformed parsonage is sold to Louis Foss and the Harm Groen residence was sold to the Reformed congregation to be used as a parsonage as soon as the Groen family can give possession.

The Misses Hallie Ward, Arloene Janssen and Bonita Muller motored to Mason City, Tuesday evening, accompanied by Oliver Sprau and Donald Muller, to see Ben-Hur.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Wendel were pleasantly surprised Friday when C. J. Wendel motored to Sheffield and brought Mr. and Mrs. John Utesch and small daughter home with him. They were returning from a winter in California. They returned Sunday to their home in Chicago.

Several news items escaped our notice last week. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wendel spent Sunday with her relatives in Waseca, and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Gruis entertained Crist Boike and wife, of Cedar Falls on the same Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wendel, of Belmond spent Friday here with relatives.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House tonight, Thursday, Feb. 24.

The Annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, tonight, Feb. 24.

BACKACHE OR HEALTH

Backache is but a symptom yet it makes life miserable for thousands of people. It is more prevalent in women and is often an indication of other and far more serious disease. Relief can be had thru Chiropractic adjustments and the disease responsible for backache can be permanently corrected.

Start getting well today.

DR. R. E. PORTER
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

Fred Sprau and son Frank motored to Ames last Wednesday, spending a few hours with Oliver.

Miss Goldie Quandt was quite ill several days last week.

Harry T. Smith was very ill the latter part of last week and the doctor prescribed rest and quiet.

M. A. Smith was confined to his bed several days last week, being afflicted with the flu.

Mrs. Robert Enabnit, of Clear Lake spent Friday at the home of her mother, Mrs. C. Mayers, who had been quite ill again.

H. K. Pals was a Mason City business caller on Wednesday of last week.

WANT ADS PAY

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

THE MAN WHO DECIDED TO CATCH A GRIZZLY BEAR single-handed is no more foolish than the man who buys an off-brand Radio.

CROSLEY RADIO will not fight back, but give faithful service.

Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries On hand

H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

The Helping Hand Society met in the church basement last Thursday afternoon for their regular meeting. Mesdames Ed Foss and August Guth served refreshments.

Oliver Sprau arrived home from Ames Thursday evening. and will remain home this season.

Quality Printing Pleases. That is the Independent kind. Get yours here

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

Near Collins, Story county, a carload each of old Mexico long horned cattle and wild Brahma steers was received by Amos Carr of Wyatt Carr & Son and are now on their ranch. These will be used in a rodeo which is being arranged by the Carrs for next July. Wyatt Carr, the senior member of the firm, has long specialized in mules, while the junior member of the firm has been gradually working into the amusement end of the stock business. A rodeo has been an annual event at the Carr ranch for several years and they are now planning on making it a much larger affair and are gathering the stock for this year's event.

FLEX-O-GLASS

PAT. PENDING — TRADE MARK REG.

Gives CHICKS actual sunshine Indoors

1/8 Cost of GLASS and Easier Installed

Grows PLANTS Quicker and Stronger

© 1926 F.M.Co.

Admits ULTRA-VIOLET Rays

Makes Chicks Grow Faster—Lay Earlier

Build a FLEX-O-GLASS scratch shed or brooderhouse front easily. In it every chick will stay healthy, scratch and exercise, be full of pep, free from rickets, and they will grow like weeds; because FLEX-O-GLASS admits energizing, health-producing Ultra-Violet sun's rays (glass stops them). Science has proved that FLEX-O-GLASS also brings amazing winter egg yield and fertile hatching eggs. Use 15 yards for 300 chicks, or for 100 hens.

Many Other Uses

For replacing or repairing glass windows, enclosing porches and storm doors. Brightens any room. Also used on curtain rollers to scatter sunshine to every corner of the room.

Better Than Glass For Hot Beds

Ultra-Violet and Infra-Red (Heat) Rays which pass thru FLEX-O-GLASS makes plants grow much faster than when under glass. Have stronger plants for transplanting. Have earlier plants to sell. Fifteen yards of FLEX-O-GLASS cover a hot bed of 135 sq. ft. Frames are lighter, much cheaper, better, and easier to handle than glass frames.

What FLEX-O-GLASS Is

This newly discovered product is made on a strong cloth base, especially processed to make it weather-proof and beneficial for health. Just cut with shears and nail on. Lies flat. Stays bright. Lasts many seasons. Exceptionally durable. Can be patched.

Tested and Recommended by Leading Authorities—For Your Protection

Get Genuine FLEX-O-GLASS from

C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

Your Success and Ours!

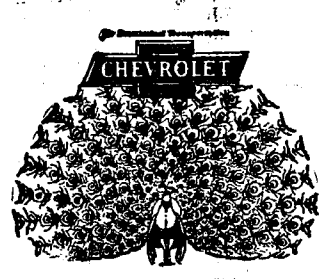
Has it occurred to you that the success of a bank must necessarily be built not only upon the satisfaction but on the success of its customers?

And have you considered that your bank is therefore genuinely interested in co-operating with you in every practical way, to help promote your individual success?

When you open an account with us, therefore, you can be assured that we shall not only safeguard your interests as far as your deposits are concerned, but look forward to and welcome opportunities to be of further service to you.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa



The Most

Beautiful Chevrolet

in Chevrolet History!

-a host of improvements

Not only does this most beautiful of all low-priced cars offer new paneled and beaded Fisher bodies but also many new fine car features and mechanical refinements such as:

Full-Crown Fenders
New full crown one-piece fenders add a note of smartness to the new and beautiful bodies.

Bullet-type Lamps
Modish new bullet-type head and cowl lamps add a pleasing touch of beauty and style.

AC Oil Filter
A new AC oil filter removes all dirt from the oil supply—assuring greater oil mileage and a minimum of motor wear.

AC Air Cleaner
A new AC air cleaner safeguards motor parts from excessive wear by removing all dust and grit from air passing through the carburetor.

New Tire Carrier
A new tire carrier of improved design is mounted on frame—entirely free from body.

New Door Handles
New remote control door handles—located in center of doors—provide a beauty and convenience feature new to the low-price field.

amazingly reduced prices!

The Touring or Roadster	$525
The Coach	$595
The Coupe	$625
The Sedan	$695
The Sport Cabriolet	$715
The Landau	$745
1-Ton Truck (Chassis Only)	$495
½-Ton Truck (Chassis Only)	$395

Balloon Tires now standard on all models. All prices f.o.b. Flint, Mich.

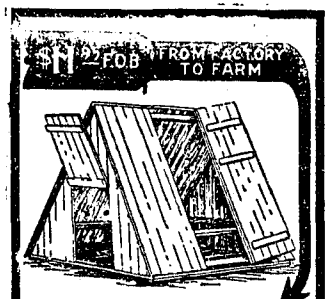
Come in and see these strikingly beautiful models!

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

$11.95 F.O.B. FROM FACTORY TO FARM



SAVE 1/3 by buying Individual HAWKEYE HOG HOUSES. Eliminates loss at farrowing time and the spreading of contagious diseases.

Each house shipped completely cut in two compact bundles. Your material consisting of Ridge Roll, Hinges, Nails, Screws, Cleats, Ends, Roof Boards, Frame Material, Sills and Farrowing Rails, all come cut to exact length and bevel, so that

All You Need for Assembling Is a Hammer.

Tongue and grooved flooring furnished for roof, ends and doors. Rigid No. 1 dimension frame work with Farrowing Rail. Ventilated. Any school boy can follow our directions for assembling with ease and accuracy, following our furnished plans. We furnish only high grade material.

Communicate with

HAWKEYE MFG. CO.
$11.95 Box A, BELMOND, IOWA Factory.

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

Mrs. Leo Ahrenkiel went to Ledyard, Wednesday, to spend a few days with her sister, Mrs. Will Wenzel, returning Saturday.

Messrs. T. F. Matson, Amos Hanson, F. C. Scott and E. J. Schneider attended Masonic lodge at Belmond, Tuesday evening.

Roy Bachman moved his small tenant house to a vacant lot east of the Estelle residence and will improve it with a basement.

Mrs. Harve Christenson and two daughters Iris and Phyllis went to Thompson Tuesday to visit the former's father, Mr. Wigfield.

Ray Christie has been very ill the past week with a heart attack, but is now improving. He is being cared for at the home of his mother.

George Mikesh suffered a severe attack of appendicitis the fore part of last week, but is able to be around again.

Fifteen children of Avery and Twin Lake townships wrote the eight grade examinations last week. The following were the students: Robert Schneider, Carrol Cordes, Gertrude Quigley, Vera Nolte, Karna Peterson, Arlene Severson, Dale Bode, Sylvester Lowenberg, Gayland Burhow, Donald Lieuwen, Virgie Meinders, Ruby Halfpop, Harwood Avery. Forrest Langlytz, Winifred Fuller.

The ready-made apron and food sale Saturday realized about $44.

Morris Ahrenkiel, Ruth Quigley, Harriett and Vernon Scott returned to school, Monday, having been absent some time on account of the measles.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chelsvig motored to northern Minnesota Saturday to visit over Sunday with the Chester Chelsvig family.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Mayhew, who have been working at the Gus Okrueg home the past three years, moved Tuesday to the Sandry farm which they have rented. Tuesday evening neighbors and friends gathered at the Archie Landon home and gave a party and miscellaneous shower for Mr. and Mrs. Mayhew.

Mrs. Owen Conwell and two sons are visiting relatives at Grand Junction this week.

Several from here went to Britt, Wednesday night, to attend the county declamatory contest. Miss Daphne Houghton was one of the contestants and received second place in the dramatic division. Kanawha won first in oratorical and dramatic and Garner first in humorous. March 1, Goodell, represented by Iris Sherwood, oratorical, Eunice Wesenberg, dramatic, and Cholm Houghton, humorous. will compete at Kanawha with the schools of Belmond. Klemme and Kanawha.

A large crowd of friends pleasantly surprised the George Luick family Thursday eve, with a farewell party for them. The Luicks are moving March 1 to a farm near Thornton.

Last Wednesday a deal was completed whereby the merchandise belonging to the late Julius Ahrenkiel was sold to Mrs. Agnes Ahrenkiel possession being given at once.

A large crowd enjoyed the program by the grades at the assembly Friday eve.

Mrs. Reynold Kinseth and Junior of Belmond came Tuesday to spend a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Avery. Wednesday, Mrs. Kinseth was taken very ill with flu and erysiplas, but is getting along nicely at this time.

Miss Alva Matson returned Thursday from a week's visit with friends in Des Moines and Iowa Falls.

Dale and Jesse Chase of Garner spent the week end at the home of their brother, Clifford.

George Ness motored to Eagle Grove, Friday night to meet his daughter. Ruth, and Evelyn Chelsvig who came home from Des Moines to visit for a few days.

The D. Bishop family of Belmond spent Sunday at the Lloyd Bishop home.

Miss Evelyn Thomas of Meservey, grammar room teacher here the past two years has aciepted a position as critic teacher in the training school at Cedar Falls, and plans to leave about Marrh 1. Miss Louise Matson has been elected to fill the vacancy.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ahrenkiel, who have been farming, will move to town March 1. George will clerk in his daughter-in-law's, Mrs. Agnes Ahrenkiel's, store.

Mrs. Betsy Mayne of Klemme visited a few days last week at the Ray Markel home.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Quigley motored to Ft. Dodge. Friday, to visit his cousin, Mrs. John Nelson.

Mrs. Pete Lackore is suffering this week from an attack of appendicitis.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hemenway went to Clarion, Sunday, to spend the day with her parents. The latter remained for a longer visit.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Beier received word from Manson that their son Walter is ill with scarlet fever.

Mrs. T. Ruka and daughter Clara Kirkwood spent Sunday at Mason City with the former's sister.

The telephone office which has been occupying the George Ahrenkiel residence will be moved this week to the D. M. Conlan house west of the bank. Mrs. Rose Houghton will continue as operator.

The Hio Harberts family are enjoying a visit from Mr. Harbert's sister from Belmond.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House tonight, Thursday, Feb. 24.

The Annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, tonight, Feb. 24.

Word has been received from Miss Marie Given, local primary teacher, who is at Rochester, due to the illness of her mother, that her mother has submitted to a serious operation and if she gets along alright will need to have another one in about two weeks. Miss Given plans to be with her until she is some better.

Mr. and Mrs. Beier entertained Mrs. Lemke and the Eric Clark family of Garner at their home Sunday, the occasion being Eric's birthday.

Mrs. L. W. Wesenberg and Mrs. Clara Butts, who have been visiting relatives in California since the fore part of January, left there Saturday and will visit Mrs. August Ahrenkiel at Denver, Colo., and relatives at Kansas City, and plan to be home in about two weeks.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

Mr. and Mrs. U. B. Kepford from Waterloo spent part of last week at the parental Mrs. J. D. Brooks home.

Mrs. Frank Kercheval had the misfortune to fall near their doorstep, Friday evening, and badly wrench the muscles in her right leg. She has been a great sufferer, but is improving at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Williams have moved to their home west of Rowan.

Supt. and Mrs. Ralph Adamson and family motored to Waukee, Saturday to spend the week at the home of her parents.

Rev. Bounds motored to Clarion. Monday afternoon, accompanied by the winners in the declamatory contest where they took training for the sub district contest to be held at Clarion Wednesday of this week.

Mesdames Ed. Eilers and Charles Churchill of Clarion spent part of last week at the Harry Nihoof home, the former being a sister.

Harry Cain delivered some cattle to parties at Humboldt and Aurelia, for E. R. Ballou last week. He also hauled hogs from Spirit Lake for Lon Garwin, Mr. Garwin accompanying him.

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Mosier have taken rooms in the Lulu Emerson residence and Mrs. Mosier will assist at the hotel.

Mrs. Walter Simpkins returned to her home at Sioux Falls, S. D., Monday. She was called here by the illness of her mother. Mrs. Ben Hackley, who is much improved at this writing.

Mrs. Heathershaw of Clarion spent part of last week at the home of her daughter. Mrs Harvey Lineweaver. The Lineweaver family leave next week for their new home near Goodell.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bailey move this week to their farm vacated by the Dwight Hinkley family. The Hinkley family are moving to the Mrs. Peddle house in north Rowan.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hackley attended the auto show in Des Moines one day last week.

E. R. Ballou accompanied Harry Cain to Fort Dodge, Friday where they delivered six head of cattle from the E. R. Ballou herd.

Mrs. Ben Hackley had an attack of appendicitis last week. Her daughter Nellie came from Sioux Falls. S. D. to care for her.

Miss Frances Farran has accepted a position as sixth grade teacher for the spring term in the school at Jessup where she has been doing practice teaching.

Those attending the W. C. T. U. institute at Clarion, Wednesday last were Rev. and Mrs. Bounds, Mesdames Hannah Whitten, E. R. Ballou, E. S. Tway, J. S. Farran, Earl Setters, James Burt, Alfred Boyington, and R. H. Keith.

Mrs. Joe Thomas spent a portion of last week at the M. E. Myers home near Dows where she visited Mrs. Myers' mother, Mrs. Adams, who was a former old friend of the Thomas family.

The library day under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Wednesday at the D. E. Harris home, under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Lem Rowen, was a pleasant social affair. Over 20 books were presented and a silver offering of $5.00 which will be expended for new books. Refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Nihoof of Belmond visited at the home of their son Harry last week.

Mrs. Tom Ross and daughter from Galt spent the week end at the parental D. E. Harris home.

Mrs. Wright Letts and Mrs. D. Smith of Webster City visited last week at the E. Bingham and Frank Kercheval homes.

The three-act comedy, "Deacon Dubbs," presented by the American Legion last week was was well attended and well presented. About $100 was realized.

Douglas Farran is being employed as relief agent at Eagle Grove. Dale Farran is employed at the Great Western depot at Hampton at present.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House tonight, Thursday, Feb. 24.

The Annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, tonight, Feb. 24.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Polmateer and family were given a surprise Monday evening when a number of their neighbors went to their home with well-filled baskets. On arriving they found that Mr. and Mrs. Polmateer had gone calling. and found them at the home of Lewis Bell, where the rest of the crowd had been waiting to join the bunch. When Mr. Bell did not come after a lengthy wait, the rest started on and when they found only the young people at the home, Lloyd Davis. a son-in-law, went to find them. He told them they had better come home as his folks and one of the neighbors had called to see them. They went home and found their callers numbered about 75. Games and amusements of various kinds were enjoyed. The Polmateer family move to Renwick March 1 and this community feels the loss of a kind, generous neighbor who has always been ready to lend their helping hands to those in need.

Miss Jessie Bell entertained her Sunday school class at a valentine party at her home Monday afternoon The afternoon was spent in various amusements in the way of valentine games, stunts, etc. Refreshments were served.

The basket ball game Tuesday between Alexander and Rowan was as follows: Rowan girls won 22 to 43, Alexander boys won 11-18.

Mr. and Mrs. Hero Frohling and daughter Sylvian were Belmond visitons Wednesday.

Hilko Pals was a business caller at Pallsville Tuesday.

E. L. Klinefelter was a business caller at Hampton, Monday.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Parks and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bloom are rejoicing over the arrival of baby boys, born the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dunn and family were Hampton callers Sunday.

Mrs. Tompson, who has been a visitor here the past two weeks, returned to her home at Sioux Falls, S. D. Friday.

Rev. and Mrs. Moody and Miss Marjorie Webster enjoyed a visit with Mrs. H. E. Hawkes of New York City a couple of days the past week. She is an old friend of th eMoody family.

Hio Robbins of Valley Lake, Minnesota visited at the Chris Stadtlander home over the week end.

About 50 young friends including the faculty and high school classmates gathered at the home of Willard and Wilbur Latham to celebrate their 15th birthday. It was a surprise on the boys, and an enjoyable time was spent. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Latham.

Hamfred Larson of Lignight, N. D. is visiting at the home of his sister, Mrs. Chris Stadtlander. Mr. Larson has been down with rheumatism the past week, but is some better.

Mr. and Mrs. John Weik of Kenseth were visitors at the Forrest Gillett home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Packard, Ethel Schulte. Agnes Stoffer and Leona Wenzel were callers at Williams, Friday evening.

Mr and Mrs. Flynn and Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy of Belmond were Sunday visitors at the L. S. Reed home.

Arthur Larson and family of Coulter were Sunday guests at the home of his brother, Chris.

Mr. and Mrs. Nels Larsen visited with Hampton relatives, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Yaw of Hampton were Sunday visitors at the Chris Stadtlander home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Smith and children were Hampton callers Thursday

Rudolph Beenen returned Monday from Des Moines where he had spent several days.

The Annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, tonight, Feb. 24.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House tonight, Thursday, Feb. 24.

A surprise party was given Miss Susie Schulte, Saturday afternoon, in honor of her birthday. Two of her girl friends took her for a ride while others got busy and arranged the rooms of her home by decorating, for the occasion. When the ladies returned Susie was hurried to the telephone to answer a supposed call when she found a group of friends ready to greet her. A jolly afternoon was spent. Miss Schulte receiving a variety of gifts.

United Church of Alexander

Lewis N. Moody, Pastor

The Delta Alpha class will meet in the basement Friday evening. Election of officers.

A red and blue attendance and membership contest will be conducted by the Sunday school, commencing the first Sunday in March. Come out next Sunday and hear about it.

Mrs. Cable, a missionary from India, will give an address in the basement next Tuesday afternoon under the auspires of the United Missionary Circle. All ladies are invited.

The Sunday school workers conference will be held in the basement next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

The Camp Fire Girls will meet at the parsonage after school Wednesday, March 2.

FREE!!!
A CUP OF COFFEE!
SATURDAY, FEB. 26, From
10:00 A. M. To 5:00 P M.
Thompson Seedless Raisins 10c
Corn & Peas 10c
Large Prunes, 2 lbs 25c
49 lbs. Flour 2.10
Shredded Wheat Biscuit.. 12c
HEAD LETTUCE—SPINACH
EGGS TAKEN AS CASH
Many Other Bargains This Week
Parson's Store
BELMOND, IOWA

PUBLIC SALE

AS I AM MOVING ONTO A SMALLER FARM AND HAVE TOO MUCH EQUIPMENT, I WILL SELL AT AUCTION AT THE OLD CASE FARM, 1 MILE SOUTH OF GOODELL. ON

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 25

COMMENCING AT 1:00 O'CLOCK P. M.

9 - Head of Horses - 9

1 BAY MARE, 2 yrs. old.
1 BROWN MARE, 2 yrs. old.
1 BROWN MARE, 6 yrs. old.
2 BROWN GELDINGS, 4 yrs. old.
1 BROWN MARE, 3 yrs. old.
1 BROWN MARE, 4 yrs. old.
1 BLACK MARE, 2 yrs. old.
1 BLACK MARE, 3 yrs. old.

22 - Head of Cattle - 22

6 MILK COWS—3 Durhams, 1 full blood Guernsey, and 2 part Guernsey and part Durham.

1 TWO-YEAR-OLD HEIFER, to freshen soon, part Hereford and part Durham.

6 HEIFERS, 1 yr. old.

9 SMALL CALVES, Durham.

These Cattle are High Grade Animals and worth your attention.

All are T. B. Tested, and the herd is accredited.

SOME HAY AND CANE IN BARN.

FARM MACHINERY, ETC.

3 corn plows.
1 McCormick hay rake.
1 16-wheel disc harrow.
1 Adriance mower in good repair with three sickles.
1 Hayes corn planter with 120 rods of wire.
1 truck wagon.
1 triple wagon box.
1 combination hay and hog rack
1 John Deere 42-ft. elevator, complete, horsepower.
1 Adriance binder, 8-ft., with two sickles, in good repair.
1 feed rack.
2 feed bunks.
2 sets harness.
1 large size emery stand.
1 2 1-2 h. p. Gade engine.
1 DeLaval separator, No. 17.
Numerous other articles.

FREE LUNCH SERVED AT NOON!

TERMS

Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

E. C. BOREN, Owner

H. BRUMMUND, Auctioneer. OWEN CONWELL, Clerk.

GET FAIR PRICES AT HOG SALES

The Roy Jenison sale Feb. 8 of Spotted Polands was sudcessful considering the fact that the day was the most disagreeable since the first of the year and kept many buyers from distant points away. The total of the sale was $2,326.00, making an average for the 52 head sold of $44.70. Sales were as follows:

Aug. Winkleman, Buffalo Center, sow 30, $46; sow 25, $41; sow 20, $35; sow 23, $37; sow 36, $34; sow 15, $50.

Mr. Westerberg, Forest City, sow 28, $47.50; sow 47, $39; sow 48, $45; sow 12, $49.

Luke Wessels, Belmond, sow 22, $43.

F. H. Hopp &Son, Minden, sow 33, $51.

Henry Reingardt, Alden, sow 37, $41; sow 38, $41; sow 39, $41; sow 21, $37.

E. Ellingston Belmond, sow 19, $39; sow 16, $38.

Carl Dreyer, Algona, sow 24, $43.

Nick Nelson, Belmond, sow 32, $36; sow 35 $34; sow 45, $38; sow 50, $38; sow, $35; sow, $33; sow, $38.

W. D. Schlensig, Pocahontas, sow 46 $41.

Arthur Larson, Coulter, sow 5, $45; sow 11, $52; sow 14, $38; sow 7, $44.

Ross Farmer, Belmond, sow 8, $57; sow 13, $56; sow 17, $45.

W. Abraham, Ackley, sow 3, $54.

Fred Gabel, Belmond, sow 9, $49; sow 27, $47.

Leonard Johnson, Belmond, sow 6, $44.

J. H. Lynch, Goodell, sow 42, $47; sow 10, $58.

W. O. Dreyer, Algona, sow 40, $47.

M. L. Barton, Luverne, sow 4, $46.

C. Miller, Latimer, sow 26, $69.

Milt Allison, Belmond, sow 18, $35; sow 49, $40.

R. A. Thayer, Belmond, sow 29, $38.

F. B. Mathias, Clarion, sow 43, $39.

W. Eckersley, Belmond, sow, $37; sow, $37.

Sow No. 1 was bid in by auctioneer on mail bid for $62.50, and sow No. 2 for $95.

Nine dollars was received for registration papers.

The Max Baker sale of Poland Chinas Feb. 9 was well attended, the weather being much better than the previous day. Following are the sales by number:

No. 22, Hanko Barkema, $51.
No. 28, R. C. Baker, $50.
No. 14, Hanko Barkema, $61.
No. 7, Peter H. Pals, $53.
No. 9, R. C. Baker, $50.
No. 3, Jacob Nissen $70.
No. 1, R. C. Baken, $50.
No. 2, H. Poundstone, Clarion, $50.
No. 13, W. J. Watts, Clarion, $45.
No. 47, Harry Poundstone, $50.
No. 15, Ralph Ludtke, $50.
No. 45, Lee Shahan, $43; also 46, $42.
No. 4, Dick Barkema, $51.
No. 20, I. B. Jessup, Garner, $50; also 27, $46.
No. 29, John Menke, $42.50.
No. 21, R. C. Baken, $50.
No. 28, Harm L Pals, $50.
No. 25, R. C. Baker, $50.
No. 31, John Menke, $47.
No. 5, G. C. Baker, $38.
No. 24, G. F. Wendel, Mason City, $46.
No. 32, Ralph Tiara, $32; also 41, $32; 36, $32; 38, $32.
No. 39, Lee Shahan, $30; also 42, $30; 37, $30; 40, $30.
No. 44, Hanko Barkema, $51.

J. M. Sampson's Spotted Poland sale Feb. 12 was very successful and good prices were realized. A detailed report of the sale is not available at this time.

Harry Ziska's sale of Duroc Jerseys the 17th was very good, despite the weather. Harry had some real typy hogs and bidding was lively. His sows were extra good and were in large demand. Geo. Thompson purchased the top hog at $75.00. A $50 average was realized, most of the offering going to local buyers.

INCLUDE ALFALFA IN ROTATION

That an increasing number of Iowa farmers are growing alfalfa in their regular crop rotations in place of red clover, is the finding of F. G. Churchill, farm crops extension man of Iowa State College.

John Larson in Fayette county sowed 20 acres of alfalfa last year with the intention of leaving it on the ground only one or two years. He will use the crop for hay.

In Cerro Gordo county, Wm. McArthur, a large and successful farmer for a number of years has used alfalfa and sweet clover to substitute entirely for red clover. Mr. McArthur uses alfalfa where he wants hay and sweet clover where he wants pasture.

Red clover does not yield nearly so much feed per acre as will alfalfa, or as much as sweet clover, Mr. Churchill points out. Also, alfalfa and sweet clover seed have been low as compared with red clover seed. The price relationship between the seed of these crops this year especially favors alfalfa.

Red clover, alsike and Grimm alfalfa seed this year are all selling for about the same price—around $21 to $24 a bushel. Northern grown common alfalfa seed can be bought for about $15 to $18 a bushel.

"Where a farmer expects to leave alfalfa on the ground only a year or two, it probably would pay this year to sow northern grown common seed rather than Grimm," says Mr. Churchill. "Where land is sweet enough to grow alfalfa or sweet clover, it surely will pay to sow it this year instead of red clover. Use alfalfa if you want hay and sweet clover if it is to be used for pasture."

Statistics from the Iowa Department of Health show that the mortality of the country is more than half the number of births. In Iowa in 1925 there were 24,263 deaths, the total number of births 47,460—a ration of about two births to one death. In Iowa in 1925 the infant mortality ran up to 2,672.

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M., 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

Kinseth's Store News

This week we are offering you a few good specials that will pay you to look over.

Grape fruit at 8c each this week.

Then we have some real bargains on canned fruits. Pears, plums, in heavy syrup at 19c a can. Better order half a dozen of your favorite and have them handy for that extra dish when company comes.

A. B. C. Jello in all flavors at 9c a package.

Cream of Nut oleo at 23c, Delicia oleo at 22c. Climax oleo at 25c.

For curing meat we have smoked salt at 50c a package.

Block salt at 50c.

Men's overalls, special, this week at $1.48.

SPECIAL—This week we have a big Stationery Special on. Watch our window for it.

Fresh milk and cream.

And always above everything else, SERVICE! You'll find it here, and always ready to help you. Don't forget that The Store on the Corner is your stre, whether yu buy or not, an dyou are always welcome any time you come.

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

Newest Spring Styles are Here!

At our store, now, you will find a representative selection of the finest wall papers of the 1927 season.

Beautifully designed, colorful patterns in vogue

To see the authentic fashions—come here! Every pattern new—every pattern in stock! We carry the largest selection of wall papers—at all prices—in the city, and the LONGEST WEARING paper, printed on over-weight stock that saves re-decorating so often.

Prices lowest

Try the Drug Store First
Schultz Drug Co.
BELMOND, IOWA

AMBITION!

Your Boy and SAVINGS--

THAT growing Boy of yours is impressed by the actions of his elders. While still young he should be instilled with the importance of thrift to future business success.

What better way have you of stirring his ambition than to have him start a Savings Account in this Bank? We encourage young people. Let us help your Boy.

STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND
IOWA

CLOSING OUT
PUBLIC SALE

HAVING DECIDED TO QUIT FARMING, I WILL SELL AT AUCTION ON THE FARM, 1 MILE NORTH AND 1 1-2 MILES WEST OF BELMOND, ON

Thursday, March 3

COMMENCING AT 1:00 O'CLOCK P. M.

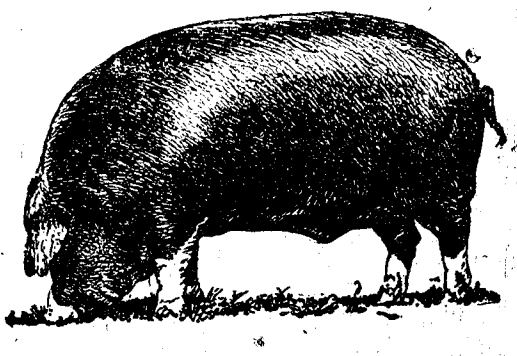
4 - Head of Horses - 4

1 BAY GELDING, 9 yrs. old, wt. 1700.
1 BAY MARE, 6 yrs. old, wt. 1350, with foal.
1 GRAY MARE, 9 yrs. old, wt. 1600, with foal.
1 BAY MARE, 6 yrs. old, wt. 1400, with foal.

14 - Head of Cattle - 14

2 HOLSTEIN COWS. 4 SHORT HORN COWS. 1 JERSEY COW.
5 of these cows are now milking; 2 will freshen about May.
2 three-year-old HOLSTEIN HEIFERS, to freshen soon.
3 six-months'-old HOLSTEIN CALVES.
1 yearling HOLSTEIN STEER. 1 yearling HOLSTEIN HEIFER

21 Head Hogs



6 BROOD SOWS with pigs at side.
3 OLD BROOD SOWS due to farrow in March and April.
3 FEEDING HOGS. 1 POLAND CHINA BOAR.
8 WINTER PIGS

These hogs are all Poland China breed. Sows were selected from the herd for my own use. Herd boar Revenual weighs about 650 pounds. Papers furnished with 4 old sows; balance eligible to registration.

Machinery, Harness, Etc.

FORDSON TRACTOR with Moline Tractor Plow.
2 wide tire wagons.
1 36-inch wagon box.
1 beet box.
1 P. & O. beet cultivator.
1 P. & O. beet lifter.
1 9-ft. Osborne disc.
1 McCormick 5-ft. mower.
1 Uncle Sam corn cultivator
1 International corn cultivator.
1 International corn planter with 80 rods of wire.
1 4-section steel drag.
2 sets work harness.
5 horse collars.
1 bob sled.
7 individual hog houses, of various sizes, with floors and skids.
Various other articles.

TERMS

Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

Maxwell Baker, Prop.

LEWIS HAUGE, Auctioneer. STATE BANK OF BELMOND, Clerk.

ALABASTER LAMPS

By Margaret Turnbull.

COPYRIGHT 1925 BY MARGARET TURNBULL WNU SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With a stranger, whom he introduces as his nephew, Ned Carter, Claude Melnotte Dabbs returns from New York to his general grocery at Peace Valley, Pa. To "Aunt Lyddy," his housekeeper, he explains that Carter is a chance acquaintance, veteran of the World war, whom he had met and taken a liking to.

CHAPTER II.—Carter tells Aunt Lyddy he has broken with his family and his sweetheart because of his resentment of their ultra pacific tendencies. With Dabbs Ned visits Clover Hollow, abiding place of a "collection of good-natured cranks," according to the grocer. They almost run over a dog belonging to a girl whom Carter apparently recognizes. Ned delivers a grocery order, and in his absence the girl, Dorothy Selden, reveals that she knows him to be Ned Carter Rangeley, son of Loren Rangeley, New York banker.

Beautiful! I don't see how one could be restless or disappointed down here."

"It's a queer thing," Mr. Dabbs answered introspectively, "how this place takes all the spunk out of some people and makes them so mild and ladylike there's no stirring them up to any sort of decent ambition. You'll soon see that the folks brought up around here are terrible hard to 'rouse. I've often felt that way often myself. Then sometimes there are days when suddenly the very peace of it gets on your nerves, sorta slaps you in the face. I've felt that, too. But when I go away from here, I want to come back, and it's the d—dest, hardest place to leave that I ever knew." He slapped Jenny lightly with the whip. "If it was anyone else I was talking to, they'd think I talked like a fool about my own place. But you get me, don't you?"

"It doesn't sound foolish to me. I think I feel its charm already."

"And yet, when I was your age, Ned, how I kicked at being kept here, tied to a country store." He pointed his whip to a group of buildings at the foot of the gentle incline before them.

"That's Clover Hollow. What do you think of it?"

Ned saw several detached houses, most of them built of stone, more or less elaborate in design, except where they were merely the original farmhouse, or laborer's cottage, remodeled and enlarged but retaining some of the original simplicity of form. They were set in the midst of gardens and lawns, some of them quite extensive. It was a picturesque looking spot. But what

"It's a joke on the man that built [illegible] Claude said thoughtfully, "and [illegible] to know because I'm his agent. [illegible], he thought out this scheme [illegible] bringing a good class of people [illegible] neighborhood, and by so doing [illegible] his native village, financially and [illegible]. And this is what he got!

"A kind of collection of good-for-nothing cranks," Dabbs resumed, after a pause for comment, which did not come. "They call it a community, and call themselves workers, thinkers, artists, leaders of the [illegible], and a lot of other names. Nothing except a plain American lives there. But there's no use talking to any of 'em. They are just fools with money enough not to work and yet a burning desire to do something for a living that won't hamper them in none."

Ned laughed. "It's funny, Ned, how nowadays people feel they have to have some excuse besides their money for living. Money was enough when I was young. It isn't any more."

He chuckled at the thought. "The way I reason it, is that people who are just a little off on some one thing become so much of a darned nuisance that ordinary people either laugh at them or try to run away. This makes them band together so as to get an audience somehow. At Clover Hollow they can have meetings and argue as often as they like. If one man does the talking one day, he knows he's got to listen the next.

"Take this house we're coming to now. It's called a cottage, but it has five servants to run it. Professor O'Toole, who lives there, drinks something a good deal stronger than tea. He told me that the purity of Basile depended on a diet of new laid eggs, cream and whisky. Don't know where he gets his stuff, nor how he gets it past the revenue officers, but his cellar's full. He's against anything on God's green earth except the Irish republic. I can't help think Ireland never is a republic, for one, Professor O'Toole will be a disappointed man. He'll have nothing left to live for, or talk about. Maybe he don't work for his living, but an English uncle left him so much 'unearned increment' that he can use some of it up on De Luxe and that bunch."

He looked at Ned, and added: "Awful pleasant fellow, though. You'd like to talk to him."

"This is amazing!" Ned said. "Next house?"

"That's the show place. M. Adolphus Mannheim, the East side millionaire who married a settlement worker, lives there. He's a good provider and a nice fellow, if there ever was one. He's also got some excuse for talking kinda wild. Seems before he made his millions in a chain of stores over here, his family were Russian Jews and had what he calls 'pogroms' happen to them. A pogrom seems to be some sort of excuse for raging round at things in general.

"But Mrs. Mannheim, why, she sorta forgets. Some of us knew her as Lizzie Harrigan, a school-teacher at Fellow's Corners twenty miles away. Lizzie always was a restless spirit, and she made a strike for freedom and the city. She's got Mannheim flattered to death and fooled, but she can't fool Peace Valley. Leaves her big automobile around the corner, and in a plain shirtwaist and skirt and a sad smile tries to stir up the girls at the factory to fight for their rights. They chew their gum and laugh at her. Fellow's Corners ain't so far but some of us have heard of Lizzie Harrigan's rich marriage. She got a hint of that last time she tried to make a strike leader of herself and found she was the whole strike. She's all for plain living and high thinking, and look where she lives! Five maids, a cook and a chauffeur. And clothes! Lizzie struck luck when she married Mannheim."

"I know Mrs. Mannheim," Ned said, to Dabbs' complete astonishment, and Ned's voice was hard. "I'd rather go to her kitchen door with groceries any day, than to her front door. Who started this blot on the landscape?"

Dabbs visibly started. He shot a quick glance at Ned, but the younger man did not notice the look.

"Isn't 'blot on the landscape' a little strong?" he inquired anxiously. "You see I'm the agent for the man who bought the land cheap, and thought it'd make a good investment as an exclusive residence place. He had a good architect come down here, who was crazy about remodeling old houses, and soon Mr. Mannheim and a man called Green got interested, and they brought the rest here."

"I suppose," Ned began reflectively, as though he had scarcely been listening, "that Mrs. Mannheim thought she could get together a set of her own down here, and drag Mannheim away from his friends."

"Don't know," Dabbs answered, a trifle bewildered at Ned's intimate knowledge of these people. "That's Green's house over there, among the trees, where we're going next. Green's a character. He can talk white into looking black, and the other way round. He was a professor, of something or other, in some college. He's in Russia now."

"Who has the house now?"

"Don't just know. It was rented by the New York agency when I was away. I didn't see the name Sims put on the order, so I can't tell you whether it's money or just views, but should think it would be money and views. Sometimes, you know, a regular family, just looking for peace and quiet, land here. But it's generally one of the same."

He paused. "Jimmy! I've never talked so much to any one before. Of course being agent for the property I have to keep my mouth shut. But what would you do? Turn them out? Aren't they safer here than in some other place? Peace Valley's slow moving."

He looked appealingly at Ned, for evidently that "blot on the landscape" rankled.

Ned said nothing. He was frowning, staring straight ahead of him, seeing nothing. Dabbs, glancing at him, puzzled, explained further: "Of course, I've only given you my idea of them. I'd not set you against them, for anything. In fact, they might amuse you."

"They wouldn't," Ned interrupted vehemently. "I don't want to know them."

The wagon gave a final lurch as they turned the corner near the Mannheim's back gateway. A slender blonde girl came through the wrought-iron gates at a breakneck speed, pulled along by an infuriated young collie on a leash. Neither the girl nor the dog seemed able to stop, and Jenny would not.

Horse, dog and girl seemed as one in the cloud of dust that enveloped them.

As Dabbs pulled at the reins, Ned jumped over the side of the wagon and landed at the girl's feet.

"Peter!" she shrieked. "My precious dog! My Peter! You've killed him."

"D—m Peter!" Ned muttered sullenly. "What are you doing here, Dorothy?"

The girl looked at him amazed, then at the wagon and Mr. Dabbs, who had kept his seat and regained control over the horse. Peter, who had not been killed, doubled back and was now cowering against the girl, growling.

Dabbs quietly descended and took the box containing the Mannheim order from the back of the wagon. Ned turned abruptly, went toward the wagon and climbed to the seat.

"I'll deliver the order at the next house, Uncle Claude, and come back for you," he announced, and was gone before Claude could protest.

The girl, her attractive face painted like a bisque doll, stood staring at the rapidly disappearing wagon. Claude, wisely concluding that he had nothing to keep him, shouldered the box and went toward the house.

When he returned, a few minutes later, the girl was still standing there, holding the dog and blocking his exit. Dabbs could see at once that he was not to escape easily.

"Nice boy, Ned," Dabbs remarked warily.

"Uncle Claude!" the girl exclaimed accusingly. "Are you the late Mrs. Rangeley's brother?"

"Mrs. Rangeley!" Dabbs echoed. "Mean Mrs. Carter, don't you Miss Selden?"

"No, I mean Ned Carter Rangeley's mother."

"Ned Carter Rangeley!" Dabbs repeated. "You mean my boy Ned?"

"Then you aren't his real uncle?"

"He has always called me 'uncle,' though the relationship isn't quite so close."

Dorothy Selden looked at him shrewdly. "I'm willing to bet every penny in my purse," and she jangled the little costly beaded article and dropped it back into the deep trouser pocket of her expensive farmerette costume, "that you don't know who Loren Lorimer Rangeley is."

Dabbs could not help his jaw dropping a little. "I do, though," he answered quietly enough. "He is a big New York banker, one of the meanest men God ever let live."

"Knowing that," snapped the girl, "and knowing that Ned is his only son, why this silly pretense that his name is Carter only?"

"Ned has his reasons," he told her coldly, "and Rangeley deserves to be kept in the dark."

By the look in the girl's eyes, he knew that he had said the right thing. She apparently forgot Dabbs' existence as she stood there turning the situation over in her mind.

"Quarreled with papa and down here leading the simple life with a poor relation," she mused. "What a situation for the high and mighty Ned! I congratulate you, Mr. Dabbs. It is evident that Ned has seen the light and come over to us."

"'Us?' I don't think I understand."

"Joined the workers, the Intelligensia, the Bolsheviki of America."

"Not if I know Ned!"

Miss Selden looked at him, as one looks at the poor of understanding. Plainly she felt that any really up-to-date information would be lost upon Dabbs. She searched her mind for some expression used in the dark ages before the war.

"Don't you understand," she began condescendingly, "I'm what is called a radical. What you would probably call a Socialist."

Dabbs said nothing.

Disconcerted, Dorothy, unused to planting seed in ground totally uncultivated, began again: "A radical is—well—a radical is one who believes all men should be equal—"

"They are not," Dabbs interrupted, "and they can't be. Men aren't born equal, no matter what the Declaration says. Nor if you start them equal, do they stay so. Girl, the very best one can do is to try and give everybody an equal chance, and then watch the holes they land in."

"The world belongs to the workers," Dorothy began loftily.

"Sure. What's your trade?" Dabbs demanded.

Dorothy hesitated and was lost. "I—" she began.

Dabbs looked at her sympathetically. "I guess you're living on that 'unearned increment' the rest of the Clover Hollowers live on and despise so. And I guess you've got more of it than some of the others," he added, taking in comprehensively, but not offensively, her expensive playing-at-being-useful garments. "Well, I'm a grocer," and he shouldered his box and turned away. "If you'll excuse me, Miss Selden, I'll move along. The grocery business is sorta exacting in its demands, and I'll be going on down the road to the stonemason's. Mind telling my boy, Ned, to pick me up there when he passes?"

CHAPTER III

Ned, Jenny and the wagon were standing in the driveway of the Green's former residence. The sign on the gate posts indicated that this place was called "The White House."

Ned found it a charming place. The old stone house was a real bit of pre-Revolutionary Pennsylvania. The original outbuildings had been torn down, but enough of the old stone barn had been retained to make a practical, yet picturesque, garage.

Altogether a wonderful old place, in which everything that was old was used. There was nothing new, made to look like an obvious afterthought. All were blended into an harmonious whole, agreeable to the eye, and testifying to the skill of the architect.

(Continued next week.)

Proceedngs of Wright Co. Board of Supervisors

(Continued from last week.)

Fred Aldrich, Assessors' meeting	4.70
L. G. Hill, Assessors' meeting	4.10
Henry T. Larsen, Assessors' meeting	5.20
Harry Sumners, Assessors' meeting	3.80
Chris Nelson, Assessors' meeting	5.50
J. E. Patterson, Assessors' meeting	4.50
C. J. Baxter, Assessors' meeting	4.50

COUNTY ROAD FUND

J. D. Adams & Co., Repairs	18.37
A. C. Anderson, Patrol	62.00
Austin-Western Road Machine Co., Repairs	14.00
John Joseph Barry, Damages on Steinlicht road	276.00
Clarion Oil Co., Gas and oil	10.40
Raymond E. Caquelin, Patrol	21.50
Louis A. Caquelin, Shoveling snow	3.20
Harvey Caquelin, Patrol	19.00
Donald Strever, Shoveling snow	2.00
Jack O'Conner, Shoveling snow	4.00
Roy Newman, Shoveling snow	2.00
Community Service Co., Gasoline	2.15
T. A. Davenport, Damages on Steinlicht road	140.00
Harry Daggett, Patrol	60.80
Dewey Beisell, Labor	45.00
Milo Swanger, Labor	4.00
Dows Advocate, Notice of assessment	34.80
Eagle Grove Eagle, Notice of assessment	271.65
Eagle Grove Times, Notice of assessment	129.90
Homer Gordon, Patrol	50.10
Henry Imboden, Shoveling snow	13.70
W. Clarkin, Shoveling snow	3.20
C. M. Daniels, Shoveling snow	3.20
Charles Toillion, Shoveling snow	3.20
M. V. Huibsch, Shoveling snow	2.40
David Imboden, Shoveling snow	2.90
Glen Hackley, Patrol	10.00
Howard Hackley, Shoveling snow	8.00
W. D. McCutcheon, Dragging	5.30
Wright County Monitor, Notices of assessment	211.15
D. B. Pepper, Labor	17.00
Skelly Oil Company, Gasoline	18.93
A. B. Stole, Patrol	39.00
Harry Mantle, Extra team	4.50
Lismore Stole, Patrol	37.50
Shupe & Son, Hardware	29.69
Claude H. Thayer, Patrol	72.00
John Thayer, Shoveling snow	27.00
Harley Thayer, Shoveling snow	39.60
Harry Lowen, Shoveling snow	11.20
Brudette House, Shoveling snow	3.40
Clate Walrod, Shoveling snow	3.60
Clair McDermott, Shoveling snow	7.20
Charlie Oberight, Shoveling snow	3.60
Herbert Steinblock, Shoveling snow	10.60
George Scott, Shoveling snow	1.60
Maxwell Baker, Shoveling snow	14.75
C. A. Steenblock, Shovel	1.85
A. H. Waddell, Shed rent	3.00
Wright County Oil Co., Gasoline	32.38

POOR FUND

Azeltine & Son, Fuel	10.55
Harvey Armstrong, Rent	10.00
Azeltine & Son, Fuel	4.73
J. W. Azeltine, Rent	12.50
J. K. Baker, Cash advanced for trans.	25.00
Burt Grain Co., Fuel	7.26
Emile Bernard, Care of Paul Bernard	20.00
Blake Lbr. Co., Fuel	143.65
R. A. Baker & Sons, Clothing	18.17
Ralph C. Baker, Milk	6.20
Christensen & Son, Shoes	refused
Clifton & Son, Fuel	11.25
Dr. John R. Christensen, Services	5.00
L. W. Cole, Rent	15.00
Christeson & Flower, Groc.	88.56
Christeson & Flower, Groc.	49.93
Duer & Son, Groc.	64.66
Dows Lbr. Co., Fuel	9.00
Peter Dorem, Care of Dr. Hansen	21.00
Dows Mercantile Co., Groc.	25.00
K. J. Engh, Overseer of poor in E. G.	11.25
East Side Grocery, Groc.	120.79
Farmers Co-operative Co., Fuel	8.80
L. D. Fothergill, Clothing	3.30
Farmers Elevator Co., Fuel	47.25
A. Granau, Meat	30.95
Mike Gutierrez, Rent	8.00
E. O. Hansen, Clothing	10.50
Theo. Hansen, Groc.	33.00
Mrs. Anna Imboden, Care of poor	92.00
O. C. Johnson, Groc.	8.06
Jones Lbr. Co., Fuel	27.99
T. M. Jensen, Milk	6.20
O. C. Johnson, Groc.	8.25
C. G. Johnson, Groc.	62.30
Dr. O. A. Kellogg, Medical aid	39.25
W. A. Kist, Care of Dr. Hansen	36.00
B. K. Kinseth, Groc.	37.33
Mrs. Eric Knutson, Laundry	39.50
Leuthold & Hinkley, Clothing	93.78
Pearl Miller, Rent	15.00
Miller Furniture Co., Burial exp. of Hendrickson	80.00
Miller-Lampert Co., Fuel	9.40
Mrs. J. A. McBeth, Care of Agard child	24.00
Martin Grocery, Groc.	39.61
F. T. Meachem, Rent	15.00
Dr. G. F. McBurney, Medical aid	16.00
Dr. C. H. Morse, Medical aid	43.00
Moseley Grocery, Groc.	43.03
Betsey Peterson, Allowance	20.00
J. C. Peterson, Cash adv. for for trans. to Iowa City	8.00
C. S. Robinson, Groc.	30.07
Henry Riggan, Care of Jacob Riggan	10.00
John Reynolds, Cash adv. for trans.	32.40
Will Robinson, Rent	25.00
Mrs. H. Sexse, Care of Carrie Bjelland	42.00
Schoonover's Grocery, Groc.	45.49
Dr. E. C. Sage, Medical aid	85.00
Dr. J. H. Sams, Medical aid	84.50
Tillinghast & Co., Groc.	19.25
W. M. Tresidder, Rent	10.00
Dr. T. J. O'Toole, Rent	10.00
Frank Welch, Groc.	18.47
Wheeler's Store, Groc.	32.05

BRIDGE FUND

Wright County Monitor, Notice to Bidders	10.80
Lynn Paine, Labor	7.00
Shupe & Son, Hardware	3.85

DRAINAGE FUND

J. E. Richardson, Labor—Dn. 81	5.00
Chas. Gross, Engineer—Dn. 90	10.72

INSANE FUND

Fred Johnson, Exp. of conv. Margaret Cooper to Cherokee	18.95
Fred Johnson, Exp. of conv. Lee to Cherokee	17.50
Fred Johnson, Exp. of conv. Johnson to Cherokee	32.00
Dr. E. D. Tompkins, Commissioner	3.00
L. N. Archerd, Commissioner	3.00
A. W. Russell, Witness	3.40
Rudy Quandt, Witness	3.40
Dr. H. P. Walker, Commissioner	3.00
L. N. Archerd, Commissioner	3.00
Dr. E. D. Tompkins, Commissioner	3.00
L. N. Archerd, Commissioner	3.00

SOLDIERS' RELIEF FUND

F. B. Champlin, Sec'y., Allowances for Jan.	132.00
F. B. Champlin, Sec'y., Allowance for Feb.	126.00

DOMESTIC ANIMAL FUND

Geo. Bronleewe, Chickens killed	40.00
G. Osby, Sheep killed	150.00
W. Everett Smith, Sheep killed	9.00
Ben Smith, Hog killed	11.50

REFUND WARRANTS

C. M. Rogers, Error—head tax	.77
Hans Watne, Error 1925 tax	23.70

On motion adjourned to meet February 9, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY,
Chairman.

F. W. WALKER,
County Auditor.

Clarion, Iowa, February 9, 1927.

Board reconvened as per adjournment, members all present with County Auditor in attendance.

Moved by Mehl and seconded by Baker that F. W. Walker, County Auditor, be directed to draw a warrant in the sum of $19.56, payable to Robert F. Crawford, as directed by court order, dated February 9, 1927, in the estate of R. S. Crawford. Motion carried.

Time and date having arrived for hearing of assessments for graveling Secondary Road Districts Nos. 31, 17 and 21, Board took up the same.

No objections being filed, moved and seconded that the Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, hereby approve the returns of the Board of Apportionment on Secondary Road Districts Nos. 31, 17 and 21, and that the said apportionment be hereby levied upon the lands in the district, same to be due and payable with 6 percent interest, all as provided by law. Motion carried.

Time and date having arrived for hearing of assessments for graveling Secondary Road District No. 16, Board took up the same. Oral objections were made by W. H. Martin. On motion said hearing was continued to 5 o'clock P. M.

Time having arrived for rehearing on District No. 16, Board took up the same.

Moved and seconded that W. H. Martin's assessments be reduced 25 percent.

Roll call resulted, Aye: Mehl, Peterson, Baker and Kitley; Nay: Schroeder. Call carried.

Moved and seconded that the said apportionment be hereby levied upon the lands in the district, as changed by this Board, same to be due and payable with 6 percent interest, all as provided by law.

Roll call resulted, Aye: Mehl, Peterson and Kitley; Nay: Baker and Schroeder. Call carried.

Time and date having arrived for hearing of assessments for graveling Secondary Road District No. 28, Board took up the same. Oral objections were made by L. E. Spencer, representing Louise Spencer. On motion said hearing was continued to 5 o'clock P. M.

Time having arrived for rehearing on District No. 28. Board took up the same.

Moved and seconded that the assessment of James H. Flurer be reduced $12.90 on account of error in acreage. Motion carried.

Moved and seconded that the assessments of Louise Spencer be reduced 35 percent.

Roll call resulted, Aye: Peterson, Baker, Schroeder and Kitley; Nay: Mehl. Call carried.

Moved and seconded that the said apportionment be hereby levied upon the lands in the district, as changed by this board, same to be due and payable with 6 percent interest, all as provided by law. Motion carried.

Time and date having arrived for hearing of assessments for graveling Secondary Road District Nos. 14 and 33, Board took up the same. Oral objections were made by Russell Smith, representing W. C. Smith, and Heber H. Baker, representing Geo. Baker, et al. Written objections were presented from Ole O. Hobbett.

Moved and seconded that the Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, hereby approve the returns of the Board of Apportionment on Secondary Road Districts Nos. 14 and 33 and that the said apportionments be hereby levied upon the lands in the district, same to be due and payable with 6 percent interest, all as provided by law. Motion carried.

On motion adjournment to meet February 11, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY,
Chairman.

F. W. WALKER,
County Auditor.

Here's a Feeder that soon Pays For Itself

Jamesway Free Feed CAFETERIA

EVERY farm flock in this locality should have one of these FIVE-IN-ONE Feeders; contains compartments for Mash, Grain, Oyster Shell, Grit and Charcoal. It's a great labor saver—only needs filling once a week and your flock can always eat what they want, when they want it. They balance their ration as nature dictates and as a result you get more eggs—your flock is healthier.

Saves Labor—Saves Feed

This practical feeder comes in two sizes—100 flock size and 200 flock size. Think what a convenience it would be to just fill this up once a week and know that you flock was provided with feed for an entire week. It's the busy farmer's friend. Built with a patented shaking device that always keeps feed down in feed troughs. Feed is always clean and absolutely no waste. Slanting tilting top prevents birds roosting on top. We guarantee that this feeder will pay for itself in one season in saved feed and labor. Let us show you this incomparable feeder.

Sold by
ANDERSON HATCHERY
Phone 27 Belmond, Iowa

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY

6%

GOLD NOTES

Maturities 1to 5 Years carry valuable
CONVERSION PRIVILEGE
Applicable Earnings
PRICE PAR

SPECIAL!
Investment in these
GOLD NOTES
This Month
carry full
Accrued Interest
From February 1st
FREE!

Inquire
any Employee or
Securities Department

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY

515 Merchants National Bank Building
CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

LOCALS

Mrs. John McNichol was operated on for gall stones last Thursday at the local hospital. She is reported as improving nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Luick left Tuesday for Clear Lake where they will make their home this summer.

C. C. Christie and family of Ames spent several days last week with Belmond relatives.

Ben Hogenson returned recently from Madison, Wis., where he has been working at the carpenter trade on a new cold storage plant.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House tonight, Thursday, Feb. 24.

Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Windecker of Olaf are moving to Iowa Falls having sold their store.

Mrs. Otto Hanson will be hostess to the Chain of Ten, next Tuesday.

Leroy Hammond and a friend of Waterloo spent Sunday at the parental Hammond home here.

Mrs. Lillie Pierce of Goldfield is visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Frank Hake.

Mrs. Wm. Parker entertained at a bridge dinner, Tuesday evening, three tables playing.

Ralph Tiara had an operation for ruptured appendix Saturday, at the local hospital. He is reported getting along nicely.

Miss Grace Boughton went to Mason City on business, Saturday, remaining to spend Sunday with her aunt at the I. O. O. F. home.

Mrs. Sam Crabtree submitted to an operation at Rochester, Friday.

Miss Vivian Pech will be teacher of the first, second and third grades of the Goodell school for the next few weeks, during the absence of the regular teacher who was called away by the illness of a relative.

Ole Nelson was a caller at Fort Dodge. Monday of this week.

Roller Skating matinee at the opera house Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Chester Johnson and father, Lud Johnson, went to Iowa City Thursday last where the latter received medical attention.

Dr. and Mrs. Parsons and daughter and Miss Waugh spent Sunday in Clarksville at the home of Miss Waugh's parents.

The Annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, tonight, Feb. 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Riley of Rowan were guests last Tuesday at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Fuller Bailey.

ODD FELLOW DANCES

Any Odd Fellow or Rebekah wishing to bring a friend, please ask committee for card. No outsiders can be admitted without a card.

COMBINATION SALE!

Don't forget the Combination Sale March 8. In order to prepare stalls for your stock it will be an accomodation to have the stock listed early. List with either T. D. Rankins, or Belmond Savings Bank.

Miss Beatrice Kragh of Mason City spent the last week end at the H. J. Williams home.

The Annual Chicken Supper will be given by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond library, tonight, Feb. 24.

Old Time Dance by the Catholic Ladies at the Belmond Opera House tonight, Thursday, Feb. 24.

Marion Elder was the guest of honor at a very pleasant birthday party, Saturday.

Roller Skating matinee at the opera house Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

NOTICE!

All our customers and patrons are hereby notified that after 30 days, any person owing an unpaid account will be placed on a strictly cash basis.

F. P. Dibble.
D. Bishop.

ANNOUNCEMENT!
—PHONE 78—

I am opening a repair shop in Belmond and will be known as the

GALLOWAY AUTO SERVICE

Located at the Nordschow Motor Co. building. Phone 78.

MERROLD H. GALLOWAY

Official Willys-Overland. Hudson-Essex Service

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

STOLEN—2-wheel auto trailer, from in front of my shop, Friday night, Feb. 18. Running gears painted red, inside of box red and outside black. Made from Ford frame. $10 reward for information as to who took it.—Rich Thompson. 1*

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	19c
Butterfat	48c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	38 1-2c
Corn	51c
Barley	58c

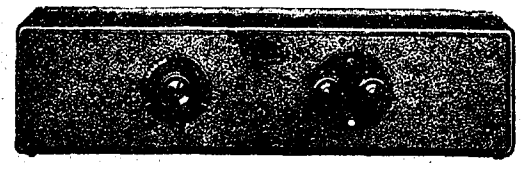
WE HAVE A
Choice Selection
of the
Early Spring
HATS
At This Time!

SILK BLOOMERS
at $1.79
A real bargain!

HEMSTITCHING
at 10c per yd.

TheHat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

YOU--



do not know the possibilities in radio if you have never tuned the Atwater Kent Model No. 32 Seven Tube One Dial Receiver.

Our B-Battery stock is always fresh. New shipment every week.

Local Authorized Dealer

BELMOND STORAGE BATTERY CO.

Phone 46. Official 2417

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Big type brood sows, April farrow. Bred to pure bred boars. Cholera immune. Will sell by weight.—M. Halfwassen. 13tf

FOR SALE—Silver Laved Wyandotte hatching eggs, from prize-winning stock. Farm range.—J. M. Croft, Alexander, Iowa. 152*

FOR SALE—My farm of 120 acres in Vernon county, Wisconsin, one and one-half miles to school, about one mile to creamery. About 80 acres under cultivation, the rest in timber. Six miles to market. Fair buildings. Price $12,000. Will sell on easy terms. I will consider a house and lot in Belmond in the deal.—O. L. Josvanger, Victory, Wisconsin. 1*

FOR SALE—Some good wild hay, also some mixed hay. Some timothy seed for sale.—Claude Veeder, Phone 2010. 142*

FOR SALE—Barred Rock roosters. Also one Mammoth Bronze turkey tom.—Mrs. E. D. Murphy. 1*

BABY CHICKS! We will have a hatch of W. Wyandottes off March 8th. Very good quality in these chicks If interested in some exceptionally good Buff Orpington or S. C. R. I. Red chicks, we can supply you with the best to be had in this part of Iowa. A hatch off every Tuesday. Ten percent discount if ordered before March 1.

We do custom hatching. We invite you to visit our up-to-date hatchery. If interested in baby chicks, call us at our expense.—BALLUFF & THORPE, CLARION, IA. One block east and one block north of Catholic church. 152c

FOR SALE—Four Holstein heifers, to freshen this spring. T. B. tested.—D. H. Delaney. 152*

FOR SALE—Brown Leghorn hatching eggs, $3.00 per 100. Buff Orpington pen eggs $1.00 per setting.—Mrs. J. B. Sheffield. 15tfc

FOR SALE—Full blood English White Leghorn hatching eggs, $4.00 per 100. Buff Orpington eggs $1.25 per setting from pen stock. Phone 2516.—Otis Tendall. 1c

FOR SALE—Used Ford parts.—Ralph Wilson, first house east of Geo. P. Hardwick's, on hill. 1*

WANTED—High school boy wants place to work for board and room, on farm. Inquire of H. J. Williams. 1*

WANTED—Family washings. —Mrs. Bergerfer, in Barry Addition. 2*

WANTED—Girl as waitress. Inquire at B rban's Cafe. 1c

FOR RENT—Five-room house, water, lights and furnace. $22.50 per month. Inquire at Independent. 1c

WE ARE USING THIS SPACE TO ATTRACT YOUR ATTENION TO THE WORD
SERVICE!

WE HANDLE DIAMOND BREAD

Potato Bread .....2 for 25c
Dinner Bread ...3 for 25c
Wholewheat 10c
Teabiscuit 15c

And we will take orders for Buns, Cinnamon Rolls, Coffee Cake, or any of the products of the Mason City bakery. Delivered every day to our store.

Leave your orders or phone 88.

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Friday and Saturday
February 25-26

Beef Roast, per pound..... 18c
Boiling Meat, per pound..... 12½c
Hamburger, per pound..... 15c
Delicia Oleo, per pound..... 22c

We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

YOUR Savings are greater if you plan a large order, sufficient to replenish your staples. We invite you to get our Big Value Prices on your next order.

REGULAR PRICES!

CORN 10c
PEAS .....2 for 25c
PLUMS, No. 2 can 20c
TOMATOES .....10c and 20c
OPAL COFFEE in glass jar .50c
HOMINY 10c
PORK and BEANS 10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

Belmond Opera House

THURSDAY, FEB. 24
DANCE
Under the auspices of the Rosary Society. Music by Meekers Family Orchestra. A good time guaranteed to all and everyone welcome.

FRIDAY, FEB. 25
DANCE
Music by Al Schriber's Blue & Gold Orchestra of Wells, Minn.

SATURDAY, FEB. 26
"THE SILENT PAL"
A stirring northern picture featuring THUNDER, the Marvel Dog.
Also 2-reel Educational Comedy.
Prices 10c & 25c

SUNDAY, FEB. 27
"THE PALM BEACH GIRL"
A good, clean comedy-drama. First show at 8:15.
Also Educational Comedy.
Prices 10c & 25c

Spring Suits and Topcoats are now here---

EXCELLENT 2-PANT SUITS
$35.00

YOUNG MEN'S TOP COATS
In New Shades and Patterns
$22.50 to $30.00

See Our Display of Spring Hats!

SMITH SERVICE & SKOVLIN SATISFACTION

Phone 50 Belmond, Iowa

Good Farm Equipment Talk No. 2

JOHN DEERE
MOLINE, ILL.
THE TRADE MARK OF QUALITY
MADE FAMOUS BY GOOD IMPLEMENTS

Repair Service

It was a hot day last summer. Harvest of early oats had just started. One of our good customers came in, very hot and somewhat out of sorts, wanting a very unusual part for a binder "quick". In the 37 years that this business has been established this was our first call for this piece and we didn't have it in stock. Fortunately, we were able to catch our truck at Fort Dodge, and have the part loaded with our other repairs. Then our customer insisted on our helping put the new part in as he "had to start cutting in the morning." We dropped other work that had stronger claim to our time, went out to the farm and found the break in the old part rusted in. Our customer explained that the binder had broken down toward the tail end of harvest the year before, and that he had borrowed a neighbor's binder to finish cutting with. Yet—and this is the sad part of the story—he waited almost a year, until the day before he "had to start cutting," to make the replacement of the part. That is the way not to get repair service, and it makes it hard for Cato and the boys, too.

You can help us and help yourself by getting the number of the casting that is to be replaced or ordered. If no number can be found, as is sometimes the case, get a number on an adjoining part or parts. If it is a shaft, make a note of the length and diameter and number of holes drilled in it. If it is a gear, the diameter of the opening and the number of teeth, etc. If the part is broken, bring it in with you. Help us all you can—we appreciate it and can render you better service as a result.

We keep an accurate record of the number of pieces of each part we have ordered in the past three years. From this record we strike an average for the three years, and taking into consideration the inventory of the parts we have on hand, we place our stock order accordingly. Then in the busy seasons, we reorder parts that are getting low in stock. During grain and corn harvest our stock of repair parts alone runs over $2,000.00. And all this for the purpose of giving you what you want, when you want it!

The moral of this Equipment Talk No. 2 is to order your repairs early. If a part is getting weak or showing considerable wear, get a new part at once—don't wait for a "bust up." And be sure the new part is made by the Company who made the machine.

GRIESY'S

The Friendly Place

Phone 10 Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, MARCH 3, 1927. NO. 16

MEN PROVIDE P. T. A. MEETING

Splendid Program Arranged By Men For Parent-Teachers Association Meeting.

OTHER NEWS OF SCHOOL

The February meeting of the P. T. A., held in the school building Wednesday evening, February 24 was sponsored by the men of the organization, Mr. Glenn Klemme acting as chairman. One part of an unusually entertaining and profitable program was the reading of a series of essays written by the children of fifth to eighth grades on the subject, "What My Father Means To Me." Surprising analytic ability was shown by the children who, it seems, have decided opinions regarding their parents' faults and virtues. Many of the criticisms were both constructive and useful. Mr. George Elder read the essays; the Rev. S. U. Leinbach discussed them.

Supt. Williams, speaking on the question of "What the School Expects of the Home," made the very minimum request for cooperation. That the school has a right to expect prompt and consistent attendance is proved by the fact of state laws referring to truancy. The school also expects its pupils to be sensibly fed and clothed; that of course does not mean extravagantly cared for, but it is simply a requirement for efficient work. Many failures can be directly traced to lack of the correct care for children's health. Finally, the parents should cooperate in the matter of infectious disease, and have consideration for the teacher's point of view who has to send a child home on suspicion of sickness. The musical numbers included songs by Mr. O. L. Varland, and by a quartette, Mr. Cato C. Griesy, Mr. Merle Hildebrand, Mr. Wm. Nelson, Mr. H. Nordschow; a violin solo by Robert Smith and a solo by Mr. Nordschow.

Monday morning, in order to have a little more practice and gain some experience, our three declamatory contestants gave their readings before the high school assembly. These three people, Leo Ayers, Lucile Skouge, and Mildred Jacobson, go to Kanawha Tuesday night where they meet nine other contestants, three each from Klemme, Kanawha and Goodell. They have been, working hard and faithfully for the last few weeks and the rest of us are very optimistic concerning the outcome of the contest.

Last Friday we had the opportunity of listening to a musical program at our regular assembly. Mr. Varland and Mrs. Trafford sang some very fine solos which we enjoyed greatly. We tried to show our appreciation by our hearty applause. Ruth Ramsay entertained us at the piano, and the girls' and boys' glee clubs sang the selections that were given in Clarion Friday afternoon. The girls sang "By the Waters of Minnetonka" and "I Passed by Your Window." The song by the boys' glee club, "Aura Lee" concluded an entertaining program, and showed us the rapid progress made by our glee clubs this year.

Miss Devine returned last week from her home at Livermore where she had been because of the serious illness of her father. Miss Devine's friends are glad to hear that her father is very much improved in health and is expected to recover completely from the slight stroke of paralysis which he suffered.

Belmond played the last regular game of the 1926-1927 season last Friday night. Much credit must be given to the entire squad for their hard work and steadfast loyalty throughout the year. We cannot expect to have a champion team every year, but we can expect them to work hard just as the boys have done this season. Great improvement over each preceding game was exhibited at almost every contest and they always put up a stubborn and strong fight. For several of the team, this is the last year playing in B. H. S. We know the ones who are left will keep the same dauntless and determined spirit throughout the next basket ball season. The entire school is proud of the whole team this year, and are always ready to say "good words" for them.

Miss Redman gave a talk to the Junior high school art classes Friday afternoon.

The eighth grade held their class party in the gym Saturday evening. A very enjoyable time was spent by all.

The eighth grade girls' art classes are making crayonex work this week.

Mr. Hall's eighth grade boys' manual training classes are making broom and tooth brush holders.

The debate between the seventh and eighth grades will be held next Friday afternoon.

The seventh grade reading classes will dramatize the story of William Tell. Everyone is invited.

Marie Jones is still unable to attend school.

The Junior high is working hard on the spelling contest. Of course we expect our delegate to win the county Bee and go to Des Moines.

The following people compose the champion Junior High girls' basket ball team: Alice Nissen, Capt., Marview Hanson, Marian Luick, Aileen Gibbs Mary E. Blake Ethel McMannus, Hildegarde Thormann and Lola Berghefer. This team played the champion seventh girls team and beat them by a score of 9 to 0.

Edward McNulty and Mona Schmidt of seventh A received a scoring of ten in the arithmetic workbook.

Two-thirds of the boys and girls in Miss Hazlett's second grade have successfully played the Breakfast Game for four weeks. That is, they have eaten a cooked cereal at least three times a week for this length of time. This entitles them to a picture for their room.

Miss Quigley's room is getting ready for the Spelling Bee. As yet they have not selected the contestants. They are also learning the best points of debating. The question is, "Resolved, that children should not play in the streets." They have debated once, but the result was a tie. They are planning to debate in the near future. The judges are chosen from the classroom.

Orvis Fitts of the second grade is absent, due to whooping cough.

Mrs. Brady and Mrs. Nordschow visited second and sixth grades last week.

Miss Thompson's third grade have held a teeth-brushing contest for one month. The idea was for each one to brush their teeth twice a day.

The following had a perfect score: Bernadine Ayers, Bernard Ayers, Lucille Cramer, Arlene Dorenkamp, Jean Hake, Violet Kelley Eugene Miller, Meryl Pfaltzgraff, Ralph Rowe, Benny Ruiter, Lowell Trafford, Laura Williams Earl Sheller.

Miss Barry's fifth grade won the P. T. A. pennant once more. This makes the third time for the lucky class. Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Luick visited school Friday.

Fifth and sixth grades have started Bird Study.

Anna Zeigler discontinued her kindergarten work in the Belmond schools.

Miss Cambier's kindergarten children seem to be handy at the carpenter work, for they have now built a store from their blocks. It is a very clever piece of work.

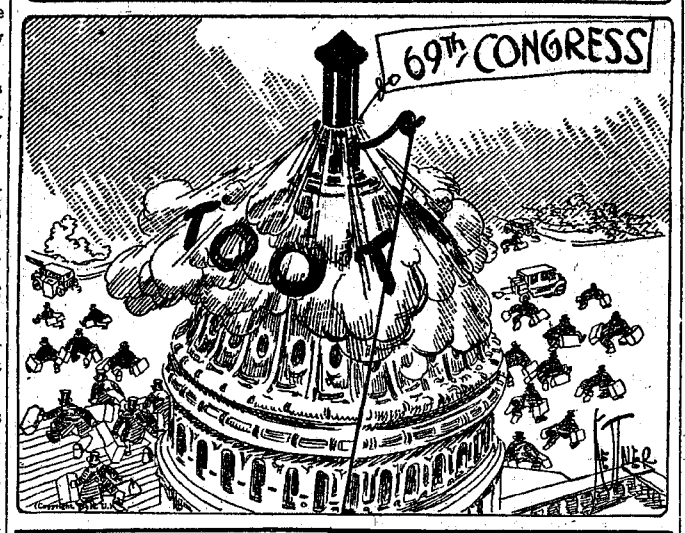
Alec and Marie Zeigler, members of the fourth grade, have left school. Other members of the grade regret very much to lose them.

The basket ball team will go to Mason City, Thursday, March 3, to take part in the district tournament which is to be held there. Coach Hall plans to take eight men.

The high school glee clubs went to Clarion Friday to sing at the meeting of the Wright county Music Organization. Belmond was the only town represented by glee clubs and Miss Waugh was well satisfied with their appearance. The boys were the only ones on either program from whom the audience expressed a wish for an encore. Both clubs are to be praised for their splendid attitude and their faithful attendance at practices.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Leu, Sam Covington and Philmore Amblie left for Belle Fouche, South Dakota, Tuesday morning by automobile, to work in the new sugar beet factory being erected there.

FINIS



SUNDAY SHOW QUESTION UP

Minister Has Manager Arrested For Showing Sunday Movie

Monday morning Rev. Snyder of the Methodist church swore out information against Bernard Moody, manager of the opera house, charging infraction of the "Blue Laws" by operation of the moving picture part of the opera house in Sunday night shows. The information listed three infractions, shows on the nights of Feb. 13, 20 and 27.

Mr. Moody was brought before J. H. Fetrow, justice of the peace, and fined three dollars and costs on each of the three counts, making $6.85 on each count.

Saturday night, the city council in a special meeting is reported to have passed an ordinance prohibiting Sunday operation of theatres in Belmond.

This is the result of agitation over the Sunday movie question which has been brewing the past month. A great deal of comment, favorable and adverse, has been made regarding the action of Rev. Snyder and the city council, and the Sunday movie question has been a main topic of conversation over the town. It is understood that Mr. Moody will not let the matter drop as it stands at present, and has billed another show for this coming Sunday.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

Monday Feb. 28 the Girl Scouts held their weekly meeting. A few of the girls who came early started a game of kick ball. When most of them had arrived we played games and then had a running contest. The girls ran by Patrols and then the best runner from each patrol. Scout Peterson won.

Captain Bond then said we would have the meeting in the auditorium. The meeting was called to order. Roll call and minutes read. Captain Bond then took the bath contest records and the meeting was turned over to the Second Patrol.

The program was as follows:
Talk, "Joan of Arc," Coporal Blake.
Piano Solo, Scout Elder.
Talk, "First Five Laws" Scout Greenlander.
Singling Demonstration, Patrol leader Luick and Scout Gowdy.
Song, All of Patrol.
Bed Making Demonstration, Scout Gibbs and Scout Tracy.
Reading, Scout Gowdy.

This program was enjoyed by all the scouts. Scribe.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week February 19 to 26, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
20	38	13	—	Pt. Cloudy
21	49	25	—	Cloudy
22	49	34	—	Clear
23	52	27	—	Cloudy
24	46	27	—	Cloudy
25	39	27	T	Pt. Cloudy
26	35	16	.03	Cloudy

Mrs. H. L. Schultz returned last Tuesday from Chicago where she had been visiting a sister.

AGITATE FOR TOURIST PARK

Luncheon Club And Legion To Co-Operate For Camp Here

At the meeting of the Business Men's Luncheon club last Thursday, the matter of a tourist park for Belmond was taken up and strongly discussed. It was almost the unanimous opinion of those present that Belmond should have such a park, and that it was a disgrace to the community that one had not been arranged for before. A committe was appointed to work in conjunction with a committee from the American Legion Post here, and with any committee which other clubs or organizations may appoint, and devote every effort toward seeing that such a welcome to tourists is arranged for this spring.

H. F. Luick, as chairman of the committee in charge of the program of the day, of which parks was one item, read an excellent paper on the advantages and beauty possibilities of Belmond's streets and parks.

COMMUNITY CLUB ANNUAL MEETING

The Community Club met for its regular annual business meeting Friday, February 25. After the usual monthly business the standing committees gave their reports for the year.

The rest room committee reported 2,175 visitors as per register during the year.

The treasurer reported money taken in during the year, $443.02; disbursements, $425.05. Leaving a balance of $17.97.

Then the nominating committee submitted the following names for election:

For President, Mrs. R. A. Rankins.
For 1st Vice President, Mrs. G. F. McBurney.
For 2nd Vice President, Mrs. A. W. Russell.
For Secretary, Mrs. Mc J. Thompson.
For Treasurer, Miss Mary Barry.
Press Reporter, Mrs. C. C. Thiltgen.

Upon motion these officers were unanimously elected for the ensuing year.

The calendar committee gave an outline of an interesting program which they are preparing for this next year.

The result of the membership drive was called for next. Mrs. Milligan came first with 35 members. Mrs. Thiltgen second with 32 members and Mrs. Dillon third with eight, making a membership of seventy-five up to date.

The retiring president gave a brief talk and then introduced the new president, Mrs. Rankins. In the talk following, which she gave, it was shown that she was well prepared with new ideas along the line of constructive work for the club for the coming year. Keep your eye on the Community Club this year.

In the item of the Progress club banquet last week, the Independent was in error in reporting the play given. This play was given by Dr. and Mrs. Gowdy and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Skovlin.

SEE THE CORN BORER

Farmer readers of The Independent are invited to call at this office and inspect some genuine speciments of the Corn Borer, the little worm which, if it eve gets into Iowa corn fields, will cause farmers more hard times than they have experienced yet. This paper has secured laboratory specimens of the borer from Iowa State College, especially for rural readers, which may be seen and examined at The Independent at any time. The borers are shown just as they work in the corn stalk, and the tremendous damage they can cause is very evident. Stop in and see the corn borer when you are in town.

GOOD TIME COMING

Folks who enjoy a good time will not want to miss the old-fashioned basket social to be held Friday evening, March 11, in the library parlors by the Community Club. A full evening of fun is being planned, with a program guaranteed to chase away the blues and create an appetite for the good things the baskets will contain. The social will be a public affair, with everyone welcome. Details of the event and program will be given next week.

OBITUARY

Ralph Albert Tiara was born in Polk County, Iowa, near Des Moines, December 22, 1904. In 1910 he moved with his parents to their farm near Belmond, Iowa which has been his home ever since.

After completing his common school education in the rural schools, he attended the Belmond High School from which he graduated in 1923. Ralph then entered Coe College at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and was there for two years. While at Coe he was affiliated with the Alpha Delta Alpha social fraternity. He was very active in all the activities of his fraternity and during his last year was chosen captain of their champion basketball team. His genial, kindly nature endeared him not only to the members of his fraternity but to the student body and everyone had a good word to say for "Ty."

While in Cedar Rapids attending Coe, he united with the First English Lutheran Church on Easter Sunday in his Freshman year. No member was more active in furthering the Cause of Christ. Ralph was always at Sunday School and other church services. He not only came himself but would bring along a dozen or more of his fraternity brothers and succeeded in enlisting them in the good work. He was the first president of the Muhlenburg Class, a mixed class composed mostly of college girls and boys. Under his leadership the class prospered remarkably well. He was still president of the class at his death, and was always vitally interested in it. His splendid example, his Christian character, his unselfish, friendly nature exerted an influence that will never be forgotten. Sadness fills the hearts of the entire membership of the First English Lutheran Church but they thank God that they knew Ralph and that his influence was always on the right side.

It is hardly necessary to set forth Ralph's good qualities to the people of Belmond and vicinity. They better than others knew his sterling worth. Sadness will fill the hearts of the boys and girls who were his classmates in school. Business men will miss his face in their places of business. Neighbors will feel keenly the loss of one whom they loved because they felt that Ralph was one who loved the whole world. Surely there will be comfort in knowing that this community is better because Ralph lived in it.

He was 22 years, 2 months and 1 day old. He passed away quietly on Wednesday, February 23rd, at ten o'clock p. m. He leaves to mourn his untimely death his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Tiara, three brothers, John, Joseph and George, a twin sister, Ruth Alberta, and his betrothed, Miss Louise Worley of Cedar Rapids. A host of relatives and friends will mourn with them

(Continued on page eight)

CHICKEN THIEF CAUGHT IN SOUTH

Sheriff Johnson Gets Man In Kansas For Stealing Poultry At Dows Recently.

ADMITS HE IS GUILTY ONE

H. L. Peters has been brought back here from Jetmore, Kansas to answer to a charge of stealing chickens and to passing forged checks. Ever since Dewey LaRue was arrested for poultry thefts in the vicinity of Dows, Peters has been sought as an accomplice. He is being held in the county jail awaiting a time when he can appear before a district judge, plead to the charges made against him and receive sentence.

Sheriff Fred Johnson departed Wednesday evening for Kansas after hearing that Peters had been apprehended in a rather secluded section in the southwest corner of the state. The sheriff arrived here Saturday with his prisoner, who on Sunday made a written confession of his several offenses.

Participation in chicken stealing was not his most serious offense, for three instances of forgery are also being pressed against him. At the Shupe & Son Hardware he bought a knife with a $10 check, then proceeded to duplicate the trick at the McGahey hardware, later passing a $25 check at the State Bank of Dows, all of them signed with the name of A. J. King, a well known farmer, for whom Peters said he was working.

Officers who have been on his trail find he is a confirmed crook. He was sentenced fifteen years from Kossuth county for uttering a forged instrument and was later paroled to James Patton of Dows. In 1924 he was sent up from Butler county on a charge of adultery, and by good behavior was released last year. It is now charged that he stole chickens from the man who befriended him when he desired a parole.

The grand jury is still in session, with no prospect of immediate adjournment. They enjoyed a short recess Thursday evening until Monday, however.

Through misinterpretation of the transcript furnished in connection with papers filed in a suit in which V. F. Mikesell appealed to the district court a case in which he sought an accounting with Cato Griesy, the Monitor made a misstatement of facts which are corrected as follows: Mikesell first sued Griesy as a member of the Motor Inn company for the sum of $111, and interest, in the court of Justice C. J. Rowen, claiming the sum for services rendered. This claim was disputed by the defendant and the members of the Motor Inn company, who in turn filed counter claim against Mikesell in the amount of $75.94, which amount was claimed as pay for merchandise purchased of Griesy. A jury in justice court awarded a judgment against Mikesell in the full amount of $75.94, ignored his claim and assessed all costs of the trial against him. Mr. Mikesell has since filed an appeal to the district court.

District court was recessed from Friday noon until Monday while Judge H. E. Fry went home to see his daughter who has been seriously ill. The court is still engaged with the Thompson case, which is being fought stubbornly by both sides, and which is bringing out considerable information concerning banking proceedure that has not formerly been brought to light.

L. A. Andrew, for Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove, is suing William M. Larson for $66 claimed to be rent due on a farm in Lake township which he leased from L. J. Clarke, who assigned the land to the bank in liquidation of a note.

Judge Fry granted a divorce to August Groshens from Annie Groshens. A stipulation was filed in court dividing a 160-acre farm equally between the two parties.

John L. Godfrey, who brought suit to enforce fulfillment of purchase contract for Eagle Grove property by Jesse Radohl, was given a quit claim deed to the property and a payment of $75 to relieve defendants of further responsibility on the contract.—Monitor.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

President Coolidge vetoed the McNary-Haugen farm bill, as this paper has prephesied from the beginning. In vetoing it, he killed any political hopes he may have been entertaining for 1928. After this bill had been endorsed by the great majority of men over the country who are familiar with agriculture and its problems and needs; after it had passed both the senate and house with strong majorities; after it had been fought for and worked for and pushed forward by the one class of people in this country who need relief the most, and who have enjoyed the least of the prosperity which, according to Coolidge and the East, the country is now enjoying, the president kills it. Nothing else could be expected from him. Coolidge has never demonstrated since he became president that his vision was wide enough to encompass the nation; he has had the New England viewpoint, and has never been able to get beyond the confines of that one particular section. He has refused to listen to the advice and views of anyone familiar with agriculture; he has taken the council of Secretary Mellon—the real president of the United States—and of Hoover, Jardine, McNider and their like. If he has entertained hopes of the 1928 nomination, he had better get over the idea. Coolidge can be nominated—in fact, may be—but the nomination is not election. The prompt action of the Iowa legislature in starting a boom for Lowden within an hour after the news was received of the veto, is highly significant. As the situation now stands, 1928 will see either Lowden or a democrat in the presidential chair—or Charlie Dawes.

If the president did not think the McNary-Haugen bill amounted to much; if he did not think it would do the farmers any good, why not give it a trial? Other men thought it would. If it wouldn't, then certainly a trial would not have caused very much grief, and the farmers could not say they had been denied a chance. A trial of the bill would at least have had a cheering effect on agriculture. As it is, the situation is, if anything, worse than before. To say the solution of the farmer's problem lies with himself is pure bunk. No farmer can solve a problem that makes him take less than cost of production for his goods. He cannot raise the price alone. To say he should feed his corn to hogs and make his profit thru pork is equally without logic; if every farmer raised hogs where would the price go? To tell him to restrict acreage is just as foolish; a nation's safety depends upon a surplus of agricultural products, without a surplus a year of poor crops would bring famine to the country. We must always have a surplus; the problem is to take care of that necessary surplus without forcing the producer to take a loss on the whole crop. We have no time for that windjammer who says the farmer's troubles are his own fault, that all he needs to do is to work harder and spend less, that he should do without automobiles, radios, and other enjoyments of civilization. Undoubtedly there are farmers who spend too much, who work too little, who conduct their farms without any business method, who do not know where they stand. But that holds true in any line of business; there are always failures in every line of endeavor, men who have not the ability to succeed. But you cannot condemn the whole by a part. If other classes of society are privileged to enjoy the comforts of modern civilization, so is the farmer. You cannot have a prosperity that benefits one class at the distress of another; such a prosperity is false and cannot long endure. The foundation of America is agriculture; unless you have a strong foundation you cannot have an enduring structure. The farmers of the country should not drop the battle, they must keep right on fighting until they get their just dues, and if those in power will not give them justice, then put in power those who will. The great issue of the 1928 campaign has been made. There will be plenty of fireworks.

The movement now under way for a tourist park for Belmond this year should receive the hearty support of every good citizen. Such a park is badly needed, and it is rather a disgrace to the community that a town this size, on a main primary road, does not have one. Using the city park as a tourist camp is unsatisfactory, and is strongly objectionable to many residing near it. There are no facilities there for a tourist camp with the exception of light and water. The space is small and inconvenient. No one who has not enjoyed the comforts and facilities of a tourist camp can realize how much it means to the automobile traveler. Those who have enjoyed such camps will realize the real need of one in Belmond. One party of tourists who camp here expecting something and receiving nothing, can do Belmond more damage than all our advertising of our city's attractions can undo. There appears to be a strong sentiment for a tourist park here, a sentiment that is growing stronger. As long as such a camp is needed, and can be had at a small cost, with the co-operation of the various clubs and civic organizations it would seem one could be secured.

WHY FARMERS COMPLAIN

Algona Republican: If there is any class of people on the face of the earth who have a just cause to complain of conditions, it is the farmer. He is, and has been, for years, at the mercy of the monopolies and corporations of the east and has suffered untold losses during the past few years by the manipulations of his products by the gamblers on Wall street, who have grown into multi-millionaires at the expense of his labors and suffering. Occasionally a farmer will state that he is and has been making money, regardless of the oppressed conditions. We do not contradict him, but his kind are mighty scarce. The farmer who has made money has indeed been fortunate and the God of plenty has smiled upon him. He has been favored with seasonable weather, fortunate perhaps, in the selection of his seed and more fortunate by having health, not only in his family, but his herds and flocks. With all these favorable conditions, these successful farmers have received but a small percent of the final value of his products and if he has saved ten or fifteen percent on his investment and labors, the other fellows have cleaned up a much larger percent no labor or grief. The majority, however, have not been blessed with all of these favorable conditions. They have met with misfortunes of one kind or another that have eaten up their share of the products they have raised. Perhaps disease has entered the herds and they have sustained heavy losses from this source. In this case, they must dispose of their corn and grain on the market, for what? Just what the buyer wishes to pay, and when he figures his rent if he is a renter, the interest on his investment if he is an owner, his taxes, upkeep and living, he finds himself several hundred dollars poorer than when the season began. This is the condition of the large majority. There is no question as to what they pay for the necessities, machinery and things they must have, the prices are fixed and it's pay the price or leave it alone. That's why the farmer complains.

Storm Lake Register: Newspapers of northern Iowa, be it said to their credit, are lining up practically as a unit in opposition to the $100,000,000 road bond issue. The stupid fellows, charged with the task of editing these papers probably haven't been convinced that the state can expend $100,000,000 without taxing somebody. Maybe it can be done, but the writer of this column doesn't believe it.

Webster City Freeman-Journal: The way to reduce taxes can certainly not be to make new ones. Iowa has enough troubles now without getting into a state income tax, says the Sibley Tribune, and the Freeman-Journal is inclined to agree.

Marshalltown Times-Republican: It seems to be up to Iowa to choose between more factories in the state or a state income tax. Those who are thinking of establishing manufacturing plants in Iowa are not likely to put the noose around their own necks.

Farmers are studying how to feed balanced rations to the cattle and hogs, and the women know how to feed it to the chickens, but how many mothers know what is a balanced ration for a growing child?

There are three things food must do for the body. It must furnish it heat and energy. It must repair broken down tissues and build up new ones. It must correct defects and regulate the action of the body. It takes different kinds of food to perform these different functions.

Fats, sugars and starches are the fuel foods. An adult is likely to eat too much of these foods and become fat and loggy; but it is not probable that an active child will eat too much of them. If one eats too much of the heating foods he becomes bilious. Candy should rarely—if ever—be eaten by an adult, unless he lives a very active, outdoor life and uses up much heat and energy. But it is a good food for a child, in moderation. It should be eaten after other and plainer foods, in order that it will not rob him of an appetite for these. If the body is not supplied with enough fuel food, it will burn its own tissues and the person will become thin. Such a diet is a good reducing diet for overweight folk, but not for children or young people.

Our bodies would be damaged or worn out if we did not supply them with building materials. A growing child needs not only enough to repair tissues, but to build up and grow. The building foods are grains, legumes, nuts, milk, cheese, eggs lean meat. Without lime iron and phosphorus the body will not appropriate and utilize the other building foods. These mineral salts are found in vegetables, fruits and milk. If your child does not grow—though apparently healthy—give him more green vegetables and fresh milk.

If there were not regulating foods in our body, the fires would burn brightly for a time, then become choked up. We would be hot and cold, and the machinery would become sluggish and clogged; and poisons would accumulate. Regulating foods act as the stove poker and dampers to stir up the fires or hold them down. They are found chiefly in wheat grains, milk, eggs, fresh fruit and vegetables.

THE CHILDREN'S PARTY

Life is made up of contact with other people and the sooner the children learn to make these contacts graciously, easily and happily, the better for them. For Mother, it is frankly a difficult thing to entertain twenty or forty of John's or Jane's darling friends for two hectic hours; but occasionally it must be done.

Make the party fun, if you can. Give the children something to laugh at heartily and merrily—and then ice-cream! Bewildered, dressed-up, repressed, frightened by the presence of so many strangers, the party is really an ordeal for some children, until the blessed moment when the ice-cream comes.

The party which is enjoyable is as simple, gay, and informal as possible. Study up a program of games in advance to be prepared to keep the guests busy. However, let them do what they want to do. If two or three wish to play some game in a corner by themselves, or somebody curls up in a corner with a book, do not insist that every guest join in some boring game. Let them do the thing they find most interesting to do.

For small children, make the refreshments simple. If you serve about five o'clock, let the refreshments be the children's evening meal—something like a small portion of steamed rice with creamed chicken, bread and butter sandwiches, ice-cream and simple sponge cake or cookies. Then nobody goes home with a stomach upset for the night.

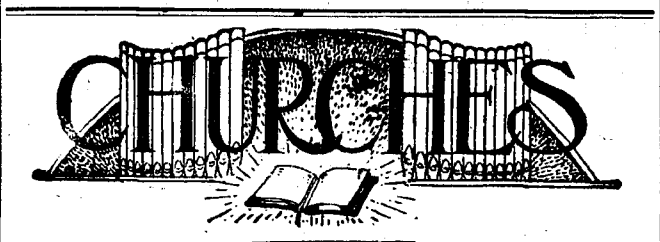
FASHIONS, FADS, FOIBLES

The evening gowns of the day, or rather of the night, are gauzy and filmy. Lace and chiffon are favorite materials. The lace gown is ideal to take with you when you travel, for it does not muss in thesuit case.

A flower blooms on almost every left shoulder today. Formerly it stood out brightly, but it now matches the garment on which it is worn.

Hose for dress are losing their gay color and the shades of black, dull brown and grey predominate. No color, but merely shaded flesh, is the effect when on the leg. They are very sheer and thin.

Many mothers are putting loving stitches into little dimities, fine lawn and organdie dresses for wee misses. These run riot in color; gay canary yellow, rose pink, sky blue and grass green.



TRINITY CHURCH
Rev. G. Guldseth, pastor

Thursday, March 3 Trinity Ladies' Aid will meet at the church parlors at 2:00 p. m.

The Mid-week prayer meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m.

Sunday, March 6 services will be held in the English language at 10:30 and in the Norwegian at 11:30 a. m.

Monday to Wednesday, March 6 to 9, the Annual Mission Meeting of the Eagle Grove circuit of our church will be held at Linn Grove. We hope many of our people will find time to attend this meeting.

Wednesday, March 9 the local catechetical class will meet at 7:00 p. m.

Thursday, March 10 mid-week prayer meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m.

ST. OLAF CHURCh
Rev. G. Guldseth, pastor

Sunday, March 6 English services will be held at 7:30 p. m.

Wednesday, March 9 mid-week prayer meeting as usual at 2:00 p. m.

Thursday, March 10 the South Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. Severt Evans at 2:00 p. m.

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, March 6:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. Your fellowship appreciated.

Divine Worship at 11:00 a. m. At this hour of worship will observe Holy Communion of the Lord's Supper. Opportunity will be given for the rite of baptism and reception of members by letter or confession of faith.

Epworth League at 6:30. Harry Webb, Leader. This is consecration night. A general invitation is extended to all our young folks.

Evening Worship and Gospel Message at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "Ordinarily Out of Time with God." Luke 15:17.

The Standard Bearers will meet with Mrs. McBurney on Thursday, March 3, at 7:30 p. m.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. C. H. Jennings on Thursday afternoon, Mrs. F. A. Snyder, assistant hostess. Mrs. J. S White, lesson leader, and Mrs. John Spittler will have charge of Mystery Box. All welcome.

You are most cordially invited to all of our services.

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN
J. F. Wipperman, Pastor.

Divine service Sunday morning at 10:45 in the Germon language.

Sunday School at 9:45.

Services Sunday evening at 7:30 in the English language.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10:00 a. m.—Bible Study Hour. Subject: "Sharing the Good News."

11:00 a. m.—Morning Worship and Sermon. At this hour the pastor will continue the subject of the Sunday School Hour, "Sharing, or Spreading the Good News." We all like to tell good news, and the best news in all the world is the gospel of Christ. But who is to spread this good news? Is it only to be done by the ministers or by all Christians? Whatever you may think about your share in this work, remember that the greatest sermon in the world, the one that does most good to one's self or to others, is the sermon that is neither preached nor talked nor written. It is the sermon that is lived, by the true follower of the Christ. I do not care what your creed or profession may be; but what is your life? Can we be trusted always to do the fair and square thing. Is our word good as good as our bond? Do people know us to always speak the truth? What is the public opinion about you and me, here in Belmond and where we were before we came here? This is a big subject, think about it, then come, to hear what a minister thinks about it.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

Barbarossa

A GERMAN lad—nearly eight hundred years ago—made Charlemagne his model in life, and resolved to duplicate the French king's feats and win the same power and glory. Like many another historical celebrity, the German youth was red-haired. From this fact his Italian enemies later nicknamed him "Barbarossa" (Red-Beard). His Christian name was Frederick and he was nephew of Conrad, emperor of Germany.

Charlemagne had one early advantage over Barbarossa, for he was direct heir to the throne, while Conrad had a son of his own. Yet so cleverly did the young Barbarossa arrange matters that he, and not this rightful heir, was chosen by Conrad as his successor. The people ratified the choice, and on Conrad's death in 1152 Barbarossa, then twenty-nine years old, came to the throne.

He found Germany in no enviable condition. Disputes had arisen among the petty principalities of the country, and, under Conrad's easy rule, the ties of allegiance had weakened. Moreover, Germany's claims to suzerainty in Italy and other lands had been allowed to lapse. Altogether, Barbarossa had a very poor start in his plan of rivaling Charlemagne's greatness.

In no way discouraged at the gloomy prospect, the young king set to work at once reconciling the differences among the home principalities and making decidedly advantageous alliances and treaties for himself at home and abroad. Unlike most medieval heroes, he was more than a mere warrior. He was also a shrewd politician and an adept in the art of cajoling when coercion failed. In this way he proceeded to strengthen and consolidate Germany into a compact, contented nation. He then made municipal and civic reforms, promoted the cause of education and culture and started Germany once more upon the path of progress.

Having accomplished these tremendous tasks, Barbarossa turned his attention to the Italians who had shaken off Germany's yoke. The Milanese, who ruled much of the northern part of Italy, had maltreated German subjects. Barbarossa, at the head of an army, marched against these rebels, conquered them and laid waste northern Italy. Having thus avenged his subjects' real or fancied wrongs, he marched over the Apennines upon Rome, and there, on June 18, 1155, he was crowned "Holy Roman Emperor." The resemblance to Charlemagne being thus far carried out, he hurried back to Germany, whence tidings had come of robber knights and barons who, taking advantage of their emperor's absence, had set out on a high-handed course of misrule.

Barbarossa wasted little time in crushing these oppressors. He then resumed his plans of conquest. By diplomacy more than by force he won the allegiance of Poland, of Hungary, of Bohemia and the powerful French province of Burgundy. He then went back to Italy and besieged and captured Milan.

The pope, noting this rapid acquisition of power, demanded that Barbarossa become a papal vassal. Barbarossa calmly refused and showed himself able and ready to enforce his refusal. The pope for the time withdrew his demands. But it was soon after this that Barbarossa scandalized Christendom by practically declaring war on the Vatican.

The dispute was purely political and cast no reflection on the emperor's religious faith. Alexander III was pope. Barbarossa favored an anti-pope's claims. Alexander promptly excommunicated him. Barbarossa, in retaliation, stormed Rome and took possession of the Vatican. Italy held its breath at such sacrilege. But even while the world looked on, spellbound, a pestilence swept the German army at Rome (sent, as Alexander declared, in punishment for Barbarossa's blasphemous conduct), and of all that vast host only a scattered remnant returned alive to Germany.

At sight of this weakening of their dreaded master's forces the cities of Lombardy, Italy, formed a confederation against Barbarossa, utterly routing him in battle at Lignano. The emperor was crushed under his falling horse and left on the field for dead. But within three days he reappeared—miraculously, it was thought—at the head of his surviving troops at Pavia.

His plans were defeated, his great power apparently gone. Another man would have despaired. But Barbarossa merely exchanged war once more for diplomacy. He acknowledged Alexander as the true pope and by various crafty maneuvers of wire-pulling and statesmanship regained political control of Italy. Not content with this, he set forth to capture the Holy Land from the Turks. He won two decisive victories in Asia Minor, but before he could reach Palestine itself he was drowned, in 1190, while trying to cross a river—an inglorious death for the hero who had conquered and ruled the greater part of the continent of Europe!

Barbarossa's achievements in behalf of his native land marked a distinct epoch in history. He helped on the cause of the people by granting rights and franchises to cities, and set a world example of model and progressive government. Civilization and the arts throve under his wise reign.

FREE AIR

We just want to say that nothing in this Colyum should ever be taken seriously. One fellow did, and he hasn't been a subscriber since. He borrows his neighbor's paper.

* * * * *

It's good to take some things seriously, but not all things. And this Colyum is not a serious affair—in this sense.

* * * *

Curfew Must Not Ring Tonight

Slowly Bernard's Ford was moving
Up the avenue one day,
As he pensively controlled it
And meandered on his way.
His thoughts were gray and gloomy,
And a frown was on his brow,
As he thot of how things could be
And as they were just now.
His face, so sad and solemn,
Became a shade more white
As he clinched his teeth and muttered
"Curfew must not ring tonight."

While the councilmen consulted
And talked the matter thru,
The mayor consulted with them,
As all good mayors should do;
And they reached the same conclusion
Which was they did not know
Whether Fat should be permitted
To hold his Sunday show.
And the deacons, all assembled,
Waved their hands in wild affright
As Bernard still insisted:
"Curfew shall not ring tonight."

It was o'er; the war was ended,
And the quiet countryside
Was bathed in peace and sunshine
As the battle clamor died.
All the councilmen were happy,
And His Honor happy, too,
And the Ford no longer rambled
Up the peaceful avenue,
The sky was red with glory
As the sun sank out of sight,
For the question had been settled,
"Curfew ? ? ? ? night!"

* * * *

Middle West farmers are having one awful job this past week trying to keep cool with Coolidge.

* * * *

In fact, things got so out here that the weather turned warm.

* * * *

And nearly every farmer has an axe he is running over the grindstone, anticipating a little political decapitating next year.

* * * *

Did March come in like a lamb or a lion? We weren't able to determine. One thing sure, there's always a lot of lyin' about it.

* * * *

Ho, hum, whataya suppose will be next?

Local News

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Barema are the parents of a baby daughter, born Feb. 21.

Miss Jackson's Sunday School class of the Methodist church enjoyed a party in the church parlors Friday evening.

Floyd Bailey and family, of Wichita, Kansas, arrived last Thursday for a visit with Floyd's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Bailey, and other relatives.

Mrs. Wm. Leonard, of Swaledale, was a guest Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Rankins.

T. O. Tomson, of Clear Lake, was a visitor with friends and relatives here the first of the week.

Mr and Mrs. Chas. Ritchhart, Mrs. Harry Kingman, of Grimes, Iowa, and Mrs. Walker Kempton, of Des Moines drove up from Polk county Friday to be at the funeral of Ralph Tiara.

Mr. and Mrs. Norris Soma are the parents of a baby girl, born Feb. 17.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nourse and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Jennings motored to Eagle Grove, Tuesday.

On Friday evening, February 25th friends to the number of 108 gathered for a farewell surprise party on Mr and Mrs. S. O. Windecker, who have sold their store stock at Olaf and are soon moving to Iowa Falls. Well filled lunch baskets provided a fine lunch and a purse of money was presented to them as a token of remembrance.

Mr. and Mrs. Windecker will be greatly missed by their many friends in this community where they have lived for the past twelve years.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

RAISE FEWER BUT BETTER HENS

Few eggs are in storage—only a half of the normal amount—but the storage of poultry is over a fourth larger than normal. In view of this situation, poultry extension specialists at Iowa State College are urging the adoption of a slogan, "Fewer but better hens in Iowa."

In order to secure better hens the poultrymen urge producing better chicks, one of the first essentials for which is hatching at the proper time. Orpingtons should be hatched between February 1 and March 15, Reds, Rocks and Wyandottes between March 1 and April 1, Wyandottes between March 1 and April 1, Leghorns and Anconas between April 1 and May 15.

The second essential in raising good chicks is to use "Ames Poultry Panacea," which includes raising chicks on clean grounds—not previously used for some time by poultry.

The chicks should receive a well balanced ration including milk. Each lot of chicks should be brooded separately and the sexes divided when the chicks are 6 to 8 weeks old. Over-crowding of the brooder houses should be avoided.

Special instructions on the above points are being offered in Cerro Gordo, Winneshiek, Wright, Boone, Guthrie, Emmet and Benton counties this year thru the farm bureaus. The work is taken up in five different meetings.

GIVES "SPUD" SEED HOT BATH

By using the hot formaldehyde method of treating the seed, the potato crop was increased 15 bushels per acre in 1926 on the 3,600 acres of the Albert Lea Farms Co., Hollandale, Minn., according to a report of the sales manager of this firm to I. E. Melhus, head of the department of Plant Pathology at Iowa State College, who was the discoverer of the process.

The total increase on the 3,600 acres as a result of the treatment was 54,00 bushels at a cost of $3,500. The net profit from the venture at present potato prices would be about $50,000.

A visit of the Albert Lea Farms manager to the Kaw Valley in Kansas inspired the use of the hot formaldehyde method. In the Kaw Valley increases of as much as 40 bushels have been secured by the treatment.

This hot formaldehyde treatment, which is also used by many Iowa potato growers, consists of the following essentials: To 30 gallons of water add 1 quart of commercial formalin and heat to 120 to 125 degrees F. Soak the seed in this solution, while held at this temperature, for from 3 to 5 minutes. Remove the potatoes, place in disinfected containers and cover for a short time in order to hold the fumes of the solution on the tubers as long as possible.

LIGHT HOGS WILL TOP MARKET

Light butcher hogs, weighing from 200 to 240 pounds, will top the hog market this spring, altho the present tendency is toward heavier hogs, due to cheap corn, according to C. A. Mallory, of Chicago, representative of John Clay and Company, livestock commission firm. Mr. Mallory, who has been in the livestock buying game for over fifty years, talked to a large audience of farmers during Farm and Home Week, Iowa State College, Ames, January 31-February 4.

There is no danger either this year or next year of the hog market dropping badly," said Mr. Mallory. At the present time there is a big demand for feeder hogs with few to be had, the demand for finished hogs is steady at all times and there seems to be little danger of too many hogs being sent in. By this time, said Mr. Mallory, the eastern hogs have been practically all sent to market and the east is again buying larger quantities of western hogs and will continue to do so until October. The hogs grown in the east are marketed from October to January, and from January on, western hogs have their innings on the eastern market.

Due to the large cotton crop this year, cottonseed oil has reached a new low level and as a result lard is a drug on the market. For this reason heavy hogs are not in great demand, and will not be until lard prices come back, according to Mr. Mallory.

He also referred to South America as a future rival of the Iowa hog feeder, Argentina having everything necessary to produce pork for world trade except the intelligence and the ambition. A few giant hog ranches in South America give evidence of what can be expected from this source in the future. Europe has started raising its own hogs since the war and as a result there is practically no exportation of pork from America to Europe at the present time.

When asked what breed of hogs was most favored by the buyers for the large packing houses, Mr. Mallory said that there was little choice with the possible exception of the Spotted Poland Chinas, the packers being prejudiced against this breed at present. Hampshires, Duroc Jerseys, Poland Chinas and Yorkshires are all popular with the large packing plants, he said.

Mr. Mallory was asked concerning a premium for bacon hogs over ordinary hogs. At present, with the exception of Cudahy's at Milwaukee there is no premium paid for prime bacon hogs of either the Tamworth or Yorkshire breeds, altho the packers realize more for the bacon from these hogs.

CHEESE

One of our best and cheapest foods is cheese. There is no waste of bone or leaf or water in buying cheese. It is all pure nourishment. Because it is such a hearty food, it should not be eaten with meat, pie or other concentrated foods, but with vegetabels, fruits, bran bread or crackers. Cheese contains lime and protein and fats. Escallop potatoes or macaroni with cheese.

ADD TANG

A bit or orange or lemon peel or an orange cut in bits, added to stewed prunes takes away that insipid taste. Chopped nut meats may be added to spiced prunes, which have been removed from the stones. Vinegar cooked in the prunes adds flavor. A meringue a-top of prunes, removed from the stones, makes a really delightful dish.

FEED GRINDING!

We are equipped to do your feed grinding and give you satisfaction. Give us a trial—bring your next order in to us.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER COMING! Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

ALFALFA HAY

We have a car of choice 3rd cutting pea green alfalfa hay coming. $26.50 per ton off car. Leave your order.

Full line of Feeds, Flour, Salt, Coal, Wire, Posts, Twine, Seeds, and General Merchandise.

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt, Sterling Chick Feed, Dickinson's Seeds, Swift's Tankage, Plymouth Twine, Star Fence, ABC Canned Fruit, Seal of Minnesota and Clear Quill Flour. Prices right.

Highest prices paid for Grain. Give us a trial.

Office Phones: Clarion, 54F32; Rowan, 7406.
Residence Phone: Clarion, 25F11.

Farmers Co-operative Co.

J. A. OLSON, Mgr.

SOLBERG, IOWA

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, March 3, 1927. No. 47

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

There's a lady in Belmond who is always referring to the almanac for the weather. Last week the predictions made good for three straight days and she bragged about it. One of the family investigated and found that she had been looking at the month of January instead of February.

—

Most homes are now being built with hardwood floors throughout. Those who have experienced the pleasure and satisfaction of hardwood can't be satisfied with any other. We can give you an estimate on new floors in your home in a very few minutes.

—

Sorry we missed this account of the launching of a ship in Australia: "The ship was christened by Mrs. Stevens, who broke a bottle of wine over the stern and slid gracefully down the ways into the water."

—

The man in the library started at the volumes of the encyclopedia — from AUS down through BIS and CHA, clear to ZYM. "Gosh," he remarked, "I've never tuned in on one of them stations."

—

"If it were not for our chickens. I don't know what we'd do," remarked a lady of our acquaintance yesterday. There is one family that is getting by this year in spite of the short crop.

—

Sheet Rock can be installed under any weather conditions, and at any time of year. It can be papered, painted, calcimined or pannelled; any decoration to suit your taste.

—

E. H. Brewer tells us of the stingiest man in the world. This man took his bride for a trolley ride for their honeymoon trip. During the trip he bought her a nickel's worth of peppermints. When they got off the car he said, "Honey, suppose we save the rest of this candy for the children."

HORSE and MULE AUCTION SALE!

The undersigned will sell at auction at the Foundry Building, at the Rock Island yards, on

Saturday, Mar. 12

COMMENCING AT 1:30 O'CLOCK P. M.

20 - Head Horses and Mules - 20

14 - Head of Horses - 14

1 PAIR MARE COLTS, 2 yrs. old.
1 BAY HORSE, 12 yrs. old, wt. 1400.
1 ROAN MARE, 12 yrs. old, in foal, wt. 1650.
1 BLACK MARE, 7 yrs. old, in foal, wt. 1500.
1 BLUE ROAN GELDING, 4 yrs. old, wt. 1300.
1 TEAM BLACK GELDINGS, 8 yrs. old, wt. 3000.
1 BAY TEAM, horse and mare, 8 yrs. old, wt. 3000.
1 TEAM GELDINGS, Black and Bay, 7 yrs. old, wt. 3200.
1 TEAM GRAY MARES, MATCHED, coming 5 yrs. old, wt. 2800.

6 Head of Mules

1 TEAM BUCKSKIN MULES, 5 yrs. old, wt. 2200.

1 MULE, 8 yrs. old, wt. 1500.

1 TEAM DAPPLE GRAY MULES, 5 yrs. old, wt. 2200.

1 MULE, 5 yrs. old, wt. 1100, sound, broke to all harness.

100 - Bushel Seed Potatoes - 100

Harness and Machinery

2 sets mule harness, one nearly new.
4 sets work harness.
1 plow.
1 drag.
4 wagons.
1 pulverizer.
1 cultivator.
1 corn sheller, 1-hole hand.
Some other articles.

TERMS

Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

State Bank of Belmond, Clerk

H. Brummond, Auct.

W. J. McLAUGHLIN, E. F. BAILEY, Props.

MESERVEY SECTION

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. G. E. Raecker, supt.

Morning worship 10:45.

Subject: "Who Is Jesus?" A study of John 4.

E. L. C. E. 7 p. m. Subject: "Stewardship of Principle of Life." Leader, Mrs. Laurence Sohl.

Evening service at 7:30.

Thursday evening E. L. C. E. business meeting at the C. J. Wendel home. This meeting was postponed on account of various reasons. There is much business to be attended to, and therefore every member should be present. Others are invited.

Wednesday at 7:30 German prayer meeting at C. Halfpop home.

Thursday at 7:30 Mid week services and study of Sunday school lesson for the following Sunday. All are urged to attend.

Saturday evening at 7:30 the last quarterly conference and preparatory services for the Holy Communion.

Sunday, March 13, Holy Communion.

March 20 the conference year closes and all should settle with the church treasurer for the year before that time.

The Missions and Benevolences of the church are depending on our faithfulness. Read Math. 25:31-end.

Laurence Sohl, pastor.

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:30.

Morning worship at 10:30 (Ger.)

Young people's meeting at 7:15.

Evening preaching services at 8.

Senior class in catechism meets on Tuesday at 3:20 at the parsonage.

Classes in catechism meet Saturday at 1:30 p. m.

The annual day of prayer for the divine blessing upon farm and industry will be observed Wednesday, March 9 at 10 a. m. This service will be in the German language.

Sunday morning a collection will be taken up for foreign missions. Let us all do our part.

The Ladies Aid met Feb. 15. Mrs. Harm J. Groen served refreshments. Three dollars fifteen cents was received by the treasurer.

Be an active supporter of your local church in every way you are able. To do so will bring you more Christian joy than anything else can.

Both of our services extend a warm welcome to all who have no church home.

H. Pannkuk, pastor.

VIERKANT-HARMS

The marriage of Miss Grace Vierkant and Jake Harms took place at the Reformed parsonage, Tuesday, Feb. 23, the Rev. Pannkuk officiating. Miss Vierkant is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Vierkant, living southeast of town. The groom's parents reside at Hollandale, Minn., and the couple left the same day to spend a week at their home and with other friends there before moving on the A. Kolb farm just vacated by the Ed. Coyle family. Best wishes of the many friends of bride and groom are extended.

MOVING TIME

Several farmers from here moved to other points last week. Clay Klinefelder and family moved to the Klinefelder home place near Alexander. Gratus Cooper and wife left for their new home near Kanawha, and Ed. Coyles' moved to a farm near Swaledale. Forest Gobeli moved to his father's farm. Merle Kennedy and family will operate the farm vacated by Gobeli's. Heiko Kuhlers' moved to a farm 1 miles northeast of here several weeks ago. G. Gobeli has purchased property in Klemme and will make their home there.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

The annual dinner served to the school board and their wives and to the faculty was given Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, by the Home Economics class, assisted by Mrs H. F. Reif and Miss Hallie Ward. Goldie Quandt and Neva Muller were the waitresses. Following was the menu:

Cream of Tomato Soup
Roast Pork
Mashed Potatoes with Brown Gravy
Escalloped Corn
Parker House Rolls Jelly
Olives
Perfection Salad
Sherbert Cake Coffee

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schulte and Mrs. Dirksen of Alexander visited at the F. Ostendorf and S. Hulsebus homes one day last week.

Arthur Schroedemeier of Waverly visited relatives here last Friday. Rev. H. Raecker returned home with him for an over Sunday visit.

Supt. Taulbee and the Misses Eva and Harriet Sprau, Wilfa Pals, Mr. John Wieman and daughter, Dena, motored to Geneva Tuesday evening to be present at the declamatory contest.

Roy Claus arrived here Monday with stock and household goods, from Emmetsburg. Mrs. Claus and daughter, her mother and brother also came that evening. Mr. and Mrs. Claus are moving on the farm which they purchased last summer, a mile north of town.

G. E. Raecker and wife, Mrs. H. Fischer, Mrs. C. J. Wendel and Miss Alice Schoenweiss were Mason City callers, Monday, the latter returning to her home at Waverly from there

Bert Stadtlander of Latimer and Crist Stadtlander of Alexander were business callers here Wednesday.

Edwin Langlitz and H. F. Reif were Belmond business callers Monday.

Death has again entered our community and claimed two lives in a short time. Saturday about noon Mrs. Fred Halfpop passed away at the Mercy hospital following a short illness. Sunday evening Mother Mayers answered the summons which was rather unexpected at this time. Obituaries will appear later.

M. A. Smith is again able to be about.

Eilert Frey of Beaman is visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Schmidt from Alexander and Miss Grace Groen of Meservey were Mason City callers Saturday where Mrs. Schmidt had her teeth extracted.

Joe Kral and family moved to a farm near Miller, Monday. J. Hartfelder assisted with the moving.

Geo. Vierkant and family moved to the H. S. Butz farm which they will operate this season.

Rev. and Mrs. Pannkuk were both on the sick list this week. The evening services were dismissed owing to the pastor not being able to conduct them.

Miss Anna Pals and brother, Clarence motored to Pella last Friday to spend the week end with relatives and friends.

A. J. Nissen was a business caller at the county seat last Friday.

Bonita and Donald Muller motored to Iowa Falls last Thursday to witness a basket ball game between Ellsworth and Western Union teams there that evening, which ended in a victory for Ellsworth.

Rev. H. M. Raecker and family, of Sheffield visited relatives here last week, on Wednesday.

A deal was completed last week whereby the M. E. church property was sold to Irwin Langlitz, who will soon begin remodeling the same into a five-room house.

The picture, "The Transgressor" was shown at the Evangelical church last Thursday evening to a large appreciative audience and the lesson was clearly portrayed upon the screen, leaving a lasting impression upon our youth that Prohibition is the only safe course. Mr. MacBeth and his assistant had charge of the evening's entertainment and an offering was lifted for the Anti-Saloon League, which organization Mr. MacBeth represents.

Those who availed themselves of the opportunity of seeing the picture, Ben Hur at Mason City while being shown at the Cecil, were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schluter and son Vern, Mrs. W. F. Butz and children, Mrs. H. F. Reif, Mrs. H. K. Pals, Misses Olive Sherrard, Eva Sprau, Inez Obrecht, Hallie Ward, Donald and Bonita Muller, Oliver and Virgil Sprau, Franklin Fischer, Elmer Prelipp, Arloene, Mildred and Gerald Janssen.

Rev. and Mrs. H. Pannkuk and daughter Lydia were calling on Mrs. Meinderts at the Mercy Hospital at Mason City last Tuesday evening of last week.

J. C. Janssen is still quite ill and is at the home of his son, C. J. Janssen.

Carl Oleson and wife and Fred Quandt were Mason City business callers last Friday.

Harry T. Smith was in Mason City consulting a physician in regard to his health last Wednesday.

There will be no Cemetery meeting this month, but the society will meet at the rgular time in April.

Bert Groen was in Des Moines attending a car painting demonstration several days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Wendel and daughter, Mrs. Nelse Faaborg were at the Ralph Wendel home near Belmond during the past week assisting with the work and caring for Ralph who had been ill with rheumatism. He is somewhat improved at this writing.

Sam Paul of Sheffield was calling here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Barger and children were visiting relatives at Hampton Monday.

I. A. Nissen and children of Kamrar were Sunday guests at the A. Kolb home.

Mrs. Crist Enabnit and two sons of Clemmins came Monday in response to the message of her mother's death.

Wm. Larson and wife of Parkersburg were called here Saturday by the death of Mrs. Fred Halfpop.

Mrs. H. Wilkins and daughters visited Mrs. Meinderts at the Mercy hospital in Mason City, Monday afternoon. They reported Mrs. Meinders to be getting along as well as could be expected.

L. B. Hulsebus and family, accompanied by Mrs. Carr of Dows stopped here to call on relatives last Wednesday on their return from a business trip to Mason City.

Miss Irena Butz was compelled to leave school Monday noon owing to illness. Mrs. Taulbee had charge of her work during the afternoon.

Mrs. Jacob Fischer of Ft. Dodge, and daughter, Mrs. Wilbur Fox of Pekin, Ill., visited at the G. Lauster and Aug. Guth homes several days last week.

H. Waage is moving to Goodell this week where the family will make their home. Heinie has been employed at the Wesenberg hardware store for some time but not being able to get into the house they rented he has been making trips back and forth.

Last reports from the bedside of J. C. Janssen are not very favorable and he continues to be in a critical condition with little hopes for his recovery.

READ THE ADS!

COLDS OR HEALTH

At this season of the year Colds are very prevalent. The majority of them occur because the elimination of the body is defective. Most colds are the result of an accumulative effect. They have a definite cause which the Chiropractor can discover. Colds are not only disagreeable, but they are an indication of a depleted bodily resistance. You should rid yourself of them immediately.

Start getting well today.

DR. R. E. PORTER
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

Undertaking & Funeral Director

F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey Iowa

Harry T. Smith

General Blacksmithing

Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding

Meservey, - Iowa

THE MAN WHO DECIDED TO CATCH A GRIZZLY BEAR single-handed is no more foolish than the man who buys an off-brand Radio.

CROSLEY RADIO

will not fight back, but give faithful service.

Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries On hand

H. F. REIF

Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

"The Speed Limit" at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday Night is an action picture all will like. Thrills galore. Prices 10c and 25c.

WANT ADS PAY

This coupon and 97c entitle the undersigned to one quart can of Interior Gloss Finish, any color, and a special Paint Brush.

Name.....

Address.....

SPECIAL OFFER
Clip the Coupon
To acquaint you with Acme Quality, we are making a special offer for a short time only

$2.00 Value for 97c

Brighten the kitchen with Acme INTERIOR GLOSS FINISH

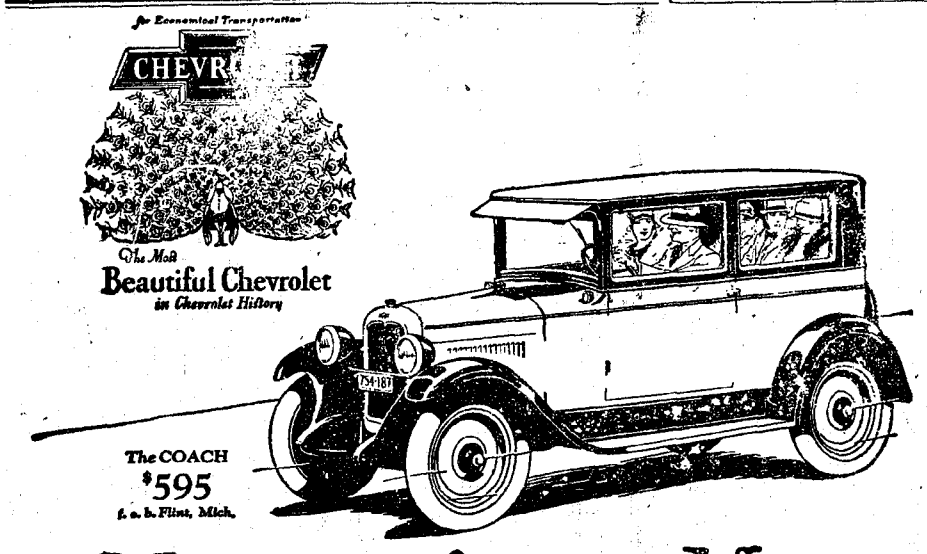
Acme Interior Gloss Finish is a dependable product of cheerful colors. Easy to wash. No glare. Covers the surface like a flat paint.

We recommend Interior Gloss Finish unreservedly for interior surfaces — walls, ceilings, woodwork. It is the perfect kitchen finish—does not absorb grease, dirt or moisture.

ACME QUALITY Paint and Varnish

Let us tell you more about it. And be sure to see us before you tackle any paint problem. Our estimate and assistance will probably save both money and time for you.

C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA



More for Your Money than you ever thought possible

Already the Most Beautiful Chevrolet is scoring the greatest success in Chevrolet history! Because no other low-priced car ever supplied so completely all the attractions of a high-priced automobile!

Here truly is more for your money than you ever thought possible—more than even Chevrolet, with its progressive policies and magnificent factories, could possibly offer, were it not for the economies of tremendous volume production.

Come in—see the Most Beautiful Chevrolet. Drive it. Learn what makes it the greatest triumph in automobile history—and why it is winning new buyers at a rate of tens of thousands each week!

—at these amazingly low prices

The Touring	$525	The Sedan	$695	1-Ton Truck (Chassis only)	$495
The Roadster	$525	Sport Cabriolet	$715	½-Ton Truck (Chassis only)	$395
The Coupe	$625	The Landau	$745

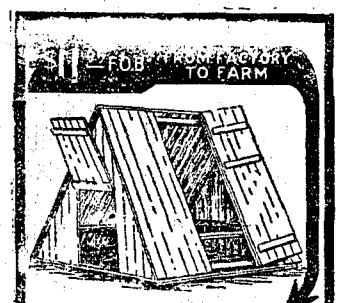
Balloon tires now standard on all models.

In addition to these low prices, Chevrolet's delivered prices include the lowest handling and financing charges available.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST



SAVE 1/3 by

buying Individual HAWKEYE HOG HOUSES. Eliminates loss at farrowing time and the spreading of contagious diseases.

Each house shipped completely cut in two compact bundles. Your material consisting of Ridge Roll, Hinges, Nails, Screws, Cleats, Ends, Roof Boards, Frame Material, Sills and Farrowing Rails, all come cut to exact length and bevel, so that

All You Need for Assembling Is a Hammer.

Tongue and grooved flooring furnished for roof, ends and doors. Rigid No. 1 dimension frame work with Farrowing Rail. Ventilated. Any school boy can follow our directions for assembling with ease and accuracy, following our furnished plans. We furnish only high grade material.

Communicate with

HAWKEYE MFG. CO.

811.05 Box A, BELMOND, IOWA Factory.

Your Success and Ours!

Has it occurred to you that the success of a bank must necessarily be built not only upon the satisfaction but on the success of its customers?

And have you considered that your bank is therefore genuinely interested in co-operating with you in every practical way, to help promote your individual success?

When you open an account with us, therefore, you can be assured that we shall not only safeguard your interests as far as your deposits are concerned, but look forward to and welcome opportunities to be of further service to you.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank

Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company

Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

NEWS NOTES OF GOODELL

Fuller-McNulty

At 8:00 o'clock Monday morning at the St. Francis Catholic church occurred the marriage which united the lives of Sophronia Fuller to Francis McNulty, with Rev. Father Malloy, officiating.

Sophronia is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Fuller, who reside on their farm northeast of Goodell. She has spent her entire life here, received her high school education at the local school, graduating with the class of 1925. Since finishing school here she has attended Ellsworth College at Iowa Falls, preparing in a teacher's course. Sophronia is one of the popular and fine young ladies of this community and will make a splendid helpmate for the man of her choice.

Francis is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank McNulty and has also spent his life in this community, having attended school here and finishing with the class of 1922. Since then he has worked in Chicago, Illinois with a railroad company but was forced to give up his position about two years ago because of ill health. He is now assisting his father in the pool and billiard business. Francis is a fine young man of good habits and worthy of his bride.

The bride was dressed in a beautiful queen's blue crepe de chine with hat to match. She was attended by Miss Mary Denenger, of West Bend, a college chum of hers. She was attired in a beautiful changeable silk dress. The bride and bridesmaid carried bouquets of roses and sweet peas.

The groom wore a suit of dark blue and was attend by Marcellus Fuller, brother of the bride.

After the wedding a delicious breakfast was served at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Lee Robbins.

After a short honeymoon they will be at home with the groom's parents. Goodell friends extend heartiest congratulations.

Betty Ruth, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hood, passed away early Sunday morning, aged two years and five months. She has been suffering the ast few weeks with measles and whooping cough, later developing into pneumonia. All that medical aid and loving hands could administer was done, but the little thread of life was not able to withstand the diseases. Betty was a sweet, loving little child and words cannot express how she will be missed by her heart broken father, mother and little brother Jack, besides other relatives and a host of friends of the family. Funeral services were held Monday at 2:00 p. m. at the Hood home one-half mile west of town. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery at Belmond. Goodell friends extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

Donald Estelle returned the fore part of the week from Ackley, where he has spent the winter with his sister, Mrs. George Wolfe.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Deiger entertained to dinner Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Graeber and Miss Natalie Thada, in honor of Mr. Graeber's birthday.

Jim Tutton, section foreman at Forest City visited Monday with friends here. Mr. Tutton was section foreman here before receiving his appointment at Forest City.

Messrs. J. J. Cook, Matt Smith and Dr. Snearly, with their wives autoed to Mason City Tuesday and attended the movie, "Ben Hur."

A. M. Graeber went to Belmond on Wednesday to work for some time at the Goelz barber shop, as Mr. Goelz has infection in his hands and is not able to work.

The grammar room enjoyed a masquerade party given at the school house Wednesday evening. At a late hour their teacher, Miss E. Thomas accompanied them to the Savogue Cafe and treated them to banana splits.

The Catholic church garage was sold last week, purchased by Lewis Rierson, who moved it to his lots.

Mrs. Clara Butts returned Wednesday from California, having enjoyed two months there with relatives. Mrs. L. W. Wesenberg, who also has been there is expected home some time this week, having stopped for a few days at Denver, Colorado to visit Mrs. August Ahrenkiel.

Mrs. Robert McNutt organized and entertained her Larkin Club to a five o'clock luncheon at her home Friday. Mesdames Jay Buchanan, Savogue, Deiger, Baker and Allie were the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newgard returned Saturday from Minneapolis, having spent their honeymoon there.

Mrs. G. E. Snearly returned Saturday from Des Moines where she had spent a few days with her father, Mr. Feisel.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sherman left Wednesday for their home in Torrington, Wyoming. They have spent the past six weeks here with Mrs. Sherman's mother, Mrs. A. D. White.

Mrs. Eagmo and children, of Cylinder came the fore part of last week to stay with her home folks, the George Ness family, until they get settled in their new home. They will live on the farm vacated by Alsvig Bros.

"The Speed Limit" at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday Night is an action picture all will like. Thrills galore. Prices 10c and 25c.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Busick and baby, of Belmond came the fore part of the week and will work at the Gus Okreug home the coming year.

Mrs. Harve Christenson returned Sunday from Thompson, having been there due to the serious illness of her father, Mr. Wigfield. He is suffering with diabetis and pneumonia and at this writing no hopes are held for his recovery.

Miss Vivian Pech, of Belmond came Monday to fill the vacancy in the primary room until Miss Marie Given is able to return.

Mrs. Reynold Kinseth, who has been quite ill at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Avery has improved rapidly and was able to return on Friday to her home at Belmond.

George Ness and son, Sanford went to Cylinder last week to assist the farmer's son-in-law, Mr. Eagmo to move his farm machinery and household goods here.

Mrs. C. W. Lamer had dental work done at Belmond, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Burke, of Belmond visited friends here, Wednesday.

Dr. Snearly autoed to Hampton on Sunday, taking George Mikesh there to the hospital. Mr. Mikesh has been suffering intensely with appendicitis attacks and after some treatment at the hospital will no doubt submit to an operation.

A large crowd of friends gave a miscellaneous shower at the Catholic church Saturday evening in honor of Miss Sophronia Fuller. The evening was spent socially and Miss Fuller received many beautiful and useful presents. Refreshments were served.

The Alsvigs' furniture and live stock was shipped from here Saturday to Ottawa, Illinois, where they have rented a farm. Jonas Alsvig accompanied the car in and the Thor Alsvig family left on Sunday with their auto.

With March 1 comes the regular round of moving. George Ahrenkiel's to their town residence, Avon Hegland's to a farm near Williams, Geo. Vance to the farm vacated by George Ahrenkiel, Tony Boller, of Belmond to the Nolte Homestead, Werte Usher to the Goodrich property, George Luick's to Thornton, Elmer Borens to a farm near Klemme, Llyod Van-Buskirk's of Hickory Grove to the farm vacated by Geo. Luick, Leo. Ahrenkiels' to room over the drug store, Eagmos, of Cylinder to the farm vacated by Alsvigs', Alsvigs' to Ottawa, Illinois, Linenweaver, of Rowan to the farm vacated by A. Hegland, Nelsons, of near Belmond to the farm vacated by Al Mayhews.

Miss Evelyn Thomas went to Meservey Sunday, called there by the death of her grandmother.

Forest Boren, who attends high school at Grundy Center spent the week-end with home folks.

Father Malloy, of Belmond, and Father Torphy, of Clarion called on friends here Tuesday.

Francis Cashman went to Des Moines Friday on business.

The Eiler family, of Clarion and Gehardt Johnson family, of Belmond spent Sunday with the ladies' home folks, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Longley.

Bert Hood was called home from Des Moines the fore part of last week, due to the serious illness of his little daughter, Betty.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newgard were surprised Sunday evening by the usual crowd of youngsters who gathered at their home and gave them an old fashioned charavari. After untiring efforts Harry treated them at the Savogue Cafe.

Mr. and Mrs. Fiebelman and Viola Hood came Sunday from Des Moines to attend the funeral of their little neice, Betty Hood.

Church Notes

The U. B. Missionary ladies will meet Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at the church. All members are urged to be present. Mrs. Rev. Scott has charge of the meeting and Mrs. Robert McNutt the devotions.

ROWAN ITEMS OF INTEREST

LaGue-Morris

Miss Ruby LaGue and Glenn Morris, of Belmond were united in marriage Wednesday, February 16th at the M. E. parsonage at Clarion, Rev. J. B. O'Connor officiating.

The couple were attended by Miss Robinette LaGue, sister of the bride, and Duane Morris, a brother of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Pearle LaGue, parents of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Dave Morris, parents of the groom witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Morris is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pearl LaGue and is a charming and accomplished young lady. She graduated from Rowan high school with the class of 1925 and since has been a successful rural teacher. Mr. Morris is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Morris, of Belmond and has been engaged in farming his father's farm the past year and is proving himself a successful young farmer. The happy couple left immediately after the ceremony for a short trip and will soon be at home on the Morris farm north of Rowan.

Leonard Ryder has purchased the Dr. Gordon house, consideration $600. Mr. Ryder will occupy rooms in the house and the Vern Sharp family will also make their home there.

The Moellering Brothers have moved to the Ferguson farm near Galt. Sim Stout has rented the farm formerly occupied by the Moellering Brothers.

"The Speed Limit" at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday Night is an action picture all will like. Thrills galore. Prices 10c and 25c.

The Chet Gatliff family will occupy the August Rietz farm recently vacated by the Harvey Lineweaver family.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Herb Lester, on February 24 a baby girl. Mrs. W. W. Benton is assisting at the Lester home.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kirkpatrick have moved to a farm near Renwick.

Mrs. G. R. Sheldon, Maxine and Maxwell spent last week with relatives in Des Moines.

Carl Larson, of Ft. Dodge was a business caller in town Tuesday of last week.

A program and box social will be held at Morgan school No. 8 Friday, March 11. Laura Aldinger, teacher.

Jim Ward has returned from Bruce, Wisconsin, where he spent several months at the Charles Moon home.

The H. B. Arnold family are moving from a farm west of Rowan to a farm south of Galt.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Aldinger and daughter, Marion, are visiting at the home of Mrs. Aldinger's mother, Mrs. Kate Nordemire, at Morristown, Minn.

The Missionary societies of both churches will observe the Day of Prayer, at the A. E. Emerson home Friday, at 2:00 p. m.

Little Donald Scott is still suffering with erysipelas. Dr. George was called Thursday and gave an antitoxin to alleviate it. He is somewhat easier at this writing.

The M. E. Ladies' Aid Society will meet Thursday with Mrs. F. H. Fowler. Mrs. Frank Drury, assistant hostess.

W. A. Hanan, of Ft. Dodge was calling on friends in town, Thursday.

Mrs. Hannah Whitten spent part of last week visiting frieds at University Park and attending the State Association Convention, to which she was a delegate.

The Home Missionary Society will meet Wednesday at the Henry Azeltine home. Miss Nora Shafer is leader.

Lawrence Retliff is threatened with typhoid fever.

The boys' basket ball team will go to Webster City Friday of this week where they will participate in the B. class of the sectional tournament which will be held there. The first game for our team will be at 11:00 a. m. Friday at which time they will meet the Stanhope quintette.

The girls' tournament will be held at Hampton on March 11 and 12. The drawing has not been made. Report later.

The basket ball boys will play Hampton there Wednesday night of this week.

The boys' team of Geneva will play the local team on the home floor on Tuesday, March 8. It is also expected that the girls will have a workout at this time.

The neighbors of Mrs. W. W. Bailey entertained in her honor at the Wm. Tresidder home Wednesday afternoon of last week prior to the Baileys' moving to the farm. Dainty refreshments were served and a joyous time was reported.

Tom Ross and family have moved from their farm south of town to Galt. Mr. Ross will represent the Spotted Poland China Digest in the state.

The Herb Ketchum family have moved to Clarion. Their sons Shirley and Phillip will live at the home place and run the farm.

Miss Ilo Adamson, of Centerville is supplying for Miss Rubys during her illness.

The Harry Lancaster family are moving this week to a farm near Popejoy.

Amos Cowley has returned from a trip to Chicago—and reports that a stock train is no place for a fat man to ride.

Among those who attended the James Brannen funeral at Dows last Thursday were Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Whitten, Friend Aldrich, Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Aldrich, Raymond, Aldrich, DeRurch Hues, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Aldrich, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Cowley and Joe and Ollie Ingerham.

J. L. Sinclair, of Clarion was renewing acquaintainces in town last week.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

The wedding bells have been ringing freely the past week.

Will Vestweber and Ralph Schulte drove to Des Moines, Saturday, returning Sunday. While in the city

(Continued on page six.)

Attention, Farmers!

Year after year this country is infested with peddlers, absolute strangers with cure-alls for all poultry and livestock diseases. His guarantee comes with him and when he leaves it goes with him. This constitutes a game of hide and seek. Why not buy at home where the guarantee holds good 365 days in the year?

THIS IS OUR GUARANTEE!

If any Dr. Hess product does not do all we say or all you expect it to; if you are not absolutely satisfied your money was well spent; return the empty container and get back the amount you paid.

Dr. Hess improved Stock Tonic is in no sense a food, but a Tonic conditioner, a worm expeller.
100 lb. Drum $10.00—Pails $3.00.

Hess Panacea for Chickens, guaranteed to bring more eggs. For 100 hens get a 12-lb. package, $1.50. One extra egg will pay for all the Panacea a hen will consume in six months.

Hess Poultry Worm Powder. A 4-lb. package will worm 100 hens. price $1.25.

BULK DIP—5 gal. $5.00; 1 gal. $1.10. Bring can.

Schultz Drug Co.

Try the Drug Store First!

Belmond, Iowa

COMBINATION SALE!

The undersigned will hold a Combination Sale at the MOE & NELSON BARN, just north of The Independent building, on

Tuesday, March 8

Commencing At 1:00 O'clock P. M.

MANY ARTICLES HAVE BEEN LISTED FOR SALE, AMONG THEM BEING:

Some Horses and Mules
Farm Machinery
Household Goods
Hay, Grain and Potatoes
Ford Truck

Bring in your CATTLE, HOGS, POULTRY AND OTHER LIVESTOCK. AND ANY OTHER ARTICLES YOU MAY HAVE TO SELL. List with T. D. Rankins, or Belmond Savings Bank.

TERMS

Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

BELMOND SAVINGS BANK, Clerk

T. D. RANKINS, Mgr.

T. D. RANKINS -- LEWIS HAUGE

AUCTIONEERS

NEWS NOTES OF ALEXANDED

Continued from page 5

they called on Lewis Schulte and Jesse Arends, who are attending school.

Dan Butterwick, of Faribault, Minnesota is visiting relatives and friends of this place, this week.

Miss Ethel Hall was a business caller in Hampton, Wednesday.

"The Speed Limit" at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday Night is an action picture all will like. Thrills galore. Prices 10c and 25c.

Mrs. Aldrich Beenen and Miss Anna Beenen were Hampton shoppers o Wednesday.

Miss Alma Dorenkamp spent Sunday at the home of her mother in Meservey.

There are several changes made this March 1st, by moving. George Stoffer, from the Latham place to the Jerry Blau place on Brown's street; Forest Gillett, from the Dirk Dirksen place to the Latham place; Aldando Kelsey, from the Starkey place to the A. M. Jones place; Will Kinkey from the M. E. parsonage to the Hall place in the north part of town, which Mr. Tinkey has recently bought for a home; Henry Schulte Jr. from a farm north of town to the place where Mr. Polmateer has lived the past seven years, south of town one mile, which Mr. Schulte's father purchased a year ago; Henry Polmateer from south of town to Renwick, and as the Polmateers' are leaving they are anxious to have their neighbors and friends know how much they appreciate the kindness which has been given them and they will take many happy remembrances of Alexander and vicinity with them. We wish them health and prosperity in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Davis and family are moving to Minnesota, about 100 miles west of St. Paul.

Carl Bohlen was attending to business at Mason City, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Larsen and family were Hampton visitors, Sunday.

Mrs. William Winwood and son, Arthur, and daughter, Mary were shopping in Hampton, Wednesday.

William Foughty drove to Iowa Falls Friday on business. His daughter, Wilma returned home with him to spend the week-end.

Ed Aldinger, who has been assisting in the W. P. Aldinger store here for some time returned to his home at Geneva the last of the week.

Mrs. Rudolph Beenen returned home Sunday from Des Moines, where she has been visiting the past few weeks.

Evelyn Pekarek, of Geneva spent the week end with her mother.

Jack Hill and Miss Bonnie Barker were Hampton callers, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Larsen and son Raymond were at Belmond, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Butler, of Hampton were callers at the A. B. Arends home, Sunday.

On Saturday afternoon a party was given for little Miss Frances Bohlen at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. P. C. Bohlen in honor of her sixth birthday. The guests were six little girls, and they enjoyed a very jolly afternoon together.

A very pleasant evening was spent Saturday at a party given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Polmateer by the Sunday School class of which Mrs. Polmateer is a member. It was given in the basement. About twenty seven invited guests were present. A delicious luncheon was served.

News was recived here Monday that Mrs. Alva Polmateer had underwent an operation at the hospital in Cedar Falls on Sunday. We have not heard how her condition is at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kew, who live on the Klinefelter place west of town and Will Root, a brother of Mrs. Kew will move to a farm four miles southeast of Alexander; and Mr. and Mrs. Clay Klinefelter, who have lived north of Meservey the past couple of years, will move on the place where the Roots' have lived.

John Henry, a fine baby boy, was born to Mr. and Mrs. John Hill on Saturday the 26th. John is wearing a happy countenance these days.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schulte Jr. were pleasantly surprised on Friday evening, when fifteen families gathered at their home. The evening was pleasantly spent with games and cards. A fine luncheon was served from well filled baskets. As the Schulte family are leaving our old neighborhood, they were presented with a fine rocker after which every one departed for home, bidding them farewell.

Mrs. Dan Schmidt spent several days at the hospital in Mason City where she went to have her teeth extracted.

The United Church of Alexander
Lewis N. Moody, Pastor

The Christian Endeavor invites all members and friends of the church to attend a social in the basement on Friday evening of this week.

The Red and Blue contest in the Sunday School will commence next Sunday morning with Alice Peters and Boyd Rodemeyer as captains.

The Delta Alpha class has elected officers as follows: Pres., Mrs. Maude Peters; vice pres., Mrs. Lloyd Green; sec.-treas., Miss Mary Winwood; historian, Mrs. Floe Peters; keeper of the water pitcher, Miss Ethel Hall; com. on attendance, Mrs. Forest Gillett; membership com., Mrs. Charles Winwood; social com., Mrs. Lee Reed; visiting com., Mrs. Sylvia Bohlen; work com., Mrs. Jesse Latham.

The Ladies' Aid will meet on Wednesday afternoon, March 9. Hostesses, Mrs. Art Peters and Mrs. Ray Richards.

The Missionary Circle will meet with Mrs. Lloyd Green Thursday afternoon, March 10. Program leader, Mrs. John Arends.

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Frohling, Jr are the parents of a baby boy, born March 1.

The Monday Night Bridge Club met this week with Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Crane, of Dows, were Sunday guests at the Nels Stocksteth home.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hanson were Sunday visitors at the Ralph Hunt home in Clarion.

Harry Webb, assisted by A. W. Russell, gave Harry's Sunday School class an oyster supper at the M. E. church parlors, Thursday evening.

Miss Clara Johnson, of Iowa Falls spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Connor, of Hampton, visited at the Chris Norby home, Sunday. Mrs. Connor and Mrs. Norby are sisters.

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

THE CREAMERY IS DOING NICELY

Thanks to you, Mr. Farmer, the Creamery is doing nicely. It is your creamery, and you should be interested in its growth and welfare. It is your business—farmer owned, farmer managed, farmer controlled—and the more interest you take in your own business, the better that business will be.

Give your business—your creamery—the same good support in 1927 that you gave it in 1926, and your business will continue to prosper. Just remember that in patronizing the creamery, you are patronizing yourself—and getting more money by doing it.

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.
BELMOND, IOWA

Kinseth's Store News

This week we are offering you a few good specials that will pay you to look over.

Grape fruit at 8c each this week.

Then we have some real bargains on canned fruits. Pears, plums, in heavy syrup at 19c a can. Better order half a dozen of your favorite and have them handy for that extra dish when company comes.

A. B. C. Jello in all flavors at 9c a package.

Cream of Nut oleo at 23c, Delicia oleo at 22c. Climax oleo at 25c.

For curing meat we have smoked salt at 50c a package.

Block salt at 50c.

Men's overalls, special, this week at $1.48.

SPECIAL—This week we have a big Stationery Special on. Watch our window for it.

Fresh milk and cream.

And always above everything else, SERVICE! You'll find it here, and always ready to help you. Don't forget that The Store on the Corner is your stre, whether yu buy or not, an dyou are always welcome any time you come.

5% FARM LOANS
FINANCED FOR A GENERATION
Federal Land Bank of Omaha
COST REDUCED BY DIVIDENDS
Lowest Rate Ever Offered to Farmers
Get your farm loan in this co-operative loan bank
Let us give you the information and full details.
CALL OR WRITE
STATE BANK OF BELMOND
BELMOND, IOWA

Here's a Feeder that soon Pays For Itself

Jamesway
Free Feed
CAFETERIA

EVERY farm flock in this locality should have one of these FIVE-IN-ONE Feeders; contains compartments for Mash, Grain, Oyster Shell, Grit and Charcoal. It's a great labor saver—only needs filling once a week and your flock can always eat what they want, when they want it. They balance their ration as nature dictates and as a result you get more eggs—your flock is healthier.

Saves Labor—Saves Feed

This practical feeder comes in two sizes—100 flock size and 200 flock size. Think what a convenience it would be to just fill this up once a week and know that you flock was provided with feed for an entire week. It's the busy farmer's friend. Built with a patented shaking device that always keeps feed down in feed troughs. Feed is always clean and absolutely no waste. Slanting tilting top prevents birds roosting on top. We guarantee that this feeder will pay for itself in one season in saved feed and labor. Let us show you this incomparable feeder.

Sold by
ANDERSON HATCHERY
Phone 27 Belmond, Iowa

SEMI-ANNUAL REPORT OF H. B. HALLOCK, TREASURER OF WRIGHT COUNTY, IOWA

FOR THE PERIOD FROM JUNE 1, 1926, TO DECEMBER 31, 1926, INCLUSIVE.

STATEMENT OF ACCOUNTS BY FUNDS

Funds	Balance June 1, 1926	Receipts	Total to be accounted for	Disbursements	Balance Dec. 31, 1926
General State Revenue	$ 64,462.68	$ 48,961.74	$ 113,424.42	$ 79,514.76	$ 33,909.66
Soldiers Bonus	6,201.41	6,347.20	12,548.61	11,947.96	600.65
General County	29,001.83	52,946.06	81,947.89	55,113.58	26,834.31
Court Expense	188.74		188.74		188.74
Poor	13,824.44*	7,569.42	6,255.02*	14,641.18	20,896.20*
State Insane	3,499.76	7,110.26	10,610.02	6,358.50	4,251.52
County Bridge	33,261.04	18,213.30	51,474.34	37,432.90	14,041.44
County Road Cash	18,840.10	39,367.38	58,207.48	48,520.63	9,686.85
County School	5,309.16	4,730.88	10,040.04	5,309.16	4,730.88
Soldiers' Relief	1,557.93	946.18	2,504.11	940.00	1,564.11
Bond, Bridge	352.99	8,042.50	8,395.49	2,275.00	6,120.49
Bond, Road	1,673.37	17,031.20	18,704.57	17,565.00	1,139.57
Motor Vehicle	62,154.06	63,978.30	126,132.36	40,368.85	85,763.51
Principal of School	6,339.83	1,300.00	8,639.83		8,639.83
Interest of School	2,039.64	957.66	2,997.30	2,320.38	676.92
Temporary School (Fines)	4,132.37	3,668.40	7,800.77	5,283.36	2,517.41
Teachers' Institute	268.82	114.00	382.82	239.90	142.92
Farmers' Institute	75.00	75.00	150.00	45.00	105.00
Domestic Animal	3,183.22	1,374.95	4,558.17	193.20	4,364.97
Drainage Assessments	310,717.20	22,812.63	333,529.83	179,903.24	153,626.59
City Special Assessments	2,099.90	6,377.62	8,977.52	5,606.02	3,371.50
Corporation Funds	2,925.73	7,480.77	10,406.50	7,936.49	2,470.01
School District Funds	10,015.23	197,181.12	207,196.35	190,132.58	17,063.77
Township Funds	8,099.33	30,061.30	38,160.63	35,302.13	2,858.50
Pri. Road Antic. Cert. Fund	800.00		800.00	800.00
County Home	716.59	2,054.22	2,770.81	664.66	2,106.15
P. R. A. C. Redemp. Fund	11.69		11.69		11.69
Auto Bus	104.02	2.06	106.08		106.08
Township Gasoline Tax	2,027.99	11,138.54	13,166.53	10,026.74	3,139.79
TOTAL	$ 566,735.19	$560,842.69	$ 1,127,577.88	$758,441.22	$369,136.66

*Overdrafts

36 62
4
40
22
6

RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS

RECEIPTS	Amount
On Hand June 1, 1926	$ 566,735.19
From Current Taxes, 1925	359,668.80
From Delinquent Taxes, 1924 and prior years	7,771.90
Penalty, Interest and Costs	5,252.78
Drainage Taxes	21,673.82
City Special Assessments (Paving, Sewer, etc.)	6,377.62
Secondary Road Assessments, Gravel	2,857.50
Automobile Tax from State, Motor Carrier	2.06
Interest on Bank Deposits	10,012.58
Principal of School Fund	1,300.00
Interest of School Fund	957.66
Teachers Examination and Institute Fees	114.09
State Appropriation for Farmers Institute	75.00
Sale of Automobile Numbers and License	63,975.80
Fines and Forfeitures from Clerk	3,668.40
Care of Patients in State Institutions	1,906.30
Sale of Produce at County Home	2,054.22
Sale of Bridge Material	3,074.47
Sale of School Books	1,735.19
Fees from County Auditor	128.40
Fees from County Treasurer	85.15
Fees from County Recorder	1,000.20
Fees from Clerk of District Court	2,308.94
Fees from Sheriff	501.60
Miscellaneous Receipts, Road	6,326.88
Miscellaneous Receipts, Gas Tax	22,277.07
Miscellaneous Receipts, Drainage	1,097.00
Miscellaneous Receipts, Domestic Animal	145.25
Miscellaneous Receipts, Motor Vehicle	2.50
Miscellaneous Receipts, County	296.91
Transfers from Funds	33,194.62
TOTAL RECEIPTS	$1,127,577.88

DISBURSEMENTS	Amount
State Treasurer's Receipts	$ 129,453.37
County Auditor's Warrants	152,880.30
Drainage Bonds and Coupons Redeemed	174,042.92
County Bridge Bond and Coupon Redeemed	2,275.00
Secondary Road Bond and Coupons Redeemed	17,585.00
City Specials (Paving, Sewer, etc., Cert. or Bonds)	5,606.02
Orders on Co. Treas. by Mayors of Cities and Towns.	7,936.49
Orders on Co. Treas. by Presidents of Sch. Districts.	190,132.58
Township Clerks' Receipts	35,302.13
Secretary of State's Receipts for Automobile Licenses	40.20
Miscellaneous Payments, Diverted Interest	10,012.58
Transfers to Funds	33,194.62
Balance on hand December 31, 1926	369,136.66
TOTAL DISBURSEMENTS	$1,127,577.88

CLARION, IOWA, JAN. 25, 1927.

I, H. B. HALLOCK, TREASURER OF WRIGHT COUNTY, IOWA, DO HEREBY CERTIFY THAT THE REPORT GIVEN ABOVE IS A CORRECT SUMMARY OF THE BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY ME AS SAID TREASUER DURING THE PERIOD THEREIN SPECIFIED.

H. B. HALLOCK, County Treasurer.

ALABASTER LAMPS

By Margaret Turnbull.

COPYRIGHT 1925 BY MARGARET TURNBULL WNU SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With a stranger, whom he introduces as his nephew, Ned Carter, Claude Melnotte Dabbs returns from New York to his general grocery at Peace Valley, Pa. To "Aunt Lyddy," his housekeeper, he explains that Carter is a chance acquaintance, veteran of the World war, whom he had met and taken a liking to.

CHAPTER II.—Carter tells Aunt Lyddy he has broken with his family and his sweetheart because of his resentment of their ultra pacific tendencies. With Dabbs Ned visits Clover Hollow, abiding place of a "collection of good-natured cranks," according to the grocer. They almost run over a dog belonging to a girl whom Carter apparently recognizes. Ned delivers a grocery order, and in his absence the girl, Dorothy Selden, reveals that she knows him to be Ned Carter Rangeley, son of Loren Rangeley, New York banker.

CHAPTER III.—Next day Ned commences work as a "grocer's boy." At a residence, the "White House," he delivers an order marked "Johnston." There he meets a girl who tells him she and her mother are alone in the house, the servants having left them because of the "loneliness." He promises to try to procure household help. Meeting Dorothy Selden, his erstwhile sweetheart, he baffles her attempts to discover the reason for his presence in Peace Valley. Arrangement is made for a cook to go to the Johnstons'.

As he jumped down from the wagon seat, Ned thought perplexedly that he had forgotten to ask the name of the people who lived here. How would he know which box to take out? This difficulty was solved for him by the fact, discovered immediately he examined the contents of the wagon, that all remaining packages bore the name "Johnston." This was evidently not the usual house-to-house delivery, but a special trip, mainly to the Johnston house.

Shouldering the box containing the bundles, he walked to the kitchen door and knocked in his best grocery boy manner. There was no response. He knocked again and waited.

"Oh Grocer!" came in a strong, young contralto voice somewhere above his head.

Ned shifted the box a little to enable him to look upward.

From the rear hall window a girl leaned out. Ned wondered why he should think of extreme youth and fairy tales; then remembered the illustrations for "Rapunzel, Rapunzel, let down your hair." The girl had been brushing her hair, and it hung about her in dusky masses. The brush was still in her hand.

"Oh, Grocer!" Came In a Strong, Young Contralto Voice Somewhere Above His Head.

"Will you please put the box on the bench just outside the door? I'll be down as soon as I can open the door. When we arrived last night, we found the servants had left because it was too lonely."

Ned put down his box and sat waiting on the steps. He was weary from his unwonted early rising. He leaned his head against the pillar of the kitchen porch and closed his eyes. This was a queer adventure—yet it promised, at least for a time, to be diverting; and that was all one could really ask of anything in this life. If it grew humdrum and commonplace, or Dorothy became a nuisance, he would move on. He thought of his newly acquired uncle. There, at least, he had made no mistake. Whatever Claude Dabbs was or was not, he was a man, and he was honest. Ned admitted more than that. C. M. Dabbs had charm.

"Poor fellow. How tired you must be!" Ned turned as the words came from behind him.

"Nonsense," Ned said, finding himself blushing. "I'm not tired in the least, Miss—"

"Johnston, and I hope you've brought everything I ordered."

Ned began carrying in the order. He did not hurry too much about his task. It was pleasant to watch in the clean, white, cool kitchen, this girl who was not like the other girls he knew. She had something they did not have; or was it that he had never seen any of the other girls in just such an environment? Miss Johnston was smiling at him now across the white enameled table, on which they had spread and counted the groceries.

"I don't really know where the potatoes are kept," she said, "so put them in that big basket in the corner. You see, I don't know where everything belongs, yet."

"Why not leave them where they are," advised Ned. "The new cook will probably want to put them somewhere else anyway."

"Oh I think not, Mr.-Mr.-er-Dabbs."

"But I'm not Mr. Dabbs. I'm his—nephew. My name's Carter, Ned Carter."

Miss Johnston smiled, then frowned a little, a horseshoe shaped frown that drew her delicate black brows together.

"Try not to make so much noise with the potatoes, Mr. Carter. I don't want my mother disturbed."

Ned, who had been pouring the potatoes into the basket as might a small boy, and rather enjoying the noise, colored and stopped this demonstration of his muscular power. Instead of pouring them out as though they were canned peas, he lowered the bag discreetly and allowed the potatoes to escape as potatoes should.

"Much better," Miss Johnston admitted, and Ned found her charming as she stood there with slightly puckered brow. He forgot to object to the school-teacher manner with which she said it. "Now, if you'll put the gasoline in the shed at the side of the porch, why that will be all. Tell your uncle that, with the servants gone, I'll have to telephone him later about the chickens we ordered. I'm afraid we shan't want them."

Ned understood he was being dismissed, and picked up his empty potato sack. As he crossed the room he had a sudden inspiration.

"Miss Johnston, if there's anything Uncle can do before your new servants come, why, let us know. Uncle might be able to get some one in Peace Valley to come for a day and help you out."

"Oh, do ask him! It would help immensely."

Ned went out, determined that it should be done, and Mary decided that country people were really the salt of the earth. She also decided that this young man was decidedly too good-looking, with an air impossible to deny. How had he come by it in a country general store?

While she wondered, and put the groceries away, Dorothy Selden, who could have told her all about the air and how it was acquired, waited at the gate for the returning "grocer's boy."

He drove toward her whistling. In face and figure he was all that a lady might love, but his expression was far from being either pleasant or inviting. He stopped whistling when he saw Dorothy waiting alone, and a heavy frown came to his brow.

Dorothy swung herself into his path. Ned endeavored to keep on his way, but the girl was determined. Ned halted Jenny and waited.

"So, you've changed your mind?"

"No," Ned answered promptly, and then in true country fashion proceeded to answer one question by asking another. "Where's Uncle Claude?"

The girl ignored it, leaning on the wagon, insolently. "You didn't get across to fight," she jeered.

"No. Did you and father work together to prevent it? I've often wondered."

"You've quarreled with your charming but capitalistic father, and are down here working for your living."

Ned's mouth twisted into a reluctant smile. "Is that all you got after pumping C. M. Dabbs?"

"And you call yourself 'Carter'," the girl finished ominously.

"Right. Don't give me away."

The girl nodded. "What am I to understand from that, but that you've seen the error of your ways and decided to join us."

"Us?"

"Why this pretense?" Miss Selden asked airily. "I assure you there's no need. I don't mind your following me down here. This is a refuge, a haven where people like ourselves may find freedom of speech, of thought, of action—"

Ned looked at her. "And costume?" he added.

Dorothy laughed, secure in the fact that whatever he thought of it, it was becoming. It was going to be interesting, having Ned around. He must have cared more than she thought, to have followed so soon. How had he known? But she kept these things to herself and continued her pose. "I'm a worker, too, Ned. Mrs. Mannheim—I came down here to stay with her, as you evidently discovered—has a community garden, and I, well I do my small share toward making it a success."

"Don't let me detain you," hinted Ned, lifting Jenny's reins, fearful that if he stayed longer he would spoil her delightful theory of pursuit by the discarded lover.

But Dorothy still held to the wagon and he could not go. "You remember Mrs. Mannheim?" she asked.

Ned nodded. "Oh, yes, I remember her well, but I'm not anxious to renew the acquaintance—under the circumstances. I hardly think she'd care to have 'the grocer's boy' calling."

"Oh, I don't think she'd mind, if I explain. Of course, it hasn't been done. Among our own social set distinctions simply do not exist, but we haven't included the village, yet."

"I'm sure that would never do. And now, please, where is—Uncle Claude?"

"At the stonemason's, across the bridge," Dorothy informed him, and for a moment relaxed her hold on the side of the wagon and stooped to recover Peter's leash.

Instantly, Ned and Jenny started down the road.

Dorothy called to him, surprise in her voice. Was it possible her diagnosis of the fleeing maid and the seeking lover could be wrong? "Why, Ned, you're not leaving me like that, are you?"

"I am," Ned called back to her. "I'm busy this morning. You seem to forget that we workers must work."

The stonemason lived in a tumbledown old farmhouse across the creek, halfway between Clover Hollow and Peace Valley. It was beautiful to look at, from a distance, but when you got to the stony road in front of it you saw both farm and house had been neglected for years.

To Claude Dabbs the neglect was far more evident than the beauty. He put his empty box down by what passed for a gate, so that it might be a sign and symbol of his presence to Ned when he came by, and went up the rough driveway to see Ettie Pulsifer and find out if William Penn Pulsifer had any intention of working this week. Claude had gone to school with Ettie. He remembered her when she was pink and pretty, and he hated to see her toiling with so little prospect of reward for her labor.

Ettie was at a tub in the back yard, washing, with two very small children playing at her feet. Another child, not much older, was driving his next brother about the yard as a fire engine. Two more children were leaning from an upper window, trying vainly to reach a cat on the shed roof. The cat, being far more comfortable on the roof than it would be in their hands, was protesting. The oldest but one, a girl, was helping Ettie with the wringing.

"My land, Claude, that you?" Ettie called, tossing back a dark brown lock with a wet, soapy hand. "William Penn Pulsifer's gone down to the village with Penny to look about for some boards for somepin'. He told me, if you happened along, to say that he'd try to git that chimbly pointed on Bert Oakley's house come next Thursday, if it don't rain."

"All right, Ettie," Claude answered and avoided looking at her, as he had during all Ettie's nervous speech. Well did both Ettie and Claude know that William Penn Pulsifer had promised to come next week Thursday for some ten weeks. But it was Ettie's part to hold the banner high and so screen some of William Penn Pulsifer's shortcomings, and it was Claude's part not to peep through the rents in the banner lest he might see the naked truth.

Ettie sighed as she looked over toward Claude Dabbs, who had Toots and the others on his knees and all about him.

"I declare, Claude Dabbs, seems a shame you're an old bachelor, and you so fond of 'em. Ought to have had a dozen of your own."

"Things are uneven in this fine world, Ettie," was Claude's comment, as he looked up the road, along which Jenny and Ned were tearing at full speed. "Got a fine young man visiting me. My adopted nephew. Here he comes." He walked toward the gate, followed by all the children.

Presently Ettie, looking up from the washing, saw that he was coming back again, accompanied by the children and the young man. Jenny had been tied to the last remaining gate post.

Ettie ungraciously acknowledged Claude's introduction, though her mind was perfectly cordial toward the young man, it being no part of country etiquette to look either pleased or gracious on such an occasion, lest advantage be taken. What advantage, and why, no one knows, but custom has apparently decreed that they who make their living from the soil, shall, despite nature's generous teaching, instinctively distrust their fellow man.

Claude briefly outlined to Ettie the situation at the White house and concluded by asking:

"Could you do a day's general housework and cooking, Ettie, for the new folks up there?"

"My land, what's come to their cook?" asked Ettie, country fashion, refusing to commit herself until she had had all the facts spread out before her.

Ned said easily: "They left because they thought it looked lonely. Servants leave nowadays, don't they, without any reason?"

Here Claude looked up and took hold of the situation, lest the energetic little bundle of nerves leaning against her washtub might take exception to this offhand city person's way of explaining a case.

"My nephew, here, says there's just a young girl up there, trying to run that big house herself and keep her mother quiet. I don't know anything about them, Ettie, but it would be real neighborly to help out. I'll send Ned to take you there tomorrow morning—if you can manage it."

"I'm busy," acknowledged Mrs. Pulsifer, "but if it's a case of real needcessity, I could go."

"That's real good of you, Ettie," Claude said heartily, and indicated to Ned they'd better go. Ned hurried down the lane to untie Jenny. Claude paused to say to Ettie, as he separated himself gently from clinging little hands: "The way I look at it, the mother probably won't do anything, and it's a good deal to fall on the shoulders of a girl."

"Won't hurt her none," sniffed Mrs. Pulsifer, "but of course all them Clover Hollowers pay good money, and it's a real nist place. I own, Claude, I kinda like to see what they've done to the house. It certainly is a pretty home."

"Yes, ain't it," Claude agreed appreciatively. "Well, I'll send the boy round at half-past eight, Ettie, to take you to the—I declare I don't know their name. They came while I was in New York."

"That's a good morning's work, son," he said amiably as he mounted the wagon seat beside Ned. Not for worlds would he allude to Dorothy Selden and her revelations, for that was, as Dabbs would have phrased it, "up to Ned."

If it was, Ned showed no signs of being about to introduce the lady into the conversation.

"I say, C. M., there's something I'd like to fix up with you before we get

"First Time in My Life Anyone Told Me I Had Beautiful Eyes."

to home and Aunt Lyddy. Though you found me on a park bench, I have some money, and I'd like to pay my way."

"Look here, Ned," Claude flushed and stammered, "there's no necessity—and—and when I asked you to Peace Valley, I as[illegible] you to stay with me. I can afford it. Afterward, if you like, we can arrange something, if you'll only stay."

Ned smiled at him. "Surely, I'll stay, if you keep me busy."

Conversation languished after that, for Dabbs waited for Ned to choose the subject. He glanced again at the young man beside him and noted the set of his jaw. "Anything disagreeable happen to you up at the White house?" he inquired.

Ned shook his head. "Only saw that girl I told you about. Perfect peach. She took the order from me." Ned relapsed into silence.

"What was their name?" Mr. Dabbs asked, getting out his little memorandum book and preparing to note it. "I asked Ettie, but she didn't know."

"Johnston," said Ned, dwelling on it. "Miss Johnston."

Dabbs stared at him. "Johnston. Oh, well, that's a pretty common name round these parts. Any more in the family besides the girl and the mother?"

"Don't know," Ned admitted.

"Find out tomorrow, when you take Ettie there."

"What difference does it make?"

Dabbs laughed. "You'll make a pretty good grocer's clerk, Ned, if you can't figure out that for yourself. So many mouths, so many more loaves of bread ordered. But that isn't why I asked. I've got a dozen or more 'Johnstons' and 'Johnsons' on my book already, and beside, I'm agent for the property and I really ought to know something about these people."

But Ned was paying little attention. He was off on another train of thought entirely, as Dabbs was to discover, for he let Jenny have a free rein while he put a cigarette in his mouth.

"You've seen the girl, C. M., for I've just remembered that she came into the store last night and you directed her to Clover Hollow."

He leaned forward to take a light from Dabbs.

"She has the most extraordinary blue eyes! You never saw such eyes. Why, they're like—like—"

He looked up to see Claude laughing, and added quite involuntarily: "Like yours, C. M."

"Well I be d—d!" was Claude's equally spontaneous retort. "First time in my life any one ever told me I had beautiful eyes!"

CHAPTER IV

That night Ned lay awake thinking of Dorothy Selden's reappearance in his life, and how little it meant to him now. When he slept he dreamed of a blue-eyed Rapunzel who let down her hair.

Claude Dabbs, also wakeful, puzzling how to keep Ned interested in Peace Valley, finally slept; to dream of a beautiful woman named Johnston pursuing him, accompanied by gigantic dogs all answering to the name of Peter.

Ned again surprised Claude by rising early and cheerfully setting out for Pulsifer's farm. However, William Penn Pulsifer and his son Penny had decided to work, for awhile, nearby. Because of this, Ettie felt that she must supply them with a hot dinner, and so could not come to the White house until one o'clock.

Ned agreed to come again at one o'clock if Miss Johnston still wanted her, and took his way to the White house. It promised to be an amusing day, he thought, as he knocked at the kitchen door.

"Blue Eyes," with flaming cheeks, opened the door. This had been a terrible morning of starting open fires, lighting a kitchen range, and trying to find things in a strange kitchen, in a strange house.

Ned proceeded to explain Mrs. Pulsifer's absence.

Mary listened, murmured her thanks, and praised Mr. Dabbs for his kindness in sending help. She would be glad to see Mrs. Pulsifer that afternoon.

"What will you do now?" Ned asked, anxiously looking at the pile of dishes on the table before her. "Let me help you."

Mary opened her mouth to annihilate this pushing young person, but at that moment the telephone bell rang, and with a little nod of dismissal, she hurried to answer it.

Ned looked idly about him. Then the great idea came to him. He grinned, snatched up a gingham kitchen apron from the back of a chair and tied it across his chest. He turned the hot water on a pan full of dishes and reached for the dish mop. He knew that camp, motor boat and army experiences would stand him in good stead now. He would show this girl what an excellent job he could do. He commenced to wash dishes in a slow, orderly fashion.

At the telephone, Mary was talking to Mr. Dabbs. She had closed the door. No sound from the kitchen reached her. Yes, she told him, she was Miss Johnston, and his nephew had gone. She was ever so much obliged. If Mrs. Pulsifer could come at noon, it would be a great help.

Mary left the telephone with shining eyes. How kind these country people were! Imagine a grocer taking all that trouble in the city! She must tell mother. It would amuse her, if the headache was not too bad. With a little run she took the stairs, three steps at a time, and softly opened the door of the great front bedroom.

It was a lovely room, darkened now, beautifully arranged and furnished. Nothing in it was as beautiful as the woman who was lying upon the bed, staring at the ceiling. She looked scarcely older than Mary herself. Tumbled masses of red hair spread over the pillow. She turned her face quickly from Mary.

"Mother, I'm going to bring you some tea and toast in a jiffy, unless you feel like coming down."

"I don't want anything. Don't trouble," came in a soft murmur from the bed.

"Oh, mother, don't take it so hard! I'm getting on famously and the country people here are wonderful. What do you think! The grocer—the one with a funny little short name—Dabbs—that's it, is sending a woman to cook and clean for us this afternoon. By tomorrow we'll have not only a clean house, but probably a new batch of maids and a cook from the city. Then you can be properly fed."

Her mother raised herself on one elbow, staring at her daughter with level, unblinking brown eyes. Seen face to face she appeared older than Mary, but one would hardly have classified them as mother and daughter. Sisters would have been a reasonable guess.

"Mary, what did you say the grocer's name was?"

"Dabbs," repeated Mary. "Funny name."

"Isn't this place called Clover Hollow?"

"Yes, mother, but the grocer comes from Peace Valley. There are no shops in Clover Hollow."

Mary's mother sank back on her pillows and muttered something that sounded like: "Oh my soul! The last straw!"

Mary looked puzzled and a little frightened. This was the first time in her life that she had known her strong, capable mother to give way to her nerves.

"Mother, can't you tell me what's wrong?"

"No, I can't just now, Mary-girl. It's a little financial bother, and until I understand it better myself, I can't talk about it. Run along like a good child. My head will soon be all right again." Then the head was lifted and the eyes fixed upon her daughter. "Oh do take that ugly apron off!"

"I've been so busy I forgot it." Mary was more hurt than apologetic. To tidy a big house like this, and make something to eat, was quite an achievement, for any girl, and especially one unaccustomed to doing it. She had looked for praise.

"It makes you look—" her mother gave an odd, hysterical giggle—"it makes you look—like a grocer's daughter. For heaven's sake, take it off!"

Mary went downstairs more slowly than she had come up. She wished her mother would confide in her, for she must be awfully worried about money to act like this. Mary wondered, idly, if it meant that they would have to give up the proposed trip to California and Honolulu this fall. They might possibly have to stay in New York all winter. They might even be so poor that they would have to stay here in the country. There was something that appealed to Mary in this thought, if only mother could be kept amused.

Ever since Mary's childhood, she had realized that the first duty of the world and the people therein, herself included, was to keep mother amused. When she was not amused, Mary's heavens were dark. It was not that it took so much to amuse her. Sometimes a new book or a visit from a friend, and the sun shone again; but woe betide any place or person boring her for two consecutive days. They were immediately obliterated from her life.

Mary sat down to rest on one of the steps. Her thoughts went back through the years to all the hotel suites they had occupied—the rented villas, apartments in Spain, Italy and France. All had been delightful, but she would love to stay here and see an American winter. To watch the seasons change from spring to summer, summer to autumn, autumn to winter, here in her own country! It would be delightful, wonderful.

Mary rose slowly and went down stairs. One thing certain, she must not bother mother now, and she must make her a cup of tea.

Mary opened the door leading to the kitchen. Then she stared with astonishment and dismay at the grocer's boy drying the dishes.

"Oh!" exclaimed Mary.

The "grocer's boy" began tugging at his apron strings, wishing that he had heard her coming. "Must look a fool," was his thought.

"It was very kind of you, but entirely unnecessary." Mary spoke severely.

Her tone reminded Ned of all he had forgotten about his apparent station in life. Suddenly he disliked this blue-eyed girl intensely, if she was that kind.

He slipped out of the offending apron, took up his hat, and looked at her gravely. "I'll bring Mrs. Pulsifer up after luncheon," he offered, limply.

Mary's sense of humor, which had momentarily deserted her, returned. She thought herself a fool to handle the incident, however annoying, in this manner.

"Oh, Mr. Carter, will you please bring up two pounds of Graham flour, and some table salt—I don't remember how salt comes—and three cakes of soap. I'm awfully grateful for all you've done for me."

She blushed vividly at the end of her speech. Ned instantly forgave her everything.

"It's nothing. Uncle orders me to do these things," Ned lied cheerfully.

He made an elaborate note in a book, which Mary, now aroused to note this young man's customs and manners, saw was a little red leather diary and rather elegant at that. It was not at all the usual orderbook of a grocer's clerk. Her suspicions grew.

"May I ask," said Ned, feeling very businesslike, "if that was uncle on the telephone? Because, that's why I waited. I knew he might call up."

Mary admitted that it had been his uncle.

"Did he want me?" Ned inquired, a shade uncomfortably.

Grasping her chance, Mary answered demurely: "I don't know. I told him that you had gone. I should think, if you are in the habit of spending most of your working hours washing dishes for any customer whose help leaves her, you might be a very nice man, but a pretty poor grocer."

Ned laughed. "I wasn't concerned about Uncle Claude wanting me, but about his requiring the car. Don't get a false idea from me of how the grocery business is run, Miss Johnston. The shop is Uncle Claude's. I'm allowed to do odd jobs, while visiting him."

Mary's eyes unconsciously took in the young man's outer garments. She had been so domestically absorbed that she had only concerned herself with his actions and intentions. Now, she realized that before her was a young man, clad in garments far too sophisticated and too well cut to belong to any grocer's assistant in Peace Valley. Undoubtedly she was being "had" by this young man. Mary's blue eyes snapped.

"I admire your uncle," she said with feeling and obvious emphasis.

"He's my hero, too, just now," Ned agreed.

Mary could not keep from laughter, and somehow laughter cleared the air and seemed to leave all explanations for a future time. Ned went gayly down the steps. At the foot he turned and looked back at the girl. She stood watching him from the doorway. He had not the slightest doubt she was speculating about him. He devoutly hoped so!

That afternoon Ned helped Mrs. Pulsifer out and ushered her into the Johnston kitchen, which was empty, and urged her toward the dishes piled on a tray. Not knowing the etiquette of work by the day, Ned feared she might resent not being ceremoniously welcomed. He watched her begin her task and, much relieved, went into the garden.

(Continued next week.)

LOCALS

Rev. and Mrs. Snyder are enjoying a visit from Mrs. Snyder's mother, Mrs. Losee, of Lake City.

Mrs. M. I. Allen entertained Mrs. Spitler's division of the M. E. Aid, last Thursday.

John Greenlander and Edwin Menrenga left Tuesday for Des Moines where John will attend a lumber dealers' convention.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Greenfield and daughter, June, were Sunday visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Thompson at Clear Lake.

Dr. and Mrs. Gowdy and Mrs. H. F. Luick were Mason City callers last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Veeder are the parents of a baby boy, born Friday, Feb. 25. They now have have three girls and one boy.

The W. F. M. S. meets with Mrs. Clyde Jennings, Thursday.

Julius Johnson went to Iowa City, Tuesday, where he will receive medical treatment at the hospital. He was accompanied by Carlton Johnson, Elmer Johnson and Crist Rise.

Mrs. W. H. Wolle will be hostess to the Priscilla club, Wednesday of next week.

"The Speed Limit" at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday Night is an action picture all will like. Thrills galore. Prices 10c and 25c.

The Chain of Ten met Tuesday of this week at the home of Mrs. Otto Hanson.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Nordschow and Mrs. Cato C. Griesy motored to Des Moines, Tuesday.

A combination program, all given by one man, will be given at the Good Fellowship club meeting tonight March 3. W. S. Haley, of Salem, Ore. is the speaker and entertainer. He gives his own entertainment, consisting of stunts, music, vocal and instrumental selections, reading and impersonations.

Mr. Haley will talk on scientific systematic saving.

GARNER FARMER KILLED STARTING GAS ENGINE

Herman Walker, who resided six miles south of Garner, was killed last Monday afternoon by being caught in the fly wheel of a gasoline engine which he was starting. He was going to shell corn when the accident occurred. He had both legs broken and died in a few minutes after the accident occurred. He was twenty-five years of age.

E. A. Pierce returned Saturday from Cherokee, where he has been staying this winter with his daughter, Alberta.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus Nissen are planning a trip to Germany this summer, and expect to leave some time in May.

Rev. Stark went to Earlville, Wednesday, to assist at a funeral.

Mrs. Clara Jante of Garner was visiting relatives here Saturday. Mrs. Jante will be remembered as Clara Chase.

Francis Ramsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milt Ramsey, had an operation for appendicitis at the local hospital, Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Rich Thompson are the parents of a baby boy, born Feb. 17.

Will sell Ford truck on Combination sale March 8.—Elmer Larson. 1*

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Barton and daughters Mae and Ruth, of Buffalo Center visited with friends and relatives over the week end.

The Rosary Society of the Catholic church were very successful with their supper and dance, last Thursday, about $150 being realized from the affairs. The society is much appreciative of the Hot Point electric ranges furnished by the Central States Electric Co. An excellent supper was served, and reports of the dance indicate that the crowd thoraly enjoyed the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Worley, of Cedar Rapids, accompanied by Mrs. Chamberlin of Ely, Ia., and Miss Georgia Furmeister, of Cedar Rapids drove to Belmond last Thursday to attend the funeral of Ralph Tiara.

Merrill Stapley came from Chicago Friday morning to be at the funeral of his friend, Ralph Tiara. He returned to his work the next day.

"The Speed Limit" at the Belmond Opera House, Saturday Night is an action picture all will like. Thrills galore. Prices 10c and 25c.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

BASKET SOCIAL

The Rebekahs and Odd Fellows will hold a basket social and program March 9. Ladies please bring baskets. All members are requested to bring two friends.

COMBINATION SALE!

Don't forget the Combination Sale March 8. In order to prepare stalls for your stock it will be an accomodation to have the stock listed early. List with either T. D. Rankins, or Belmond Savings Bank.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	18c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	38 1-2c
Corn	54c
Barley	62c

OBITUARY OF RALPH TIARA

(Continued from page one.)

in this loss.

It is hard to understand why the young with all of life before them must be taken, and especially those who would live on to make this old world better. But God's ways are always right. Although Ralph did not live long, he lived well. Higher tribute could not be paid than to say he lived so that he left this old world better because he lived in it. His reward is a crown in that kingdom where life is eternal.

Funeral services were held at the home at 2:00 p. m. Friday, in charge of Rev. S. U. Leinbach, burial being in the Belmond cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We thank our friends for their kind expressions of sympathy during our recent great sorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Tiara and Family
Miss Louise Leslie Worley

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Bullis are moving into the Greenlander house in south Belmond.

Mrs. Wallace Ramsay was hostess to the Progress club, Tuesday afternoon of this week.

Two-pound package of Swift's Silver Leaf brand Lard for 32 cents Friday and Saturday, this week only. —Cleveland's Grocery. 1c

Combination Sale at Olaf, Friday, March 11, beginning at 12:30 p. m. sharp. Horses, cattle, hogs, machinery and miscellaneous articles. List whatever you have to sell with any of the undersigned before day of sale. Hot lunch served by North Ladies Aid.

A. B. ERICKSON, Auct.
STATE BANK OF BELMOND, Clerk
ANDERSON & BAXTER, Mgrs.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

MARCH 3—Maxwell Baker, Closing out farm sale.

MARCH 8—Combination Sale. Particulars in this issue.

MARCH 12—Horse and mule sale. Bailey & McLaughlin, props. Particulars in this issue.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Big type brood sows, April farrow. Bred to pure bred boars. Cholera immune. Will sell by weight.—M. Halfwassen. 13tf

FOR SALE—Silver Laced Wyandotte hatching eggs, from prize-winning stock. Farm range.—J. M. Croft, Alexander, Iowa. 152*

FOR SALE—My farm of 120 acres in Vernon County, Wisconsin, one-half mile to school, about one mile to creamery. About 80 acres under cultivation, the rest in timber. Six miles to market. Fair buildings. Price $12,000. Will sell on easy terms. I will consider a house and lot in Belmond in the deal.—O. L. Josvanger, Victory, Wisconsin. 1*

FOR SALE—Good, sound, ripe Early Ohio Seed Potatoes, $2.25 a bushel. David Kelley. Phone 228.

FOR SALE—Shorthorn bulls, by a son of Cumberland's Type, fit to head the best herds in the state.—L. E. Azeltine, Alexander, Ia. 163*

BABY CHICKS! We will have a hatch of W. Wyandottes off March 8th. Very good quality in these chicks If interested in some exceptionally good Buff Orpington or S. C. R. I. Red chicks, we can supply you with the best to be had in this part of Iowa. A hatch off every Tuesday. We do custom hatching. We invite you to visit our up-to-date hatchery. If interested in baby chicks, call us at our expense.—BALLUFF & THORPE, CLARION, IA. One block east and one block north of Catholic church. 152c

FOR SALE—Four Holstein heifers, to freshen this spring. T. B. tested.—D. H. Delaney. 152*

FOR SALE—Brown Leghorn hatching eggs, $3.00 per 100. Buff Orpington pen eggs $1.00 per setting.—Mrs. J. B. Sheffield. 15tfc

FOR SALE—8 head of horses, from 3 to 12 years of age. Weight from 1200 to 1675 pounds. Priced from $35 to $165 each. Will give time on satisfactory note. Frank Drury, 1 mile west of Rowan. 16tfc

FOR SALE—Buff Rock hatching eggs, good producers, range flock. $4 per 100. Mrs. Menno Frohling. Phone 1105. 164*

FOR SALE OR RENT—One five-room house and one four-room house with barn, one and one-half blocks from Main street.—Mrs. Ella Cleveland. 1c

FOR SALE—Registered Shorthorn bull, 4 years old. T. B. tested. From accredited herd. Peter Kaufman.

WANTED—One hundred ladies to bring baskets to the Community Club basket social Friday evening, March 11. 1*

FOR RENT—6 room house, partly modern, 5 blocks north of State Bank. See M. C. Barry. 1*

WANTED—Family washings. — Mrs. Bergerfer, in Barry Addition. 2*

SERVICE!

Even if Coolidge did veto the Farm Bill, people must eat.

Where are they buying?

Certainly not as much as they should from their local bakeries. Is it fair to them?

I am sure they try their best to please you. Very little of the money spent for baked goods out of town stays here.

I am still baking and taking orders for Home Baked Goods.

HOT BAKED BEANS
Every Tuesday and Saturday. They are fine!

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Opera House

THURSDAY, MARCH 3
Gloria Swanson in
"The Untamed Lady"
A Paramount comedy-drama.
"LOVEY ANNA"
2-Reel Educational comedy
Prices 10c & 25c

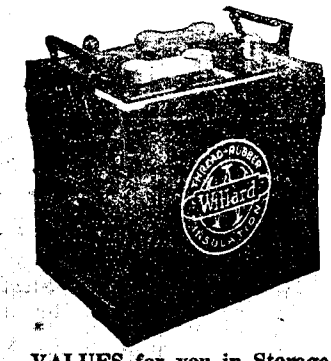
FRIDAY, MARCH 4
GAY PAREE DANCE
Or a night in Paris. Music by Earl Hunt's Novelty Orchestra.

SATURDAY, MARCH 5
Raymond McKee in
"The Speed Limit"
180 miles an hour! Faster than tires had ever travelled before. That was "the speed limit" that this nervy youth had to beat in order to win a wife and a fortune.
Bobby Vernon in
"DON'T PINCH"
2-Reel Educational Comedy
Prices 10c & 25c

SUNDAY, MARCH 6
"The Rain Maker"
Ernest Torrence, Wm. Collier, Jr. and George Hale in a Paramount feature.
Also 2-reel comedy.
First show at 8:30 O'Clock
Prices 10c & 25c

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9
Jack Holt in
"Sea Horses"
Also 2-reel Educational comedy
Prices 10c & 25c

NEW



VALUES for you in Storage Batteries at the Battery Station.

As low as $12.00 for a heavy plate, rubber case battery.

This is not a price battery, but a quality battery at a new, low price.

We carry the largest and most complete stock of Batteries in Wright County.

Car Batteries, Radio Batteries, B Batteries and Hot Shot —We have them all.

Also—Guaranteed Rebuilt Batteries at $5, $6, $7.50.

See Us before you buy batteries —We can save you money!

BELMOND STORAGE BATTERY CO.

Phone 46 Official 2417

WE HAVE A
Choice Selection
of the
Early Spring
HATS
At This Time!

SILK BLOOMERS
at $1.79
A real bargain!

HEMSTITCHING
at 10c per yd.

TheHat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Friday and Saturday
March 4 and 5

Weiners, per pound	20c
Pork Chops per pound	25c
Good Pork Roast, per pound	22c

We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

YOUR Savings are greater if you plan a large order, sufficient to replenish your staples. We invite you to get our Big Value Prices on your next order.

REGULAR PRICES!

CORN	10c
PEAS	2 for 25c
PLUMS, No. 2 can	20c
TOMATOES	10c and 20c
OPAL COFFEE in glass jar	50c
HOMINY	10c
PORK and BEANS	10c

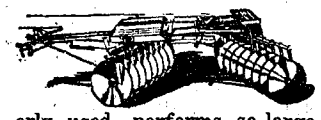
Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

Good Farm Equipment Talk No. 3

Bigger Crops from Better Seed Beds

Every farmer's ambition is, or should be, to secure the largest possible yield from the soil and at the same time maintain its fertility.



The seed bed is the home of plant roots. From it the plant secures its moisture and most of its food. If the seed bed is properly made, a long step has been taken toward ultimate production. For ages plowing has been recognized the first essential step in making the seed bed, but it has been learned that, in addition the disc harrow—if properly used—performs so large a part in making a perfect seed bed that no farmer can afford to overlook it.

The object of a deep seed bed is to give plenty of room for roots; to have a bountiful supply of plant food, which is impossible in a shallow seed bed and to have a goodly supply of water.

Just remember that there are two sides to a seed bed—the top or exposed side, and the lower out-of-sight side next to the subsoil. What kind of contact will the furrow slices make with the subsoil, if a heavy mat of stubble and trash is laid between them? Disking cuts and mixes the stubble and trash with the ground so that when plowed under, decay is rapid and the soil layer settles down on the subsoil compactly. This is one of the methods advocated for the eradication of the corn borer. As a general rule, then, it is advantageous to disk land covered with any kind of growth, before plowing it under.

Working the surface will not break up the clods in the bottom of the furrow, nor close the large air spaces. A good disking before plowing remedies this trouble effectually. One important reason for disking is conserving moisture. When the top surface is well broken up, forming a fine, dirt mulch, evaporation is stopped, and whatever rain may fall is quickly absorbed, adding to the supply in the subsoil.

A disk harrow to make a better seed bed most advantageous for you should have great penetrating power and give a very thorough cultivation. Such a disk harrow should enable you to keep all the disks cutting at an even depth. It should be solidly and strongly built and provide for plenty of clearance for trash. It should be adjustable to the various weather conditions under which a disk harrow operates. Such a machine should not only be convenient to handle in the field and easy on your horses but should be so constructed and put together that you can conveniently store it so as to keep it from the ravages of the weather.

We believe the John Deere Model "B" Flexible Disk Harrow and the McCormick-Deering Heat Treated Blade Disk Harrow meets these requirements better than any other machine on the market. We have them here for your benefit and would appreciate an opportunity of explaining its good features to you.

SEE SPECIMENS OF THE CORN BORER AT OUR STORE

GRIESY'S

The Friendly Place

Phone 10 Belmond, Iowa

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER

Belmond Independent

Subscription Expired! Ago

VOL. 8 — BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 1927. — NO. 17

SENIOR CLASS TO PUT OUT PAPER

Instead Of Annual This Year, Class Will Have Charge Of Independent One Week

APRIL 14TH WILL BE WEEK

The Senior class has undertaken a project which will be of interest to everyone in the community. It seemed inadvisable to publish an annual this year, so instead arrangements have been made whereby the class puts out one issue of "The Belmond Independent." The date of this issue will be April 14. The class will solicit the advertising, write the editorials, gather the local news items, and in addition will give an account of the school activities for the year.

This issue will be double the size of a regular issue and will be printed on book paper. It will contain cuts of the class and the school. As this is the issue of the week just preceding Easter, we are sure the merchants will be glad to give the class their Easter advertising. The soliciting for advertising will be done quite early and we hope you will help the class by getting your advertising ready early.

The class appreciates the cooperation of the editor of the Independent in giving them this opportunity to make a practical use of their work in English and to have a permanent record of the class and school activities for 1926-27.

Belmond returned from the preliminary declamatory contest at Kanawha last Tuesday with about one-third of the bacon. While we were not able to capture all three firsts, we were well satisfied with the showing made by our contestants and are now centering our hopes on Mildred Jacobson, winner of first place over three other contestants in humorous class and our representative in the sub-district contest to be held March 11. Our speakers in Dramatic and Oratorical, Lucile Skouge and Leo Ayers, each won second place in their respective classes, completely out-classing their opponents from Klemme and Goodell and losing first place to two excellent speakers from Kanawha. Those of us who made the trip to Kanawha to hear the contest were very much pleased with the fine training and ability shown by all three of the Belmond speakers. We have every reason to feel optimistic in regard to the outcome of the sub-district contest with such a representative as Mildred. This contest will be held at Garner next Friday evening.

Our boys' basket ball team played their last game of the season last Thursday, meeting defeat in the Britt-Belmond game at Mason City. Belmond had the advantage during the first quarter and showed their best work of the season. The first quarter ended with the score 8 to 3 in favor of Belmond.

At the half the score stood 15 to 10 in Britt's favor. Belmond kept up their fine playing but the strong Britt team had the advantage and the game ended 34 to 19, in their favor.

Although the result was not favorable, we are proud of the way our team worked for their school, and their fine sportsmanship was a credit to our school.

McNulty and Johnson were the outstanding players for our team, and Weide displayed his best playing of the season.

The three classes, Sophomore, Junior and Senior, have started work on extempore speaking. This is Belmond's second year in this work and much interest is being shown. For the Seniors and Sophomores, it is compulsory and is part of the regular English course. It is optional, however, with the Juniors and quite a few have entered into this work. The Literary Digest and Review of Reviews are used for references; the subjects are all of national interest and are very instructive.

There will be a home contest between the three classes before April 2nd, and a representative from Belmond High will be chosen to represent us in the District contest.

The gift of speaking extemporan-

(Continued on page six.)

THE BEE THAT SWARMED ALONE

Said a wise old bee at the close of day: "This colony business doesn't pay. I put my money in that old hive that others may eat and live and thrive; and I do more work in a day, by gee, than some of the fellows do in three. I toil and worry and save and hoard, and all I get is my room and board. It's me for a hive I can run myself, and me for the sweets of my hard-earned pelf." So the old bee flew to a meadow alone and started a business of his own. He gave no thought to the buzzing clan, but all intent on his selfish plan he lived the life of a hermit free. "Ah, this is great," said the wise old bee. But the summer waned and the days grew drear and the lone bee wailed as he dropped a tear; for the varmints gobbled his little store and his wax played out and his heart was sore, so he winged his way to the old home land, and took his meal at a side-door stand. Alone, our work is of little worth, but together we're the lords of the earth; so it's all for each and each for all—united we stand, divided we fall.

Moral: Belmond needs a Commercial club and more co-operation.

HEREIM-SANFORD

Monday evening, February 21, in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bohning, at the First Methodist parsonage, occurred the marriage of Miss Myrtie Hereim and Arthur C. Sanford, the Rev. Corwin Taylor officiating. The bride was attired in green silk flat crepe and the groom was attired in blue.

The bride is well known in this community. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Hereim, of this city, and has resided here for the past several years. She is a young lady possessed of many good qualities which will make her a charming helpmate for the man of her choice.

The groom is an upright young man of good character and is well worthy of the fair prize he has won. He attended Belmond school and has made his home in Belmond for several years.

They left for Barrington, Illinois, where they will make their future home. Their many friends extend this worthy young couple every good wish for happiness throughout many years of wedded life.

PASS ORDINANCE AGAINST SHOWS

Publish Ordinance This Week; Penalty Is Made Heavy.

The Sunday movie question has become somewhat more pointed with the publication this week of the ordinance recently passed by the city council, which prohibits Sunday operation of theatres. The ordinance assesses a fine of $25 to $100 and not to exceed 30 days in jail for violation of the Sunday law.

Mr. Moody, manager of the opera house, held a show Sunday night at which it is reported there were over 400 spectators.

It is understood that at the meeting Monday evening of the council, Mr. Moody appeared and offered to pay all the expenses of a special election to decide the question of Sunday shows. The council, it is understood has taken the proposition under consideration.

NOTICE!

A cordial invitation is extended to all Farm Bureau members and friends to attend a joint meeting of Belmond and Pleasant townships to be held in Belmond library at 8:00 p. m., March 16, 1927.

After a short program put on by local talent, Prof. Dyas, of the Extension department of Ames will talk on the subject, "Legumes and Their Possibilities"

Prof. Fitch, from the Extension Department, will give a talk on the planting and growing of potatoes.

Light refreshments will be served and a good social time guaranteed.

V. F. Mikesell has returned from Lawrence, Kansas, where he was called by the illness and death of his father. Mrs. Mikesell expects to go from Lawrence to Fall City, Nebraska, to visit her family.

Tapping Time

BASKET SOCIAL AT LIBRARY

Community Club Sponsors Program And Basket Social.

Folks who enjoy a good time will not want to miss the basket social to be held tomorrow, Friday night, March 11, in the library basement. This social is sponsored by the Community Welfare Club, and from the arrangements made promises to be one of the most enjoyable affairs held in the city for some time.

A splendid program of entertainment has been arranged beginning at 8:00 o'clock, with music by the Luick Orchestra. The orchestra will play until about 8:30, when the program proper will start. This program is entirely of a humorous nature, and as the club is advertising, is "Guaranteed to cure the blues." It is as follows:

1. Reading—"A Boy and His Stummick" ----------Howard Dempsey
2. Male Quartette—Humorous Selections.
3. Reading ----------Gladys Barry
4. Instrumental Solo ----Dr. Larson
5. Reading ----Mrs. A. C. Lieuwen
6. Piano Solo --------- Ruth Jones
7. A One-Act Comedy.

Following the program, C. M. Morse, as auctioneer, will auction the baskets, every lady being requested to bring a basket. Coffee will be served free to all.

The program will be free, and everyone is welcome to attend whether they buy a basket or not. From the looks of the program, those who do attend will enjoy a fine evening's entertainment.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP CLUB ENJOYS FINE MEETING

An entertaining program was listened to by a crowded house at the Good Fellowship Club meeting last Thursday night at the library. The ladies were privileged to attend this meeting, and a goodly number were present. The program and address was given by W. S. Haley, of Salem, Oregon. Mr. Haley entertained the audience by a number of vocal selections, and selections on the violin and melodian, and several readings. He is an excellent entertainer and reader, and his efforts were greatly enjoyed. His talk was on savings and budgeting of household expenses and he left his audience with some good ideas to think over. The usual refreshments were served after the meeting.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week February 26 to March 5, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
27	26	15	—	Pt. Cloudy
28	30	19	T	Cloudy
1	30	22	.05	Pt. Cloudy
2	37	12	—	Clear
3	42	12	—	Clear
4	49	29	—	Clear
5	38	34	.04	Cloudy

Supt. H. J. Williams refereed the sectional basket ball tournament at Spirit Lake last Friday and Saturday. He returned there Monday to referee a game that previously resulted in a tie.

YOUNG LAD SERIOUSLY HURT

Raymond Lamb Seriously Injured In Accident, Monday.

Raymond Lamb, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lamb, received several serious gashes in his head and face and a slight concussion of the brain in an accident, Monday morning, with a team of mules. He was driving the mules hitched to a wagon, on Main street, near the Fred Fulton residence, when the endgate dropped out. He stopped the team to replace the endgate, and was climbing back into the wagon when the mules became frightened. Raymond went in front of the team to stop them from running into some small children returnig home from school. As one mule jerked back, it slid a heavy fence gate on the wagon so that the gate bumped the other mule. Both animals then started to run, throwing the boy down. He grabbed the tongue of the wagon, when one of the mules reared up and struck him in the head with a hoof. That is the last the youth remembers.

Indications are that he was tramped on by the team as he fell beneath their hoofs and was dragged some distance before the wagon ran over him. The mules ran down Main street until they reached a point in front of the Lathrop hall, where Mr. Lamb, who happened to be waiting for the boy at that point, stopped them. Raymond was taken to the hospital here where it was found he had three or four deep gashes cut in his scalp, some of them to the skull; one eye badly cut and bruised; one ear torn and mashed; and one foot, where the wagon ran over him, was very severely sprained and bruised, besides the slight concussion of the brain. One entire side of his face was so badly scratched and gashed that it is feared he will carry some of the scars as long as he lives.

The lad rested fairly easy Tuesday, and is reported getting along as well as can be expected at this time.

METHODIST MISSIONARY

The March meeting was held at the C. H. Jennings home. Mrs. Frank Snyder, associate hostess.

There was a beautiful duet and an observance of prayer Week by several who had participated during the week.

Mrs. J. S. White led a very well prepared lesson from our study. There was a good attendance.

A bit of "Old Ireland" was introduced when the Shamrocks carrying the mystery question were distributed by Mrs. Spitler.

An old fashioned party, to which we are inviting all our church friends is to be held March 24, celebrating the 58th anniversary of the founding of our society.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Mrs. Cable, of Des Moines, a branch officer, was present.

Walter Sharp, the new Standard Oil tank man who succeeds Carl Michaelson, has rented the Morse house across from the M. E. church.

SUMMARY OF WEATHER FOR FEBRUARY, 1927

Temperature

Mean Maximum, 36.4.
Mean Minimum, 19.1.
Monthly Mean, 27.7.
Maximum for the month, 52 on the 23rd.
Minimum for the month, 5 below on the 18th.
Greatest daily range in temperature, 32 degrees.

Precipitation

Total for month, .63, the greatest in 24 hours being .38.
Snowfall for month, 3.00 inches.

Sky Condition

Clear days, 8.
Partly cloudy, 5.
Cloudy, 15.
Prevailing direction for wind was from the S. W.

Other Februaries

Temperature

Departure from normal 9.4 degrees warmer than average.
Warmest day in any February, 62 on February 15, 1921.
Coldest day in any February, February 2, 1917, 28 below; February 1, 1918, 28 below.

Precipitation

Normal for month, 1.11 in.
February 1927 short .48 in .
Greatest snowfall any February, 18.1 in 1921.

BEATING HENRY AT HIS OWN GAME

Wall Lake Blade: We have about decided to install a radio broadcasting station in Wall Lake. We notice that the Shemandoah stations have overlooked undertaking goods so we will specialize on caskets. We will make our announcements like this: "This is the friendly casket emporium. We will start our program this afternoon with an oldtime favorite, "Turkey in the Tree Tops." But before we forget it we wish to announce that this morning we received another big shipment of pale green caskets. We have your size. Don't forget we have never had a complaint from any of our patrons, and we guarantee a perfect fit. If you try one of our caskets you will never want another!"

FIRE PREVENTION DAY WEDNESDAY

Thoro Inspection Will Be Made Of All Business Buildings.

Next week Wednesday, March 16, will be Fire Inspection and Prevention day in Belmond. On that day, some 20 to 25 inspectors will be here for the purpose of inspecting all business buildings in town, and will make such recommendations as they see fit for better fire prevention for each building. They come here under the auspices of a committee formed from the various civic bodies and clubs of the community, and are sent by the Iowa Fire Prevention Association. One or more firemen will accompany each inspector.

Home owners will have the opportunity to co-operate thru inspection blanks which will be sent to the home thru the school children.

At nine a. m. the fire siren will be sounded, as a signal that the inspection will commence. At 7:30 Wednesday evening, the siren will be sounded again to call the attention of the public to the mass meeting to be held that evening in the opera house, the hall being donated for that purpose by Mrs. Ella Cleveland and son. At this mass meeting, various speakers will give short addresses on fire prevention and the damage caused thruout the nation by fire; a report of the day's work by the inspectors will be given, and moving pictures will be shown illustrating prevention of fires and ways and means of combatting it.

The committee in charge have been posting the town with placards advertising the day, and some extraordinary window displays are being arranged in some of the business establishments.

The Luncheon Club meets today in an extra session. This meeting is the last of the winter schedule, and was provided for by a surplus of funds from past luncheons. The question of continuance of the club will come up at this session, and reports of several committees will be heard.

SEEK DOWS MAN FOR ASSAULT

Fractures Skull Of Another In Argument Over Traps; Has Not Been Seen Since. —

INJURIES MAY BE SERIOUS

Wright county officers have their drag net out for Joe Vallie, hit and run assailant, who on last Tuesday night struck William DeLong with a blunt instrument during an argument at Dows over hunting traps. John Rummens, who was with Vallie when the assault was made, is held under $1500 bonds to appear before the grand jury.

About eight o'clock Tuesday evening Vallie and Rummens approached DeLong, about fifty years old and generally regarded as harmless individual, and an argument ensued about traps. Both were engaged in trapping and Vallie professed that DeLong had disturbed some traps which belonged to him. Vallie struck DeLong, fracturing his skull, after which he and his companion, Rummens, drove to Galt, since which time Vallie has not been seen. The injured man was found soon and because of the serious nature of his injuries was immediately taken to the hospital at Iowa Falls, where he still remains. Sheriff Johnson went to Iowa Falls yesterday afternoon to confer with the victim in regard to the assault and to learn what progress he is making toward recovery.

Vallie is a man about 28 years of age, who has been about Clarion Galt and Dows for several years, making a living in such various ways as to lead officers to believe that he was trying to break into the penitentiary, and this last act makes them pretty sure that they can put him there.

DeLong lived with an aged mother at Dows, and while he was not of brilliant mentality he was regarded as harmless in all respects. Full effects of the injuries inflicted upon him by the assault of Tuesday night cannot yet be known.

Court is now running into the fifth successive week, which is a long session in Wright county. The court is still engaged with the hearing of the Amos Thompson case, with the prospect that it may not be concluded for another week. It is being stubbornly fought by both sides.

The grand jury was excused Monday and ordered to return Friday. No conclusions from their deliberations are yet given out. The petit jury was finally excused for this session, and none of this panel will be required to again appear.

Don Stolsmark asks foreclosure of mortgage on tract in section 22, Eagle Grove township, and lots in Eagle Grove, bought from him by Julia Roseland, widow of Nels O. Roseland, deceased and his heirs. Solsmark seeks to have his title quieted against the claims of Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove and other creditors of the Roselands.

Central Life Insurance Company of Illinois asks personal judgment against Samuel Bjelland and Carrie Bjelland for $41,741, that a receiver be appointed to care for 1926 crop of corn that has not yet been picked, and order for sale of land in section 29, Grant township.

George H. Steele of Belmond asks judgment against K. E. Hagen for $352.67 as his share of the loss in a deal which the two experienced in buying corn from Jas. Cannon for speculation. Steele furnished the money while Hagen stored it and hauled it. They held the corn from Feb. 1, 1926 to Oct. 15, 1926.

Equitable Life Insurance company of Iowa was given judgment against E. J. Rood, Hazel Rood and others for foreclosure against land in sections 10 and 11, Wall Lake township.

L. N. Archerd was re-appointed a member of insanity commission.

D. W. Stewart, J. H. Reese and R. Richardson were appointed inheritance tax appraisers for 1927—Monitor.

At the special election held in Eagle Grove recently to determine whether the city should build a municipal light plant, the project lost by a large majority. The vote was 907 against to 578 for.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES

Display, per column inch 25c
Locals, per line 10c
Classified, per word 02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

Since operation of the sugar factory this year has become practically a minus quantity, many families have been moving away. Man must work to live, and when the sugar mill shut down no other work was available. The loss of these families means a consequent decrease in trade for the local merchant, and a decrease of money in circulation. What are we going to do to offset this loss? If we do nothing, all of us will have to go on a smaller volume of business, and consequently less profit. If we stir around and go after business, we can get more than enough to offset what we will lose thru the factory shutting down. Too much Belmond trade is going out of town. Everyone knows it. What are we doing about it? Some of us are doing what we can to hold it here; others are sitting down and doing nothing—or holding back the others, which is worse than doing nothing. Individually, we can each of us do a part to hold trade at home; collectively we can do twice as much. The most outstanding need in Belmond today is Co-Operation! You cannot stress that fact too much or too hard. It is absolutely disgusting, not to say discouraging, to see the way we are going in this town. Every one of us knows Belmond will never be a big town; what is the use of pouring out flowery language about the great future before us when we know we're not even fooling ourselves when we say it? But if we cannot be a big town, what under the heavens is to keep us from being a BIG Little Town? Nothing but the lack of co-operation. We meet and eat and talk; meet and eat and talk—but we don't do anything, we never take action. If we have discussed one thing we have discussed a dozen things we know we ought to have or ought to do—but we haven't done them. What's the use of it if we don't act? If we're going to admit we are dead, then let's lie down and get out of the way of progress. We aren't fooling anybody, least of all ourselves. Anyone who has studied the times knows the small town is at the cross roads today; the next few years will determine which small towns are to become wide places in the road, and which are to be live, thriving centers of rural life. Everyone of us knows Belmond has the natural advantages for progress; every one of us knows we can make the name of Belmond stand as a criterion of country life. Why don't we do it?

Eagle Grove Eagle: The Webster City Freeman-Journal criticises the mayor of Jewell for letting a drunken Eagle Grove automobile driver off with a fine of $95.00. The Freeman-Journal is right, whoever the driver was, or wherever he was from, a man driving an automobile on the public highway in that condition, is a potential murderer and a probable murderer. No one is safe upon the road where a man is driving in that condition. No one can know what he may do, nor how to avoid him. He should be depleted to the limit financially, and then given a definite term in the penitentiary, beyond the jurisdiction of parole boards, or commutation of governors. The lives of men, women and children are menaced by this peril. Among all the perils of automobiling, none are so wholly without excuse, or palliation. It is criminal in every respect. A fine of about $500 and five years in the penitentiary at hard labor would be none too severe for such cases.

A POOR ILLUSTRATION

Reinbeck Courier: Men have been handicapped in life by not having a college training, but many have worked to positions of eminence and great influence in spite of this handicap. Secretary of State Kellogg, in President Coolidge's cabinet, is one of the outstanding examples. His primary education was secured in the one-room school house, where grading was unknown. But he laid the foundation well with the means at hand and served as his own architect in building the structure. He became sufficiently cultured that he was deemed fit to represent this country at the Court of St. James, where discretion and learning are essential. There are other examples of self educated men.—Ackley World-Journal.

In the light of present conditions the World-Journal, probably picked the poorest example in the present day public life of this country to illustrate success without college education. Secretary Kellogg has proved himself narrow, timid, privincial and unstable. As a Secretary of State he has been a sad, sad experiment and one that the good of the nation requires to be ended.

We don't say that Kellogg would have been better or greater had he had the advantage of college training. It may have been so born in him that no training could take away his very obvious faults. Yet he has been so little in so many big jobs that the accident of his having held those jobs does not make him a success or prove the case of the World-Journal was arguing. A college degree does not insure success but a college training is generally well designed to correct the very things that in Kellogg most need correcting.

We have known men to make a considerable success in almost every line without college training. The fact that the majority of outstanding men in various lines are college men does not altogether prove the case of the college, since college training was incidental to and indicative of the many advantages that they enjoyed outside of college life. How much college helped in their success cannot be truly ascertained.

While the tendency of the time is toward college it need not be considered that lack of college training necessarily bars a man from success in most lines. Too many better illustration than Kellogg can be brot forth to show the other side.

CONTROL OF THE ROADS

Algona Republican: The legislature has been having a fight on the control of Iowa highways. For years the roads were under the control of the county supervisors and recently the state highway commission has had control of the primary roads. There are good arguments on each side. The state highway commission has built many miles of good roads and has a vast program laid out for the future, which, if carried out will place Iowa in the top row of states with good roads. However, these roads will cost millions and millions of dollars and the farmers of the state as well as many business men feel that they have all the obligations they can stand at the present time. One of the arguments opposing the bill that gives the state commission full control is that it takes the privilege of spending their own money and there will be opportunity for graft and waste. One of the arguments for the commission is that if the matter is left to the various counties there will be but little done on the roads and mud roads have been one of Iowa's greatest liabilities. One county will build good roads and an adjoining county will not. It is no doubt a fact that good roads are an asset but the question is, are we ready to plunge the state, and when we say the state we mean the citizens and taxpayers, into a two hundred million dollars' debt. It is a cinch that the people living in another state will not pay it and that the money must come from Iowa people, one way or another. Our farmers have had about all they can bear and business, as a rule, has been having a struggle to exist. Let us hope that Iowa's legislators will keep their heads and be sensible in the matter.

BOARD PROCEEDINGS

Clarion, Iowa, February 11, 1927.

Board reconvened as per adjournment, members all present with county auditor in attendance.

Minutes of February 8 and 9, 1927, read and approved.

On motion the personal tax of Mrs. C. A. Edwards for 1924 was abated.

Time and date having arrived for appointing the third official county paper, Board took up the same.

Applications were received from the Herald Press, with subscription list of 382 names; Belmond Independent, with subscription list of 557 names; and The Dows Advocate, with subscription list of 581 names.

On motion the following newspapers: Herald Press, Belmond Independent and Dows Advocate were chosen as the third official county paper for the year 1927, they to receive pay as one paper.

Moved and seconded that Dewey Beisell, Wellington Pinkham and J. M. Bennett be retained as the grader crew at 50c per hour, Pinkham to be foreman in charge of the outfit. Motion carried.

On motion adjourned to February 19, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY,
Chairman.
F. W. WALKER,
County Auditor.

SMILES

Hostess: "Will you help us out with a song?"

He sang and they all went out.

WHAT YOUR HOME SAYS

Your home expresses you, whether you want it to or not. What is it telling people about your tastes and ideals—or perhaps your pocketbook? Is it just like a hundred other homes with no individuality? Then it is shouting your commonness of ideals.

Is it bizarre, with loud colors? Is it shoddy? Too full and confusing and crowded? Bare and hard and barnlike? Cute and cozy and warm? Dignified and simple and strong? Mysterious and vampish? Or what is it like? Appraise your home with this in mind and analyze yourself by your environment, which you have shaped for yourself, out of your innate tastes?

If it does not express dignity and repose and sincerity and spiritual beauty, then it is up to you to take your household penates by the horns and twist them toward this ideal.

A small purse is no excuse for a shoddy home. Better store-box furnishings, gingham and cheesecloth drapes, the very minimum of things, the bare necessities of a makeshift type, until you can afford something better, and one or two choice pieces which will last for all time. Furniture has a trick of doing that—hanging on for the years—and it pays to buy only pieces of good lines and good color. Most rooms have too much in them, anyway; and fewer furnishings of good quality are much to be preferred than loads of inartistic stuff.

If you have inherited a fancy sideboard or dresser, take off the "gingerbread" and leave it less ornate. You will be surprised to see how this gives it "class." If it is a poor color, give it a rich stain. Hide an inartistic chair behind a tasty cover. Study art, and shape your home to its designs. There is no love-labor more delightful than this. If it engages the family in months of devoted study and sacrifice, so much the better. On what could father, mother, brother and sister lavish their efforts to better advantage than in creating a real home, with atmosphere and everything? Don't let your home malign you to those who enter it.

SYMPATHETIC UNDERSTANDING

If we knew why John forgot to bring home the eggs, or why he spoke gruffly, or why he criticized the biscuits, we would be more charitable and forgiving.

Perhaps he is worn out with the day's strain. Perhaps he has been hounded all day with unpleasant demands. Perhaps he is worrying about how he will meet the next insurance installment. Sympathetic understanding is the oil upon the troubled waters. It will quiet many a domestic agitation.

"My husband has missed many a scolding," confessed one housewife, "because I wouldn't reproach him before the children; and when evening came and he came home tired, I had nothing but warm welcome."

Sympathetic understanding makes soft tones, domestic harmony and music in the home.

BREAD FOR PAPER HANGERS' WIVES

Paper hangers and painters have all their year's work crowded into six or eight months, with little to do between seasons. Housewives can save themselves money and help distribute the work of decorating over the entire year, if they will plan to have their wall refinished between fall and spring. We pay higher prices than necessary for this work because we compel the laborers to lie idle so large a proportion of the year.

With rugs and vacuum cleaners and the elimination of the old time housekeeping upheaval, there is no reason why the housewife cannot have her rooms redecorated one at a time—even at the cost of a little inconvenience—and so obtain a cheaper rate and better job for herself, besides helping feed the family of the paper hanger.

WHO FOUNDED OUR COLLEGES?

Early colleges were supported chiefly by religious philanthropists and were intended to educate ministers. Each leading church established its denominational college. These colleges have been supported, not by men of wealth, though these have been generous, but chiefly by thousands of small donors, who gave, not to special phases of education, but "to the college."

This is favorable because it has interested larger numbers of people and because it leaves the college free to develop without "strings" tied to its gifts.

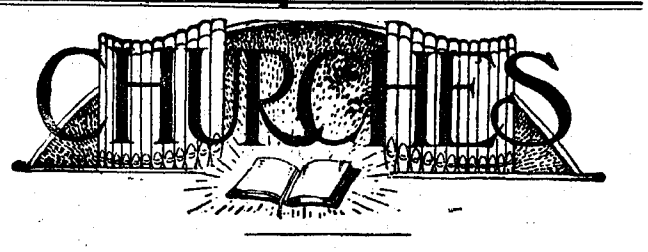
Some long years after we began to educate ministers, it entered the minds of men that education would be useful also for "laymen." One philanthropist after another started a school for some one of the professions, even a school for women. Medical and law schools came first and today we have manual training schools.

These early colleges were private institutions. It is only in the past sixty years that the idea has grown that the education of its citzens was of the greatest concern to the state and the state should be responsible for it. State universities are now capping state school systems; but the church college seems to lose none of its prestige.

COTTAGE CHEESE

When sour milk has curdled, heat it very slowly, stirring occasionally. Do not allow it to boil or the curds will be tough and dry. Strain it through a cheesecloth or colander, and serve with salt. When ready to serve, it may be softened with cream or served as a salad with lettuce and salad dressing.

The "Hello Girl" follows neither a business nor a profession, but a calling.



METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, March 13:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. Classes for all ages. Remember you are welcome.

Divine Worship and sermon at 11:00 a. m. This is Bible Sunday throughout the United States. The pastor upon request will preach on "America and Religion." Psa. 33:12.

Epworth League at 6:30. Muriel Luick, leader.

At this same hour the Juniors will have their initial meeting, with Miss Hazel Hembd and Mrs. E. W. Luick, leaders. Please, parents, remember this hour.

Evening Worship and Gospel Message at 7:30. Sermon subject, "The Empty House." Matt. 12:44.

Upwards of twelve men attended the District Men's Council at Britt from the local church Tuesday night. A most excellent time and program was enjoyed by all present.

You are cordially invited to all of our services.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10:00 a. m. Bible Study Hour. Subject, "Making the World Christian. How, why, and by whom is this to be done?"

11:00 a. m.—Morning Worship. Let us think, next Sunday morning, about the Church and the Gates of Hell. If the world is to be made Christian through the Church, the one institution of Christ upon this earth, then the words of promise given by Christ are the most daring words that ever fell from human lips. But let us not forget that all power had been given to Him in heaven and on earth.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society will be held in the church parlors, on Thursday afternoon, at 2:30 p. m. All the ladies are welcome and cordially invited.

TRINITY CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor
Telephone Call, 150

Thursday, March 10, Mid-week Prayer Meeting at the church at 7:30 p. m.

Sunday, March 13, Sunday School and Bible Classes at 9:30 a. m.

Norwegian Communion Services will be held at 2:30 and English Communion Services at 7:30 p. m.

Tuesday, March 15, the local Catechetical class will meet immediately after school.

ST. OLAF CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor

Thursday, March 10, the South Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. Severt Evans at 2:00 p. m.

Sunday, March 13, Norwegian services will be held at 11:00 a. m.

Wednesday, March 16, Mid-week Prayer Meeting at 2:00 p. m.

The Catechetical Class will meet at the church at 4:30 p. m.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Conquest of England

LITTLE has been said of England in this series. Not that its history up to this point had not been of great interest, but it had had until the Eleventh century comparatively little influence on the general history of the world.

In the early days the country had been populated by heathen, savage tribes forever at war with each other. They had combined against the Romans who invaded the country under Julius Caesar, and for a time were successful in repelling the better-disciplined foe. The Romans won difficult foothold in Great Britain, but the natives at last drove them out and won independence. Then Teuton warriors from the borders of Germany and Scandinavia overran England. These new invaders were known as "Saxons," though in time they called themselves "English." They completely won the country, which they proceeded to apportion and then to fight over among themselves. Down came the Danes, or Northmen, conquered the Saxons and gained control of England. But the Saxons within a quarter century put down the Danes, and made themselves once more masters of the sorely distraught island. After which, in spite of internal strifes and petty wars, they remained in control until the middle of the Eleventh century.

Then came a political snarl whose rights and wrongs have never been clearly settled. The muddle, briefly, was as follows:

Edward, king of England, had no sons. He was related to the dukes of Normandy (descendants of the Norse pirate, Rollo), and promised to make Duke William of Normandy his heir. As the English throne was not a private possession to be bestowed at will, Edward had not the slightest right to make this promise. He was a man whose alleged piety served as a cloak for political intrigues and won for him the nickname of Edward the Confessor. He was Norman in sympathies, and though he knew his Saxon subjects hated the Normans, he still planned to overthrow the brave Saxon dynasty in the latter's favor.

The "political boss" of England at the time was one Earl Godwin. He was the people's idol, represented the pro-Saxon, anti-Norman element and was strong enough to defy even the king. Godwin's son, Harold the Fair-Haired, was exiled from England and fled to Normandy, where Duke William, for reasons of his own, received him cordially. In return for this kindness (the Norman duke later declared) Harold promised to support William's claims as Edward's successor and did him homage as his rightful master. Harold returned from exile, and on Godwin's death inherited the old earl's popularity and political power.

So when, in 1066, King Edward died without an heir, the people unanimously chose Harold as king of England. William at the same time sent envoys to remind him of his promise. Harold packed the envoys off again with no satisfactory reply and assumed the sovereignty of the country.

But the strain of Scandinavian pirate blood would not allow William to submit tamely to this downfall of his hopes. He stirred up Hadrada, king of Norway, against Harold, and himself fitted out an expedition against England. The Norsemen under Hadrada swept down upon the British coast (the last of their many invasions) and William raised an army to follow their example.

On September 24, 1066, Harold met the Norwegian army and utterly routed it, driving the Scandinavians forever from British soil. Then he turned to meet William, who, with a mighty Norman host, had crossed the channel. The two armies—Saxon and Norman—met at Hastings, October 14, 1066. Harold's army, already weakened by their battle with the Norsemen, fought heroically, and ever in the van was their gigantic, yellow-haired king. A Norman arrow wounded Harold. Before he could recover himself four Norman knights hurled themselves upon him and killed him. Seeing their leader fall, the Saxons fled. Though for five years longer they fought vainly to repel the Normans, they were little by little subdued, until by 1071 England was a mere Norman possession.

Much pathetic nonsense has been written of the brutal conquest of England by Norman robbers. As a matter of fact, it was the best possible thing for the country. The Saxons had been a heavy, boorish, stupid, nonprogressive race. The Normans were up to date, alert, eager for improvement and advancement of all sorts. The rough strength and ruder virtues of the Saxons blended at length with the skill, culture and chivalry of the Normans; the combination forming one of the greatest, most powerful nations the world has ever known. Within a few generations Saxon and Norman were merged. To the result of this "merger" England owes her later prowess. But the conquest's chief result was the wedding of the Saxon and ancient French dialects into the English language.

While the conquest itself was without legal or moral justification, yet its prime mover's genius made it the ultimate benefit to humanity at large that it proved to be.

FREE AIR

Beats all how folks will view things. Last week this Colyum carried a notice right at the top that nothing appearing in this department of this Family Almanac was to be taken seriously. What does one fellow do but get serious about it. Don't it beat all?

* * * *

But then we might have known he would look askance at POETRY from us. (Notice we capitalized it.)

* * * *

That's where we have it on others. We can print our own stuff, whereas real poets have to depend on the good humor of the editor to get 'em by.

* * * *

Suppose we'll get that tourist park this year? This Colyum believes we ought to wait 10 or 20 years. By that time probably everybody will be flying and we won't need a tourist park.

* * * *

All we'll need is a landing field.

* * * *

Some popular song writer ought to capitalize on the farm bill veto and write the McNary-Haugen Blues."

* * * *

Played on the mouth-organ—we mean harmonica—over Henry Field's Friendly Dollar station, it should go big.

* * * *

Is there anything that looks more lonesome than a last year's bird's nest this time of year?

* * * *

We noticed an item in the Britt paper last week about a "Mass Men's Meeting." What we wanta know is, what are Mass Men?

* * * *

Maybe they're something like those Minute Men we had during the war. Some of those minute men hadn't boiled over that long, either; they were pretty soft eggs.

* * * *

Don't forget that basket social at the library tomorrow night. A basket social, you know, is where you make a dicker sight unseen, like the kids trade jack knives. You gamble your bid against an unknown quantity, both in the box and who goes with it.

* * * *

Every box is a prize package, and you take what you get. "Some times you get a good one—and sometimes you don't."

* * * *

That's what makes it interesting.

Local News

BASKET SOCIAL at the Belmond Library, Friday evening, March 11. A program that is guaranteed to cure the blues. Coffee served Free. Everybody welcome.

The Good Fellowship Club has dated a meeting for March 24, at which time Arthur Huntington will deliver an address, his subject being Agriculture.

Cemetery Aid meets Friday, March 11 at the W. J. Morse home. Hostesses are Mrs. W. J. Morse, Mrs. H. C. Thompson, Mrs E. Kinney, Mrs. John Greenlander, Mrs. T. C. Cullinan.

The Monday Night Bridge Club met this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Martin.

Mr and Mrs. C. N. Hildebrand, accompanied by Mrs. Cato C. Griesy, motored to Fort Dodge, Tuesday.

Lud Simerson went to Mason City the first of the week, where he received treatment for his eyes.

Mrs. Earl Martin and Mrs. Finch motored to Garner last Thursday to visit relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John Spitler and family motored to Goldfield, Monday, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Spitler's cousin.

Mrs. Fred Aldrich went to Mason City, Sunday, for a visit with relatives.

James Trees and family were Sunday guests at the Albert Schlichting home near Olaf.

Mrs. J. G. Johnson, of Kanawha, visited last Friday with her sisters, Mrs. Joe Smith and Mrs. O. Gartin, of Belmond.

Albin Johnson and family, of Hampton, were Sunday visitors at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Johnson.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

SEED CORN TEST BEATS GUESS

A great deal of seed corn is moldy this year, reports H. D. Hughes, head of the Farm Crops Department, Iowa State College. This moldy condition will necessitate individual ear testing with a modified rag doll before planting. Seed picked after the first frost seems to be freer from mold than that picked before the frost.

Contrary to some rather widely spread notions, commercial preparations for treating seed corn will not convert moldy or poor seed into good seed, experiments conducted by Dr. I. E. Melhus, plant pathologist, Iowa Experiment Station, have shown. Neither will commercial preparations improve the yielding qualities of good seed, these experiments show, altho treating poor seed will kill some of the mold and increase the yield.

The most effective method of treating seed corn this spring or any other spring, according to Dr. Melhus, is to run it thru the modified rag doll and then discard all seed showing moldy, weak or dead kernels. One man can test enough seed in from three to five days to plant 50 acres of corn by this method.

The methods employed in this test are as follows:

Place a moist strip of muslin 12 inches wide and 54 inches long on a strip of "butcher" paper of the same width and 60 inches long, leaving the extra 6 inches uncovered at the right hand of the doll. Holding the ear with the tip away from the body, remove a kernel from the tip and place it near the top of the left hand of the doll. Rotate the ear, taking five other kernels from other portions of the ear, and put them in a row with the butt kernel at the bottom of the doll. The doll, being 54 inches long, will accomodate 25 ears, spacing the kernels from each ear 2 inches apart.

Roll the doll from the right, using the extra paper for a core. The number of ears included are usually marked at the left end of the paper and the top of the doll. Place the doll in a pail with the kernel tops up and soak 1 hour. Drain and put the pail near a furnace, radiator or stove, where a uniform heat of 75 degrees to 85 degrees F. will be maintained. Sprinkle the dolls every few days to prevent drying out. Read the test in 6 to 7 days, discarding seed ears whose kernels show the presence of dry rot molds.

KNOW THE LEGUME SEED STAINS

The federal seed stainging law, enacted last year, provides that all imported red clover and alfalfa seed shall be stained in such a manner that the buyer can tell from what part of the world the seed came. Under the provisions of this law, seed coming from Italy and southern Europe is stained red, that coming from Canada is stained green and seed from other exporting sections is stained purple.

"Red stained seed is least desirable," according to H. D. Hughes, head of the Farm Crops Department, Iowa State College, "but for Iowa conditions, no imported or stained seed is worth seeding. Most of it winter kills and in case the crop is not destroyed by winter killing, the imported strains of red clover will give only one crop of hay the second year and this a much smaller yield than could be secured from domestic strains."

At present there is a great deal of stained seed being placed on the market, according to Mr. Hughes, and at a very much lower price than domestic seed, selling usually at approximately one-fourth less.

Even at this low price, however, it is not safe nor profitable to sow the imported seed, as tests which have been run during the past four years at Iowa State College with imported seeds have shown. Every county agent in the state has been supplied with samples of the various standard seeds.

The same rule in regard to adaptability of imported alfalfa seed will hold true as with imported red clover seed, according to Professor Hughes, with the exception of Canadian alfalfa seed, which is well adapted to Iowa seeding.

PRUNE NOW—NOT LATER

There is an old saying among orchardists and horticultural experts to the effect that one should prune while his knife is sharp and should always keep his knife sharp. In spite of this saying, it is generally conceded that early spring months are the best time for ordinary pruning, and while summer pruning can be done, it should be avoided.

Pruning on the hardier varieties should be done first because any plant or tree subject to winter killing should be pruned late in order to avoid cutting out live wood and leaving that which had been harmed by winter injury. Along with this advice, J. B. Ward, Iowa State College, says that pruning should be done to destroy growth as well as to promote growth where the tree is crowded and thus promote growth in another and more favorable direction.

Pruning should be under way now, according to Mr. Ward, and should be continued until the orchard is properly pruned. In pruning apples, especially the amatuer orchardist should not go among his trees cutting all of the smaller twigs and branches from the limbs because it is on such twigs or fruit spurs that the apple crop is borne.

GRAIN FARMERS' OUTLOOK APPEARS GLOOMY

Corn and oat prices are not likely to be satisfactory for some time and the Iowa farmers who depend on the sale of these crops for their income this year are likely to be poorly paid. On the other hand, hog prices will probably stay fairly satisfactory and there is a chance for the man with dairy cattle or beef cattle to make some money this year.

The foregoing are the opinions expressed by C. L. Holmes, head of the agricultural economics work at Iowa State College. Dr. Holmes bases these opinions on facts given out at a recent conference he attended in Washington and upon "The Agricultural Outlook for 1927" a recent publication of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The continued decline in the use of horses and the increasing use of motor power, both in cities and on the farms, are greatly reducing the demand for oats and also corn. The oats acreage is four million acres larger than in 1920. It is these facts which lead Dr. Holmes to his judgment on future low oat prices.

Corn prices are low and will probably remain so for some time because of the decline in the amount fed, because better yielding strains of corn are being developed, better methods of cultivation employed, soils management is improving and corn and other grains are being fed more efficiently to livestock than formerly. Cow test associations are eliminating unprofitable producers; the clean grounds system of swine sanitation which is gaining so rapidly is increasing the number of pounds of pork per bushel of corn or other grain. Because of these economies in grain feeding, less feed is required to produce the average pound of pork or butter than formerly was required.

While the situation looks dark for some time the farmers who depend on the sale of grain for their income, Dr. Holmes sees a much brighter outlook for beef cattle men, the dairymen and for hog producers. He does not believe it is wise to increase the number of hogs because they are now profitable. Any large increase might spoil these profits.

On the other hand, Dr. Holmes believes that the shortage of beef cattle warrants some increase along this line and that the same is true o fdairying. He looks for a rising market for beef cattle, which should mean money for feeders and those raising beef cattle.

Sowing of more sweet clover and alfalfa this spring so as to be able to increase cattle production, is the specific recommendation of Dr. Holmes. This, he thinks, is especially to be recommended for northwest Iowa farmers, who depend largely on the sale of corn and oats for their income.

ALFALFA CHEAPER THAN CLOVER

For the first time in history, Grimm alfalfa seed is cheaper than red and alsike clover and common alfalfa seed can be bought for a little more than half as much as those two clovers.

If this condition continues, a large percentage of the farmers in some sections will probably use more alfalfa in shorter rotations, according to F. S. Wilkins, in charge of forage crops experiments at the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, Ames. Rotations can easily be applied whereby alfalfa can remain in the field thru two crop years and then be plowed down for corn. Such a scheme, Mr. Wilkins says, has a number of decided advantages.

First, corn gives excellent yields following alfalfa. Second, trouble with bluegrass creeping in will be practically eliminated. Third, more cuttings the second crop year can be harvested because injury to the plants need not be considered. Fourth the short rotation is the only known way to control the recently described wilt and root rot of alfalfa, which appears to be general over Iowa. This disease, which is usually worse in the older fields, causes the plants to dry up and die from lacks of water.

The Iowa Experiment Station recommends the use of variegated alfalfa varieties such as Grimm, Ontario Variegated, Hardigan and Baltic, where growing conditions make it difficult to secure and maintain stands.

WALLS

The modern idea in walls is that of soft, neautral backgrounds—not aggressive nor conspicuous. Natural plaster color, cream, sand, gray are favorite colors for walls in well ordered living rooms. Such rooms have few pictures—if any—on the wall; but may have panels or designs in their shape. A room without pictures is likely to look bare and too impersonal—but is a relief from the over cluttered walls of yesteryear, when all the family portraits, cheap chromos and souvenirs hung around continually for us to gaze at. Never was there rest for the weary eye in any vista the wall offered. Today the walls serve as backgrounds for the furnishings and their plainness brings out the good points of these.

To add warmth, gaiety, and coziness to the plain wall, one may introduce the gold and black curtain; rich tapestries of purple or crimson; or a terra cotta silk drapery. Furiture may be of bright colored velour.

One may give her taste more freedom in small or less formal rooms. There areb edrooms of cool blue or green walls, bath-rooms of sea green, and even kitchens of gay canary yellow. In choosing the color for the walls of a room, remember that dark colors make a room seem smaller, while light colors enlarge it. The reds and yellows are for cool, north rooms, for they simulate sunshine; while the cool greens and blues and grays are for the south room with its sunny exposure.

CANNED GOODS

There are many points of advantage in our modern canned goods. They make "December as pleasant as May," as the old hymn says, giving us green peas in January and sweet corn in the winter. Ancient peoples learned how to dry, pickle and preserve foods, but it was their lack of the practice of the art of canning which made seasonal famines. The long winter was almost sure to bring its starving time, while the long hot season gave a dearth of fresh meat, because it would not keep.

Today almost all kinds of foods not only can be canned,—but are. Canned foods stay fresh until eaten and most of it keeps its natural color.

The modern canning factory—inspected by the government—is clean and sanitary. Seconds and spoiled products are thrown into the discard. The thrifty housewife in the old days did not always do as much.

Canned foods are inexpensive in that they save space in storage, save time in preparation and save energy. They give a variety we could not otherwise have, and make the "season" an all year round affair. In buying canned foods, one buys all food and does not have to discard a portion as waste.

Hail to the Can Opener!

THE RIGHTS OF CHILDHOOD

Someone has summed up the rights of childhood as follows:

Healthful childhood.
Educated childhood.
Happy and protected childhood.
Patriotic childhood.
Religious childhood.

Has your child all these rights? What about your neighbor's child and your community's children? As you are your brother's keeper, it is your business to see that his children have their rights. You cannot enter his home and give orders; but you can join with others to see that all of these rights of childhood are freely provided in your neighborhood and that the laws of the community require that all children be permitted their rights.

THE PHYSICAL EXAMINATION

Do you have zip and pep, or do you just drag around? If you are only half well, you only half live. It is the wise adult who has a physical examination on his birthday. Detected in time, ailments may usually be side-tracked; but neglected, they cut off many a useful life in its prime. It is hiding your head in the sand to fear to find out something which will spoil your peace of mind. Better discover it in time, for if your system needs overhauling you can prolong your life by facing the situation and acting accordingly. If the physical examination reveals that you are fine and fit, then you can lift your head and steam up with a glorious assurance. After forty, don't neglect the annual "once-over."

THE SHEEN WILL STAY

If goods is really mercerized, the sheen will stay, say the experimenters. Mercerized cotton wears better than ordinary cotton, and is very popular on account of its silky appearance.

Federal Farm Loans

For the Farmer Who Does His Own Thinking

BEST--SAFEST LOWEST RATE

5 PER CENT

Reduced by Dividends

Now It Is Only A Question of Time

The Lowest Interest Ever Offered to Farmers

With a Federal Farm Loan---You Are Sitting on Top of the World

Let us give you the information and details

CALL OR WRITE

STATE BANK OF BELMOND

BELMOND, IOWA

Your Cream

Represents so much money to you. Each pound of cream is worth a certain amount of money. The question is: Are you getting all the money your cream is worth?

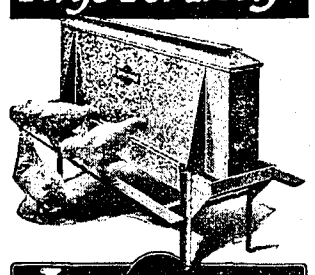
When you sell your cream to the creamery you are patronizing yourself—for the Creamery is your business. And you are getting more money for your cream at the creamery—the full market price, plus the profit at the end of the month.

It is good business to get every cent your product is worth. Bring your cream to the Creamery and get it.

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.

BELMOND, IOWA

Here's a Feeder that soon Pays For Itself



Jamesway Free Feed

CAFETERIA

EVERY farm flock in this locality should have one of these FIVE-IN-ONE Feeders; contains compartments for Mash, Grain, Oyster Shell, Grit and Charcoal. It's a great labor saver—only needs filling once a week and your flock can always eat what they want, when they want it. They balance their ration as nature dictates and as a result you get more eggs—your flock is healthier.

Saves Labor—Saves Feed

This practical feeder comes in two sizes—100 flock size and 200 flock size. Think what a convenience it would be to just fill this up once a week and know that you flock was provided with feed for an entire week. It's the busy farmer's friend. Built with a patented shaking device that always keeps feed down in feed troughs. Feed is always clean and absolutely no waste. Slanting tilting top prevents birds roosting on top. We guarantee that this feeder will pay for itself in one season in saved feed and labor. Let us show you this incomparable feeder.

Sold by

ANDERSON HATCHERY

Phone 27 Belmond, Iowa

CAR OF POULTRY FEED

Start to finish baby chick mash—that red feed—the same kind that we sold last year. It is treated with imported Spanish Oxide of Iron, a pure 96 percent mineral, and contains cod liver oil. Our price this year is right.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER. Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, March 10, 1927 No. 48

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

Suppose you read about that Kentucky woman who is bringing suit against some guy for stealing 100 kisses. Seems to us it took her a long time to wake up to the fact she was being robbed.

—

C. C. Benson tells us about somebody he knew who took a ride a short time ago on one of those sight-seeing busses out in San Francisco. When they reached a big hill the man with the megaphone requested the passengers to hold their grips in their hands to lighten the load. Everybody did! Then as the grade got steeper, he asked them to stand up. And everybody did! What would you have done? So would we.

—

If you're having roof trouble, we can provide you with roofing cement that will stop the leak and end your worries.

—

We.—"Edison says that four hours' sleep a night is enough for anybody."
M. C. Barry, with small baby.—That's what our baby thinks."

—

Cello Glass comes in rolls. You can cut it to fit any window or door. A few tacks and a hammer are all the tools necessary to put it on. It's actually even better than glass. And it's so much cheaper.

—

Here's our view on the tax question: What we pay is too much, and what other people pay is not enough. What's your view?

—

C. M. Morse tells us this happened in one of our local stores. A lady asked to "see the thinnest thing you have in silk hose," and they brought out the cashier.

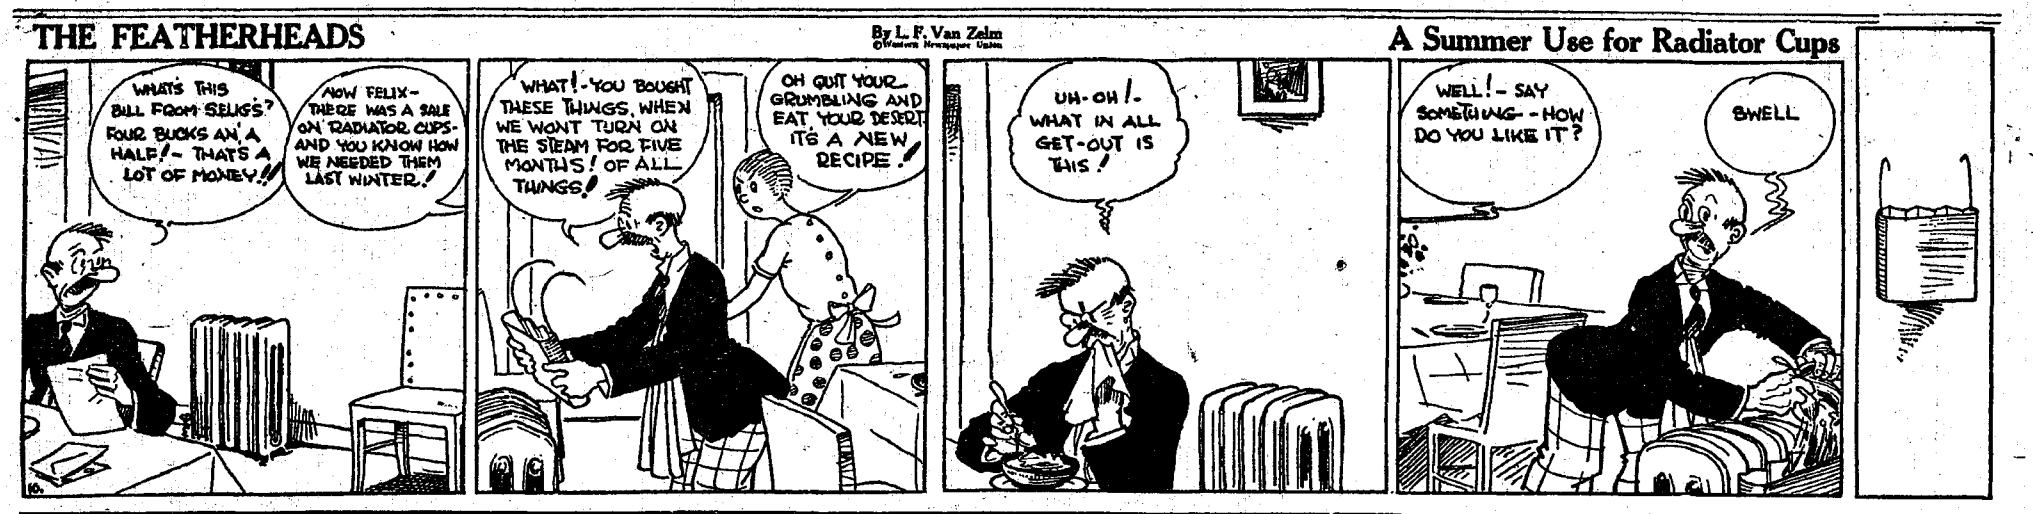
—

Is there anybody at your house who always forgets to close the door? There's one at ours.

—

To be real honest with you, we can't tell you what a heat unit is. The only thing we know is that "Great Heart" coal is full of 'em.

MESERVEY SECTION



The Independent's circulation is local. It is read by more people. And that's why its ads bring results.

What You Want In the WANT ADS

This coupon and 97c entitle the undersigned to one quart can of Interior Gloss Finish, any color, and a special Paint Brush.

Name.....

Address.....

SPECIAL OFFER

Clip the Coupon

To acquaint you with Acme Quality, we are making a special offer for a short time only.

$2.00 Value for 97c

It makes the kitchen ring with music

Hundreds of tests have proved that walls, ceilings and woodwork have a marked psychological effect on those coming under their influence.

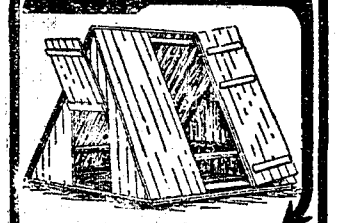
In the kitchen a cheery, inspiriting atmosphere is of all places the most necessary. For here women spend hours, seven days a week, in work that can become deadly monotonous.

Acme Quality Interior Gloss Finish is the answer. It lightens the kitchen and brightens the cook—it makes the day's work seem shorter and more joyful. And it is always dependable because it comes from the illustrious family of

ACME QUALITY Paint and Varnish

Let us tell you more about this remarkable paint. Ask us for color cards—free. We will gladly consult with you on any painting problem. Before buying any paint for any purpose, get our estimate.

C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA



SAVE 1/3 by

buying Individual HAWKEYE HOG HOUSES. Eliminates loss at farrowing time and the spreading of contagious diseases.

Each house shipped completely cut in two compact bundles. Your material consisting of Ridge Roll, Hinges, Nails, Screws, Cleats, Ends, Roof Boards, Frame Material, Sills and Farrowing Rails, all come cut to exact length and bevel, so that

All You Need for Assembling Is a Hammer.

Tongue and grooved flooring furnished for roof, ends and doors. Rigid No. 1 dimension frame work with Farrowing Rail. Ventilated. Any school boy can follow our directions for assembling with ease and accuracy, following our furnished plans. We furnish only high grade material.

Communicate with

HAWKEYE MFG. CO.

311.95 Box A, BELMOND, IOWA Factory.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Saturday evening at 7:30 the preparatory services for Holy Communion and Quarterly Conference will be held. All are urged to attend. Members of the Quarterly Conference should be prepared to give their reports. Rev. H. J. Faust will be here.

Sunday morning, Sunday School at 9:45. G. E. Raecker, Supt. Classes for all ages.

Morning Worship at 10:45. Holy Communion at close of services.

E. L. C. E. at 7:00 p. m. Subject, "How to Conquer Circumstances." Leader, Bonita Muller.

Wednesday evening the German prayer meeting at the C. Halfpop home.

Our mid-week services on Thursday evening will be held at the home of Mrs. Joe Smith.

The services Sunday, March 20 as usual. This will be the last Sunday for conference statistics to be completed. Let all finish their work conscientously.

Laurence Sohl

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30.

Morning Worship at 10:30 (Ger.)

Senior Class in Catechism Tuesday at 3:20 at the parsonage.

Classes in Catechism Saturday at 1:30.

The Dorcas Society met last Wednesday at the usual hour at the parsonage. Mrs. H. Wilkins served refreshments. There was a good representation present.

There will be no young people's meeting nor evening service next Sunday evening since the pastor must take part in the installation of the Rev. J. B. Frerichs at Alexander. The congregation is cordially invited to attend this service, which begins at 7:30 p. m.

The offering for Foreign Missions amounted to $56.

H. Pannkuk, Pastor

OBITUARY

Mrs. Lydia Annetta Gartz Halfpop, wife of Fred Halfpop, was born August 11, 1898, at Garner, Iowa, and passed away at the Mercy hospital, Mason City, February 26, 1927, age 28 years, 6 months and 15 days.

April 1, 1917 she was received into membership of the Immanuel Reformed church thru baptism on confession of faith.

On March 3, 1921 she was united with Fred Halfpop in holy matrimony. This union was blessed with three children, Richard Glnire, Berniece Mildred and Marjorie Eunice. All too soon has the angel of death entered into this home and called away a much needed mother. And how willing she would have ministered to her now motherless children, but God planned it otherwise. She leaves mourning her premature death her grief stricken husband, her three children, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gartz, one brother, Fred; four sisters, Mrs. Chas. Barkema, Mrs. John Halfpop, Mrs. E. S. Barker and Mrs. D. J. Waalkes and other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Wednesday, March 2, in the Evangelical church, Rev. L. Sohl officiating. Burial was in the Meservey cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all who assisted during the illness and death of our loved one, for their words of comfort and sympathy, and for the floral offerings.

Fred D. Halfpop and Children
Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Gartz and Family

OBITUARY

Again it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call another aged pilgrim to realms beyond. Mrs. Eva Mayer, nee Rieder was born May 28, 1849 in beautiful Switzerland, and departed this life February 27, 1927 at her late home at Meservey, Iowa. Age 78 years, 8 months and 30 days.

She received her education in the schools of her country. In 1868 she was united in marriage to Christian Mayer, who passed away May 25, 1925. This union was blessed with eleven children. Two died in their infancy. In 1873 the family came to America and landed in Polk county, Iowa. In 1883 they came to Cerro Gordo county and for forty-four years they have lived in and about Meservey. About fifty years ago Mother Mayer gave her heart to Christ and united with the Evangelical church. During these many years she endeavored to aid the cause of Christ in many ways. She taught in the Sunday School for many years, was president of the Ladies' Aid of the church for a long time. She was faithful to the church of her choice. She with her companion took special delight in the support of their church, and after Father Mayer's death she continued that beautiful practice of bringing her offering every Sabbath to the church and if for good reasons she could not attend a Sunday or two she would bring her offerings for all the Sundays on the first Sunday she attended. The church and her Christ had a real place in her life. During her last illness she often expressed the desire to depart and be with the Lord. When the summons came she was ready.

She leaves mourning nine children, eight daughters and one son, as follows: Mrs. Ursula Wendel, Mrs. Kate Zieman, of Meservey; Mrs. Anna Enabnit, Clemens, Iowa; Mrs. Lizzie Enabnit, Clear Lake, Iowa; Mrs. Minnie Halfpop, Mrs. Rosa Strassburg, Mrs. Lydia Sprau, and Mrs. Mary Thomas, all of Meservey; and Albert Mayer, of New Mexico. She also leaves 41 grand children and 21 great grand children, besides many other relatives and friends.

Dearest mother, how we miss you,
Since from earth you passed away;
And our hearts are aching sorely
As we think of you today.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Grandmother Mayers wish to thank Rev. L. Sohl for his consoling words, the singers, those who sent flowers and to all others who helped in any way during her sickness and burial.

The Children.

OBITUARY

Jacobus Cornelius Janssen was born on the 6th day of December, 1854, Engerhaven, Ostfriesland, Germany, and died March 4th, 1927, at the home of his oldest son, Cornelius, one mile north of town, at the age of 72 years, 2 months and 28 days, the cause of his death being organic heart trouble.

At the age of fourteen years he was confirmed in the Lutheran church of his fatherland. On October 21, 1877, he was united in marriage to Trientje H. Bruns. To this union eight children were born, namely: Cornelius J., Heiko and Louis, Mrs. E. Unverferth, Mrs. S. P. Fischer and Mrs. Wm. Prelipp, all of Meservey, who all so faithfully and tenderly assisted in caring for him through illness. Two daughters passed away in infancy.

On April 26, 1882 the family embarked for America. They first settled at Belmond, Iowa, where they remained ten years, and during this time Mr. Janssen worked on the section for two years, and having learned the shoemaker trade in the fatherland he followed this trade for eight years. In the year 1891 the family moved onto the farm three miles north of Meservey, where they remained until 1912, when they retired and moved to Meservey, to spend the evening of life.

As soon as the way was open he took out his naturalization papers to become a citizen of this country, and held many offices of trust and honor in his community. He was very much grieved over the conditions of the world war, which threw a shadow over his life. His beloved wife preceded him in death January 5, 1914, since which time Father Janssen spent his time in assisting his children whenever possible. Father Janssen was a close student of the Bible, and as such had accumulated a vast amount of Biblical knowledge. He defended the Word of God and banked his salvation in its teachings. He also made an extensive study of astronomy, and saw the glory of God in the stellar bodies. He was true to his convictions and stood four square for that which he thought was right.

He is survived by three sons, three daughters, nineteen grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to all the friends and neighbors for their kind assistance thru the illness and death of our beloved father and grandfather; also for the beautiful floral offerings and words of sympathy.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Janssen
Mr. and Mrs. H. Janssen
Mr. and Mrs. L. Janssen
Mr. and Mrs. E. Unverferth
Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Fischer
Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Prilipp and Grandchildren.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

BASKET SOCIAL at the Belmond Library, Friday evening, March 11. A program that is guaranteed to cure the blues. Coffee served Free. Everybody welcome.

Mrs. C. E. Brogan and son, Howard, of Garner, spent Thursday and Friday here with friends and attended the funeral of Mother Mayers.

The Misses Evelyn Thomas, of Goodell and Viola and Thelma, of Cedar Falls came home to attend the funeral of their grandmother.

Rev. and Fred Pieper and daughter, Miriam, of Abbott, made a short visit here at the C. Bier home and with other relatives the fore part of last week.

Miss Alma Dorenkamp, of Alexander spent several days at the home of her mother.

Rev. H. M. Raecker and family, of Sheffield spent a day the fore part of last week with relatives here.

The Woman's Missionary Society met at the Muller home last Friday afternoon for the regular monthly business and devotional meeting.

Miss Irene Butz was compelled to remain at home from her school work most of last week on account of illness. Mrs. Taulbee had charge of her grades.

John Pals has been at the Ralph Wendel home at Belmond the past week helping with the work.

Rev. H. Raecker returned home last week Wednesday from Waverly where he had visited relatives a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hemming, of Thornton attended the funeral of Mrs. Fred Halfpop last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Muller attended the school of instruction of the Order of the Eastern Star, at Thornton last Thursday evening. Mrs. Fox, of Fort Dodge was the instructor again this year.

Prof. H. M. Taulbee and C. E. Brogan attended Masonic lodge last Tuesday evening at Thornton.

Morton Schumacker, of Thornton was a business caller in town last Thursday.

Mr. J. C. Janssen passed away last Friday evening at 10:00 o'clock at the home of his son, C. J., following an illness of several weeks.

F. A. Lemke was a Mason City visitor, Wednesday. Mrs. F. W. Buche returned home with him for a few days' visit, and to attend the funeral of Mother Mayers.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Schluter were in Mason City last Friday afternoon. They were accompanied by the latter's sister, Mrs. F. W. Buche, who returned to her home after several days' visit here.

Mrs. Emma Dorenkamp and children were Hampton business callers last Saturday.

Miss Hall, of Alexander, had charge of Miss Sprau's grades last Thursday during her absence.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelse Faaborg were staying at the Ralph Wendel home at Belmond several days last week.

Mrs. Anna Brater, of Janesville, was a business and pleasure caller here Saturday and Sunday.

John Kolb and family, of Latimer were Sunday visitors at the home of his parents here.

Prof. H. M. Taulbee and family spent Sunday at Northwood with relatives.

Lippo Kaduce motored to Mason City last Monday to accompany his brother, George home from the hospital where he had undergone an operation several weeks ago.

Mrs. Tillie Rice, of Fargo, North Dakota visited her sister, Mrs. Mary Butz over the week end. She was returning from a trip to Europe, visiting other relatives before coming here, leaving for her home Monday.

Geo. J. Fischer is back with us again. He arrived here from Mason City the fore part of last week.

George Grosz returned from his sojourn in the South last week Wednesday.

The Misses Olive Sherrard, Hallie Ward and Bonita Muller were Belmond callers last Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hemming, of Thornton spent Sunday at the parental Ed Foss home.

Misses Eva and Rozelle, Oliver and Virgil Sprau spent Saturday evening in Belmond.

Mrs. Emma Dorenkamp and her daughter, Esther left Monday to make their home during the spring and summer at the home of Peter Dorenkamp, northwest of Alexander. Esther will enter the Alexander school.

Harry T. Smith has moved into rooms over the Fischer store and will take his meals at the restaurant.

Mrs. H. Wilkins and Mrs. Verner Nelson, of Klemme spent Sunday with their mother at the Mercy hospital.

Bert and Roy Goetzke spent the week-end here with the latter's family.

Louis Peters and family, of Alexander spent Sunday at the E. A. Strasburg home.

Mrs. Frank Nissen and daughter, Virginia left for Ames last Saturday to spend a few days at the parental Sloss home.

Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Yingst, of Allendorf were present at the Janssen funeral and the former assisted at the services. They left for Ackley to spend a few days at the Wm. Strasburg home, who had driven here to take them back with him.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Luick, Mrs. Val Griesy and Mrs. J. Huermann, of Belmond were among those who attended the Janssen funeral, Monday.

Miss Anna Strasburg and brother, Otto, of Ackley motored here Monday to attend the funeral of J. C. Janssen.

The Boy Scouts met last Monday evening for their regular meeting. A. E. Muller and Geo. Grosz were present to assist the boys. Mr. Grosz has consented to take the work for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wendel entertained the latter's sister and husband in their home last week. They have moved to a farm home thirteen miles north and east of here, to assist with farm work.

Harry T. Smith

General Blacksmithing

Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding

Meservey, - Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director

F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17; Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

THE MAN WHO DECIDED TO CATCH A GRIZZLY BEAR single-handed is no more foolish than the man who buys an off-brand Radio.
CROSLEY RADIO
will not fight back, but give faithful service.

Fresh Burgess "B" Batteries On hand

H. F. REIF
Authorized Dealer
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Your Success and Ours!

Has it occurred to you that the success of a bank must necessarily be built not only upon the satisfaction but on the success of its customers?

And have you considered that your bank is therefore genuinely interested in co-operating with you in every practical way, to help promote your individual success?

When you open an account with us, therefore, you can be assured that we shall not only safeguard your interests as far as your deposits are concerned, but look forward to and welcome opportunities to be of further service to you.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank

Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company

Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

ROWAN GIRL HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Mable Fanselow narrowly escaped a very serious accident while at school Monday morning, where a flame from a blow torch burned her face and hair. She was immediately taken to her home and while the burns are very painful it is thought that it will not prove serious.

A very pleasant social event was held at the Joe Thomas home Monday evening, March 7, when about forty friends of Mrs. Gerald Ersland's friends arrived to tender her a miscellaneous shower and also a farewell courtesy, as Mr. and Mrs. Ersland are soon to depart for their new home in Minnesota. This was carried out in the nature of a Washington party as it was planned to be held on Washington's birthday and was postponed. The home was tastily decorated with flags and national colors. The luncheon and favors also in accordance with the color scheme. crowd left at a late hour, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Ersland health and prosperity in their new home.

BASKET SOCIAL at the Belmond Library, Friday evening, March 11. A program that is guaranteed to cure the blues. Coffee served Free. Everybody welcome.

Just received a carload of Lubricating Oils. Call in and get prices. Save money. J. A. Whitten, Rowan, Iowa. 172c

Mrs. Ben Hadley spent part of last week at the home of her son, Herb Hadley and family at Belmond.

Mrs. D. W. Whitten was a passenger to Des Moines the middle of last week, returning Sunday with her brother, Dallis Conn.

The Misses Anna Rietz and Ruth Stephens came from Indianola, where they are attending college, to spend the week end with relatives here and to see their cousin, Miss Bentz, who recently arrived from Germany.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Linaweaver and children spent the week end at the home of Mrs. Linaweaver's sister, Mrs. Chris Klemensen, at Thornton.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Tutin, whose home is at Pierre, South Dakota and who have been visiting relatives at Sioux City, Coon Rapids and Dows arrived Saturday for an extended visit with the latter's sister, Mrs. Hannah Whitten.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Liming, accompanied by his brother, Rev. Clifford Liming, of Hubbard, and sister, Mrs. Rosman Simpson of Corwith were called to Maroa, Illinois Thursday to the bedside of his father, who is seriously ill.

Miss Cleo Duffy came from Cedar Falls, where she has been attending school, last Friday. The school in Vernon township, where she will teach the spring term, opens Monday, March 7.

G. A. Musson, who recently moved from Popejoy to the F. H. Fowler farm north of Rowan is quite ill at this writing.

The Will Duffy family are quarantined for scarlet fever, their daughter, Mrs. Shirley Ketchum being ill at their home.

The girls' basket ball team played the Alexander team on the home floor Monday evening and won by a score of 50 to 26.

The boys' basket ball team also played the Alexander team at the same time and lost by a score of 17 to 20.

Mrs. G. R. Sheldon and son, Maxfield spent last Saturday at the parental E. S. Schroeder home in Clarion.

ALEXANDER NEWLY-WEDS HOME

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Leebrick returned home Thursday after spending the winter in the West. Mr. and Mrs. Leebrick left for California January 4 on their honeymoon trip. Mrs. Leebrick was formerly Miss Nellie Bell, of this place. They report having a most enjoyable trip. The climate was especially fine in California. They took a sixteen hundred mile trip by steamship on the Pacific from California to Oregon and back. When starting for home they were delayed in northern California due to the heavy rains and washouts.

BASKET SOCIAL at the Belmond Library, Friday evening, March 11. A program that is guaranteed to cure the blues. Coffee served Free. Everybody welcome.

Albert Larsen and Lewis Bell had business at Renwick on Tuesday.

Ralph Schulte left Friday for Minneapolis, where he will be employed in a restaurant for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. George Blau were Hampton shoppers, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. David Nolting, Mrs. Amanda Meyers and Sherman Arends, of Ackley were visitors at the A. B. Arends home, Sunday.

Arthur Winwood was a business caller at Hampton, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Greenfield and daughter, June, and Mrs. Fred Frohling, of Belmond were visitors at the Henry Stoffer home, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Arends and daughter, Sylvia and Miss Susie Schulte were business callers at Mason City, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Leebrick, John F. Bell and Miss Jessie Bell were business callers at Hampton on Saturday.

Mrs. Anna Pekarek and Mrs. W. P. Aldinger were Hampton callers on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Latham and Miss Addie Larsen were shopping at Hampton, Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Finkle and daughter, Leon, of Hampton were Sunday callers here.

Grace Schulte, of near Belmond was a visitor at the Henry Schulte home, Saturday.

Miss Alma Doren camp returned home Sunday after spending several days with her mother at Meservey.

Hite Penning, of Ackley was looking after his farm interests here on Wednesday.

Alfred Ammerman and Bennie Arends, of Mason City were home visitors, Sunday.

GOODELL MAN IS KILLED FRIDAY

Again this community is saddened by the angel of death claiming one of our well known and respected citizens. E. W. Hood was born in Toronto, Canada, in 1850, and came to Iowa about 40 years ago, settling in Webster county. He was married at an early age. To this union eight children were born: Mrs. Mabel Strait of Clare; Tony Hood, of Goodell; Mrs. Leona Biederfeldt, of Goodell; Alphonse Hood, of Belmond; Mrs. Marie Fielebam, of Des Moines; Albert, who died several years ago; Bert Hood, who is attending barber school in Des Moines and Viola Hood, of Des Moines. Mrs. Hood passed away about twenty-five years ago. Mr. Hood and children moved to Belmond about twelve years ago and farmed near there for a few years, later coming to Goodell where he purchased a farm one-half mile west of town and here resided until his death. Mr. Hood was a man of fine character, a peaceful, good natured and kind hearted old gentleman. He was a loyal member of the St. Francis Catholic church.

On Friday he had been to visit his daughter, Mrs. Adrian Beiderfeldt and started home about 7:00 o'clock, driving a horse and buggy. Just as he drove out of the driveway onto the Wilson highway he was struck by a Ford sedan driven by Henry Mullen, of near Klemme. Mr. Mullen was driving slowly and on the right side of the road but did not see the approaching horse and buggy, making the happening accidental. Mr. Hood was thrown from the buggy and hit his head, death coming instantly, he having passed away before his son Tony, who was in the farm yard, could come to him. The Mullen car was tipped over and the buggy damaged to a great extent. Mr. Hood was seventy-seven years old at the time of his death. Funeral services were held Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock, at the Catholic church, at Clare, and he was laid to rest beside his wife in the Clare cemetery. He leaves to mourn his sad and unexepected going his four daughters, three sons, three sisters and seven brothers, several grand children, many other relatives and a host of friends. Goodell friends extend deepfelt sympathy to the bereaved relatives in this sad time.

Mrs. Woolridge, who has been spending the past few months with her daughter, Mrs. Earl R. Blue, returned last week to her home at Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

The Waughie family, of Meservey moved here last week and are living in the Frank Quigley Sr. residence, which was vacated by the Remer family. Mr. Waughie is working for L. W. Wesenberg.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Peterson are the parents of a baby girl, born on March 2.

Mrs. Earl Clark, who has been spending the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. McNutt left on Saturday for Spencer to visit her sister, Mrs. Whitaker.

Mrs. James Christie spent Tuesday at Garner visiting Mrs. Polly Christie, who is very sick at this writing.

George Mickesh underwent an operation for appendicitis the fore part of last week at the Lutheran hospital in Hampton. He is getting along nicely at this writing.

Tauge Matson left Thursday for different points in Illinois in interests of getting contracts to do highway bridge construction work.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hanson and daughter, Marene, of Hartland, Minnesota Sundayed at the O. Sandberg home.

BASKET SOCIAL at the Belmond Library, Friday evening, March 11. A program that is guaranteed to cure the blues. Coffee served Free. Everybody welcome.

Miss Evelyn Thomas spent Thursday at Meservey attending the funeral of her grandmother.

Amos Hanson was a business caller at Mason City Tuesday. Mrs. Hanson accompanied him and spent the day with Mrs. Burton Smith.

Misses Evelyn Chesnig and Ruth Ness returned Sunday to their work at Des Moines, having spent a week at their parental homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Remer moved Tuesday to Garner and have rented the Hamilton residence and a small portion of land. June Remer will stay at the home of her grandfather, Mr. Bachman and finish this year of school work.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Christie will move to the Fred Schultz farm April 1.

Mrs. L. W. Wesenberg returned on Thursday from her western trip.

Messrs. E. J. Schneider, O. Sandberg, J. J. Cook, Rev. Scott and Leon Sherwood attended a special meeting and six o'clock dinner of the Masonic lodge at Belmond, Friday.

Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel visited the fore part of last week at Meservey with her daughter, Mrs. Matt Smith.

A dance was given Monday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Francis McNulty. The newlyweds were presented with a purse. Delicious refreshments closed an enjoyable evening.

Miss Evelyn Thomas left Saturday for Cedar Falls to assume her position that she has with the college. The teachers, high school and grammar room students gave a farewell party for her in the dining room of the U. B. church Friday evening. The time was spent playing games and refreshments were served. She was presented with a beautiful toilet set.

Miss Mattie Larson returned last week to her home at Williams. She has been visiting the past few weeks here with her sister, Mrs. Homer Ness.

Miss June Remer spent the week end at her parental home in Garner.

Miss Francis Severson went to Osage Sunday to visit at the home of her brother, Harvey.

Miss Viola Hendricks, a graduate of Cedar Falls, has been elected to fill the vacancy in the grammar room.

A large crowd went to Kanawha Tuesday night to attend the declamatory contest. Goodell's contestants, Iris Sherwood, Eunice Wesenberg and Cholm Houghton spoke exceptionally well. Kanawha won the first in oratorical and dramatic and Belmond first in the humorous.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bonwell, Duane and Allen, of Renwick Sundayed with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Ahrenkiel.

Werte Usher finished working at the Dhada store Saturday night. Mrs. Tony Boller will start working there this week.

Sven Hegland and Eli Hetland went to Williams Tuesday to assist the Avon Hegland family to get settled in their new farm home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fielbam and Bert Hood, of Des Moines were called home Friday by the death of their father, E. W. Hood.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis McNulty returned Wednesday from a few days' visit with friends in West Bend.

Mrs. Arthur Lowenberg went to Grettinger last week to enjoy a visit with her home folks.

The Claude Allie family Sundayed with Clarion friends.

Miss Louise Mason is filling the vacancy in the primary room until Miss Given returns.

Miss Mae Wigfield returned Monday to her home at Thompson, having spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Harve Christenson.

The Junior class is giving a fine program at the high school Friday evening. Also a basket social. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Johnson are enjoying a visit with Mrs. Johnson's sister and daughter from Eagle Grove.

Daphne Houghton won the award in the typing class at high school.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Wesenberg entertained the teachers to a six o'clock dinner Thursday evening.

HEIRS WANT $20,000

Suit for $20,000 damages was brought against Des Moines last week in district court by W. G. Byerhoff, administrator of the estate of Dr. J. J. Blue, dentist, killed when his automobile struck a safety island at Thirty-first street and Grand avenue the night of January 28th.

The administrator charges that Dr. Blue's death was caused directly through the failure of the city to have the safety island at the intersection properly lighted.

It is alleged in the petition that the condition of the safety island constituted a nuisance for which the city was responsible "through neglect." The accident occurred through no negligence on the part of Dr. Blue, the administrator claims.

At the time of the accident, Dr. Blue, who maintained an office in Valley Junction, was driving east down Grand avenue on the way from his office to his home at 600 Park avenue. His car struck the concrete base of the safety island, demolishing the machine, and he was killed.

Dr. Blue was formerly a resident of Alexander, where he grew to manhood.

LEFT $9,000 IN BANK

Hinton, Iowa, February 24.—Fourteen years ago Al Johnson, now of Hinton, was residing in Mt. Olive, Illinois and had $9,000 in a bank. The bank closed and, disgusted, Mr. Johnson came to Hinton, leaving no word in Mt. Olive as to where he was going. He presumed that the money was lost. An auctioneer who came here recently from Mt. Olive, was crying a sale near Hinton, and Mr. Johnson, learning that the auctioneer was from Mt. Olive, told the sale crier that he once had lived in that town. Reminiscences on his part revealed that the bank which had closed had re-opened, had been successful, and that there was liklihood his money was waiting for him to take possession of it.

A letter to the bank revealed that such was the case, but the word received was that in the 14 years the $9,000 had accumulated interest so that now $20,000 awaits Mr. Johnson, who has gone to Mt .Olive to claim the money.

Thieves Get $300 At Hampton

Jewelry valued at $300 was stolen from the C. H. Haney jewelry store at Hampton, recently. Among the articles taken were three diamond rings, five watches and a belt buckle set. The thieves cut a triangular piece of glass from the display window, reaching in and taking what could be reached. No clew is reported as to the identity of the robbers.

8TH GRADERS AVERAGE 74

Out of the 175 pupils from the rural school who wrote in the eighth grade spelling examination February 18, in Wright county, only two made 100 percent. They were Miss Mary Jane Kitley, District No. 9, Troy township; Miss Hila Weidman, teacher, and Miss Audrey Sherman, of District No. 8, Woolstock township, with Miss Gladys Schutt teacher.

The average grade earned for the county was 74 percent, which happens to be one point less than last year. Two years ago our grade was 65 percent.

The ten words most frequently missed were: course, cruel, stationery, canoe, equally, supreme, courtesy, bureau, cease and desert. It is recommended that these ten words be learned by all pupils who read this article.

Examination questions and word lists are prepared by the State Department of Education at Des Moines.

Iowa's vegetable producing center in the vicinity of Muscatin is planning on a large increase in the acreage the coming season. The H. J. Heinz company who pack millions of cans and bottles of various vegetables in Muscatine every year and sell them under a Pittsburgh label, has contracted 2,500 acres of grounds to be planted to tomatoes. At normal prices this will bring about $200,000 to the growers. Eight hundred fifty men were employed by the company at the peak of last season's business and if the coming year's crop is successful, this number will be increased The company's average for the last two years has been 340 employes a month.

The Homerian literary society at the State Teachers College at Cedar Falls, is in receipt of a gavel of historical interest. Miss Margaret Oliver, of Canton, Ohio, formerly a professor at the Iowa State Teachers College, who sponsored the creation of the Homerian literary sciety in 1913, asked a friend, who was traveling in Europe, to bring the wood from an olive tree growing on the Acropolis near the Parthenon. This was done and Miss Oliver had the gavel made with a wooden handle which came from an old desk which Homer H. Seerley first used when he came to the Iowa State Teachers College to be president forty years ago.

New Spring Clothes now on display!

HATS
Snap Brims in fancy and plain bands.
$4.25 to $6.50

SUITS
New Collegiate 3-button models. Fancy weaves.
$30.00 and $35.00

TOP COATS
Beautiful Top-Coats in models as shown.
$25.00

OXFORDS
Just received a shipment of Spring Oxfords in new shades of tan.
$6.00

SMITH SERVICE & SKOVLIN SATISFACTION

Phone 50 Belmond, Iowa

Big Double Show!

BELMOND OPERA HOUSE

THURSDAY-FRIDAY, SATURDAY, MARCH 10-11-12

Al J. Leigh Musical Comedy Company

SINGERS—ENTERTAINERS—DANCERS COMEDIANS

AND A BEVY OF PRETTY GIRLS

In Connection with Regular Picture Program

THURSDAY ON THE SCREEN Raymond Griffith in "HE'S A PRINCE"
ON THE STAGE—AL LEIGH COMPANY presents
A Brand New Show! New Songs! New Dances!
New Wardrobe! New Scenery!

FRIDAY ON THE SCREEN Adolph Menjou in "KING ON MAIN STREET"
ON THE STAGE—AL LEIGH COMPANY presents a
Screamingly Funny Show! Everything New!

SATURDAY ON THE SCREEN "Thunder," the Wonder Dog in "BLACK LIGHTNING"
ON THE STAGE—AL LEIGH COMPANY in a new show.

PRICES: Children, 10c; Adults, 40c.

Kinseth's Store News

First off this week, we have a word for the ladies—

Just received a dandy new supply of Percales, in new patterns, which we are selling at 19c a yard. We advise you to come in early, because if we are not mistaken this lot will go rapidly.

Then we have some dandy smoked salt for curing meat.

Two packages of corn flakes at a quarter for the two.

We want you all to get acquainted with our Kinseth's Best brand of Coffee. With every 20 labels from this good coffee we are giving away free a large doll. Ask us about it. This coffee is Good Coffee; because it has a low price, don't condemn it. Try a pound first; if you don't say it is the best coffee you ever bought at the price, bring the sack back and we'll refund your money.

Oranges at 29c a dozen. At this price you should have them in the house all the time. Nothing better for the kiddies to "piece" on.

Jello 9c.

Salmon, large Columbia, 28c.

Always remember that The Store on the Corner is the place to start a Savings Account.

News About Iowa People and Events

Jonas Neifert, on his 300-acre farm near Sasey, Guthrie county, has set aside 40 acres for the home of a herd of 29 elk. He received a male and female from Montana by express in 1911, at an expense of $300. Now the number by natural increase has reached 29 and he expects at least eight additional calves in the spring. He feeds the animals as he would cattle but they do not require so much food. They have no shelter. The herd is headed by a four year old male, wearing magnificent antlers.

* * * *

Prof. Macy Campbell, head of the department of rural education at the State Teachers College, Cedar Falls, has made a notable contribution in the discussion of farm problems through his book entitled "Rural Life at the Crossroads," published by Ginn & Co., Chicago. All phases of farm activities are given a hearing. Among the helpful discussions are several chapters on marketing, the result of much study and research. Farm tenantry is treated seriously, with a suggestion of peasantry unless intelligent effort is expended in the solution of present day problems. Educational movements are given careful study and practical application. In fact, the whole range of farm life and farm opportunities is studied in a fascinating manner with deductions of merit and well tempered judgment. The book is generously illustrated, admirably classified and tersely written. Prof. Campbell is an Iowa product, born and reared on a farm in Decatur county. Since he has been in charge of the department of rural education at Cedar Falls, he has become nationally known because of his grasp of rural addresses in all sections of the country before educational groups and agricultural associations.

* * * *

With 11,000 people packed into the coliseum in Des Moines to hear Aimee Semple McPherson, the noted evangelist from Los Angeles, all present were instructed by her to wave their handkrchiefs while singing the chorus of that old time revival song, "Revive Us Again." That was what was known years ago as the "Chautauqua Salute," but for sanitary reasons was discarded. If all of the handkerchiefs had been clean it would not have been so bad, but the opportunity for scattering bacteria of every description was unlimited. But even at that, it was a great sight and brought from the evangelist a vigorous "amen."

* * * *

The Lyon county chapter of the American Red Cross has decided to require banking houses of the county who have Red Cross money on deposit to furnish bonds meeting the approval of the executive committee of the Lyon county chapter. It was further agreed to continue the practice of depositing Red Cross funds in the banking institutions of the communities in which the funds were raised.

* * * *

Thirty years ago Manly J. Worth and his brother Elvin paid $29 an acre for 40 acres of brush and stump land on the hills overlooking the Missouri river bottom in Harrison county and planted it to apple trees. In after years 25 acres more of the same kind of land was purchased. The trees were set 26 feet apart each way and afterwards each alternating row running diagonally was removed. Since the trees began bearing 16 years ago the Worths have taken premiums on apples displayed at all of the great horticultural shows in the United States. They hold the record on Jonathans in America, this variety predominating in their orchard. In the 16 years they have never had a failure, although the yield varies, some years 1,000 bushels being gathered from each acre, containing 50 trees. The latest methods of pruning and spraying are observed, and with careful management the trees are free from disease and the coddling moth is practically eliminated. In gathering the 1926 crop of Jonathans Manly Worth offered pickers $5 for every wormy apple found and none made wages at it. The Worth orchard is one of the best known among horticulturalists in the United States.

* * * *

Announcement is made that by July 1st a mail and passenger air service will be maintained across Iowa. The contract for carrying mail from Chicago to San Francisco has been let to the Boeing Airplane Company of Seattle. Eighteen big special planes will be used on the route. They are already under construction, and executives of the company say that at least twenty-five of the machines will have been completed by the date when the new service is launched. The air cruisers will be equipped to carry a "pay load" of 1,800 pounds in addition to pilot and fuel. They will have compartments for passengers, and in the beginning will have accomodations on each plane for two, besides compartments for express and mail.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Continued from page one.)

eously is rare but we feel that it is a talent that can be developed. That is the purpose of these contests. Those who are ready speakers have studied and we believe that only by careful work and many attempts have they attained that skill . This is an ideal opportunity to cultivate this ability and we should make the most of it. Started in our early life this ability will be increased and in our later life we will find it indispensable in almost any profession or business. The different subjects made the work anything but monotonous. Studying various questions of national importance and interest gives the student an insight into questions he would not be likely to obtain otherwise.

Kenneth Bailey entered Kindergarten on Monday.

Those in the first grade who were neither absent nor tardy for the six weeks period are: Lee Brewer, Ardith Kinseth, Earlene Madsen, Philip Olsen, Mildred Shaw, George Steenblock and Boyd Berghefer.

Keith Bailey entered the first grade on Monday.

Orvis Fitts is again able to attend school after having had whooping cough.

Mrs. Brady and Mrs. Nordschow visited school last week.

Waunita Brewer's side won in the third grade spelling contest.

Members of the fourth grade having perfect attendance for the past six weeks period are: Muriel Bohning, Jane Holtzbauer, Bartlett Davenport, Duran Hill, James Gowdy, Gwendolyn House, Edith Greenwood, Arthur Johnson, Wilbur Luick, Billy Luick, Charles Norby, Helen Olsen, Lucile Steenblock, Marcosson Varland, Mary Stadtlander, William Stadtlander, Naomi Roosevelt, Alice Roosevelt and Doris Berghefer.

The following pupils from Miss Barry's room received the Merit Button for Palmer Method penmanship: Dorothy Courson, Roy Rowe, Jessie Elder, Vina Belle Curtis, Onnalee Halfpop, Blanche Pfaltzgraff, Herman Schultz, and Virginia Anfinson.

Palmer Method pins were awarded to Vina Belle Curtis, and Alice Buchanan.

The following pupils from Miss Barry's room were neither absent nor tardy during the last six weeks: Alice Buchanan, Dorothy Courson, Vina Belle Curtis, Jessie Elder, Velletta Kinseth, Francis Leavy, Gerald McNulty, Gladys Peterson, Meredith Nordschow, Blanche Pfaltzgraff, Roy Rowe, Ina Schmidt, Maxine Stacy, Orville Varland, and Loren Whelan.

Miss Ward visited the fifth grade Friday morning.

Pupils in the sixth grade who were neither absent nor tardy for the last six weeks are Gladys Baker, Evelyn Butterfield, Wallace Cramer, June Greenfield, June Obrecht and Doris Russell.

Maxine Nordschow had the misfortune of breaking her finger while playing ball.

JUNIOR HIGH NOTES

Frances Ramsey of eighth A has been absent the past week on account of illness.

Duane Brady of eighth A received a score of ten on drill seven.

The seventh and eighth grade held their final class debates Friday afternoon. The affirmative side, which was taken by the eighth grade defeated the negative side by a score of three to nothing. The question was, Resolved: that the Philippines should be granted their freedom. Some very fine speeches were given by both sides. Miss Bond has acted as coach for both teams.

Friday afternoon is the final spelling bee in Belmond. Let's get up some pep. We want the winner to be a member of the Junior High.

Miss Sowerwine's Art Class is making tea tiles this week.

WANT ADS PAY

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

McKibbin hats
1927 novel features with all the colorful glow and go of lusty youth.
Prices will please you, too.
Smith & Skovlin
Belmond, Iowa

REMEMBER
If you place your order for
Central States Electric Company
7 percent Preferred Stock
BEFORE MARCH 12TH
you will receive the
FULL RATE OF 7 PERCENT on your Investment
FROM MARCH 1ST
No need to say anything else
about this dependable Investment.
YOU KNOW IT IS GOOD
Any Employee can take your order or you can write
SECURITIES DEPARTMENT
Central States Electric Co.
515 Merchants National Bank
Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Bigger, Better and Stronger Chicks!
Last season the supply of baby chicks was not large enough to go around, so don't risk disappointment. Let us know your requirements now.
White Leghorns, per 100 ..... $12
Barred Rock, S. C. and R. C. Reds, per 100 ..... $14
White and S. L. Wyandottes, White Rocks and Orpingtons, per 100 ..... $15
Custom Hatching $4.00 per 100 eggs
1.000 size Coal Brooders $22.50
Globe Chick and Poultry Feeds and Equipment on hand at reasonable prices.
The Klemme Hatchery
KLEMME, IOWA
Garfield Ridge Hatchery
GARNER, IOWA

MARCH INVESTMENT
CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY
Preferred Shares
Are Exempt
From Iowa Taxes
Free from Normal
Federal Income Taxes
Pay
7%
Company Is Earning
Nearly Three Quarters of A Million Dollars Per Year
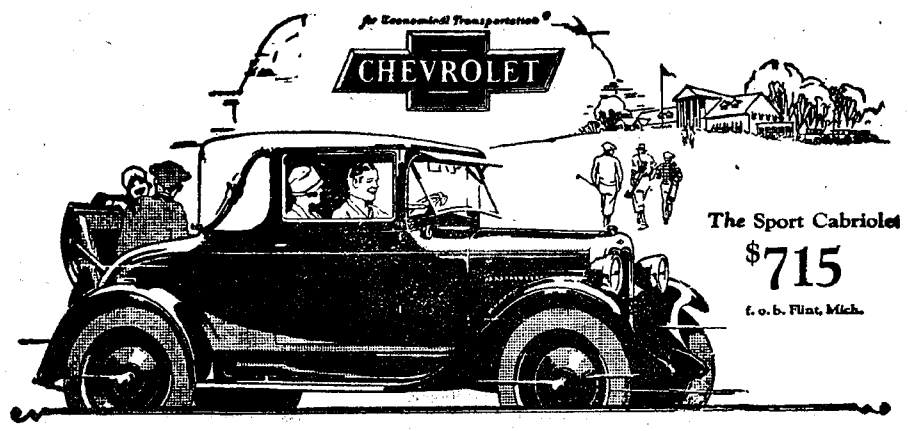
Certificates Dated
March 1st
To Draw Dividends
On Orders Received
Before March 12th
Ask Any Employe
or Write
CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY
515 Merchants National Bank Building
CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

PFANSTIEHL OVERTONE
RADIOS
The remarkable thing about Pfanstiehl Radio is its utter simplicity, beautiful tone, single tuned control, graceful design, dependable operation. It always works; is easy to tune; takes up little room.
In order to stimulate business at this time of the year, we will take in a few Phonographs in exchange. You can get a better deal at this time of the year rather than wait until November or December.
VICTROLAS and EDISON PHONOGRAPHS
At Greatly Reduced Prices!
VICTOR RECORDS—29c each. 4 for $1.00.
EDISON RECORDS—39c each. 3 for $1.00.
BLUE AMBEROL RECORDS—$1.00 a dozen.
Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa



The Sport Cabriolet
$715
f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

STYLE·QUALITY·PERFORMANCE
Comparable to the Costliest Cars
The Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History!
--- at these Low Prices!
The Touring or Roadster $525
The Coach $595
The Coupe $625
The 4-Door Sedan $695
The Sport Cabriolet $715
The Landau $745
½ Ton Truck Chassis Only $395
1 Ton Truck Chassis Only $495
All Prices F.o.b. Flint Michigan
Balloon tires now standard on all models.
In addition to these low prices Chevrolet's delivered prices include the lowest handling and financing charges available.
Never was the supremacy of Fisher craftsmanship so evident as in the new Fisher bodies on the Most Beautiful Chevrolet. Paneled, beaded and finished in striking tones of Duco—graced by distinctive, new, full-crown, one-piece fenders and bullet-type lamps, they represent an order of style, beauty and luxury unique in the low price field.
Chevrolet has long been famous for powerful, smooth performance, rugged dependability, long life and economical operation. Yet, in the Most Beautiful Chevrolet these qualities have been enhanced as the result of numerous mechanical improvements. AC oil filter, AC air cleaner, improved transmission, larger radiator, sturdier frame, new tire carrier and gasoline gauge—these are typical of the highly modern design which is winning the world to the Most Beautiful Chevrolet.
Because it provides elements of style, quality and performance comparable to the costliest cars, and because it is offered at amazingly reduced prices—the Most Beautiful Chevrolet is everywhere acclaimed as the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry.
Come in! See and drive this greatest triumph of the world's largest builder of gearshift automobiles. Learn for yourself what amazing value is offered in the Most Beautiful Chevrolet—how closely, in style, quality and performance, it compares with the costliest cars.
HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa
RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

ALABASTER LAMPS

COPYRIGHT 1925, BY MARGARET TURNBULL. W.N.U. SERVICE.

By Margaret Turnbull.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With a stranger, whom he introduces as his nephew, Ned Carter, Claude Melnotte Dabbs returns from New York to his general grocery at Peace Valley, Pa. To "Aunt Lyddy," his housekeeper, he explains that Carter is a chance acquaintance, veteran of the World war, whom he had met and taken a liking to.

CHAPTER II.—Carter tells Aunt Lyddy he has broken with his family and his sweetheart because of his resentment of their ultra pacific tendencies. With Dabbs Ned visits Clover Hollow, abiding place of a "collection of good-natured crani..." according to the grocer. They almost run over a dog belonging to a girl whom Carter apparently recognizes. Ned delivers a grocery order, and in his absence the girl, Dorothy Selden, reveals that she knows him to be Ned Carter Rangeley, son of Loren Rangeley, New York banker.

CHAPTER III.—Next day Ned commences work as a "grocer's boy." At a residence, the "White House," he delivers an order marked "Johnston." There he meets a girl who tells him she and her mother are alone in the house, the servants having left them because of the "loneliness." He promises to try to procure household help. Meeting Dorothy Selden, his erstwhile sweetheart, he baffles her attempts to discover the reason for his presence in Peace Valley. Arrangement is made for a cook to go to the Johnstons'.

CHAPTER IV.—The cook being unable to begin work at once, Ned visits the White House to inform Miss Johnston of the fact. Explaining the situation to her mother, the girl, "Mary," is astonished by that lady's emotion at the mention of Dabbs' name. The cook arrives, and Mary, with Ned, goes to the village for groceries. They are seen by Dorothy Selden. Mrs. Johnston, worried over financial troubles, is bothered by Dorothy, who warns her there is something suspicious about Ned Carter.

He found Mary there, investigating the growth of lilies in a small flower bed under the side window. He was whistling, and she rose from the ground and put a finger to her lips. He stopped instantly.

"I think my mother's asleep," was the low-toned explanation she gave him, with a gesture toward an upper window. Ned explained briefly the arrival and temporary employment of Mrs. Pulsifer.

Mary, delighted to hear this, intimated politely that he had now done all and more than was expected and might add to her debt of gratitude by his departure.

It being a lovely spring afternoon, warm and delightful, Ned had no idea whatever of doing this and obtusely followed her into the kitchen. He insisted, pleasantly, that having brought Mrs. Pulsifer there, he must introduce her.

The introduction performed, Ned still lingered. Mary ignored him, but Mrs. Pulsifer had been young once and scented an approaching romance more readily than might be supposed. She was the type of woman who would always be on the side of the man, right or wrong. With a sly glance at Ned, she asked Mary if it would not be "a kinda good time to get a snifft of fresh air?"

"I need no telling. I've set things to rights often enough for the Greens, who usta have this house, you go down along with Ned Carter here and pick and choose something for dinner. He'd bring you back in a jiffy. Ain't no sense in you two wimen ruining your delicat stummicks with canned trash—with me here to cook. You can git a chicken in no time."

The thought of providing something appetizing for her mother appealed to Mary. She made a dignified exit to consult her mother.

She found her mother asleep and rejoiced at the sight, because mother looked a dear asleep, and because she needed sleep. Mary pinned a note on the pillow to explain the presence of Mrs. Pulsifer and her own departure for the village.

Then, secretly amused with country life and its responsibilities, Mary serenely pulled on a jolly little hat, the brim lined with blue to match her eyes, thrust her purse in the pocket of her blue coat and ran softly down the stairs and out into the garden.

"We've our own car, you know, Mr. Carter," she said, as she tucked her shopping list in her pocket. "The chauffeur left when the others did, but of course the car is ours, and I can drive it."

Ned replied that it would take time to get her car out, while his was ready, unaware that she loathed driving and had meant to go in his car from the first. That she did not take the front seat, with him, was a blow to Ned. He had quite counted on this, but Mary had not forgotten the morning.

Revolving in her mind several things she would do and say to him if he reverted to this morning's manner, she forgot them all when Ned, in a casual manner, remarked that the country about them reminded him of the Marne valley. At once Mary saw him in a new light. If he was one of them, one of ours from over there, he had the key to her liking and respect.

It was then that Dorothy Selden, a little piqued because she had no one to play with for the time being, saw them. Dorothy recognized Mary. She had stopped at the Mannheim place, yesterday, and been introduced. Of course Miss Johnston might have known Ned, in the old days, but Dorothy did not think so. Moreover, Miss Johnston was riding in the rear of the car, like a passenger. What a splendid idea! If the grocer hired out his car, Dorothy would engage it. She would pretend her own had broken down, and rag Ned to her heart's content.

This thought put her in such excellent humor that she determined to call on Mrs. Johnston while the daughter was not at home.

Mary had been gone about five minutes when Mrs. Johnston awoke and read the note. She yawned, rose, put on a most becoming house gown and went down to the library, where she stared at the telephone fixedly. She placed her hand on the receiver, drew back, pulled a letter out of the desk drawer and read it, frowning.

It was a short, businesslike letter, stating that the directors of a certain company had decided to pass over the half-yearly dividend on the preferred and common stock, owing to adverse financial conditions. It seemed all very simple and plausible as they worded it, but it puckered the beautiful Mrs. Johnston's brows.

She drew the telephone nearer and called a New York number. It was the bank president who answered.

Her pleasantly worded sentence was as pleasantly but decidedly answered. After that the president evidently sought for further conversation with Mrs. Johnston, who murmured that of course they would love to see him, any Friday to Monday. If he would telephone, his train would be met.

When she rang off, Mrs. Johnston sprang to her feet and began walking up and down, thinking.

Dorothy came up the driveway. With her hand on the bell, Miss Selden paused. What, exactly, was she going to do in this house? Dorothy decided that it would depend on Mrs. Johnston.

There was something about a first glimpse of Mrs. Johnston that took one's breath away. She looked like a goddess come to earth, but on second look, she smiled, she was very human indeed. Dorothy was at first a little dazzled and awed. When Mrs. Johnston saw it was a girl, and probably someone who wanted to make friends with Mary, she became so friendly that Dorothy followed her into the library, completely under the woman's spell.

"So sorry, Miss Selden," the smooth voice was saying, "that my daughter is out, and out buying groceries, too. I've telephoned for servants, and the agency promises them down here tomorrow, but now we're quite on our own. Isn't it a nuisance?"

"Come home with me," urged Dorothy impulsively. "Mrs. Mannheim will be delighted to put you up until you get help."

"That's wonderfully sweet of you, but I've no intention of making my entrance on the scene in the role of a food pest. Mary and I get along splendidly by ourselves, and today we have Mrs.—Mrs. Pulsifer with us.

"Oh! You have one of them in the house!"

"Them?" questioned Mrs. Johnston.

"The Peace Valleyers. Oh, they're noted for their honesty. Wouldn't touch a thing. But mentally we find them so unresponsive."

"Dear me! They seem nice, well-meaning, honest people. My daughter is enthusiastic about them. Finds them wonderfully kind and helpful—especially the grocer."

If Dorothy Selden had not been thinking so hard about the impression she was making on Mrs. Johnston, she might have noticed that the sleepy brown eyes were keen. Mrs. Johnston intended to find out something when she put the apparently innocent question: "Is there more than one grocer here?"

Dorothy took this as the direct leading of providence. Here was an opening to the subject nearest her heart.

"There's only one. A man called Dabbs. He's quite all right, I think, in his place—as a grocer!"

Again, if Dorothy had been alert, she might have seen an odd flicker of the eyelids, a little quirk at the end of the pleasant mouth which asked gently: "Then what is it, Miss Selden, that is objectionable about him? There's something, I'm sure."

"His nephew." Dorothy's mind was made up. She would block Ned's game in this house.

"The Name He Goes Under Here Was Not His Name in New York."

Mrs. Johnston was relieved. Her lazy eyes bored through Dorothy's silly young girl armor. "The nephew! But where does he come in?"

"Well," hesitated Dorothy. Then an inspiration came to her. She would not tell Mrs. Johnston who Ned was. That would be playing Ned's game. Any ambitious mother would try to capture the son, in favor or out, of Loren Rangeley. "Well, as a matter of fact, I know something the rest of the community does not. The name he goes under here was not his name in New York. He is—well, under a cloud. I don't want to do the poor fellow harm, you know, but only to warn you."

"Awfully kind of you, I'm sure," murmured the astute Mrs. Johnston. "And now that you've done your rather disagreeable duty, tell me all about my pleasant neighbors, who's who, and just what this 'community' stands for."

Dorothy immediately forgot everything and launched into an animated and whole-souled description of the "community," its aims and aspirations.

Mrs. Johnston listened beautifully. Throughout the remainder of the call she appeared so interested in everything Dorothy had to say that it would have been difficult for Dorothy to believe the question uppermost in Mrs. Johnston's mind was:

"Why does the little blonde cat take all this trouble to run down a grocer's boy?"

CHAPTER V

Claude Dabbs could trace his American blood to some time before the Revolution. His forbears, the Durhams, the Parks, the Elliotts and the Dabbs, had probably called themselves English—when they were not Scots—and that fact accounted for much. Claude himself was essentially and uncompromisingly American, and his shop had that distinction.

While it was scrupulously clean, and the cleanliness was, in true American fashion, accepted and taken for granted, there was also what Ben Johnston styled "a sweet disorder" about the place, which accentuated the charm of it to the oldest customers and to C. M. Dabbs, himself.

Mary Johnston felt the charm as she entered the shop and was introduced by Ned to its owner. While her order was being put up, Mary went to the post office, promising Ned to return in time to be taken home with the order. Ned stood watching her for a moment, unconscious that Claude was observing him with interest.

When Ned turned and came into the shop, Claude was apparently absorbed in the order book and Ned went his rather uncertain way about, trying to assemble the White house order without help.

Ned, whistling softly to himself, thought that this was indeed Peace Valley. The drive down had been perfect. Since he had told Mary everything about himself—except a few essentials like his real name, who his father was and how he had met "Uncle Claude"—it might well seem so to him.

Then he caught sight of Mary Johnston coming back from the post office. He busied himself in getting the order box on the rear seat of the car, so that Mary would occupy the seat at his side.

Claude glanced at the girl and wondered of whom she faintly reminded him.

The car started toward Clover Hollow. Claude stared after it, and not until it was well out of sight did he wake up and heed the plaintive wail of Sim.

"What's the matter now, Sim?" Dabbs asked.

"You've let Ned off without the Mannheim order, and the other Clover Hollow stuff," replied Sim, dejectedly. "I kep' atrying to tell you."

"Don't worry. Throw it into the Ford and I'll tend to it soon as I come back from the barber's," and Claude took his way down to Ike Newman's.

Ike was shaving the customers in regular order, and with no more than the usual disregard of modern sanitary precautions. Claude always shaved himself, and did not patronize Ike, save as regards tobacco and cigars; but visited him often enough to be neighborly and to hear whatever gossip his own customers had missed.

Presently, just as Claude had hoped, the talk drifted around to "them Clover Hollowers." It was, just as Claude well knew, an inexhaustible subject. Dick Hanna had been up at the Mannheims, working on the community garden, and he had some country witticisms to offer at Dorothy Selden's expense. To Claude's astonishment, however, though Dick had been working there all week, he had evidently heard nothing about Ned's real name.

Claude breathed more freely, much relieved, yet wondered how long Miss Selden would keep this to herself. He decided that he would not speak to Ned until it became necessary, or Miss Selden made it public property.

Having learned what he came for, Claude was preparing to go when he heard the name "Johnston," spoken by some one in the group nearest the door.

Dick Hanna was still holding forth: "Yeh, but that Selden girl ain't in it with the new one that has come to the White house. I mean that Miss Johnston. You saw her driving with Ned Carter. Wish't I had his chance. I'd be driving with one hand all right. And even she ain't in it with her mother. Gollies! I wouldn't believe it was her mother."

"Stepma, mebbe, but they don't act like it. They're awful close and fond of each other, them two. The mother's a thundering fine figger of a woman. She's a widder with money, I believe. She kin have me for her second whenever she names the day!"

Laughter filled the shop. Claude decided to go. Dick Hanna always made him feel around for a handy club.

"An' while you was achipping around moles, Ike, I called to mind that one of her's," Dick continued. "It's right on the tip of her ear, brown and flat, and lays against it like one of them drop earrings. Say, I'd like—"

The door banged so loudly they all looked up.

"Guess Claude's remembered he's forgot somebody's orders."

Claude Dabbs put the orders into the truck mechanically. His mind, which Ned had catalogued as calm and philosophical, was in the state which Claude himself had long ago diagnosed as "that d—n excitable temper of mine."

Claude argued with himself that there was no earthly reason, after all these years of nothing happening, to get heated up because he'd heard of a red-headed woman with a mole on her ear. Of course there was the name "Johnston," but it was a common enough name. Anyway, it would be her husband's name. There it was; he must be at that "dangerous age" everybody was writing about, if he got so excited about some Johnston's widow and daughter.

That was another thing—a daughter! If the woman he was thinking of was at the White house, where would a daughter come in? It was not, he assured himself, worth thinking about.

* * * * * * *

To Claude's astonishment and pleasure, Ned seemed content and happy in helping him about the store, or running the car to and fro between Clover Hollow and Peace Valley.

Ned, Claude observed, never spoke voluntarily of Dorothy Selden and made no effort to meet her. The vexed question of his real name slipped into the background of Claude's mind, save for those moments when he looked upon him with a fatherly eye and wondered what Loren Rangeley was thinking of.

Gradually it came to pass that Ned delivered all the Clover Hollow orders. Claude never crossed the White house kitchen steps, nor did he see anything of the Johnstons, save an occasional glimpse of Mary going through the village in the car, with Ned at the wheel. Mrs. Johnston never came to Peace Valley. When Claude was honest with himself he admitted that this fact was a relief. If by any chance she was the woman he feared, what would he say to her when he saw her? Until he was sure of that—he would make no move.

Ned, obeying nothing philosophical or studied, drifted along, caught, as he put it to himself, in the maelstrom of Peace Valley. He was indifferent to the danger of discovery which Dorothy Selden represented. He was sure that Dorothy was "too good a scout" to give him away, and he was equally sure that she wanted to forget him as much as he wanted to forget her.

It never occurred to Ned that Dorothy was simply biding her own time, determined that when she struck at him the lovely Mary Johnston should feel the blow. As a matter of fact, Ned was doing very little thinking. He was creating a fool's paradise which one sentence from Dorothy would destroy; dreaming of a place in this peaceful little world, whose chief inhabitant was Mary. To be received or rejected on his own merits as Claude Dabbs' nephew, and not Loren Rangeley's pampered and eligible son; surely that would be a triumph worth while. He sought diligently to make himself popular in the store and the village and indispensable at the White house.

Ned had the field practically to himself. Save for the Saturday to Monday week-ends, when men appeared at the hospitable Mannheim's, there were no available swains.

It was a time when a cautious or ambitious mother might well have taken alarm, for Mary was indisputably intrigued. She had never before seen so much of a youth in Ned's position. This young man had thoughts, ideas and habits that too closely approached her own to admit of only a country store as background.

However, being human, Mary did not tell her mother everything. For instance, she simply could not tell her mother that this grocer's clerk gave her the feeling that she, Mary, was utterly right and charming, no matter what she said or did. It was something to treasure up, and remember when she was alone.

Mrs. Johnston, like a cornered animal, was wholly taken up with one great and pressing problem—how to get out of her corner. Other and lesser problems simply did not exist for her. She disliked inaction and hated the policy of "waiting to see how the cat jumped," yet there was nothing for her to do but wait. Always before this, when things became in any way impossible, Mrs. Johnston had simply turned her back and run away from them. Now, without money to run with, she must stay here in this quiet country place which, like a false prophet, kept breathing "peace, peace" when there was no peace—for her.

This morning, in the hope of distracting her mother, Mary was urging a ride to Hillsborough, not only as a chance to see the country, but because Mr. Carter said there was an inn there where the food was good.

Mrs. Johnston did not look enthusiastic, but intimated to Mary that she did not mind trying.

While Mrs. Johnston put on her hat, Mary found Ned in the kitchen, deep in an argument—heated on Mrs. Pulsifer's side—as to some new potatoes for the use of her own family, which she had expected Ned to bring with him.

Mary's entrance hushed the storm, but unfortunately, owing to the clamor that had greeted her, she used her employer's manner. Ned was annoyed. He received his instructions moodily and went outside to look at his engine.

Mary found her mother looking out of the window at Ned.

"Mary, it might be as well not to go, because—"

Mary indignantly interrupted. "Why not?"

Being somewhat of a diplomat in her relations with her daughter, Mrs. Johnston wisely contented herself with saying: "Dorothy Selden seemed concerned to see you riding with the grocer's boy."

Then she laughed. Mary's head went up.

"Maybe it would be diplomatic not to use this young man so often," Mrs. Johnston suggested. "Let him go back to the shop today. Tomorrow we will go with one of the other men as driver."

"And let that interfering little cat think we take her seriously?" asked Mary. "Indeed not! I'm going to Hillsborough, and with that young man! If you do not care to come—why, I'll go alone."

What could her mother do but laugh, and go along, though she thought to herself: "Little fox! What is she up to now."

Before they reached the car she paused to say: "Be very sure I will take a good look at this young man! If I like him, we will continue to champion him and his driving. If I do not—he's dropped!"

"We can't drop him far," Mary rejoined. "He's got to bring the groceries, you know."

For one appreciable second, Ned forgot the chauffeur manner he had intended to try out on Mary. He stared. Mrs. Johnston was his excuse. This was the first day she had consented to ride with them. Ned found himself looking into two sleepy brown eyes that saw more than one guessed, and at one of the handsomest women he had seen in many a day. The color of that hair alone, he admitted to himself, was enough to make anyone look twice. Her mouth was oddly disconcerting. It looked capable of sneering. Then, quite suddenly, she smiled.

"If Mother were my sister," Mary thought, watching her with that odd pride in her mother's beauty that made her depreciate her own, "no one would ever look at me!"

Mary paused before she followed her mother into the car. "Oh, Mother, just a moment. This is Mr. Carter, Mr. Dabbs' nephew, who has been so kind in driving me about."

Following the introduction, Ned helped Mary in very carefully. This was the moment for which he had waited, and Mary had stood the test. She had not "Cartered" him to her mother.

Neither Mary nor her mother knew Hillsborough. Ned had visited it several times with Claude Dabbs, and suggested the Iron Hand inn as their destination. The idea was acceptable to Mrs. Johnston, who merely stipulated, "Anywhere, except Peace Valley."

Mrs. Johnston was conscious that she was one person too many. It was curious. Not a word or a look that she might object to, yet the feeling was strong. Mrs. Johnston was irritated. She had much to worry her. Surely it was impossible that her precious, level-headed Mary could be about to further involve them. Mrs. Johnston, who was really tired, tried an experiment. She closed her eyes, complaining that the air made her sleepy. Contrary to her intention, it really had that effect. When she opened them, some fifteen minutes later, Mary was on the front seat with Ned.

"Oh, Mother, I didn't want to disturb you. Mr. Carter's been telling me such interesting things about the country."

Mary joined her mother at once, but Mrs. Johnston was not pleased with the result of her experiment.

When they had crossed the cobblestone parking space to the entrance, both Mary and Ned waited. Things were in Mrs. Johnston's hands. She knew it. She could not treat this young man as a paid driver.

"Mr. Carter," she began a little hesitantly, "since we've so freely accepted your uncle's car and kindness, won't you accept my invitation to luncheon?"

It was very graciously put, but Ned knew how little Mrs. Johnston wanted him, even if she was thoroughbred enough to ask him. He thanked her, vowing that he had an errand to do for his uncle but would take them in and introduce them to The Iron Hand.

He strolled along a quiet residential street which terminated in an old graveyard. He sat down on a flat tombstone, and thought about life and Mary.

"Hey, Ned, for one minute I thought you were a monument!"

Claude Dabbs was smiling at him over the fence.

Ned rose and went to him.

"Thank Heaven I saw you first," Ned said. "I told the Johnstons I had to do an errand for you. Come back with me."

Claude, however, was too busy to do more than stop at a lunch counter near the courthouse, where he had to look up several property records. As they ate he listened absently, Ned thought, to a description of the morning's drive. When they had finished, Claude said he would walk with Ned to the door of the inn.

As they reached the inn, the door opened to admit a large party of cheerful farmers' wives and children. Through the door, which the last lumpy child left wide open, Ned caught a glimpse of Mrs. Johnston, Mary and the proprietor. They were examining a print, hung rather high above the hall wainscoting. Mrs. Johnston's glorious hair and strongly modeled head were thrown into relief against the wall.

"Quick, C. M. Look! That's Mrs. Johnston."

Claude Dabbs leaned forward and looked. He was long about it and said nothing. Neither Mary nor her mother saw them. They were engrossed in the print. Mary was discussing it with the proprietor, while Mrs. Johnston examined it.

Claude quietly put out his hand and closed the door.

"Handsome woman, isn't she" said Ned. "Absolutely different in every way from her daughter. Did you ever see such a lovely contrast as they make?"

Still Claude did not speak. He stood staring before him. Then, noticing that Ned was looking at him, he pulled himself together, muttering something about a headache.

Ned was concerned. He offered to attend to Claude's business and drive him home. He was sure Mrs. Johnston wouldn't mind in the least. Or, he could arrange with some one to bring the truck back, and Claude could occupy the front seat with him.

Claude shook his head.

"It isn't anything, my boy. Just a headache. Get them often. Guess I drove the car up too fast and had the sun in my eyes. You stick to your job."

He was off down the street, leaving Ned protesting. A moment later, Mrs. Johnston and Mary came out into the sunshine.

* * * * * * *

In the library that evening Claude was far from being in his usual form. He was fidgety and restless, unable to settle down. Ned comfortably arranged himself, lit his cigarette and asked:

"Have you always lived in Peace Valley, C. M.?"

Claude started and gave Ned a searching look.

"Just about. I was the only son of my father, and he was a grocer, too. He wasn't a very good one. Good man—but not a good grocer. No judgment. Credit to everybody and never pressed a bill. He and Mom had ideas beyond grocering for me. They sent me to Rutgers to get an education, but I only stayed three months. I got into a kinda wild set."

"At Rutgers?"

"Yeh. I got gamblin' and lost fifty dollars and I got behind another fifty in my expense. Gee! It was tough. It's

"It's More Than Twenty Years Ago."

more'n twenty years ago, but I remember I thought of killing myself one night. What just about finished me was getting a letter from Mom telling me Pop was so sick they didn't expect him to live, and asking me to come at once.

(Continued next week.)

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Baldridge, of Waterloo, were week end guests at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baldridge.

The Trinity Ladies' Aid will have a Food Sale at the Peterson Meat Market, Saturday, March 19, at 10:00 a. m. 172c

Wm. C. Vestweber, Ethan Day and R. E. Lee Aldrich, Jr. made a business trip to Minnesota, Saturday.

George Hughes and wife, of Algona were guests last week Tuesday and Wednesday at the J. M. Sampson home.

Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Skovlin, of Mason City were Sunday guests at the A. H. Skovlin and John Anderson homes.

Mrs. Fred Meacham was pleasantly surprised a week ago Saturday evening when some 33 relatives gathered at her home to help her celebrate her 70th birthday. The evening was spent in games and music. refreshments were served, which included a cake with 70 candles.

BASKET SOCIAL at the Belmond Library, Friday evening, March 11. A program that is guaranteed to cure the blues. Coffee served Free. Everybody welcome.

Miss Mildred Veeder has accepted a position as advance agent with the United Chautauqua Co. for the coming summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Peterson and son, Walter, from Hampton, were visiting relatives here, Monday.

Mrs. H. F. Luick entertained the Progress Club Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Win Sands received a badly sprained hip last Saturday morning when she slipped on a piece of ice on Main street and fell. She was quite lame for several days, but is now able to get around again.

A letter from C. B. Allison states he is now attending a school of electricity at Kansas City. Mr. Allison had been farming the Allison place east of town, holding a closing out sale this winter.

Joe Smith went to Bird Island, Minnesota the first of the week on business.

RECITAL

Miss Frances R. Ward will present her pupils in a piano recital at the public library, Tuesday evening, March 15, at 8:00 o'clock. The public is cordially invited.

A surprise party was held at the H. J. Friesleben home, Sunday evening, in honor of Mr. Friesleben's birthday. About 35 were present. A two-course supper was served at 12 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Jennings were Sunday guests of Eagle Grove friends.

The Clair McDermott family left Sunday for Princeton, where they expect to make their future home.

Alfred McNutt, who has been working in Grass Creek, Wyoming, returned home, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Johnson are moving from their home west of town to Eagle Grove, where they will make their future home.

Father Barry of Webster City visited relatives here Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Thompson motored to Fort Dodge, yesterday, on businesss.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril McGuire are the parents of a baby boy, born Saturday, March 5.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Jacobson and Mr. and Mrs. H. F Luick and families motored to Mason City, Saturday. Mr. Jacobson left his car there for repairs resulting from an accident last fall.

Miss Bernetas Wolle, who teaches at Dows, spent the week end at the home of her parents here.

Miss Minnie Geitz of Iowa Falls, spent Tuesday with her mother, Mrs. Philip Geitz.

Mrs. Melvin Thompson had an operation for appendicitis at the local hospital, Monday.

Several automobile loads of men motored to Britt, Tuesday night, to attend a church banquet and entertainment.

Mrs. Lowell Schwinger and daughter of Ackley are visiting this week at the E. F. Bailey home.

Miss Freda Peterson had a narrow escape recently when the furnace fire, which she was tending, puffed out the open door burning her eye brows, eye lashes and blistering her face.

Elmer Larson expects to leave Saturday for Chicago, where he will attend the McCarrie School of Mechanical Denistry.

Miss Waugh and Miss Sowerwine motored to Waterloo last Friday and on to Clarksville to Miss Waugh's home to spend the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Snyder spent the week end at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Clarence Scott, and family, near Olaf.

Mrs. H. F. Luick and Mrs. J. F. Snyder motored to Mason City, last Saturday

Mrs. McNichol returned home from the hospital last Saturday.

The Chain of Ten meet with Mrs. Ernest Davenport next Tuesday.

FARMERS—The Farmers Shipping Association can now ship six days in the week. M. F. Christie, Mgr.

SALE DATES CLAIMED

MARCH 12—Horse and mule sale. Bailey & McLaughlin, props.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	19c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	38c
Corn	50c
Barley	62c

The Rebekah lodge held an enjoyable basket social and program at the lodge rooms last evening.

The school nurse, furnished thru the local chapter of the Red Cross, has arrived and is now at work at the school

Mrs. Schlatter, from Hutchenson, Kansas came Monday to visit her father, Henry Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Tuffree motored to Marshalltown to spend a day with Mrs Tuffree's father, who has been ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie of Waverly were Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Leslie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. McGuire.

Next Monday is school election. Two vacancies occur, and the two directors whose terms expire, H. L. Schultz and O. L. Varland, have been nominated for another term, and have no opposition. Both men have given the school district excellent service and should be elected unanimously.

Relatives here received word yesterday morning that Lyman Cram, of Bismarck, North Dakota, had died at his home there. Details of his demise are not available at this time. Mr. Cram was a former resident of Belmond, where he will be well remembered by many. George Hake left Tuesday upon receipt of a telegram that Mr. Cram was very ill.

At the meeting Monday night of the city council, a petition was presented by a committee of business men asking the council to pass an ordinance stopping street peddlers, one-night mercantile stands and fly-by-night concerns from coming into town with doubtful stocks. The town has been pestered with such concerns and peddlers in years past, and the license fee has not been high enough to keep them out. The council took the matter under consideration.

SERVICE!

Even if Coolidge did veto the Farm Bill, people must eat.

Where are they buying?

Certainly not as much as they should from their local bakeries. Is it fair to them?

I am sure they try their best to please you. Very little of the money spent for baked goods out of town stays here.

I am still baking and taking orders for Home Baked Goods.

HOT BAKED BEANS
Every Tuesday and Saturday. They are fine!

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

Musical Comedy at Opera House Pleases

The Al J. Leigh musical comedy company which opened a week's engagement at the Belmond opera house Monday night, pleased a large and appreciative audience. The song and dance numbers were well received and the comedy is good and clean. The chorus of five girls are well trained and execute their numbers nicely. The company will be here for the balance of the week with an entire change of program each night. As a special added attraction at the Saturday night show Mr. William Dyer will present his dramatic playlet, "The Broken Rosary." Mr. Dyer presented this act for six seasons over the Keith, Orpheum and all affiliated circuits and according to all reports this one act alone is worth many times the price of admission.

Mrs. Randall Nelson arrived in town recently from a visit at her home in Virginia. They will move in the Austin Nelson place.

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Rural New York and Early Ohio seed potatoes, $2.00 a bushel. S. Enger. 17tf

FOR SALE—Good, sound, ripe Early Ohio Seed Potatoes, $2.25 a bushel. David Kelley. Phone 228.

FOR SALE—Shorthorn bulls, by a son of Cumberland's Type, fit to head the best herds in the state.—L. E. Azeltine, Alexander, Ia. 168*

FOR SALE—Home-made lard. Mrs. L. Pals, Jr. Phone 1111. 172*

FOR SALE—S. C. Wyandotte and Buff Orpington hatching eggs. Mrs. A. P. Lonning, Belmond. Phone 2606.

FOR SALE—Hard or soft wood, stove lengths. A. C. Lieuwen. Phone 186 1-3. 17tf

FOR SALE—Brown Leghorn hatching eggs, $3.00 per 100. Buff Orpington pen eggs $1.00 per setting.—Mrs. J. B. Sheffield. 15tfc

FOR SALE—8 head of horses, from 3 to 12 years of age. Weight from 1200 to 1675 pounds. Priced from $35 to $165 each. Will give time on satisfactory note. Frank Drury, 1 mile west of Rowan. 16tfc

FOR SALE—Buff Rock hatching eggs, good producers, range flock. $4 per 100. Mrs. Menno Frohling. Phone 1105. 164*

FOR RENT—8-room house, partly modern, April 1. 3rd block south of State Bank. A. W. Martin. 172

FOR SALE—Seed barley.—Hamry Sorenson. Phone 1202. 1c

FOR SALE—Pure bred S. C. Buff Orpington hatching eggs. $4 per 100. —A. V. Mayhew, Goodell. 174*

FOR SALE—Nine Duroc Jersey brood sows, to farrow fore part of May. Cholera immune.—D. H. Delaney. 1*

FOR SALE—Bay mare, wt. 1300 pounds. Drives single or double. Guaranteed. $80.—See F. J. Bailey. 1c

LOST—Yellow and white short-haired male dog. Wore leather collar, closed with two hog rings. License No. 232, Franklin county. Answers to name of "Buster." Write C. H. Bernahl, Meservey, Iowa. Route 1. 1*

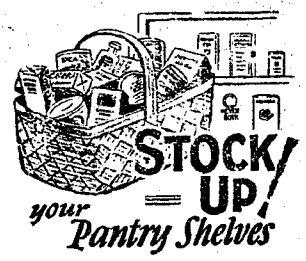
LOST—Lower part of extension ladder, last Hallowe'en. Please notify Independent. Reward. 1*

NERVOUSNESS OR HEALTH

There is nothing more destructive in all the long lists of human ailments than disorder of the nervous system. Chiropractic deals particularly with the nervous system and the Chiropractor is especially fitted to discover and remove the cause which has led to this dread condition. Start getting well today.

DR. R. E. PORTER
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

Why Not Select the
Children's HATS
EARLY WHILE THE STOCK IS LARGE?
All colors, sizes and materials.
PRICED RIGHT FROM
$1 up
The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa



YOUR Savings are greater if you plan a large order, sufficient to replenish your staples. We invite you to get our Big Value Prices on your next order.

REGULAR PRICES!

CORN	10c
PEAS	2 for 25c
PLUMS, No. 2 can	20c
TOMATOES	10c and 20c
OPAL COFFEE in glass jar	50c
HOMINY	10c
PORK and BEANS	10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

DON'T say Radio!

Say Atwater Kent Radio!

There IS a difference. You don't know the possibilities in radio, if you have never operated an Atwater Kent Model 32, seven-tube, one-dial. Takes no more battery current than the average 5 or 6-tube sets.

Belmond Storage Battery Co.
Belmond, Iowa
Phone 46 Official 2417

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Friday and Saturday
March 11 and 12

STEAK, per pound 25c
HAMBURGER, per pound 15c
OLEO—Cream of Nut, per pound ... 23c

We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

JOHN DEERE
MOLINE, ILL.
THE TRADE MARK OF QUALITY MADE FAMOUS BY GOOD IMPLEMENTS

WE ACCEPT THE CHALLENGE!

From a good many sources we have been informed that a certain representative of a Cream Separator factory has challenged us to a demonstration of his separator against ours.

We have accepted this challenge and have agreed to sign a contract to demonstrate at a place and time to be agreed upon by both parties. We agree to accept the International Rules Governing Efficiency Tests of Cream Separators in this test and will leave the entire judging to three disinterested parties. We further agree to place a certified check in the amount of $100.00 as a guarantee that we will not refuse to demonstrate and if we fail to appear we will forfeit this check to competing party. We shall expect competing party to do likewise.

As this test will very likely be held before another issue of the newspapers we ask that you call us for information as to the time and place of this test.

GRIESY'S
The Friendly Place
PHONE 10
BELMOND, IOWA

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1927. | NO. 18

SCHOOL PRACTICES ON FIRE DRILL

Students Receive Instruction In How To Get From Building In Case Of Bad Fire.

ART EXHIBIT IS SECURED

Friday morning, a fire drill was held for the entire school in accordance with the program of Fire Prevention Week. After receiving explicit directions as to no running, —no pushing,—single files,—three lines on the stairs, and aiding the younger pupils from room 30, we proceeded to empty the school house in a scientific manner; at least we followed instructions as best we could. We were once again settled when the fire gong sounded and we very unwillingly (?) abandoned our books long enough to repeat the feat. A very pathetic feature of patronizing devotion was exhibited by the students who happened to be in room 31 or 32 at that time. Each Junior grasped the hand of one child from the third grade and with very benevolent expressions registered on their faces, proceeded to aid their faltering footsteps down the three flights of stairs. This drill is to be repeated several times during the week.

Through the courtesy of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs, an Art Exhibit has been secured for the school, and will be on exhibition in the high school auditorium and in the corridor on second floor, all of this week. There will be a special evening showing Thursday evening, from seven until eight o'clock for those who find it impossible to get up to see it during the day time. The pictures will also be on display at the regular P. T. A. meeting on Friday. The exhibit is distinctly modern, containing pictures by many of the latest American artists. The Junior High School Art students are making a detailed study of them, under Miss Sowerwine's direction, and will post a bulletin or guide to them.

Miss Gieseman, the school nurse, has organized a class in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick, for the women, and especially the mothers of the community. The class will meet every Wednesday evening from now until June 1. Miss Gieseman has also started her work of examining the school children.

The second round of the State Declamatory meet was held at Garner Friday evening, March 11. The schools represented were: Britt, Forest City, Clarion, Kanawha, Lake Mills, Hayfield, Belmond Goldfield and Garner. Mildred Jacobson represented Belmond and, although we were not successful in carrying off the honors, we are very glad to say that since the ranking of the judges was exceptionally close—especially in the humorous, we were not far from it.

The preliminary inter-class extemporaneous contest will be held Friday morning, March 18, in the High School auditorium. Five from each of the three competing classes will be chosen for this contest. From those fifteen, ten will be chosen for the next round. This contest is open to any desiring to come.

The students are working very hard on the subjects. China, its leaders and their troubles and foreign concessions is one of the main topics. Then our Nicaraguan policy, the poison liquor policy, the veto of the McNary-Haugen bill, and Henry Ford's economic policy are all important subjects.

This work promises to be interesting and the contestants are all well read on the subjects and will most likely give interesting discussions.

The Seniors are hard at work writing up their edition of the Belmond Independent, for April 14th. They have elected their Editorial Staff, and business managers, and have high hopes of a successful paper.

Lucille Skouge was elected editor-in-chief; Bertha Elason associate editor; Edna Rust, Senior editor; Mary Quinlan, Literary editor; Ruth Jones, music editor; Lucile Hauge, social editor; Henry Weide, athletic

(Continued on page seven.)

LYMAN A. CRAM

Lyman A. Cram, a former Belmond resident died at Bismarck, North Dakota, March 8th, 1927. His death resulted from a malignant tumor of the stomach and intestine. Many Belmond people know Mr. Cram and will regret to learn of his death. He was the son of Mrs. George Cram and brother of Mrs. George Hake of this city. He was born in Belmond, April 29, 1869, spending his boyhood and early manhood in this community. He was married here and about twenty years ago went to North Dakota to live. He has since been identified with business and political life of that northern state. Lyman was of a sunny, genial disposition, always willing to lend a helping hand and won for himself wherever he lived a host of friends. He leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and five children, Mary, Anita, George Arthur and Adelbert and his aged mother and two sisters and a brother. He was a member of the Belmond Lodge I. O. O. F. and funeral services were conducted by the I. O. O. F. of Bismarck and by the minister of the First Baptist church of that city, the burial taking place there. Last July Lyman came to Belmond and cared for his father, George W. Cram in his last illness. The writer had an acquaintance with Lyman Cram extending over nearly thirty years and found him always a steadfast, dependable friend. If he had faults, they were such as are to be found in men of his big hearted, generous disposition. Asking no special favors for himself he lived his life as he saw it best and as a friend we offer a tribute to his memory. May he rest in peace.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Laick, Cooperative Observor, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week

For week ending March 12, 1927.

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char. of Day
6	49	29		Cloudy
7	49	34		Ptly. cloudy
8	50	26		Clear
9	56	35		Cloudy
10	49	34		Cloudy
11	45	34	.17	Cloudy
12	61	41	.01	Ptly. Cloudy

First lightning 1926—April 23.
First lightning 1927—March 12.

CANTATA FOR "MUSIC WEEK"

"The Rose Maiden" To Be Given First Week In May.

There is now in process of preparation a musical event for Belmond which will no doubt be one of the outstanding events of that character that the community has ever had. It is planned to present during Music Week, the first week in May, or shortly thereafter, a cantata called "The Rose Maiden," a musical composition of the highest quality and beauty. The cantata is planned to be presented with the aid of all musicians of the community and will of course require a great deal of work and time. The matter was instigated by the Parent-Teachers Association which at a recent meeting appointed a committee to look into the matter and determine its feasibility and to make arrangements for bringing it to fruition. The committee has secured the consent of Miss Elizabeth Waugh, teacher of music in the local schools to act as director of the cantata and are now proceeding with the filling the cast and assigning the special music of the composition. It is probable that rehearsals will begin within the next week or two. The event holds promise of a music treat which Belmond lovers of good music will long remember.

At the Luncheon Club meeting last Thursday, a committee of three was appointed to sound out the sentiment among the business men regarding continuation of the club. A rather strong sentiment against continuing the club as at present organized was manifested at the meeting. The club met yesterday with the various fire prevention inspectors who were here, in a social luncheon.

Enter—Exit

INSPECT FOR FIRE HAZARDS

Thirty-One Inspectors Here To Point Out Fire Dangers.

Yesterday was fire inspection day in Belmond, and the program as given was carried thru successfully. Thirty-one inspectors, sent here by the Iowa Fire Prevention Association without cost to the community, were on hand and every business building on Main street, all factories, schools and churches were given a thoro inspection for fire hazards, and such recommendations as were found necessary given to the owners or officials. The inspectors were a splendid group of men and met with co-operation by local business men in their work. At noon, they met with the Business Men's Luncheon club in an informal luncheon at Hotel Case. Mr. John D. Carpenter, one of the inspectors present, gave a short talk regarding fire prevention, and quoted some astounding figures about the fire loss in this country. He stated that 80 percent of the fires in America were due to carelessness and thoughtlessness, and could be prevented. Every day, 1,500 fires occur in this country; there were 1500 yesterday, there will be 1500 today, 1500 tomorrow. Last year over three quarters of a billion dollars was the fire loss in America, making the per capita loss over five dollars. He congratulated Belmond upon its splendid school building, which he said was one of the best from a fire prevention standpoint he had ever inspected in the state of Iowa.

In the evening, a mass meeting was held at the opera house, where "Flaming America," a moving picture depicting fire loss and prevention, was shown, and short talks given by some of the inspectors. The Independent goes to press too early to give a full report of this meeting, which will be given in the next issue.

COMMUNITY CLUB ENJOYS FINE BASKET SOCIAL

In spite of the inclement weather of last Friday evening a fair sized crowd gathered at the Library basement for an evening of fun and jollification.

The Luck orchestra very pleasantly entertained the appreciative audience during the early part of the evening and then the program as advertised was neatly carried out. Howard Dempsey gave a reading. Dr. Larson an instrumental solo, Miss Jones a piano solo, and Mrs. A. C. Lieuwen, as only Mrs. Lieuwen can, gave two splendid readings. Then a one act pantomime play was given by Mrs. A. E. Martin as reader, and Dr. and Mrs. Gowdy and Mr. and Mrs. Skovlin as actors, which was hugely enjoyed After the program our brilliant young auctioneer C. M. Morse, proceeded to dispose of the elaborately decorated, well-filled baskets. His clever salesmanship kept the crowd in good humor until all were sold. There was also a good supply of sandwiches, ice cream and cake for those who did not bring baskets. The proceeds of the evening were $25.

Miss Rena Purdy entertained the Delphian club at their St. Patrick meeting, Monday evening.

RED CROSS NURSE NOW AT SCHOOL

Individual Physical Examination Being Given All Students.

The boyhood days of "Teddy Roosevelt," twice president of the United States might have been very different if school nurses had been in vogue when he was mastering the mysteries of the multiplication table. Not until he was a boy of considerable age did his father accidentally discover that the world through" Teddy's eyes was an entirely different world from what it was through the father's eyes. The discovery was made when they were hiking through the country one afternoon. The father made some illusion to a sign on a tree some distance away. Teddy looked. He couldn't see the sign, much less make out the lettering. Investigation disclosed the fact that the boy was near-sighted, so much so that from that time until his death his heavy-lensed glasses were an essential part of his equipment.

Thousands of American school children are saved the disadvantages of handicapped childhood such as Theodore Roosevelt suffered by the vigilance and kindly interest of the school nurse.

But what do the nurses do, many people will ask. Near-sighted children are comparatively few. Surely they cannot spend all their time singling out a few near-sighted boys and girls. What's it all about?

As a matter of fact public health nurses are about the busiest people in the world. Seventy-five per cent of all school children in this country are suffering from physical defects. authorities tell us. 25 per cent have defective vision. From 15 to 20 per cent are malnourished. This does not mean that they do not have enough to eat but that either they do not have the proper food, or what is oftener the case, that they refuse to eat what is best for them. Between 30 and 40 per cent have diseased tonsils and adenoids. Many of them suffer from a combination of many of these defects. A child who is thought "not bright," indolent, lazy, mischievous is perhaps as bright as any one else, and would apply himself as much if he were not held back by physical handicaps.

The school nurse detects symptoms of these physical defects by her inspection of the children and is instrumental in having many of them corrected before they result in serious harm. Many mothers do not readily see the necessity for correcting what appears to them to be unimportant defects in the child. They may not realize, for instance, that diseased tonsils have a very detrimental effect on health. The school nurse, after inspecting children, visits the parents of those having physical defects, and discusses the child' problems with the parents. In this way many defects receive attention. This follow-up work, together with the educational activities of the nurse, in which she teaches the children health practices and the principles of personal hygiene, are important phases of her work. The spectacular things of life are

Continued on page seven

TIEDES CELEBRATE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The following item from the Santa Ana, Cal., Daily Register of March 7th will interest a great many Belmond people, as it concerns two well known former residents of this town. Mr. Tiede for many years conducted the store now owned by W. W. Goetz, and during his business life here acquired the reputation of being one of the best business men in Wright county. "Tiede's Day" was known throughout the surrounding country as one of the biggest events of the year, and was looked forward to for months ahead. Both Mr. and Mrs. Tiede have many old friends in Belmond who will unite in extending congratulations upon their 50th anniversary. The item follows:

Wedding bells which rang on March 4, 1877, in Guttenberg, Iowa, for pretty Josephine Weiner and E. L. Tiede, echoed down through fifty years and were heard sweetly chiming yesterday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tiede at 618 South Main street, where a group of relatives and close friends were assembled to help celebrate the anniversary.

Quantities of flowers added their cheer to the scene, and expressed the interest of countless friends in the anniversary. Every color of the rainbow was to be seen in the blossoms, and they formed an especially beautiful adornment for the table where those in golden tones suggested the golden wedding day.

The only drawback to complete enjoyment was the fact that the daughter of the hosts, Miss Anna Tiede, who holds a responsible position in Washington, D. C., could not be present. Miss Tiede was here in the late summer, and could not get away so soon again. However, her message atoned in a measure for her absence.

For many years after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Tiede remained in Iowa, making their home in Belmond where Mr. Tiede conducted a general store. In 1913 they came to Santa Ana and have lived in the pleasant home on South Main street since that time, making hosts of new friends who join with the ones of long ago in extending congratulations on the golden wedding anniversary.

JURORS DRAWN FOR APRIL TERM

Three Local Ladies Among List To Report On April 18th.

The following persons from this end of the county have been drawn to serve on the jury in district court at Clarion for the April term. The term convenes April 11, but jurors do not have to report until April 18.

Belmond—Nina Williams, Nellie Smith, Eva Bailey, Carlton Johnson, J. A. Adams, George Bohning, Thomas McNulty, Frank Case, Fred Frohling, W. H. Trafford, C. S. Robinson, Chris Groen, W. Boelman, C. J. Jones Andrew Pals, Leo Delaney, Sigard Anderson.

Rowan—Dale Hiams; Charles Aldinger, William Bailey, Jr., Clint Whitten.

Kanawha—Joe J. Larson, Lewis Tesdahl.

PALS-HELLAND

Last week Wednesday occured the marriage of Miss Semma Pals, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Pals, and Mr. Otto Helland. The ceremony was performed at Clarion at the Methodist parsonage by Rev. J. B. O'Connor. Bride and groom were accompanied by Miss Henrietta Pals, sister of the bride, and Mr. Bert Kalkwarf. Following the ceremony, the happy couple left for Spencer, where they visited an uncle and aunt of Mr. Helland's, returning home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Helland are now at home on the farm east of town, which they will operate this year. Darrel Helland, a brother of the groom, will assist with the farming.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Helland are well known in this community where they have a host of friends who unite in wishing them full measure of happiness and prosperity.

DOWS MAN GETS THIRTEEN YEARS

Judge Gives Him Three Years For Stealing Chickens, Ten Years For Forgery.

OTHER NEWS FROM COURT

(From the Monitor)

H. L. Peters arrested at Jetmore, Kan., three weeks ago charged with chicken stealing near Dows and passing forged checks, was brought into court last Tuesday and plead guilty to both charges. Judge H. E. Frey sentenced him to three years on the theft charge and ten years on the forgery charge. He was taken to Fort Madison Tuesday night attended by Coroner Dr. H. P. Walker.

Frank Clayber, who has been working for Fred Bisner, south of Dows, was taken into custody on a warrant from Wisconsin charging him with wife desertion. Clayber waived extradition and when an officer arrived here Saturday from Green Bay Wis. he accompanied that officer home without any undue formalities. Clayber has been in this neighborhood for about seven months.

Judge Sherwood A. Clock has taken the place of Judge Frey who is holding court in Nevada this week. Judge Clock is hearing further evidence in the Amos Thompson case which is now hoped will be concluded this week. There is no jury in this case but a transcript will be made of all evidence and Judge Fry will have this record before him when he gets ready to write a decree in the case even though he has not been present at the giving of the testimony.

Mary C. Haukole of Eagle Grove asks foreclosure of a mortgage on lot 12, block 10, Eagle Grove, to indemnify her for a note of $4,000 and certain additional costs of proceedure. She asks protection of her interest as against any claim of the Citizens' State Bank of Eagle Grove which claims obligations from the defendant.

Through a charge of venue from Franklin county, a case involving amount of damages for road widening is brought to the Wright county court. Fourteen citizens of the southeast corner of Franklin county asked for a road one mile long between sections 6 and 7 to take the place of a road that now runs on half mile lines. Five citizens who own adjoining land protest against the road, saying that it would separate different tracts of their farms and that an existing two rod road would give ingress and egress desired. They have been allowed $560 damages by the board of supervisors, but are asking damages as an aggregate of their three claims in the total sum of $1265 for fencing. They claim that the land should be valued at $300 per acre.

The court approved sale of southwest quarter, section 36, Liberty township, by Citizens State Bank of Goldfield to John O. Anderson for $24,800.

John Kurtz of Clinton county asks foreclosure of land in sections 13 and 14, Boone township, to liquidate a note for $2842.73 and costs, given to plaintiff by Helen Schwirtz and F. H. Schwirtz. Grundy Center attorneys are bringing this suit.

Central Life Insurance company of Illinois asks foreclosure of a mortgage on 80 acres in section 13, Eagle Grove township, to meet the obligations of a note for $7,000 and interest, amounting in all to $8,284.24. The original note was executed January 30, 1920.

Blanche B. Heslop asks divorce from Edward E. Heslop on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, citing one incident occurring at Council Bluffs March 8 as specific evidence. She asks $60 a month alimony. The couple were married at Fort Dodge February 13, 1925. Defendant is a brakeman on the Great Western.

Ruth M. Shake asks divorce from Murphy A. Shake, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment. She asks restoration of her maiden name, Ruth M. Whipple. The parties were married in Clarion Sept. 5, 1923.

Settlement of a note for $12,650

(Continued on page eight)

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 8, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES

Display, per column inch 25c
Locals, per line 10c
Classified, per word 02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

The fire prevention day held here yesterday will have been well worth while if it has caused some of our householders and building owners to think a little more about fire hazards and fire damage. Fire is always destructive. And while we may think and say that some buildings were burned we would be ahead as a community, the loss to the individual is to be considered. Statistics show that fire is too often caused by carelessness, failure to properly inspect chimneys, leaving trash and paper lie around close to a fire, accumlating combustible material which by all rights should have been cleaned up and hauled away. Both from the standpoint of fire prevention and appearance of the property, this rubbish should be cleaned up. If Belmond cleans up a little, it will be a work well done. Everyone carries insurance against loss by fire, yet everyone would much rather the fire did not occur. Giving attention to the defects pointed out by the inspectors yesterday will do much to avoid fire and keep Belmond from suffering a loss. Cleaning up the junk in the back alley may prevent a fire, and will certainly help the appearance of the property and of the town. Every property owner should have pride enough in his place to see that it is kept free from rubbish. If his property is rented, he should insist on the renter keeping the place cleaned up. Belmond has a wonderful fire department, a company that stands with the best of them, and they have saved property owners a good many thousands of dollars, but no matter how good they are, or how good work they do, they cannot prevent you from suffering some loss when a fire breaks out. It is to your advantage, financially and otherwise, any way you want to look at it, to do your part inpreventing a fire on your place. Belmond owes a vote of thanks to these men for the good work they have done, all of which has been without cost to us. Such an inspection cannot help but be of great value to the community.

The first gun in the opening campaign for the nomination of Coolidge in 1928 has been fired with the anouncement that the president would come west to spend the summer. The move is manifestly political, and for no other reason. The roar that went up following the veto of the McNary-Haugen bill was sufficiently loud to be heard in Washington. In vetoing the bill, Coolidge balanced the east against the west, politically, and the east won. There are more electorial votes in the east. But the west must be given some little consideration in the way of votes and by spending the summer out here, "learning the farm problem at first hand," with the consequent publicity resulting from such an unusual move, the president figures on wearing away some of the hostile opposition he knows very well now exists among the agricultural sections. For above all else, the president is a politician, and a politician of the first order. He knows, just as anyone knows who has studied the situation at all, that he can have the nomination next year. The east will see to that. But nomination and election are two entirely different things in this case. Ordinarily, the nomination is equivalent to the election. But in 1928 it isn't; unless Coolidge can secure a large slice of the middle west, western and southern vote, he cannot win. And he knows it. So does Mellon. Secretary Mellon is the real president of the United States. The sad part of it is, too many of the folks who are now condemning Coolidge for his veto, will be right on the band wagon in 1928—because Coolidge is republican and they will "stay by the party." Right now, Coolidge couldn't carry Iowa any more than a rabbit. But by next year the party leaders will be preaching "stand by the party," and a large number of the same folks who are now criticizing Coolidge will then stay by him. For Iowa is republican, and it requires a most unusual event to swing the state to the democratic party. But do not be surprised if Coolidge is not nominated, or Lowden either. There is a more or less satisfactory compromise to both east and west in Vice President Dawes.

COOKING MEAT

Meat is often served which is tough and tasteless, and there is no excuse for this. Tougher cuts of meat are cheaper, and they may be made delicious and tender by careful cooking. It takes long, slow cooking to dissolve the connective tissue of tough meat and make it tender. But such cooking is likely to draw out the juices and flavor of the meat and leave the meat tasteless. To prevent this, first sear the meat in hot fat.

For tough meat, it is best to cut it about one inch thick, as Swiss steak is cut. Sprinkle it with salt and pepper and roll it in flour. Place it in a frying pan which contains hot fat and brown it well on all sides; then add enough water to steam it well, cover it closely and let it simmer until the meat is tender. This will be twenty minutes or more for each pound in the piece. Make a thick gravy when you have removed the meat from the pan, and pour the gravy over the meat.

Onions, cut fine and fried in the hot fat before the meat is added, give a good flavor to the meat. Tomatoes are also often added for this purpose. They have an additional value, as the acid of the tomato helps dissolve the connective tissue of the meat and makes it more tender. French cooks often use tomato or a tablespoon of vinegar or catsup for this purpose.

In roasting meat, if it is fat, it will need nothing added; but if it is lean, slices of fat pork or of bacon may be laid over the top. Place the roast in the oven uncovered until it browns, to keep in the juices, then add a little water and cover tightly. The steam will help cook the meat.

Left over meat may be used in hash, gravies, Irish Stew, meat pies, croquettes, and in salads. Add red and green peppers and canned mushrooms to chopped meat and white sauce, serve with toast and call it meat "a la King."

FASHIONS, FADS, FOIBLES

The slim figure continues, and with it athletic styles are naturally followed. We are to keep on being "sporty" and simple in vogue—soft headgear with little trimming on the felt; soft jerseys and crepes in sport styles; more pleats than ever, giving us room to "step out."

Hats are higher, narrower, and more pointed, with their slenderizing and tallifying effects. Brims are small—if any—chiefly absent in the back, with a cap-like visir in front.

Lighter, softer and more flexible are the new fabrics, almost as pliable and sheer as chiffon.

Stripes, checks and plaids are very popular. Two-piece and combination frocks are winning their way: made of two kinds of material, one plain and one figured, striped or checked. The blouse or coat is of one kind, the skirt of another. Suit and shirt waist are making a struggle to come back, and a few smart suits are succeeding, but the one-piece dress still plays the star role.

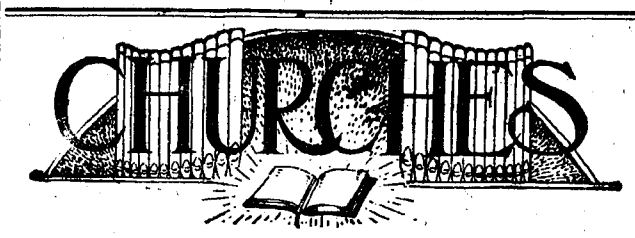
MOST BEAUTIFUL

There is a quaint story that an angel went forth from heaven one day to find the most beautiful thing upon earth. He came to a rose, blooming in all its splendor, and he thought, "Ah, nothing can be more beautiful than this. I have found the most beautiful thing on earth."

But behind the rose he saw a baby smile, and then he decided, "The baby's smile is more beautiful than the rose. I have now found the most beautiful thing on earth."

Presently behind the baby's smile, he discovered a mother's love. And as he looked and studied, the rose faded; the baby's smile changed into a frown; but the mother's love remained unchanged.

"It is the one thing which abides when all other beauty fails," said he. "It is the most beautiful thing in the world."



METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, March 20.

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. You are most heartily requested to attend our school.

Divine worship and sermon at 11 a. m. Subject of sermon, "A Daily rate per every day." Deut. 33:25.

Junior and Senior Epworth League at 6:30. Both Leagues are doing exceptionally well. The initial meeting of the Juniors was largely attended. May this spirit not slacken.

We would like to have every Senior Leaguer present Sunday night when definite plans will be laid for the District rally at Britt on the 24th. Belmond should be represented in full force.

Evening worship and sermon at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "Christ our Emancipator. Rom. 8:13.

Regular aid meeting with Mrs. Wolle Thursday P. M.

Bake Sale in Peterson's Market Saturday March 26 by the ladies of the 3rd division.

The ladies of the W. F. M. Society are making extensive plans for Founder's Day, March 24th. This day completes the 58th anniversary of the society. A pageant and program will be given. Ladies of the church not members of the society are heartily invited to attend.

You are most cordially invited to all of our services.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10 a. m. Bible Study Hour. Subject, "The Christians' Hope."

11 a. m. Morning Worship, with a talk on some things which Congregationalism did, and for which, as a Denomination, we stand. Do you realize that the Congregational Church is a strictly democratic church, truly non-sectarian, community church. That Congregationalists wrote the first American Constitution of Democracy, the Mayflower Compact, that the Boston Tea Party was planned in a Congregational Church, that Congregationalists started the first college in America—Harvard, in 1636, also the first foreign missionary society, the first home missionary society, the public school system of these United States, the first temperance society, the greatest young people's movement in all history, the Y. P. S. C. E. Do you want to know more about the "People's Church, and what she has done for our country, and for the world, then you will want to be present next Sunday. Bring your friends with you, for you are welcome to the "People's Church." The special music will always be an inspiration to you.

TRINITY CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor
Telephone Call, 150

Thursday March 17, Mid-week prayer meeting at the church at 7:30 p. m.

Saturday, March 19. The Ladies Aid will hold a food sale in Peterson's Meat Market, beginning at 10 a. m.

Sunday, March 20. English services at 11 a. m. Theme "Children of Abraham." John 8:31-44.

A meeting of the young people of our church has been called for 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of organizing a Luther League. We hope that all our young people will be present prepared to take an active part in the work of our church.

Tuesday, March 22. The local Catechetical class will meet at 7:15 p. m. Choir practice at 7:30 p. m.

ST. OLAF CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor

Sunday, March 20. English communion services will be held at 2:30 p. m.

Wednesday, March 23, Mid-week prayer meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. L. Tendall at 2 p. m.

The catechetical class will meet at the church at 4:30 p. m.

P. T. A. MEETING

The regular meeting of the P. T. A. will be held Friday afternoon, March 18, at 2:45. This meeting promises to be one of the most interesting we have had. The subject will be "High School Life" and will be taken up from the standpoint of the student, the teacher, and the parent. Lucile Skouge and Donald McNulty will speak for the student, Miss Hammers for the teacher, and Mrs. E. W. Luick for the parent. Rev. J. T. Snyder will conclude the discussion with a talk on "Higher Moral and Spiritual Standards Needed Now More Than Ever Before. Music will be furnished by the glee clubs.

An art exhibit is being held this week in connection with this meeting. There are about seventy-five pictures and is hoped a great many will avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing them. Anyone desiring to buy a picture may do so and a percentage of such sales will go to the Parent Teachers Association for buying pictures for the school. The school house will be open from seven to nine on Thursday evening to give those who cannot see these pictures in the afternoon, an opportunity to do so at that time.

EDWARD W. HOOD

Edward W. Hood was born in Toronto, Canada, about 75 years ago, and died in Goodell, Iowa, March 4, 1927. In young manhood he came to this country and was married to Miss Mary Downey at Clare, Iowa. This union was blessed with eight children, all of whom survive except Albert, who died 19 years ago. Mrs. Hood died January 26, 1900. He leaves to mourn his loss three sons, Tony and Bert of Goodell, and A. J. Hood of Belmond; four daughters, Mrs. W. L. Strait of Clare, Mrs. Bielefield of Goodell, Mrs. Fred Sedleman and Miss Viola Hood of Des Moines; five brothers, John T., J. M. and Con Hood of Clare, Will Hood of St. Cloud, Minnesota, and Lou Hood of Dubuque, Iowa; two sisters, Mrs. Mary McCarty of Toronto, Canada, and Mrs. Nicholas Kaufman of Fort Dodge, Iowa; 12 grandchildren, and many other relatives and a host of friends. One grandchild, Betty Ruth Hood, died one week before.

Deceased was a man of lovable character and was endeared to all, especially his own children with whom he had taken the place of both mother and father, and to his grandchildren who always loved to see him come

In 1915, Mr Hood moved with his family to the Brandis farm northeast of Belmond, and in 1920 he bought a farm one-half mile west of Goodell where he resided until his death On the evening of March 4 as he was leaving the home of his daughter to return to his home, his buggy was struck by a passing automobile and he was instantly killed. The body was taken to Clare, Sunday, for interment, the funeral was held at 9:00 Monday morning from the Catholic church where Rev. Father Dorsey officiated at Requiem High Mass. The esteem in which deceased was held was evidenced by the crowded church and the long concourse of sorrowing friends who followed the body to its last resting place.

Tho cast down, we are not forsaken,
Tho afflicted, not alone.
Thou hast given and Thou hast taken,
Blessed Lord, "Thy will be done."
Thou hast left us and we miss thee,
Sadly miss thee, father dear,
In vain we listen for thy footsteps,
Still we are thinking thou art near.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their many acts of helpfulness and words of sympathy tendered us during our late great bereavement, the death of our beloved father. Also for their generous donation of cars and the numerous and beautiful spiritual bouquets and floral offerings.

The Children.

FOUND DEAD IN BED

The body of Ed Johnson, known in this community for many years, found dead in his bed at the Lucas hotel in Kanawha Wednesday morning by the proprietor, Jack Lucas.

Death was due to heart disease.

Mr. Johnson was 65 years of age, unmarried and had lived in the neighborhood of Kanawha and Belmond for almost 30 years. He spent most of his time working on farms.

He was born in Sweden, and, so far as can be learned here, has no relatives in this country. No arrangements for the funeral have been announced.

FREE AIR

See by the paper that President Coolidge plans to come west this summer to keep cool.

* * * *

Iowa is no place for him to locate, then; it's pretty hot out here with signs of getting warmer.

* * * *

At that, however, he could do worse. What say we take up a collection to send him a telegram, offering a cottage at Lake Cornelia?

* * * *

Bob Wilson will probably let us have one reasonable, right next to the toboggan slide, and George Coburn would likely donate a boat and some worms.

* * * *

If Calculatin' Cal wants to fish, Iowa's a good place to try. Lots of suckers here.

* * * *

And Martin Thoe will take a picture any time Cal hooks another.

* * * *

Somebody must have told Cal about that famous sentence, "Go west, young man, go west."

* * * *

Cal is a good talker, when he talks, and no doubt the Luncheon Club would extend an invitation to address a meal.

* * * *

If the fish didn't bite at Cornelia, he could try his luck at Morse Lake, Nate Benson or Dad Trumbell or Charlie Gealow could show him where the fish holes are.

* * * *

But keep him away from Clear Lake; that's too close to Charlie McNider.

* * * *

Very probably, however, Mellon will recommend a site somewhere in the Black Hills where the president can have a better opportunity to acquire some first-hand knowledge of the agricultural situation.

* * * *

A lot of folks have been worrying about that new ruling of the banks to take effect April 1. They're gonna tax us 50 cents a month if our accounts fail to average $50. That means six dollars a year.

* * * *

We've worked out a scheme to beat 'em out of one-third of that six bucks. It's very simple: Borrow $50 and put it on deposit and leave it there. One year's interest at eight per cent, $4. Saving—$2.00.

* * * *

We were going to copyright this idea, but considering the great number of folks it will benefit we have concluded to pass it on gratis.

* * * *

That's all right; you're welcome.

Local News

L. Tokman was a business caller in the Twin Cities last week.

The Odd Fellows and Rebekahs and a few friends enjoyed a dance Monday evening in the Odd Fellows hall.

Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Skovlin motored to Mason City, Sunday, where they visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Skovlin.

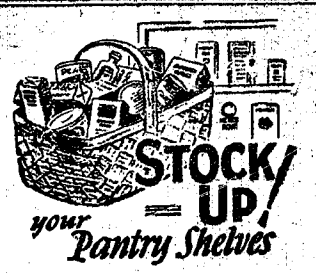
Clair Christie, of Ames, was a visitor with home folks here, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Snyder, of Wichita, Kansas, are visiting at the home of Carl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Snyder.

Mrs. O. Young returned from Rolfe Thursday, where she had been taking treatments.

Mrs. Ralph Edwards, of Rockwell City, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Newgard, and sister, Mrs. C. O. Fitts the past week. Mr. Edwards came Saturday and they returned to their home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Saatoff, of Hampton, were Sunday guests at the home of Mrs. Saatoff's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Gartin.



March Meals

Are difficult to plan, but if you will visit our store you will find a variety of tasty and staple groceries that will make your planning easier. Besides that, you'll find you can save money by taking advantage of our new cash prices. As a sample we are offering this week:

REGULAR PRICES!

CORN 10c
PEAS .....2 for 25c
PLUMS, No. 2 can 20c
TOMATOES .....10c and 20c
OPAL COFFEE in glass jar. 50c
HOMINY 10c
PORK and BEANS 10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S
BELMOND Iowa
PHONE 38

BUICK VALVE-IN-HEAD MOTOR CARS A 33-10

Motor car types come and go, just as motor cars do.

But the grace and distinction which characterize Buick always stay in style. They never become commonplace.

For Buick style is sincere, and expressive of quality.

Buy a Buick! And you will always be proud of your car.

Hub Motor Co.
BELMOND, IOWA

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

The Nutrena Feed Mills Co., Inc.

HAVE CONTRACTED WITH SAMPSON'S WHITE FEATHER HATCHERY TO SELL THEIR LINE OF FEEDS.

NUTRENA COD LIVER CHICK MASH is a complete food for chicks of all ages. It is rich in Vitamine D, that prevents leg weakness. Contains pure dried buttermilk, 36 percent protein and is high in lactic acid. Containing Vitamine A and B, that helps to prevent White Diarrhoea. Nutrena Chick Mash contains eight different ingredients. Is palatable. Contains no indigestible minerals or filters of any kind

We sell Nutrena because we can guarantee it. Get a sack today.

Sampson's White Feather Hatchery
Phone 2707 BELMOND, IOWA

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

POULTRY AND SWINE SPECIALIST TO BE HERE MARCH 23

Dr. E. A. McCain, a member of the Research and Clinic Department of the George H. Lee Company, Omaha, Nebraska, will hold one of those interesting and helpful Poultry and Pig Clinics at the American Legion Hall, at 2:00 p. m. Wednesday, March 23rd.

The object of the Clinic is to assist farmers and poultry raisers in reducing the tremendous loss among poultry and pigs, that occurs on the farm every year. The clinics conducted by Lee Specialists have frequently been called Short Course Schools, teaching how to recognize, correctly diagnose, treat, and prevent disease and other troubles that are the common cause of much loss to poultry and swine raisers.

Farmers who have unthrifty chickens or pigs are invited to bring in specimens for post-mortem examination, and receive free instructions on the cause, treatment and prevention of the trouble. Plenty of specimens are needed to bring out the full value of this demonstration, but if your hogs are sick and you believe, or suspect, the disease is contagious or infectious do not bring such animals to the clinic but notify Herman Schultz and, if practicable, the Doctor will call upon you and make an examination.

There will be no admission charge and nothing offered for sale at the Clinic. Every farmer in this community should take advantage of this opportunity to become better posted on disease prevention.

LACK OF FINANCE CHECKS WAREHOUSING

Des Moines, Iowa, March 15.—"Lack of an adequate method of financing warehouse certificates has practically checked the use of the farm warehouse act in Iowa this year," states Carl N. Kennedy, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, who has been directing this work. "Less than 10 per cent as much corn has been sealed during the past winter as during the previous year when there were two national agricultural credit corporations in Iowa to finance these loans," said Mr. Kennedy. "Several credit corporations are loaning money on certificates at the present time but the rate of interest has been higher and their capacity for loans smaller than under the credit corporations of last year.

"Last year, a total of 2,269,398 bushels of corn, 74,616 bushels of oats and 26,000 bushels of timothy were warehoused, as compared to 222,887 bushels of corn, 10,145 bushels of oats and 9000 bushels of timothy this year. A much larger amount would have been warehoused this year if loans could have been made at attractive rates of interest."

EXPERIMENT IN ERADICATING AVIAN TUBERCULOSIS

Thompson, Iowa, March 15.—Three different methods of eradicating avian tuberculosis are being tried out by the farmers of Winnebago county working in cooperation with the Iowa Department of Agriculture.

"It has been the opinion of the department that farmers can eradicate much of the tuberculosis in chickens by artificially brooding young chickens on fresh ground away from sources of infection," stated M. G. Thornburg, Secretary of Agriculture, who approved the tests which are being put on with the cooperation of the Winnebago County Farm Bureau.

Three different methods of eradication are being tried. Under the first, the farmer will cull out all old birds that are badly affected, raising the young chicks on fresh ground and selling the old birds in the summer so that the houses and yards can be thoroughly renovated before the chicks are put into the laying houses. The second method folows the same plan except that all old birds are tuberculin tested to remove all the reactors possible. The third plan provides for the testing of the birds but allows the farmer to raise the chicks with the old birds."

"The purpose of putting on the demonstration is to show that sanitation and raising the chicks on fresh ground is a practical method of ridding most farm flocks of this disease," stated Mr. Thornburg. "We are disappointed that more farmers are not equipped to use this method as we believe that it will exterminate many other diseases and parasites, as well as much of the tuberculosis."

FRANKLIN COUNTY ACCREDITED

New Hampton, Iowa, March 15.—Word has just been received from state and federal authorities that Franklin County has become a modified accredited county. This makes Franklin County the 29th county of the state that has cleaned up her bovine tuberculosis. Franklin county has tested over 43,000 cattle, which is considerably more than the average number in most counties.

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, March 17, 1927 No. 49

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

The next real big event on our calendar is St. Patrick's Day. 'Rah for the Irish!

—

Heard in Foster's Cafe

"What kind o' pie y' got?"

"Apple, gooseberry, custard, raisin, cocoanut, pumpkin, peach, apricot, chocolate, blueberry, raspberry, blackberry and cream."

"Ain't y'got any mince?"

—

It has been our observation that the fellow who insists on waiting until times get better, never gets through waiting. These are good times. Let's go!

—

A friend of ours who is something of a shark at mathematics came in here the other eveing and asked us to help him trisect a triangle. We cleared our throat and tried to appear interested. Then he slipped the information to us that this is a problem that nobody has ever been able to solve. We've been so blamed busy around the place here that we haven't been able to give the thing much time. Maybe next summer we'll trisect it for him. In the meantime, we suggest that he go right ahead and try to get it himself. He'll remember it better that way.

—

Want us to tell you how to get up in the world? Buy a ladder! We can furnish the ladder. But you'll have to do your own climbing.

—

A Belmond business man received a payment on account the other day and a letter which said, "Please tell me how I stand in the rear."

—

Yesterday a friend of ours told us his wife wasn't feeling very well. "Guess I'd better call her up and see how she is," he said and took the phone. Pretty soon he put the receiver up. "She's all right now. The line's busy."

—

When you see the weight of our Cedar Shingles, nobody needs to tell you that they will last. You can see that at a glance.

ROWAN NEWS ITEMS

(Continued from page 5).

Alexander were Sunday guests of their cousin, Mrs. Les. Andrews and family.

L. W. Stevenson is again proprietor of the local meat market, having purchased the equipment and business from Mr. Johnson and took possession last week. Mr. Johnsn went to Sioux City, where he will have charge of a shop.

Mrs. Les Andrews and son Boyle spent Thursday with her cousin, Mr. Earl Allen near Iowa Falls.

The youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Lester who has been very ill with bronchitis is on the mend at this writing.

The Royal Neighbors were hostesses Thursday evening at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs. Glen Morris (nee Ruby LaGue). An enjoyable evening was spent. Refreshments were served. Mrs. Morris was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

The Misses Mabel and Laura Aldinger attended a teachers study center at Hampton Saturday.

Mrs. Fred Aldrich returned Wednesday from Mason City where she had been with her parents.

Amos Cowley is at Bruce, Wis., attending to business affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Anderson and children spent Sunday at the Leslie Dockum home near Hampton.

Mrs. D. E. Harris spent several days of last week with her son, Ted Townsan and family in Des Moines.

School election passed off rather quietly Monday. The following are number of votes cast:

Mrs Clint Kercheval 59, Mrs. F. B. Sheldon 56, T. S Streveler 9, H. J. Whitten 7, F M. Myers 3, D. W. Whitten 1.

McKibbin hats

A cracking good show of the latest 1927 hits in hatdom.

Fashion decrees swagger effects for dominant youth.

Smith & Skovlin
Belmond, Iowa

CAR OF POULTRY FEED

Start to finish baby chick mash—that red feed—the same kind that we sold last year. It is treated with imported Spanish Oxide of Iron, a pure 96 percent mineral, and contains cod liver oil. Our price this year is right.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER. Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company
PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!
BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

WALL PAPER

We are selling lots of Wall Paper. Remember we trim your paper for you; take back all full rolls. No express or parcel post to pay. One of our customers told us, "I don't see why some people send for Wall Paper when they can buy just as cheap at home, and see what you are getting.

JOHNSON'S WAX ELECTRIC FLOOR POLISHER
$2.00 a Day

With it you can wax polish all your floors in the same time it formerly took to do a single room. Telephone us now and make an appointment to rent this wonderful polisher any day you wish.

PAINTS! VARNISHES! ALABASTINE!
Ask for color cards.
Do your painting now.

Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

This modern age puts Camels first

THIS age tried Camels and placed them first. And it was no half-way verdict. Never in the history of smoking was a cigarette given a leadership like Camel has today.

To find why Camels are the favorite, just try them. You will find the perfect fragrance and taste of choice tobaccos, rarely blended. You will experience a mellow mildness that gives endless cigarette enjoyment!

For the choice of the modern age—"Have a Camel!"

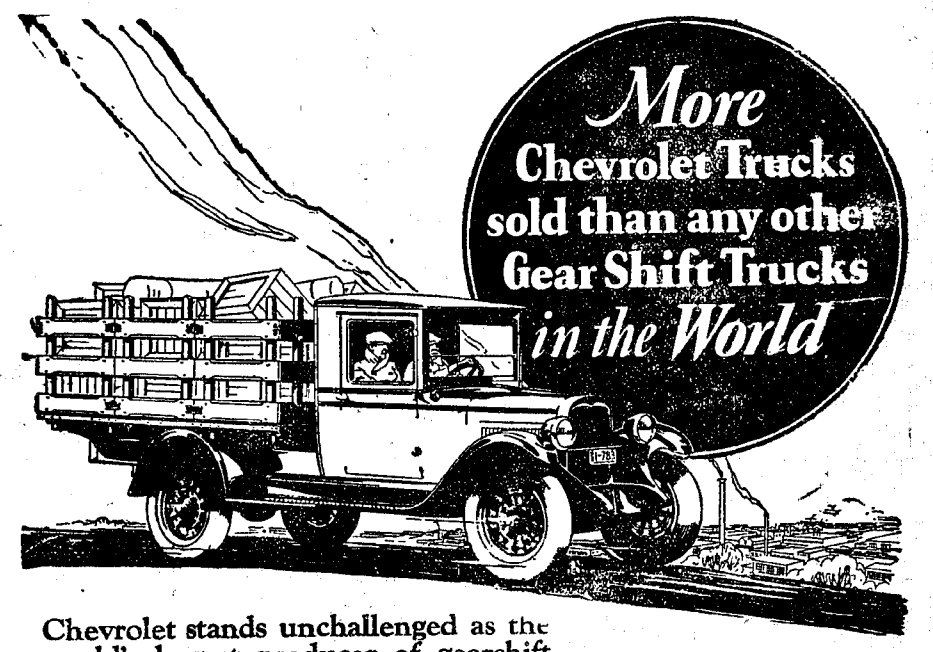
© 1927, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.



Chevrolet stands unchallenged as the world's largest producer of gearshift trucks.

With its powerful valve-in-head motor—now equipped with AC oil filter and AC air cleaner; with a 6-inch channel steel frame, super-rugged rear axle and modern 3-speed transmission, recently improved—it is praised by users everywhere as the greatest commercial car value of all time.

Only the economies of tremendous volume production make possible such super quality at Chevrolet's low prices.

Come in and see the truck that has won worldwide leadership. Learn why it has given such supreme satisfaction to so many users of every type—big fleet operators and individual owners.

for Economical Transportation

CHEVROLET

—at these Low Prices!

1-Ton Truck Stake Body	$680
1-Ton Truck Panel Body	$755
1-Ton Truck Cab and Chassis	$610
1-Ton Truck Chassis	$495
½-Ton Truck Chassis	$395

All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

In addition to these low prices Chevrolet's delivered prices include the lowest handling and financing charges available.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

WORLD'S LOWEST PRICED GEARSHIFT TRUCK

MESERVEY SECTION

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30.

Morning service at 10:30. (German).

Young People's Meeting at 7:15.

Evening service at 8:00.

Catechetical classes Saturday 7:30.

Owing that the pastor has to attend the meeting of the Board of Trustees of Central College next Wednesday, the Senior class in Catechism will meet next Friday at the usual time at the parsonage.

The Dorcas Society will meet next Wednesday evning.

The Ladies Aid met last Thursday. Mrs. Harm J. Pals served refreshments.

The pupils of the Sunday School are kindly requested to bring their mission boxes next Sunday morning to Sunday school. Let us do our part for God's kingdom. Welcome to all.

H. Pannkuk

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Last Thursday evening about 30 relatives and friends met at the M. Halfwasen home to render Mrs. Halfwasen a pleasant surprise, the occasion being her birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in a social way, and refreshments were served.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. H. K. Pals and sons Clarence and Myron were in Mason City Tuesday where the latter had his tonsils and adenoids removed. Mrs. Pals and Myron did not return until Wednesday.

L. B. Hulsebus and family were calling here Tuesday and Friday of last week. On Tuesday Mrs. Hulsebus was a motor passenger to Mason City.

The Legion Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. C. J. Wendel last Friday p. m. for a special meeting and the annual election of officers was held which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. Nelse Faaborg; Vice President, Mrs. H. B. Frey; Secretary, Mrs. Fred Schluter; Treasurer, Mrs. Clarence Ruigh; Chaplain, Mrs. A. E. Muller, Historian, Mrs. C. J. Janssen.

Following the business session refreshments were served by the hostess.

The Misses Tillie Pals and Fannie Bruns were week end visitors at Belmond, with their friend, Miss Minnie Schmidt.

Miss Evelyn Thomas accompanied her sisters Viola and Thelma to Cedar Falls last week to take up her new duties at the State Teachers College.

The Hopkey families from here attended the funeral of the infant child of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hopkey who live in Hampton. The services were held at the Latimer church and interment made there.

Thursday, March 10th, a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Louis Foss, but the little one died Saturday a. m. Thus the joy of the parents was quickly changed to grief and they mourn the loss of their first born.

Brief services were held at the home Sunday afternoon, attended by relatives and a few close friends. Interment was made in the Meservey Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Taulbee motored to Forest City Sunday afternoon to visit at the M. Keeler home.

Mrs. M. Halfwasen left last Monday evening for German Valley, Illinois, in response to a message stating that her father is very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Claus accompanied the latter's brother to Mason City last Thursday from which point he left for Wells, Minnesota, where he makes his home with a brother.

Mrs. B. Vierkant spent the week at the Lloyd Bishop home in Goodell.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bohning of Belmond were visiting at the Frohling home Sunday.

Mrs. H. Wilkins and Mrs. Anna Bunte were in Mason City Monday afternoon, calling on Mrs. Meinderts at the hospital. Friends will be pleased to hear that Mrs. Meinderts was well enough to leave the hospital and is at the home of her daughter near Garner.

Miss Minnie Schmidt of Belmond accompanied Miss Fannie Bruns home last Monday, the latter having spent the week end with her .

H. Dirks and son Teddy and H. F. Reif were Mason City business callers Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dirks and baby accompanied by Mrs. Harm Dirks were in Mason City Monday where the baby received a treatment at the Park hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ralston were Hampton callers last Saturday evening.

The Misses Viola, Evelyn and Thelma Thomas and Clara Herndon of Cedar Falls spent Sunday afternoon at the Thomas home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Halfpop were visiting at the Henry Sprau home in Mason City Sunday afternoon. Their grandson, Warren, returned with them, and they brought Bobby back with them.

Otto Strasburg came here from Ackley Monday and is at the Franz Guth where he will be employed this spring and summer.

H. Fisher left Monday via the auto route for Logan where he will spend the week on business pertaining to his farm.

The school election passed off quietly last Monday and the result was H. Blewitt and F. Guth being re-elected for a term of 3 years.

Wm. Messelheiser and family were privileged to attend the Golden Wedding celebration of the former's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Messelheiser at Hampton, last Monday. The reception was held in the parlors of the M. E. church and a sumptuous dinner was served to the guests. Decorations were in keeping with the occasion. A most enjoyable time is reported. Relatives of the couple presented them with a beautiful Westminster Chimes clock, which they will prize very highly.

M. Halfwasen received word Tuesday that his wife's father had passed away Sunday night. Funeral was held Wednesday.

News About Iowa People And Events

C. H. Zybell, a farmer and stockman residing near Lake City, Calhoun county recently shipped a polled Hereford bull, six months old, to Dr. Doering, of Gilil, Kenya colony, British East Africa. The calf was sent by way of New York, through the Strait of Gibralter, the Mediterranean Sea, the Suez canal, and then through the Indian ocean to its new home in Africa.

* * * *

F. L. Tallmon, secretary of No. III Izaak Walton League of America, Sutherland, O'Brien county, is emphatic in his demands that carp and other "rough" fish be removed from northern Iowa lakes instead of encouraging their increase by the use of large mesh nets in seining under the ice. He believes that the commercialization of soft fish is a bad movement. He estimates that 170,000 or more a year is received for the fish sold and that the state only gets 20 percent of this. Mr. Tallman says that as the carp is the most prolific of all fish, a destroyer of the vegetation so necessary to certain game species, and living in a few feet of muddy slime as satisfactorily as in great depths of clean, pure water, it has thus crowded out the desirable species of fish. In exact ratio as the carp have increased, so have the game fish decreased in these lakes. Last September the writer was at Twin Lakes in Calhoun county. Standing on the shore of the south lake we witnessed an appalling sight—acres and acres of slime carp lolling on the surface of the water, as close together as they could swim.

* * * *

From Spencer, Clay county, comes the information that what is believed to have been the largest delivery of hogs in one day in Spencer by one individual at one time was when J. T. Amis, Greenville horse buyer, brot in 290 head of April pigs and went home with a check totaling $9,339.77. Mr. Amis is considerable of a hog raiser as well as a horse buyer and he raised these pigs on his farm a mile north of Greenville.

* * * *

Here is a report of the activities of a farmer in Grundy county as related by C. J. Adams, of Grundy Center: Frank Severance, who operates a farm a half mile north of Grundy Center, sold approximately $15,000 worth of live stock from his farm during the past year. Of this total there were about $9,000 worth of hogs and $6,000 worth of cattle. All of the hogs were bred and raised on Mr. Severance's farm. He still has 150 hogs left on hisplace.

A human interest story is related by S. D. Henry, of Coon Rapids, Carroll county, who says that there is a remarkable coincident in the lives of C. E. Morris and Worth Smith, old settlers, who died recently. Both these men petitioned for membership in th Masonic order December 1st, 1874. Were taken into membership in the Blue lodge at the same meeting and later given the degrees in the Chapter, Commandery and Shriners also at the same meetings, and, at last dying on the same day and in the same afternoon, but about three hours apart. Mr. Henry says that both had contributed in a large way to the upbuilding and betterment of the community in which they resided.

* * * *

Friction between the dairy interests and the beef producers developed when Senator C. A. Benson, of Clayton county, introduced a bill in the Iowa senate providing for a tax of one-half cent a pound on oleomargarine from all sections of the country sent protests against the bill by telegram and by mail and special represenatives were quickly on the ground to prevent if possible favorable action on the measure. The dairy cattle interests, favoring the measure are aligned against the beef cattle interests, opposing it. The dairy interests want the bill as a protection to butter sales and the beef cattle raisers oppose it because oleomargarine furnishes a market for tallow, a beef by-product. No oleo is manufactured in the state, this being prohibited by law, which also forbids the sale of the product if it has been colored to appear as butter. Estimates place the amount of oleomargarine consumed in Iowa at somewhat in excess of 5,000,000 pounds annually.

* * * *

Cyrenus Cole, born at Pella, Marion county and now representing the Fifth Iowa district in congress, in writing to the home folks in Cedar Rapids, tells of his work in an endeavor to boost the manufacture of building board and paper from corn stalks: "I have had as my special assistant this week, Dean A. Marston of the college at Ames. A month ago President Knapp and Prof. O. R. Sweeney of the college here and we laid before Secretary Hoover and Director Burgess of the bureau of standards the results of Prof. Sweeney's researches into the utilization of corn stalks, corn cobs, and other wastes. I am making this my principal work in this session. We want to make paper from cornstalks and we want the national government to help a bit. Mr. Hoover, who was born among the cornstalks of Cedar county, was for it at once. We got President Coolidge for it too. And thrugh him got in the budget.

* * * *

When Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist from Los Angeles, whose sensational experiences in recent months made her a world wide character, concluded her services in Des Moines she owed the Coliseum company $600 rent. This she paid from the collections received Sunday. She turned that amount over just in the manner it was received in the collection pans, pennies, nickles, dimes and other denominations of coin of the realm. The amount weighed 41 pounds.

BETTER HAVE THAT
Spring Suit
Cleaned and Pressed
Men's Suits....$1.50 a Suit
Ladies' Suits $2.00 and Up
Ladies' Coats $1.75 and Up

H. F. REIF
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone—Residence 17 Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

This coupon and 25c entitle the undersigned to one 35c can of Acme Quality Enamel-Kote, any color, and a special 20c Paint Brush.
Name_____
Address_____
To acquaint you with Acme Quality, we are making a special offer for a short time only.
SPECIAL OFFER 55c Value for 25c

New colors—new beauty for faded furniture

To prove the remarkable ease with which you can renew a worn and faded piece of furniture with Acme Quality Enamel-Kote, we make this special offer for a limited time.

Look around you now. What small piece of furniture have you that needs refinishing? Make up your mind, then tear out the coupon above, sign your name and address on it in pencil, bring it in and get the special 55c combination of Enamel-Kote and brush.

We make the offer only because we want you to get acquainted with the wonderful finishing qualities of the world-renowned

ACME QUALITY Paint and Varnish

Sign the coupon and bring it to our store.
C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

TWO-PANTS SUITS

$35
Others $40, $45 and $50

A Special Feature for Spring, 1927

There are two-pants suits priced at less; others priced at more—but—

This "$35 Special" is the biggest dollar-for-dollar value in our whole Spring stock, and we believe, in the whole town.

Come in and see these suits—their all-wool materials, smart styles, attractive patterns—compare them with any suit value you have seen this Spring. They're exceptional two-pants suits for $35.

The Season's Newest Topcoats $30

You're likely to be caught out in nasty weather. Sunshine, showers and biting winds are all mixed together to make up Spring weather.

But why worry? Carry one of these light-weight wrinkle- shower- and wind-proof Spring Topcoats and you'll be ready whatever comes. Surprisingly convenient to carry over your arm on a warm day. Mighty comfortable on your back in cold or rain.

New Hats, Caps, Shirts, Hosiery, Underwear

You'll Find Style, Variety and Value Here

PATTON BROTHERS CO
9 and 11 South Federal Ave.
Where a dollar does its duty
MASON CITY, IOWA

The Spirit of Fairness

THE greatest asset of any bank is its dependability and if any one quality more than any other assists a bank in establishing a reputation for dependability it is that of "fairness."

That is why this bank has exerted every effort to carry into its daily transaction with patrons a spirit of fairness---fairness to its depositors, fairness to its borrowers, and fairness to itself.

In the same spirit of fairness we should appreciate larger balances in those of our checking accounts that have been carried at a loss.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

A GOODELL STORE ROBBED

The business section of Goodell has been once again visited by robbers. Saturday night the W. L. Thada store was broken into, entrance being made through the basement window. Two leather coats were stolen and perhaps other things which could not be noticed. Sunday night following, the Wesenberg hardware store was broken into but as yet Mr. Wesenberg has not noticed what was taken.

Supt. and Mrs. Blue autoed to Hampton Saturday taking their little daughter Darlen Jane to the hospital for an examination.

Mrs. Met Avery entertained several friends at her home Thursday P. M. The ladies enjoyed a pleasant time and a delicious lunch.

Mrs. Albertina Lemke of Garner is spending a few weeks with her daughter, Mrs. W. T. Beier.

Mrs. Pete Lackore underwent a successful operation for appepndicitis at the Seetle hospital last Thurs-Thursday. She is getting along nicely at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Markel are enjoying a visit with the latter's sister Addie and husband from Ft. Dodge.

Mr. and Mrs. Knudsen of Story County visted the latter portion of the week at the Homer Ness home.

Tauge Matson returned Saturday from Illinois where he has spent the past ten days on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Buss of near Alexander spent Tuesday here in interest of their hay crop which was stored on the Sandrey farm. They were accompanied here by several neighbors who assisted them in hauling their hay to their new home. They were entertained at the E. C. Kienenberger home.

Mrs. Harry Bonwell of Renwick, is spending a couple of weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Ahrenkiel, helping them get settled in their town property.

Lyle LaRue returned Monday from Buffalo Center. He visted over Sunday with friends there.

Mrs. Matt Smith of Meservey came Friday and visited until Sunday with her mother, Mrs. J. Ahrenkiel.

The Earl Ruka family went to Cedar Rapids Friday to spend a few days with relatives.

Twin Lake and Avery township farm bureau ladies met Wednesday for an all day meeting at the Chelsvig hotel. Miss Merle Ramer of Ames was present and spent the forenoon in giving a lesson in basket weaving and the afternoon lesson was on home dyeing. A large crowd attended and enjoyed the lessons and picnic lunch at noon.

Miss Clara Christie returned Wednesday from Garner where she has been the past four weeks helping to care for her aunt, Mrs. Polly Christie who has been quite sick. The fore part of the week Clara went to Clear Lake, where she has a position.

Mr. and Mrs. Kahrs of Ventura Sundayed at the Will Lamer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bishop and Descom spent Sunday at Belmond with Lloyd's home folks.

Mrs. Georgia Galbraith of Cedar Falls came Thursday and visited until Sunday with her cousins, Mesdames Conklin and Henry Christenson.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Deiger spent Thursday and Friday at the Hampton hospital where Mr. Deiger had a physical examination.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McNutt entertained a crowd of friends at their home Friday eve.

Mrs. Ahrenkiel and daughters, Mrs. Smith of Meservey and Louise spent Saturday with Belmond relatives.

The Otto Neuhring family and Alfred Neuhring of near Klemme, moved last week to the farm vacated by Elmer Boren.

Ava and Katherine Sandry, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sandry have been dangerously ill the past week suffering with measles which developed into pnemonia. Little hopes were held for their recovery but we are very glad to report they are a little better at this writing.

A large crowd attended the Junior Class program given at the High School Friday evening. It consisted of several musical numbers and a play entitled, "The Hoosier School Boy," which were all very good. After the program a basket social was held with Adrian Bielefeldt as auctioneer. Prizes were given to the two prettiest baskets. Lela Griggs received first, and Iris Sherwood, second. Beautiful linen handkerchiefs were awarded as prizes. About $26 was realized.

A post nuptial shower was given Friday afternon in honor of Mrs. Harry Newgard who was before her marriage Miss Alva Matson. About thirty five lady friends gahtered in the dining room of the U. B. church, and the inclement weather kept several more from attending. About 2:30 the bride was escorted to the church and there was a complete surprise awaiting her. The afternoon spent socially and in hemming dish towels for Alva. Mrs. Scott gave a very appropriate little talk telling the appreciation to Mrs. Newgard for the work she has done in the church and the high esteem which is held for her in this community. She presented her with a beautiful electric toaster and casserole, given by her many friends. A delicious luncheon consisting of pimento cheese sandwiches, olives, angel and devil food cake, coffee and pine apple sherbert was served at the close of a pleasant afternoon. The committee in charge of this shower was Mesdames J. E. Savogue, G. E. Snearly, Chris Deiger and Amos Hanson.

Miss Hilma Burgess who has been doing practice teaching at Mason City returned the fore part of the week to Cedar Falls to finish her two year primary course.

Mrs. Glen Avery and Marjorie spent the week end at the Ed Bachman home near Garner.

Miss Viola Hood of Des Moines came last week to visit her sister, Mrs. Bielefeldt.

The Harvey Christenson family went to Mason City Saturday to see her father, Mr. Wigfield, who has been a patient in the hospital there. He was able to return home to Thompson and is feeling much better.

Miss Nettie Thada visited at Garner a few days last week with her sister Mrs. Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill of Clarion spent Thursday with their daughter, Mrs. Ed Hemenway.

The Hot Lunch in the Goodell school will be continued for about three more weeks. It has proved to be a paying and beneficial proposition.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Church and children of Clear Lake enjoyed a week end visit with Goodell relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson are enjoying a visit with her father who came Friday from Chicago.

The high school and town base ball teams will play a game on Friday at 3:45 p. m.

Mrs. Will Parker and two children of Belmond visited Friday with her sister in law, Mrs. Cashman.

The grammar rooms are busy getting ready to enter the spelling contest which will be held in the near future.

The Literary society will give a program March 25. The best selections from their literary work this year will be given and promises to be worth your time to attend.

In the rural school election last Monday the following were elected Frank Quigley Sr., school 3 miles north west, Arthur Lowenberg, 3 miles north east, Earl Ruka 3 miles west and Charlie Halfpop 3 miles east.

CHURCH NOTES

The second quarterly business meeting for the church was held at the parsonage on Wednesday fevening.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. William Aldinger and Mrs. Clarence Murphy of Hampton were callers in town the first of the week.

Miss Shenkle, Miss Tucker, Miss Husband, and Miss Slickerveer were Hampton callers Saturday.

Miss Wilma Foughty of Iowa Falls was a visitor here over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Claas Symens, Ethel Schulte and Erma Bell were Hampton shoppers Saturday.

Miss Addie Larson and son Jack were visiting relatives at Hampton several days the past week.

Will Foughty was a business caller at Iowa Falls Friday.

Lloyd Green had business at Hampton Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Butler and sons Edwin and John visited with relatives here on Sunday.

Mrs. Jesse Latham went to the hospital at Hampton Sunday for treatments.

William Foughty was at Hampton Thursday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. George Dirkson and Mrs. J. C. Arends were Belmond callers Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Klinefelter and family were over to Dows on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Flynn and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Kennedy of Belmond were visiting at the Leslie Reed home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodemeyer and family were at Iowa Falls Sunday.

Mr. Braden of Dows was a caller here Tuesday.

Lewis B. Bell transacted business at Belmond Wednesday.

Ole Dirkson of Ames visited at the home of his brother George a few days the past week.

Mrs. Charlie Winwood and son Kenneth returned home Sunday from Iowa Falls where they have been visiting the past week with Mrs. Winwoods' parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Yaw. Mr. Yaw has been very poor of health.

John Dirksen of Ontario, Calif., spent a few days in town the past week visiting relatives and calling on old friends. Mr. Dirksen came to attend the funeral of his father in law, Mr. M. De Bour of Hampton. Mr. De Bour passed away on his way home from California where he had been spending the winter.

Mr. H. J. Friesleben enjoyed a surprise in honor of his birthday, Sunday evening, when a party of thirty five relatives and friends gathered at his home. A two course dinner was served.

Mr. Kelley of Forest City has been transacting business in town the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Tucker and daughters Hazel and Lois were visitors at the John Bell home Sunday.

Mrs. Lewis Bell and daughter Dorothy Ellen spent the week end at Hampton at the homes of Mrs. Bell's sisters, Mrs. Harry Hardy, and Mrs. Vernon Finkle.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Leebrick, were Hampton callers Saturday evening.

UNITED CHURCH

Lewis N. Moody, Pastor.

All services next Sunday at the usual hours.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the Red and Blue contest in the Sunday School. The Reds are a little ahead at present.

The Ladies Aid will meet on Wednesday afternoon, March 23. Hostesses, Miss Jessie Bell and Mrs. Ed Richards.

ALEXANDER SCHOOL NOTES

The Alethean Literary Society will give a Book program Friday afternoon at 2:30, March 18.

The eighth grade are studying the classic Evangeline.

Coming March 22nd, "Pals First." Don't miss this picture.

Fire Drill was held last Monday and the building was cleared in the quick time of 40 seconds.

The reserved seats for the Faculty play "Three Pegs" are being rapidly taken. One of the largest crowds of the season is expected.

The local basket ball teams had a very successful basketball season, although the girls' record is not as impressive a the boys'. The boys' first team played 18 games during the regular season, winning eleven games and scoring a total of 316 points to the opponents 291. The boys second team played three games winning two for a total of 42 points to the opponents 31. The girls tied one game, won four and lost eight games, scoring a total of 228 points to the opponents 406.

The boys have not fully decided what sports they will play this spring as there is both a calling for track and baseball.

The Junior Class are beginning to work on their play "Borrowed Money" which is to be given April 22nd.

The Junior and Senior classes in English have just taken up the study of the classic "The Piper."

ROWAN TEAM BEATS GENEVA

The Rowan boys won over Geneva boys in the basket ball game at the school house Wednesday evening, the score being 17 to 15. The Rowan girls basket ball team was entered in the tournament at Hampton Friday and Saturday and played Shell Rock losing with a score of 22 to 38. This closes the basket ball season. Out of the 13 games played this season the Rowan girls have won 7.

The Parent Teachers meeting was held at the school house Tesday evening of this week. The program was given by the parents and was very interesting. After the program, games were played and refreshments were served.

Chas. Rowen and his mother, Mrs. Jennie Rowen went to Clarion to spend some time with their sister and daughter, Mrs. Cady Templeton. Chas. is recuperating from his recent illness.

The scarlet fever quarantine was lifted from the Braden home Saturday. The teachers who have been staying at the F. M. Myers home returned to Mrs. Braden's. The scarlet fever scare seems to have died out, no new cases have developed.

Miss Martha Ruby returned to her school duties Monday. Miss Ilo Anderson who supplied for her returned to her work in Des Moines.

Miss Dolly Duffy arrived home from Cedar Falls where she has been attending State Normal school. She is driving the school bus for her father this week.

Miss Marion Trask is ill at her home near Eagle Grove. Mrs. Clint Kercheval has charge of the primary and the first grades during her absence.

Dallas Conn of Des Moines was the Sunday guest of his sister, Mrs. D. W. Whitten.

Francis Farran arrived home the first part of the week from Jesup, where she is teaching. She will spend the week with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Sullivan and Beverly Rae arrived from Fort Dodge Sunday to visit at the parental Fletcher home. Mr. Sullivan went to Mason City Monday, and Mrs. Sullivan and the baby visited at the Tim Weld home near Clarion before returning to Fort Dodge.

The W. C. T. U. ladies met with Mrs. J. S. Farran Wednesday afternoon with Miss Nora Shaffer as leader. The ladies are planning a special program to be given next Tuesday evening, March 21. An out of town speaker is expected at this meeting.

Glen and Lorne Liming attended a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs. Joe Jackson (nee Caroline Brinkman) at the Brinkman home near Dows, Wednesday evening. Mrs. Jackson received many beautiful and useful presents.

The members of the boys and girls basket ball teams and others dropped in Monday evening and remanded DeRush Hughes that it was his birthday. The evening was spent in playing social games and refreshments were served at the close of the evening's fun.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Keith and Margaret spent Sunday at the D. H. Keith home in Goldfield.

The Methodist Ladies Aid Society meets Thursday afternoon with Mrs. D. E. Harris, Mrs. Sim Stout as assistant hostess.

Messrs. Nels Olson and Sim Stout went into Chicago Saturday with a car load of hogs.

James Kercheval of Wellsburg was the guest of his parents, Saturday. He came over from Hampton, where the Wellsburg basket ball teams were entered in the tournament.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Liming returned the fore part of the week from Marva, Illinois, where they had been during the illness and death of Mr. Liming's father. His brother Clifford of Hubbard, and sisters, Mrs. Rosman Simpson of Corwith and Mrs. Edna Brown of Quitman, Montana, returned with them.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Tutin, of Pierre, South Dakota, and Mrs. Hannah Whitten and Laurel were guests at the H. J. Whitten home Tuesday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Tutin departed Thursday morning on their homeward trip.

Laurence Retleff who has been very ill with typhoid fever is resting well at this writing.

The basket social which was postpined from last week will be held at the school house in Morgan No. 3, Friday evening, March 18. Miss Laura Aldinger teacher, has charge of the program.

The Foreign Missionary women will have charge of the services at the M. E. church next Sunday morning in honor of Founder's Day in the Society. The annual Thank offering will be taken.

Mesdames Sim Stout, D. K. Stout and Wilbur Utz and Ina Stumph were Clarion shoppers Monday afternoon. The latter remained for the evening at the J. E. Miller home.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bohlen of

(Continued on page three.)

Kinseth's Store News

Well, what kind of a ticket did you get from the fire inspectors? They were a nice lot of fellows, and we're glad they came. One of our 42c brooms will help you clean things up and you'll find they are worth the money, too.

We have so many good bargains for you that space will not permit listing them all. Just as a sample here are a few.

Oranges 29c a dozen.

Corn 9c a can, special for Saturday only.

Chamberlain's Chick Feeds.

Oyster shells.

Oatmeal in bulk at a nice saving.

Sno Bread Flour, $2.35. Guaranteed.

Preserves—here's a good one—regular 28c size now selling at 19c a jar.

Ladies' stockings, 19c a pair.

Percales 19c a yard.

Milk and cream from our new iceless refrigerator.

Dozens of other savings here. Come in and see them. Remember the Store on the Corner gives service as good as its merchandise, and you're always welcome in our store whether you buy or not. Make it your headquarters while down town.

Special Cash Offers!

For the week of March 21-26 we offer the following reduced prices:

FLOUR—Seal of Minnesota $2.45, Clear Quill $2.45, Guaranteed $2.15, and Sunkist $2.15.

BIG THREE NO. 10 CAN FRUIT—Blackberries 86c, Apricots 77c, Peaches 65c, Gooseberries 70c, Pineapple 80c.

GENUINE OLD HICKORY SMOKED SALT, 10 lbs. $1.00.

CHOICE PEA GREEN 3rd CUTTING LEAFY ALFALFA HAY, $26.50 per ton.

Full line of Feeds, Seeds, Wire, Coal, Salt, and General Merchandise, including Sterling Poultry Feeds, Swift's Tankage, Dickinson's Seeds, Star Fence, Plymouth Twine, and Red Top Posts.

Highest Prices Paid for Grain—Give Us A Trial.

FARMERS CO-OPERATIVE COMPANY

J. A. OLSON, Mgr.

Office Phones: Clarion 54F32; Rowan 7406
Residence Phone: Clarion 25F11. Solberg, Iowa

Spring Suits and Top Coats

IN NEW COLLEGIATE MODELS

FANCY WEAVE PATTERNS

WONDERFUL TAILORING

Moderately Priced

$25 $30 $35

SMITH SERVICE & SKOVLIN SATISFACTION

Phone 50 Belmond, Iowa

5%

FARM LOANS

COST REDUCED BY DIVIDENDS

LOWEST RATE OFFERED FARMERS

GET YOUR FARM LOAN IN THIS GREAT CO-OPERATIVE FARM LOAN BANK

THE FEDERAL LAND BANK OF OMAHA

CALL OR WRITE STATE BANK OF BELMOND BELMOND, IOWA

Your Cream

Represents so much money to you. Each pound of cream is worth a certain amount of money. The question is: Are you getting all the money your cream is worth?

When you sell your cream to the creamery you are patronizing yourself—for the Creamery is your business. And you are getting more money for your cream at the creamery—the full market price, plus the profit at the end of the month.

It is good business to get every cent your product is worth. Bring your cream to the Creamery and get it.

FARMERS CREAMERY CO.

BELMOND, IOWA

Wright County Board Proceedings

Clarion, Iowa,
February 19, 1927.

The Board of Supervisors of the County of Wright, in the state of Iowa, met at the court house in Clarion, Iowa, as per adjournment.

Members present, E. E. Kitley, Chairman, and Supervisors James Mehl, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder and J. D. Baker, with the County Auditor in attendance.

Minutes of February 11, 1927, read and approved.

Moved and seconded that the chairman be and he is hereby authorized to sign contract with the Reliable Accounting and Research Company, when legality of contract has been approved by L. N. Archerd.

Roll call resulted, Aye: Mehl, Baker and Kitley; Nay: Peterson and Schroeder. Call carried and on motion was declared adopted.

Moved and seconded that Schroeder be authorized to purchase five corners on the county road south of Dows. Motion carried.

The following patrolmen were appointed for the 1927 season and their bonds fixed at $500.00 each:

Claude Thayer, Lismore Stole, A. B. Stole, Harvey Caquelin, Raymond Caquelin, Shelby Wilcox, A. C. Anderson and Harry Daggett.

Moved and seconded that the action of the Board on February 9, 1927, relative to the Spencer gravel assessment in Secondary Road District No. 28, be rescinded and that said assessment be reduced 42½ per cent.

Roll call resulted: all present voted aye; Nay, none. Call carried and on motion was declared adopted.

The following Township Clerk's annual reports of expenditures were presented, examined and on motion ordered filed:

BOONE TOWNSHIP

W. A. Engh	$ 10.00
C. A. Walker	1.75
Rasmus Hanson	109.01
Wright County Treasurer	2196.59
M. B. Richardson Co.	21.19
G. A. Ballard	5.00
E. A. Simpson	224.43
S. A. Palmer	19.30
J. F. Kelling	36.00
R. Hanson	12.00
W. A. Fisher	5.20
C. A. Simpson	4.16
Wisconsin Lumber Co.	2.20
Joe Gangstead	13.32
Henry W. Eastman	54.45
O. A. Engstrom	12.50
H. E. Goettsch	4.00
M. J. Siemens	342.21
J. D. Adams Co.	456.83
Will Pogge	105.30
Peter Ruiter	52.45
B. J. Siemens	34.67
Farmers Exchange Co.	37.58
H. Brummond	883.50
S. J. Packard	367.75
Erwin Bros.	3.50
Carl Nerem	20.89
Julius Voss	6.47
T. S. Smallwood	3.00
J. E. Voss	39.00
Wm. Hoffman	13.65
Rex Simpson	37.30
Yeakel & Mullen	4.75
H. Ennenga	3.75
E. N. Engh	57.22
M. M. Martin	43.50
Alfred Kleen	15.60
A. C. Simpson	34.80
Guy Hanson	35.40
W. H. Helmke	38.40
R. R. Blesie	29.60
W. J. White	109.95
First National Bank	.60
J. DeWaard	38.40
Liberty Township	31.50
Chas. Fisher	93.40
Black and Chensky	6.50
Emery N. Engh	19.50
John Kiley	58.50
A. H. Kleen	5.40
J. M. Bennett	61.39
Geo. Riekens	9.62
C. C. Heggen	9.00
Moe and Nelson	2250.00
C. Shurman	100.00
O. Engstrom	21.25
John Pehl	9.30

BELMOND TOWNSHIP

Harold Simerson	$ 9.00
B. Springer	55.90
A. P. Lonning	99.50
Harry Slining	3.94
Hub Motor Co.	1.00
Geo. Potts	6.17
W. J. McLaughlin	887.20
R. D. Box	228.68
Johnson & Wright	29.76
R. A. Neuhring	10.00
G. Holverson	100.15
Ed Thompson	144.75
A. E. Thompson	6.00
C. J. Johnson	40.00
Dan Fjetland	211.30
Jas. Kurtz	12.00
Art Ruka	17.50
L. H. Johnson	37.50
G. Holverson to H. H. Eide	8.75
J. R. Christie	188.37
Art Grindem	21.00
Henry Grindem	30.00
Harry Ruka	17.60
Irving Thompson	60.00
Melvin Soma	64.60
Aug. Hunst	5.42
Savings Bank to B. Springer	5.10
Lud Johnson	17.50
Thos. Wilson	166.55
Loyd Van Buskirk	10.00
H. A. Nelson	39.00
G. H. Mikesh	50.50
Belmond Lbr. Co.	36.57
R. Thompson	12.00
C. Schmelz	3.00
Remy Hunst	43.34
Chas. Kennenberger	16.00
Geo. Christianson	8.00
Moe and Nelson	687.34
W. A. Parsons	2.97
H. H. Eide	1305.00
J. D. Adams & Co.	27.40
Loyd Holverson	27.25
W. D. Schleiffarth	64.50
Wm. Walrod	4.50
Belmond Independent	5.00
Klipto Loose Leaf Co.	1.30
J. N. Soma	152.16
Ed Gunderson	5.00
H. H. Rierson	45.62
Carlton Johnson	46.25
C. R. Pierce	6.00
Glen Baker	2.25
Harley Thompson	9.00
Geo. T. Johnson	30.35
Wright County	655.00
Shupe & Son	19.55
Joe Larson	11.70
Harold Simerson	12.50
E. Ellingston	146.44
H. B. Hallock	710.04

BLAINE TOWNSHIP

Lyle Davis	$ 3.00
Thos. Ross	12.50
Henry LaRue	1629.17
Clate Sanders	37.25
Thompson Ross	250.45
Frank Sellers	26.25
F. M. Meyers	384.70
Co. Treas.	100.50
John Heiden	53.60
H. D. Tudor	52.99
Orville Ahrends	138.25
O. P. Hackbarth	125.11
J. E. Baines	24.00
A. T. DeNio	10.00
H. G. Buehler	74.96
E. J. Schroder	138.75
M. A. Carpenter	23.50
H. Kinghorn	1.75
R. Brinkman	136.90
Wayne Boyington	12.00
Farmers Grain & Lbr. Co.	1.20
J. E. Patterson	227.50
Gilbert Johnson	80.71
Fred Weideman	50.00
G. E. Patterson	13.50
W. Z. Boyington	333.65
Lampert Lbr. Co.	121.00
Steenblock Hardware Co.	2.45
Wm. Howell	15.00
A. C. Anderson	2.50
W. S. Brady	2.20
Gail V. Cundall	55.12
W. Boyington	260.00
Earl Butler	37.87
E. R. Rosburg	53.63
Lewis Musson	59.50
Howard Meeker	41.50
O. C. Sime	47.04
J. D. Adams & Co.	8.08
State Savings Bank	8.00
L. R. Fitz	476.60
H. Buechler	3.96
Henry Welzein	11.10
G. F. Quasdorf	30.25
Laurel Hill	7.50
Fleming Evans	8.00
C. Hill	20.00
Ed Jones	28.40
Leo Woods	18.00
Hans Marker	2.50
Irvin Knuths	49.50
S. K. Bach	4.00
Ida Ryder	5.50
H. F. Kersey	6.00

DAYTON TOWNSHIP

Will Gray	$ 62.25
Joe Johnson	27.30
Ole Aukland	12.38
Ed. Campbell	21.50
Wm. J. Hagie	102.14
T. J. Henry	1.50
Ralph Fisher	4.20
J. D. Adams Co.	355.10
Raymond Hagie	5.00
Roy Conklin	16.50
Dale Benson	6.00
Chas. Beyers	370.04
Art Jergensen	6.00
J. M. Bennett	4.00
W. R. Coulter	15.00
J. D. Adams & Co.	7.99
A. J. Henely	9.45
W. A. Schaumberg	169.30
J. S. Ross	106.45
Oved Watson	16.85
Will Larick	12.35
John Wanken	47.25
Wanken Bros.	3.35
Wilber Seifert	48.25
J. H. Wanken	4.50
John Ross	97.70
Bert Pletcher	30.00
W. R. Wilson	1.00
Clyde Ross	4.20
W. E. Pletcher	8.00
C. L. Watson	16.00
A. Watkins	31.20
J. Nichols	38.25
T. L. Thompson	104.00
N. G. Lokerse	1110.50
Milo Swanger	51.00
Shupe & Son	5.00
E. W. Yocum	106.20
Willie Larrick	17.20
Matt Parrott & Sons	.67
J. A. Matheson	21.00
Walt Pletcher	10.00
E. E. Wolf	11.50

EAGLE GROVE TOWNSHIP

Raymond Paine	$ 172.18
Will Young	72.20
France Warner	97.89
John Gangstead	677.00
Peter Axon	72.75
J. A. Matheson	4.00
Ross Henry	23.32
W. W. Frakes	4.80
Henry Imboden	62.00
Orin Byro	6.62
Lynn Paine	41.90
Eagle Grove Eagle	7.75
W. A. Thomason	4.50
John Oldaker	3.00
S. J. Shurson	24.38
Fred Ruleman	10.20
County Treasurer	448.65
City of Eagle Grove	367.17
Joe Gangestad	20.75
Blewett Hardware Co.	7.58
Nels N. Roseland	117.50
Homer Newcomb	3.00
County Auditor	1122.50
W. R. Blake Lbr. Co.	7.50
Clifford Hill	9.00
Chapman Lbr. Co.	14.70
W. B. Porter	18.50
Carl B. Mosher	15.37
Maurice Gangestad	29.62
Tom Wagner	5.00
Harold Roseland	7.50
Joe Roseland	7.50
Herman Heggebo	1043.63
J. M. Bennett	99.36
Lewis Knutson	84.00
Troy Township	5.60
Matt Parrott & Sons	1.43
Hans Shurson	264.05
Donald Paine	2.75
W. H. McCutcheon	27.55
Roy Axon	14.52
H. O. Larson	102.81
Marathon Oil Co.	550.00
Geo. H. Bernard	11.05
Henry T. Larson	3.00
Thomas Wagner	34.87
C. H. Hansen	22.87
Mrs. John Roseland	44.50
G. L. Trask	23.75
Lester Olson	27.00
Tobias Raulson	31.87
S. B. Paine	18.75
Clara Kennedy	4.00
J. Conger	1.12
Elmer Coltvet	3.00
Walter Tilton	43.75
Chas. Mickelson	6.00
Wallace Harvey	4.80
Al Watkins	10.75
Henry Derscheid	11.25
Winfield Comstock	78.38
George Axon	161.16
Albert Marcks	8.28
Truck No. 4	1.01
Alfred Otteros	98.69
James Imboden	9.38
C. J. Crovisier	5.62

GRANT TOWNSHIP

E. A. Paulson	123.70
Virgil Woodin	156.20
August Hunst	16.00
D. Legge	9.50
County Treasurer	221.98
E. G. Reed	145.55
Alf Huntley	103.60
L. V. Lathrop	44.00
A. D. Tucker	89.20
O. Sebert	3.00
K. Wig	152.00
Templeton & Wilson	25.50
Belmond Township	62.50
W. J. McLoughlin	20.80
Cato C. Griesy	5.64
Lincoln Road Machine Co.	350.09
W. H. Hardy	56.68
Frank Lester	15.70
Alfred Didio	132.40
R. Thompson	16.00
Jas. Bennett	28.40
H. O. Woodley	85.00
H. H. Eide	850.00
Jas. Babcock	44.45
Joe. Bowman	22.00
Harry Sorenson	57.00
R. M. Tomlinson	21.60
M. E. Hill	54.50
J. C. Woodin	36.00
O. Bennett	6.00
H. H. Eide	610.00
Shupe & Son	69.77
Carl Vink	20.00
E. S. Brooks	2.38
Jim Quigley	51.20
A. M. Axen	101.06
Johnson & Wright	8.30
H. E. Hill	20.40
Wright County	150.00

IOWA TOWNSHIP

W. J. Peddle	5.25
Moellering Bros.	70.69
S. F. Stout	54.10
American Legion	6.00
J. C. Simon	87.80
L. R. Fitz	2285.65
W. C. Tyrrell	18.95
State Savings Bank	3547.36
Matt Parrott & Sons	6.67
Jens N. Kjar	26.25
J. E. Rowen	156.54
Dan Fletcher	107.60
Russell Grader Co.	24.80
Geo. Lineweaver	174.50
S. D. Hinckley	489.02
C. W. Moellering	90.75
Peter B. Kalkwarf	11.25
Edgar Mantle	3.00
T. S. Streveler	72.27
J. D. Adams & Co.	7.50
H. J. Peddle	18.00
Leo D. Veeder	61.46
Wm. Retleff	55.74
W. J. Peddle	106.00
R. H. Keith	268.00
Harry Cain	6.50
Chas. Hopkey	81.55
H. E. Lineweaver	49.30
Harvey Lineweaver	25.00
Wm. Bailey, Jr.	5.25
W. C. Bailey	10.25
J. B. Sheffield	18.24
Frank Retleff	14.00
L. L. Luick	7.50
Whitten & Huber	18.35
Rowan Lbr. Co.	89.73
J. E. Easton	205.25

LAKE TOWNSHIP

Bank of Holmes	440.63
Geo. Bronleewe	47.25
N. G. Lokerse	870.00
Oley Anfinson	36.75
J. A. Matheson	20.00
Shupe & Son	5.75
H. P. Pick	87.73
H. Mikelson	169.33
Wm. Larson	55.30
Sam Thompson	10.00
John Larson	33.75
J. F. Lynch	8.00
A. H. Worra	123.31
Geo. Mechem	8.70
Ben Johnson	52.30
Otto Tegland	42.85
Wm. Hagie	182.40
O. Tegland	48.35
H. Micheals	42.08
H. M. Mikelson	66.20
Matt Parrott & Sons	1.96
J. M. Kotler	4.50
Lewis Larson	1.50
C. R. I. & P. Ry.	1.13
S. W. Pinkham	5.00
W. R. Coulter	66.60
Olaf Anderson	1.88
Toby Erickson	8.68
Carlson & Champlin	1.50
Ross Pardun	6.00
Cliff Robb	58.12
John Johns	18.00
E. E. Wolf	22.00
Alfred Pehl	12.00
Howard Helgevold	2.00
Anton Jorgenson	20.25
Ben Bronleewe	11.25
Henry Johnson	3.00
A. Thompson	.80
Edd Thompson	2.00
Wiert Johnson	2.40
Chas. Gross	24.60

LIBERTY TOWNSHIP

Jones Lbr. Co.	13.46
Whyte & Son	11.30
Horace Burnett	10.40
Warren Vest	978.30
C. M. Clausen	152.79
Matt Parrott & Sons	.67
Ross Henry	40.67
Horace Burnett	107.25
Clarence Zinser	5.20
Clifford Olson	78.00
John Schnell	529.16
Standard Oil Co.	5.35
Whyte Motor Co.	6.00
E. Robb	18.20
Roy Hildebrand	105.30
Geo. Ressinger	100.00
Willard Jones	9.73
Ross Henry	24.43
John McCutcheon	70.04
G. M. Ressinger	108.65
J. D. Adams & Co.	7.50
Ernie Robb	23.40
Carl Nerem	26.00
Goldfield Brick & Tile Co.	143.68
Glen Burnett	36.40
J. A. Matheson	15.90
E. Vest	6.00
Geo. Kelling	18.00
E. M. Jones	6.00
C. H. Hanson	15.60
N. S. Nelson	9.10
Robb Richard	9.70
Earl Prettyman	16.25
Rudy Blessie	83.50
Lorence Nerem	49.50
J. Nerem	27.00
Carl Nerem	36.55
Paul Voss	12.50
Sam Omstad	2.50
Osmund Amerson	19.50
Edgar Xanders	11.05
E. L. Shoen	17.55
Blewett Hardware Co.	.85
J. A. Conger	72.98
Geo. Martin	64.38
A. A. McCurry	36.25
Fred Bjornson	18.81
John Bosworth	1.95

LINCOLN TOWNSHIP

H. C. Lord	667.95
Chas. Strait	2.70
Ora White	54.00
Shupe & Son	128.46
Fred Morford	127.10
Leo Woodley	19.35
Wm. Hersey	187.80
Bert Arnold	85.55
C. Passwater	41.40
Frank Sellers	37.35
Ed Burke	69.40
J. G. Williams	415.05
Sam Murphy	24.30
C. N. King	12.60
F. Bringolf	4117.17
L. Nelson	327.50
Templeton & Spitler	80.00
Chas. Spitler	40.05
R. Moore	239.18
J. Williams	674.20
John Cramer	46.60
J. Passwater	84.60
Willis Nelson	9.00
Will Tillman	12.63
Chas. King	13.90
Joe Darland	4.80
Christle Benson	8.00
W. Merritt	14.50
F. Morford	22.55
H. Lord	309.35
Wright County Oil Co.	1.75
Standard Oil Co.	1.65
H. B. Hallock	671.56
H. O. Wilcox	67.00
O. Davis	174.91
N. G. Lokerse	1492.50
Klipto Loose Leaf Co.	7.06
Speight & Son	5.00
Henry & Stromquist	10.00
E. Mechem	87.50
C. King	57.80
F. Sellers	26.75
Ray Tillman	7.20
J. Sullivan	1.25
Bauman Dever	11.77

NORWAY TOWNSHIP

E. R. Callahan	4.50
Harald Holm	168.87
A. A. Asbe	19.45
Kort Delger	2.25
Henry Kamp	81.85
Geo. Hoveland	162.24
Austin Espe	50.00
O. G. Christensen	47.50
County Treasurer	1854.58
Mike Beukema	14.00
Hjalmar Janson	4.20
John Groh	9.00
Judd Hardware Co.	28.00
Henry Eide	167.50
Farmers Elevator Co. of Olaf	147.36
Jake Lampert Yards	13.30
S. A. Barber	16.00
Ernest Johnson	4.50
Ben T. Benson	3.15
Leonard E. Johnson	7.20
C. E. Johnson	4.50
Harm Delger	4.50
Floyd Halvorson	15.75
Jim Davids	27.40
Bert Davids	1.75
Joe Erickson	24.75
T. O. Johnson	4.50
John Engh	138.60
A. B. Erickson	14.85
C. C. Eliason	28.60
Nels Anderson	2.85
C. O. Gorton	2.90
Ole F. Olson	17.00
Ben Ruter	127.85
Henry Meins	4.50
Thomas Tendall	47.41
Fred Rietema	4.50
Joseph Mehl	97.60
Joseph Olson	5.60
Peter Ruter	5.25
Iver Peterson	10.50
Boyd Ruter	97.71
Chas. Seebeck	35.45
L. W. Robertson	26.25
Knute Munson	46.20
Ed Nelson	145.86
E. J. Maland	12.00
Roy Mikelson	21.70
J. S. Shurson	155.63
Olaf Peterson	5.50
James Shaw	4.50
L. H. Mikelson	21.00
Erling Maage	3.30
Lloyd Mikelson	6.75
Lionel Robertson	7.00
W. R. Tripp	4.50
Heiko Ruter	12.25
John Veldhouse	4.50
Otis Tendall	4.50
Clarence Olson	6.75
Edwin Varo	7.50
Wright County	696.50
Elmer Soma	4.50
Pete Enge	4.50
Nick Christians	6.78
Henry Christians	4.50
E. J. Soma	75.18
Tom Thorson	2.25
W. M. Mallow	2.25
A. B. Mallow	3.00

PLEASANT TOWNSHIP

S. A. Bohning	44.65
P. Dorenkamp	22.30
Geo. Kalkwarf	10.00
Moe & Nelson	500.00
Wm. Walrod	1.00
Wm. Rabey	67.30
C. Meintz	7.68
R. Jenison	56.06
Geo. Thompson	45.00
Herald Press	.90
Aielt Riekens	41.05
Belmond Independent	2.40
J. H. Cannon	6.00
L. L. Luick	603.50
Greenlander Lbr. Co.	96.11
Klipto Ptg. Co.	5.13
M. Halfwassen	4.50
H. J. Klemme Lbr. Co.	39.15
H. Steenblock	56.30
J. Greenlander	110.92
County Treasurer	1465.21
Belmond Savings Bank	878.10
B. K. Kinseth	.40
G. Sandman	55.50
C. C. Griesy	14.81
Lincoln Road Machine Co.	350.00
S. Montgomery	2.50
J. Mennenga	42.73
Good Road Co.	14.15
J. I[illegible]ham	150.00
H. H. Rierson	176.23
J. D. Adams & Co.	7.50
J. Thayer	32.75
Ed Murphy	39.00
Ed Frohling	21.00
L. Hawley	21.00
M. Swanger	25.55
H. Gordon	20.80
H. Daggett	32.00
J. D. L. Pals	486.78
Hal Jenison	10.00
J. Peterson	3.50
R. Thompson	26.75
Geo. Ahlstrom	8.00
H. Sandman	13.47
S. Anderson	46.25
P. Bohning	86.53
O. D. Jenison	50.00
Aug. Rabe	49.00
Geo. Hunst	4.50
Belmond Lbr. Co.	81.80
Geo. Harberts	1.87
H. Schulte	7.50
J. Benken	45.00
H. Brauer	4.00
V. Springer	7.00
C. C. Johnson	22.10
J. Underkofler	1.00
B. Waddington	971.20
J. B. Jenison	2.00

TROY TOWNSHIP

R. A. Wilcox	795.75
Ray Caquelin	477.00
C. E. Robb	3.37
A. Christenson	11.50
H. B. Hallock	67.65
C. J. Loverin	5.00
Bert Craig	4.00
C. W. Algoe	48.13
Clifford Hill	41.12
M. O. Thompson	194.99
Leo Caquelin	6.65
W. W. Waddell	1.00
Clerk of Woolstock Twsp.	44.62
W. W. Frakes	24.00
John Ferguson	102.75
L. A. Caquelin	47.50
S. L. Rogerson	.75
J. D. Adams & Co.	13.50
Farmers Cooperative Co.	79.88
W. T. Jones & Son	132.44
Jule Claude	72.60
Wm. Wolfe	3.00
S. J. Osgood	13.35
Martin Amonson	25.75
Helge Vorland	5.00
R. W. Smith	10.00
August Grandgeorge	2.50
Carl Moser	44.06
Chas. Beyers	131.72
Russell Grader Mfg. Co.	5.03
Miller Amonson	28.50
H. L. Newcomb	28.00
R. E. Roper	3.39
W. B. Porter	15.00
Gerhard Hanson	40.60
A. L. Middleton	146.00
J. C. Middleton	166.60
C. W. Chapman Lbr. Co.	32.60
J. J. Wilcox	29.70
John M. Halverson	6.00
J. H. Imboden	197.00
Wilder & Wilder	445.00
Robt. Henderson	5.00
Chas. Gross	4.75
S. B. Smith	10.00
E. H. McCormick	36.00
Eagle Grove Eagle	8.00
R. H. Maudlin	169.46
Frank Farrell	3.50
Dave Hanson	6.50
L. E. Caquelin	7.00
Arne Tveit	21.37
Harold Thorn	431.49
Eddie G. Johnson	216.00
Transfer to other funds	695.65
Bastian, Beer, Merrill	23.45
C. J. Crovesier	5.62
J. H. Gherkin	27.00
R. M. Fisher	17.25
Leo C. Littlefield	293.45
Claude Vanarsdale	9.00
C. R. James	17.80
H. M. Imboden	22.50
F. H. Allen	168.12

VERNON TOWNSHIP

O. R. Davis	$ 337.86
Art Banwell	1.75
Emile Gregart	49.35
Geo. Kraft	33.00
T. A. Jonnson	151.92
G. D. Denger	20.00
Fred Beisner	323 89
Otto Cook	1.80
Dows Advocate	3.20
J. D. Adams Co.	208.40
F. W. Kreitlow	19.05
Herman Anderson	31.22
A. F. Bange	56.65
J. W. Akers	474.40
Chas. Carpenter	15.76
H. G. Buechler	39.32
Robert Barz	77.82
S. K. Bach	6.50
Elmer Kraft	2.50
Glen Byran	20.00
F. W. Haynes	5.00
Theo. Evans	2.50
W. F. Beyer	106.59
Frank Johnson	47.93
Roy Denger	14.00
Albert Barz	8.50
Henry Jondreau	4.50
Frank Beisner	1.75
Dows Lbr. Co.	6.35
Mrs. E. E. Elrich	79.50
H. C. Beisner	38.50
Chas. Barnes	38.50
Geo. Peterson	44.00
F. M. Zenor	6.25
Ernest LaRue	179.75
Lee Martin	320.38
State Bank of Dows	235.20
Matt Parrott & Sons	.75
A. E. White	38.70
Alfred Otteros	182.55
Geo. Root	66.93
Louis Lentz	9.50
Chas. LaRue	7.50
Ronald Wobbeking	74.50
Bernard Shager	8.70
Art Shager	9.50
S. L. Smith	15.00
Lampert Lbr. Co.	24.65
Herman Lutzke	15.50
Floyd State	7.00
H. H. Pepper	2.50
Guy Peterson	2.50
Wilbur Musson	17.40
Gale Pepper	14.50
Guy Quasdorf	2.80
Elmer Sturgeon	19.69
G. T. Quasdorf	13.25
Schwiger & Oler	12.88
P. Paulson	17.15
Ernest Rosaval	4.50
Dale Sturgeon	16.25
Zeddie Rout	5.00
Harry Martin	5.40
Rena Trowbridge	10.00

WALL LAKE TOWNSHIP

Albert Kuhn	$1154.40
J. D. Adams & Co.	120.00
Hobart Abbott	519.19
To Clerks	112.94
O. J. Harlow	17.50
Adolph Krieger	71.80
Gust Dahlgren	17.00
Carl Abbott	93.85
Henry & Stromquist	5.50
Harold Dahlgren	23.00
Camille Gerard	5.40
Peter Claude	21.25
N. Caquelin	90.25
Edmond Hilpipre	10.00
Turman F. Carswell	28.25
Chas. Beyers	693.78
H. M. Johnson	6.00
G. Elston	2.40
R. Elston	2.29
W. E. Johnson	15.55
Jelskie Cramer	20.25
W. C. Kennedy	19.35
Burt Harwood	13.40
Chas. Carpenter	37.35
John Hutchinson	10.80
Ed Burke	8.10
Adolph Krieger Jr.	10.00
Lane-Moore Lbr. Co.	94.95
County Auditor	1.65
T. J. Dahlgren	10.00
Transferred to road fund	1000.00
Leo. C. Littlefield	1207.50
J. R. McAllister	12.00
Standard Oil Co.	1.65
Speight & Son	22.50
J. G. Williams	6.30
Louie Nickles	143.50
J. L. Nickles	73.00
R. E. Mosher	15.00
C. H. Wells	10.00
A. Rapp	12.00
Charles Tillman	18.50
Cady Templeton	6100.00
Wilbur Schutt	54.75
K. J. Stone	10.00
Jim Mourlam	35.50
Ilo Nickles	136.70
Rayner Nickles	23.75
Louie Mourlam	18.75
Shupe & Son	9.10
W. L. Meyer	2.40
N. E. Schroeder	16.00
P. J. McHale	105.35
A. F. Ritter	77.60
Matt Parrott & Sons	2.94
John Loux	43.65
L. B. Woods	4.50
Frank Miller	58.50
National Sewer Pipe Co.	125.20
F. H. Rutledge	12.00
Harry Welzein	77.40
Earl Rapp	7.00

WOOLSTOCK TOWNSHIP

Fred Schaumburg	1301.85
E. A. Caquelin	76.00
Ed Rohrer	72.00
H. O. Evans	85.50
D. H. Huff	116.50
Matt Parrott & Sons	9.47
Henry Marshall	1.70
County Treasurer	1206.45
Joe Claude	11.25
J. D. Adams & Co.	98.30
Jones & Son	29.75
Frank Klaas	2.50
American Express Co.	.80
McGrath & Archerd	1.00
Frank McDaniels	50.00
Clair Halvorson	108.02
W. A. Thomason	54.00
Dell Culmer	60.00
John Thorn	72.50
N. Thorn	28.00
Homer Gordon	48.00
Ray Shillington	9.00
Harry Shillington	13.88
Frank Richardson	252.37
L. Batcheller	8.50
County Auditor	1485.00
L. C. Littlefield	873.50
D. W. Burman	25.87
Carl Albertson	22.85
Jess Derkas	13.00
John Hutchinson	10.20
Cemetery Association	25.00
J. A. Schutt	5.00
H. P. Keppers	25.20
N. G. Abbott	3.50
W. B. Thomason	7.00
Ralph Schutt	6.00

On motion adjourned to meet March 7, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY, Chairman.
F. W. WALKER, County Auditor.

APPENDICITIS OR HEALTH

Millions of dollars have been spent in operations for Appendicitis when health might easily have been restored through Chiropractic. For every disease there is a cause and the Chiropractor can discover and remove the cause of Appendicitis as readily as he can remove the cause of less serious conditions. Whether the case be acute or chronic Chiropractic is most effective.

Start getting well today.

DR. R. E. PORTER
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With a stranger, whom he introduces as his nephew, Ned Carter, Claude Melnotte Dabbs returns from New York to his general grocery at Peace Valley, Pa. To "Aunt Lyddy," his housekeeper, he explains that Carter is a chance acquaintance, veteran of the World war, whom he had met and taken a liking to.

CHAPTER II.—Carter tells Aunt Lyddy he has broken with his family and his sweetheart because of his resentment of their ultra pacific tendencies. With Dabbs Ned visits Clover Hollow, abiding place of a "collection of good-natured cranks," according to the grocer. They almost run over a dog belonging to a girl whom Carter apparently recognizes. Ned delivers a grocery order, and in his absence the girl, Dorothy Selden, reveals that she knows him to be Ned Carter Rangeley, son of Loren Rangeley, New York banker.

CHAPTER III.—Next day Ned commences work as a "grocer's boy." At a residence, the "White House," he delivers an order marked "Johnston." There he meets a girl who tells him she and her mother are alone in the house, the servants having left them because of the "loneliness." He promises to try to procure household help. Meeting Dorothy Selden, his erstwhile sweetheart, he baffles her attempts to discover the reason for his presence in Peace Valley. Arrangement is made for a cook to go to the Johnstons'.

CHAPTER IV.—The cook being unable to begin work at once, Ned visits the White House to inform Miss Johnston of the fact. Explaining the situation to her mother, the girl, "Mary," is astonished by that lady's emotion at the mention of Dabbs' name. The cook arrives, and Mary, with Ned, goes to the village for groceries. They are seen by Dorothy Selden. Mrs. Johnston, worried over financial troubles, is bothered by Dorothy, who warns her there is something suspicious about Ned Carter.

CHAPTER V.—There is something about Mary vaguely familiar to Dabbs, and he is highly interested in village gossip concerning the mother and daughter. Mrs. Johnston accompanies Mary to an inn for luncheon. Dabbs sees Mrs. Johnston and is obviously perturbed. He informs Ned he has something on his mind that he would like to tell him.

"What did you do?"

Claude gazed at Ned, hesitated, and then said slowly: "Got home, in time, of course. Never went back though. My father died and I had to take on the grocery and run it, and—that's all."

"Take you up on that."

Claude laughed. "It's true, and that's what's eating me tonight. Here I've lived my forty-seven years, cautious and careful-like, and never once let go and did anything real brash. And when you get to forty-seven without any one really belonging to you, why it makes a man think hard. At forty-seven a man's in a position to take a survey of life, and—oh well, what does it amount to after all?"

He sighed. "I bet you've done more in ten days than I have in all my forty-seven years."

Ned shook his head. "You can't pull that off with me, C. M. You forget I've been watching you conduct your life and business for awhile." He leaned back to survey this new phase of the versatile C. M. Somehow he had never contemplated Claude Dabbs as restless and discontented.

To his astonishment, Claude did not wait to analyze or be analyzed further. He rose, crossed to the door, and jerking his head toward the office announced that he had to wrestle with an old account.

Ned, wholly unprepared for this move, had no time to think of anything to stop him but he had no desire to sit there reading and smoking alone.

Aunt Lyddy met him in the hall on her way upstairs. Eight o'clock, or half-past eight, was her hour for retirement. She looked at Ned with some surprise.

"Going out for a walk, Aunt Lyddy. Uncle Claude's busy."

"Suffering Saints! It's bedtime. Well, don't get into any more mischief than is natural and can't be helped." She yawned a good-night as the door closed, and took her way to bed.

Ned went past the lighted window of the office, little guessing that Claude Dabbs was struggling through one of the crucial moments of his life.

The woman whom Claude had seen at the Iron Hand inn, might have evolved herself out of the Polly Johnston he had known. He wished he had been able to study her unobserved and for a longer time. If it was Polly, what a wonderful thing life was. To make out of that discontented, ambitious drudge, the woman he had seen today! He commenced several imaginary interviews and stopped them, laughing at himself. He kept saying "if," yet he felt sure that it was Polly. He imagined speaking to her, meeting her. What would her face look like as it turned toward him? He remembered how it had looked this afternoon when he saw her in the Iron Hand inn as she spoke to the girl.

The girl! Absorbed in the thought of Polly, he had forgotten the girl. Who was she? Had Polly adopted her, or—

Dabbs smote his desk with his fist and rose from his chair. He began walking up and down, trying to piece Polly's life together, thinking, thinking, stopping, beginning again, with a new thread each time, but all pulled him back to the same question.

He bent over his desk, writing numerous letters—all to one woman. Finally he leaned back in his chair, tore up the last note and thrust it deep into the pile already in the waste basket. The thing would not solve itself. He was still at sea as to his first move.

Ned, thrusting his head into the doorway to say good-night, found a weary-looking, grim-mouthed man. This was so unlike Claude's usual face and greeting that he was puzzled. Claude stopped him.

"Don't mind the way I look and act tonight. I've got something on my mind. Something personal, and if I find it'll help any telling it, you're the one I'll come to."

"I'm your man, any hour of the day or night, Uncle, if I can really help you out."

When he had gone, Claude closed the door heavily and went back to the desk. He gave up letter writing for the night and sat there, absorbed in his thoughts.

CHAPTER VI

Though it was late, Ned could not sleep. Deciding to read awhile, he lit the student lamp, propped himself up on his pillow and picked up a book. He looked up as Claude Dabbs entered his room.

"Ready to drop off, Ned?" he inquired tentatively.

"Not a bit of it. All sails set for reading half the night," Ned assured him. "Come in and smoke, C. M."

Claude entered. Ned wondered what this midnight visit meant. He looked at Claude with a smile, and Claude, knocking the ashes from his cigar into a little blue vase, said:

"Ned, I told you about my being at Rutgers for three months and never getting back. But I didn't tell you all."

"No, I don't think you did."

"There was a—a girl there."

"Ah, no man ever does tell all about himself and a woman, does he?"

"Well, it isn't so easy to tell."

"Nothing about one's life and a woman ever is," Ned answered, as one deeply experienced in the world and women. "Why, if I tried to explain to myself, let alone you, what earthly attraction I ever found in Dorothy Selden, I'd just stampede."

"But this is different. It'll probably do me good to talk it out and be done with it. By the way—it isn't known in Peace Valley."

Ned nodded, understandingly.

"There was a young servant girl in the house where I was boarding. Now, this girl—well, an uncle of hers turned up one day with a pile of money, but he said every girl should have a husband. The girl was a regular terror for hating the men. I didn't blame her, being waitress and chambermaid at our boarding house was enough to sour any woman on young men.

"To make a long story short, the uncle was dying and he'd had an awful time finding the girl. She was the last of his family. Yet he said he wouldn't leave her a cent of his money unless she got married. She hadn't a fellow. His doctor told her the old man was getting low and there wasn't much time. He'd made a will and everything. It was quite a pile, and she got it all, providing she married before he died. She was in an awful stew about it. She hadn't told anyone in the house yet. I doubt if she'd told me if it hadn't just happened so. You see, she kinda trusted me and she wanted that money bad. Wanted to make herself into a lady. She had great ideas.

"Well, there we were. She was in a funk, and I was in a funk that night. I'd come home ready to kill myself because there was the telegram from Mom. I hadn't got the money to get home to Pop, and Mom said he was dying.

"Well, there she was fixing up my room. She always left my room to the last because she'd got to know I'd never make the row the others did or tell on her. I guess she kinda liked me. She was the only person I had to talk to, so I blurted out my troubles. She thought a moment and then she came out with hers. She hated men and didn't want to get married, or so she said—and I—well, I didn't care what I did, just so that I could get home, in time, to Pop."

He paused, glanced at Ned, then took up his confession. "Well, the upshot of it was, I couldn't borrow the money from any of the boys. I went with her to a country justice of the peace, who didn't know either of us, and we got married. I had promised that for five hundred dollars I'd do it, and never trouble her again. She could get a divorce for desertion whenever she liked."

He looked at Ned, as though expecting an interruption, but Ned simply stared at him.

"Yes," Claude Dabbs told him stoutly, as though in answer to the unspoken question, "that's what I did. Married for money. Sold myself for five hundred dollars!"

"Great Scott, C. M.! Get on! What happened?"

"After I married Polly, and got half the money down, I came home here, saying nothing to anyone. The understanding was that I was to go back at the end of the week, sign the necessary papers, and get the rest of the money. That was to end the whole business. When I got home, Pop was dying. He died the night I got home, and was buried three days after.

"After the funeral I made an excuse to Mom that I had to go back to settle things, and so I got away. I went to the lawyer's office and signed the papers. He told me that Polly's uncle was dead, had died two days after I married Polly, and I was to take the papers and deliver them to her. She was staying at a little second-rate hotel. She'd given up her job but she didn't want to spread herself until she got away from the town where she'd been a servant girl. Polly herself was to give me the rest of the money. I'd only been paid half before I went home. The lawyer laughed, when he told me that, and added: 'Women are women. She would have it so.' Then he looked sly, and said: 'Maybe this isn't such a mercenary affair as I was led to believe. If I were you, I'd make her see reason and stay in America before she spends all of her fortune in traveling, or gets taken in by foreigners. It's a lot of money. If I were in your shoes, I'd never let her go.'

"I walked away from him, thinking if he was in my shoes he'd be in a bad way. I didn't know whether it was because I was all worn out with grief over Pop, and sleepless nights and worry about Mom and the future, or whether it was because I was miles away from home and lonely. Somehow I didn't seem like myself. I seemed like some other person. I tried to shake the feeling off. I said to myself: 'All the time I'm with Polly, I'm going to be just myself—the Claude Dabbs I feel like. She don't know me as Claude Dabbs of Peace Valley.

"I saw my future. A hard struggle with a country store and no time to do anything but work. God! how I rebelled in that short walk down. I didn't see why I should be shut up in a grocery for a lifetime, and that was all I could see before me. Why should my father have had to die, when there were men walking round hale and hearty, lots older than he.

"And I wanted Pop back! Nothing to do with the financial part of it, that ache. I cared a lot. Why, I could have stood the grocery part of it forever—for Pop. I hated every man of his age that came near me alive and happy, while Pop lay still. There was a sore place in my heart that I couldn't bear, marked with his name. Every time I went near it, I jumped away, like you jump when you have had a bad spot and the dentist's fooling round.

"All the things I hadn't done that Pop wanted me to do; all the times I'd disappointed him and acted mean were there. It needed only a touch to send me running down that city street, crying like a baby.

"So I shut it off, in a corner of my mind, and said to myself: 'That's got nothing to do with this Polly I'm going to see. I'll get all through with this young woman, and then I'll go home to what I've got to go home to. But she's nothing to do with it.' "

Ned stopped him. "C. M.," he said, "I don't think you exactly hated this Polly."

"Maybe not, but I wasn't looking forward with much pleasure to seeing her. I'd hardly looked at her in the boarding house, unless I had to yell at her for not tidying up my room, or for tidying it so I couldn't find anything; or not bringing my laundry up fast enough. No, that isn't quite honest. I'd noticed her, all right. She was too pretty not to notice. But my mind had been on other things then, and she was just—Polly. Understand?"

"I think I get the state of mind you were in," Ned admitted thoughtfully, "but I still think you liked the girl a lot more than you admit."

Claude sighed. "It's possible. It's so hard to make people see, though, that sometimes you're one part of yourself and sometimes you're another."

He began again, as though anxious to get on.

"It was getting pretty late and I thought if I got there just in time for supper I would have to ask her to eat with me. I didn't think I could stand talking to her, so I stopped at a restaurant.

(Continued next week.)

The Independent's circulation is local. It is read by more people. And that's why its ads bring results.

SCHOOL NOTES

(Continued from page one.)

editor; Jessie Wallace, Calendar editor; Hazel Arends, alumni editor; Donald McNulty, business manager; Leo Ayers, advertising manager, Lois Lillepo and Henry Robinson, news reporters; and Joe Sprenzel, joke ed tor.

The Seniors are planning this edition as nearly like an annual as possible, and are calling it "The Bell." This edit on will contain pictures of the Seniors and faculty, and two group pictures of the entire school.

Class and school activities are being written up this week, so that after vacat on, they may center their efforts on editorials and local news items.

The Senior Class is indeed grateful to Mr. Rankins, and sincerely hope that they may publish an issue of the Independent that will be a cred t to the school.

Advertising soliciting will begin in the near future, and we hope for the hearty cooperation of every business organization in Belmond.

For those of the Belmond High School students, who take a thoughtful interest in the reputation of their school, or who are anxious to form worth while habits, it might be well to suggest a few ways in which we can better our own chances for success in life and at the same time attain a little more unselfish attitude toward schoolmates and teachers Anyone who is old enough to be in high school, is old enough to realize that each year our habits are becoming permanently formed, and it is useless to point out that right now is the t me to be a little bit more careful and a bit more thoughtful about forming those habits

Last week when we had fire drill we were repeatedly instructed to remember the little folks in the grades and special provisions had to be made for the tiny tots on third floor getting down stairs safely. And anyone who has been caught in a one o'clock "traffic jam" in the lower halls, and seen the mob-like pushing and crowding would not wonder that it was necessary for us to be instructed repeatedly to watch out for those weaker and smaller than ourselves. I am reasonably certain that there is not a person in our high school who would be del berately cruel, or even rude, yet our actions as a group are giving us a reputation of almost rude thoughtlessness. Don't you think it is about time we stopped and took a look at ourselves "as we are?"

Some of the things we thoughtlessly do, or neglect to do, are more important than others, but we must th nk of them all if we expect to attain popularity and the respect of our acquaintances. Did you ever see a well bred person sit in church or any other public gathering, chewing no sily on a stick of what helped to build the Wrigley building, or on a little sliver of wood, meant to be used in the privacy of one's home?

Can you imagine any one of a group of successful business men having to be reminded to give precedence to women and children? Did you ever know of any one who had attained a position in this world that commanded respect, who would interrupt some one else's conversation, or even someone speaking to an audience? Of course, you didn't. It simply isn't done. None of us yet have reached the summit of our ambitions, but before we can ever hope to attain success in life we must form the habit of observ.ng the little courtesies that count for so much. No matter what we do, whether we enter business, the professions, professional man, athletics or one of the arts, we cannot be admired unt.l we do observe those courtesies, the first law of which is thoughtfulness to others.

Great things are being done in the typing classes of B. H. S. Every month speed tests are sent out by both the Underwood and the Remngton typewriter companies. Awards are given by the two companies for the fulfilling of various requirements:

The Remington Award list is as follows—

First Award: Primary Certificate, awarded to each pupil who writes 25 net words a minute with not more than 10 errors.

Second Award: Sterling Silver Pin awarded to those writing 40 net words a minute with not more than 7 errors.

Third Award: Gold Pin, to those writing 55 words a minute with not more than 6 errors.

Fourth Award: Jeweled Gold Pin, which is awarded to those who write 70 words a minute.

The Underwood Award list is as follows:

First Award: Proficiency Certificate, awarded to any student writing 30 net words a minute.

Second Award: Bronze Medal Emblem, awarded for a net speed of 40 words a minute.

Third Award: Silver Medal Emblem awarded for net speed of 50 words a minute.

Fourth Award: Gold Medal Emblem to those writing 60 words a minute.

Fifth Award: Pearl Medal Emblem, which is awarded for a net speed of 70 words a minute.

Of course few of us hope to receive the higher awards, for only one period of the day is devoted to typing, but nevertheless some of the first awards are being won. On the March test two Underwood awards were given—the Proficiency Certificate to Alvin Hauge, and the Bronze Medal Emblem to Richard Gowdy. It is hoped that several more awards will be earned before the close of the school year.

Harriet Martin is again wearing the typing medal, it being in Richard Gowdy's possession for the past ten weeks.

JUNIOR HIGH NOTES

Hildegarde Thorman and Aileen Gibbs of 8A received a rating of 80 90 on Arithmetic Drill 9.

Both first and second places in the local spelling contest were taken by two of our Jun or High Members, Lois Trafford receiving first and Herman Dorenkamp second. This is a fine record, let's see if you can't receive the county honors next Friday.

Marie Jones of 8A is back to classes after a long siege of pneumonia.

The Belmond Junior High debating team may have a triangular debate with Eagle Grove and Clarion after spring vacation.

The Junior Audubon Society has been organized in the Junior High and some of the intermediate grades. There are now eighty-n ne paid up members. The object of this society is to become more familiar with out feathered friends, the b rds. Some of the meetings will include hikes, when we will study the habits and nests of the birds.

The fee is only ten cents which is paid to the nat onal headquarters where our society will be registered, and in return each member is sent a membership pin and six colored illustrations of various birds. Miss Bond, Miss Heggen and Miss Barry are in charge.

Miss Sowerwine's eighth grade girls art class are making curtain pulls and study ng pictures this week.

Harris Dippel, Wilma Haupt, Patricia McNulty, Norma Anderson, Harry Cline, LaVon Forristall, Arthur Kemp, Donald Major, Doloris Pech and Dorothy Finndorf were ne ther absent nor tardy. There was no one tardy in Miss Jackson's room during this week.

Frances Meachanr, who has been away since Christmas, is again enrolled in this room.

Louise Sm th, LaVon Forristall and Doloris Pech have a perfect record in spelling this six weeks, having received A plus in every regular spelling class. The little folks have organ zed a garden club, the purpose of which is to promote an interest in beautifying their surroundings. The topic of interest right now is the "Lawns I have to keep—my school's, my neighbors, my own."

Arthur Johnson has moved to Osage, Iowa.

Mrs. Herman Schultz visited school Friday afternoon.

John Dempsey returned to school Monday.

Marion Nielson came back to school yesterday, after an absence of three weeks.

Howard Jacobmeyer returned to school Monday. He has been absent for three weeks.

The Senior Normal Training Class observed teaching methods in various country schools Tuesday.

RED CROSS NOTES
THE NURSE IN THE SCHOOL

Continued from page 1

those that catch people's attention. If there were a serious epidemic in town and the nurse worked day and night caring for the sick, she would be heralded as a local hero. But her steady plodd ng, day in and day out, preventing epidemics or permanent handicaps goes almost unnoticed.

Epidemics generally start in a perfectly natural way. Little Tommy Jones becomes infected somehow. He goes to school for a day or two complain ng of a "bad cold" and is later put to bed with scarlet fever. In the meantime he has probably spread the germs to a dozen other children while he was suffering from that alleged "bad cold." Today with a school nurse on the alert, such epidemics are rare. When Tommy has a "bad cold" the nurse, or it may be the teacher, sends him home w th instructions to see his doctor. The epidemic is checked before it has taken its heavy toll of life and human suffering.

Not a very spectacular p ece of work, sending the child home with a "bad cold" or sending a notice of a physical defect noted at the time of inspection, but nevertheless a very important one to every mother and father in the community.

The school nurse is the faithful guardian of the health of the American school children. And after all there is nothing in the world more important than health.

FOOD CLEANLINESS

For the sake of the appetite and the health, those who work with foods should practice strict cleanliness. The following rules should be observed:

Wear clean clothing, especially a clean apron.

Fasten the hair back securely that there will not be need to touch it or that it will not fall into the food.

Wash the hands with soap and water and use a nail brush.

Keep a clean towel near and wash the hands every time it is necessary to touch an unclean object.

When tasting food, use an extra spoon and do not dip it back into the food.

Be sure all utensils used are clean and keep the kitchen and stove as orderly and clean as possible. Do not sweep while food is uncovered or exposed.

Ninety Percent Goes Back

Ninety percent of the gross income of the modern Public Utility in this country goes back into the communities served in the form of wages, taxes, supplies and maintenance.

It is obvious that these Companies put money into the pockets of the people. A good share of the remaining 10 percent goes back to the Public Utility Customers and other Investors in the form of interest and dividends and what remains goes into more property used in the Public Service. More than Seven Billions of Dollars have been invested in the establishment and development in the United States of the Electric Light and Power industry alone and this year a sum of money equal to nearly $25 for each family will be spent for improvements and extensions.

This remarkable development has happened because the Public insists on this essential Utility Service. Every Customer and other Resident in the Communities served has a direct interest in this necessary Public Service because its well-being effects advantageously the prosperity of all.

EVERY CUSTOMER SHOULD BE A SHAREHOLDER

Central States Electric Co.

GENERAL OFFICES
Cedar Rapids, Iowa

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Snyder who are here visiting are from Boston, Mass. and not from Kansas as is stated in an item on page two.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Obrecht, from Spirit Lake, spent last Wednesday in Belmond visiting at the C. M. Morse home.

Cato C. Griesy, Herman Schultz, W. H. Adams and E. F. Bailey attended a Shriners meeting at Mason City last Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ressler and two younger children have moved to Osage where they will make their future home on a farm. Clifford, Laurabelle and Teddy will remain here until school closes.

Rev. B. Guldseth is the owner of a new Chevrolet sedan.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bock are expected home in a few days from California where they have been the past few months. They have rented the Ben Hogenson house furnished, where they will reside for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. Otis Nelson spent last week end in Clear Lake at the T. O. Tomson home.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Jacobson entertained eight couple at an informal dinner last Wednesday evening.

A considerable amount of official proceedings of the Wright County board may be found on page six of this issue.

St. Patrick's Dance at Belmond Opera House, Thursday night—tonight—with music by Smith Orchestra. Tickets 75c.

Mrs. Harold Aigley spent the latter part of last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Polmateer, at Renwick.

Twelve girl friends gathered at the Ralph Christie home last Sunday, to help Muriel celebrate her tenth birthday. A very enjoyable time was spent. Refreshments were served.

About 30 ladies met at the city hall Monday evening with Miss Gieseman, the Red Cross nurse, to organize classes in home hygiene and care of the sick. Two classes will be held, one on Wednesday evenings and one either Friday evening or some afternoo.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wolle spent Sunday at Dows with their daughter, Miss Bernetas, who teaches in the Dows schools.

Mr. and Mrs. Clate Huntley, of Clear Lake, are the parents of a baby boy, born March 7. They were formerly residents of Belmond.

Mrs. H. F. Peterson and children, Miss Mary Sourwine and Mrs. Clyde Jennings were Fort Dodge callers last Saturday.

St. Patrick's Dance at Belmond Opera House, Thursday night—tonight—with music by Smith Orchestra. Tickets 75c.

THANK YOU!

The Community Club wishes to thank all who took part in the program last Friday, and all who helped in any way with the social.

A Big Time at the St Patrick's Dance, Thursday night at the Belmond Opera House

Mrs. A. W. Martin and daughter, Harriet, will leave the latter part of this week for Oakdale, where they will visit Miss Ida Anderson who is receiving treatment at the sanitarium there.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Brant, both deaf mutes, were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Fee, Sunday. Mr. Brant is Inotype operator on the Dows Advocate, and his brother, Harry Brant, assistant editor.

March 26—Combination Sale at the Foundry building. Several head of horses, some brood sows, potatoes, machinery, etc., has already been listed. List your articles with David Kelley or State Bank.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wolle have received a letter from their son, Howard, at Bombay, India, stating he is recovering nicely from his illness, enteric fever, and by the time the letter reached them would be back at work. Howard has charge of the automatic telephone system in Bombay.

The school election on Monday was as quiet as expected, there being no opposition to the two candidates, Herman L. Schultz and O. L. Varland, for directors to succeed themselves or to C. O. Fitts as treasurer. Mr. Varland received a total of 27 votes, Mr. Schultz 26, and Mr. Fitts 25.

The Grant township farm bureau regular monthly meeting will be held March 18th at the Center school house. Program to begin at 8:00 o'clock. We organize the Boys' and Girls' Poultry Club, so a good attendance is desired. Each lady bring sandwiches for their own family. The west side serves cake and coffee.

By the Grant Township Director.

The first lesson of the Poultry Project will be given for Belmond and Pleasant townships, Wednesday, March 23, at 10:00 a. m., at the Belmond city hall. The subject, "Care, Feeding and Management of Baby Chicks," will be given by Prof. E. J. Rood, of Iowa State College. It is the privilege of anyone interested to attend.

BASKET SOCIAL

There will be a community program and basket social Thursday, March 17, in Belmond township, District No. 4. Schoolhouse situated 1 mile north and 5 miles west of Belmond, and 9 miles north and 1 mile east of Clarion. Program at 8:15.

Faye Jenison, Teacher.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	20c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	38c
Corn	50c
Barley	62c

John Veldhouse of Kanawha, was a Sunday guest at the Spitler home here.

Ben Arends, of Alexander, was a business caller here Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Kragh and daughter arrived home from Canon City, Colorado, last Friday. They motored back, making the trip in three days.

"The Passion Play" will be given by Dr. Barry at the Methodist church, April 1. Particulars will be given later.

The M. E. Aid Society meets this afternoon with Mrs. W. H. Wolle.

Friends here have received word that Clem Cannon, who moved to California about a year ago, was operated on for hernia about two weeks ago in a San Francisco hospital. He is recovering nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Jacobson and daughter Mildred, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Luick, and Misses Harriet Gowdy, Waugh and Knudson motored to Garner, last Friday evening, where Miss Mildred Jacobson was one of the contestants in the declamatory contest

Raymond Lamb who was seriously injured last week in an accident with a team of mules, is reported coming along nicely. The lad suffered much pain the first few days, but this has eased up some and he is now making progress toward recovery.

Sampson's White Feather Hatchery are shipping out baby chick orders daily. They report orders ahead to May 1 on contract, for White Rock baby chicks. The Sampson flock was highest in production in the state for January in the White Rock breed. For the past two years, they have held third place in Iowa on average production, their record for 1926 being 149 2-10 eggs per hen.

SERVICE!

Even if Coolidge did veto the Farm Bill, people must eat.

Where are they buying?

Certainly not as much as they should from their local bakeries. Is it fair to them?

I am sure they try their best to please you. Very little of the money spent for baked goods out of town stays here.

I am still baking and taking orders for Home Baked Goods.

HOT BAKED BEANS
Every Tuesday and Saturday.
They are fine!

Mrs. J. H. Fetrow
Belmond, Iowa

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Rural New York and Early Ohio seed potatoes, $2.00 a bushel. S. Enger. 17tf

FOR SALE—370-gallon storage gasoline tank. F. P. Dibble. 182

FOR SALE—Shorthorn bulls, by a son of Cumberland's Type, fit to head the best herds in the state.—L. E. Azeltine, Alexander, Ia. 163*

FOR SALE—Home-made lard. Mrs. L. Pals, Jr. Phone 1111. 172*

FOR SALE—S. L. Wyandotte and Buff Orpington hatching eggs. Mrs. A. P. Lonning, Belmond. Phone 2606.

FOR SALE—Hard or soft wood, stove lengths. A C. Lieuwen. Phone 186 1-3. 17tf

FOR SALE—Brown Leghorn hatching eggs, $3.00 per 100. Buff Orpington pen eggs $1.00 per setting.—Mrs. J. B. Sheffield. 15tfc

FOR SALE—8 head of horses, from 3 to 12 years of age. Weight from 1200 to 1675 pounds. Priced from $35 to $165 each. Will give time on satisfactory note. Frank Drury, 1 mile west of Rowan. 16tfc

FOR SALE—Buff Rock hatching eggs, good producers, range flock. $4 per 100. Mrs. Menno Frohling. Phone 1105. 164*

FOR SALE—Bay mare, wt. 1300 pounds. Drives single or double. Guaranteed. $80. See F. J. Bailey. 1c

FOR RENT—8-room house, partly modern, April 1. 3rd block south of State Bank. A. W. Martin. 172

FOR SALE—12 good horses, all broke. Age 5 to 7, weight 1300 to 1500. Some matched pairs. Priced from $100 to $125. At farm 1 1-2 miles north of Alexander. Ben Arends. 1*

FOR SALE—Good work horse, 9 years old. Weight 1600. Inquire at Independent.

FOR SALE—Old ice house—about 300 feet of siding—for $10, if taken at once.—E. A. Pierce. 1*

FOR SALE—Nine Duroc Jersey brood sows, to farrow fore part of May. Cholera immune.—D. H. Delaney. 1c

WANTED—Experienced housekeeper on farm. Write or see me personally. John Harberts. 182*

COURT HOUSE NOTES

Continued from page 1

given by France Warner to the Farmers Savings Bank of Goldfield, by payment of $3100 cash, was authorized.

Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove was given judgment for $24,766.94 against Fred H. Allen and Grace M. Allen. Foreclosure was ordered against land in Troy township, and H. B. Cole was appointed receiver to look after rentals.

Personal judgment in the sum of $17,627.69 was rendered against Rose A. Woodward, John H. Woodard and A. W. Helmick, in favor of the Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove. Foreclosure of land in Troy township was ordered.

Farmers Savings Bank of Goldfield was given judgment against Barney Jones and Ingle Jones for $1510 and interest at 8 per cent and costs.

James A. Barker of Eagle Grove was cited to appear in court March 14 to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court for failure to pay alimony in the sum of $60 a month to Mary E. Baker.

Marriage Licenses

March 8 ,to Otto Helland and Semma Pals, both of Belmond. They were married in this city, March 9 by Rev. J. B. O'Connor.

A Big Time at the St Patrick's Dance, Thursday night at the Belmond Opera House

Why Not Select the
Children's HATS
EARLY WHILE THE STOCK IS LARGE?
All colors, sizes and materials.
PRICED RIGHT FROM
$1 up
The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Opera House
SPECIAL MUSIC ON WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY
THURSDAY, MARCH 17
ST. PATRICKS DANCE
MUSIC BY SMITHS ORCHESTRA
TICKETS 75 CENTS
FRIDAY and SATURDAY
MARCH 18 AND 19
Lefty Flynn in 'Glenister of the Mounted'
No wonder they called him "The Bloodhound of the Mounted"! But they gave him a warrant for the girl he loved, the girl he knew was innocent, and then---for the thrilling details of what happened, see this remarkable picture.
ALSO F. B. O. COMEDY
Prices 10 and 20c
MONDAY, TUESDAY, MARCH 21 AND 22
THE RUNAWAY
A PARAMOUNT PICTURE WITH CLARA BOW, WARNER BAXTER, WM. POWELL, GEO. BANCROFT
2 reel Educational comedy
PRICES 10c AND 25c
This Coupon
AND 15 CENTS WILL ADMIT 1 PERSON TO THE OPERA HOUSE MONDAY OR TUESDAY NIGHT, MARCH 21 OR 22

Yes---A Free Cream Separator!

On February 8th we offered to make the following contract with the agents for the DeLaval separator. They refused to sign this contract and proposed a plan of their own. We believe the farmers of this community should be the judges in this test, and we will enter this test any time, any place, under the conditions of this contract:

Whereas, the DeLaval Separator Company, of Chicago, Ill., thru their Agency, the Electric Store (C. J. Papousek), at Belmond, Wright County, have challenged the John Deere Plow Company thru its agent, Cato C. Griesy, of Belmond, Wright County, Iowa, to a skimming demonstration between the Cream Separators manufactured by the above Companies known as the DeLaval, made by the DeLaval Separator Company and the Gold Medal, manufactured by the John Deere Plow Company.

Be it hereby agreed that we, the undersigned, agree to hold this demonstration at a date agreed upon by both parties, but not later than Saturday, March 19th, 1927, at a place to be agreed upon by the consent of both parties.

This contest is to be governed by the International rules governing efficiency tests of Cream Separators and to be decided by three judges, one to be appointed by each of competing parties and one by the two judges first appointed.

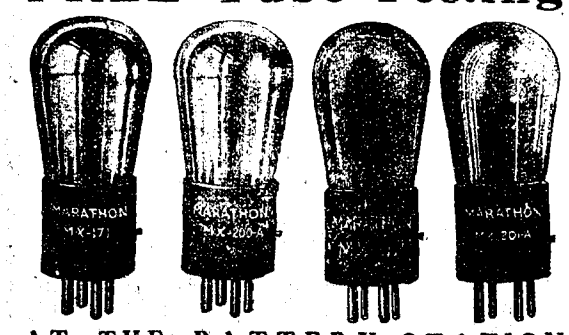
In consideration of the above agreement each contestant agrees to deposit in the hands of a reliable third party their certified check for $100.00 (One Hundred Dollars) as a guarantee that they will enter the contest as above agreed upon. Check of either party failing to fulfill this contract to be forfeited to other party.

It is further agreed that all arrangements further than above are to be decided upon when representatives of the manufacturing companies concerned arrive in Belmond, Iowa for the above demonstration. These representatives to be in Belmond at least one day in advance of the date agreed upon for the Demonstration.

WE WILL DEPOSIT THE FULL PRICE OF A DELAVAL SEPARATOR IN THIS TEST PROVIDING THE TEST IS CONDUCTED UNDER THE INTERNATIONAL RULES, AND ABOVE CONTRACT, AND WILL FORFEIT THIS MONEY TO THE LOCAL DELAVAL AGENT IF WE FAIL TO WIN THE TEST. WE EXPECT THE LOCAL DELAVAL AGENT TO DO LIKEWISE.

GRIESY'S
The Friendly Place
PHONE 10 BELMOND, IOWA

FREE Tube Testing



AT THE BATTERY STATION
Regular, Special Detector and Power Tubes.
We stock all of them.
Fresh shipment of B-Batteries every week. All sizes.
We give Radio Service.
Belmond Storage Battery Co.
Belmond, Iowa
Phone 46 Official 2417

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!
—THIS WEEK ONLY—
Friday and Saturday
March 18 and 19
SAUSAGE, per pound 20c
LINK SAUSAGE, per pound 20c
PORK CHOPS, per pound 25c
We still have some of that good LARD at a mighty good buy.
Watch for Our Specials Every Week!
Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning
City Meat Market
Nissen Bros. Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1927 | NO. 19

GOOD FELLOWS MEET TONIGHT

Mr. Arthur Huntington Will Address Good Fellowship Club On Agriculture.

ALL FARMERS INVITED

Mr. Arthur Huntington, a recognized authority and speaker on the agricultural question, will address the Good Fellowship club tonight, Thursday, at the library basement. Mr. Huntington has for some time been connected with the state college at Ames, and is thoroly familiar in all respects with the agricultural situation.

As usual, a good preliminary program will be given, and the evening will be closed with refreshments and a social hour. The farmers of the community are extended a special invitation to attend this meeting and hear his address. It concerns a subject of vital interest to them all, and they are assured of a talk well worth hearing.

It is probable that this meeting will be the last, or next to the last of the season, and a full attendance is especially desired.

SENIORS START WORK ON SPECIAL SCHOOL EDITION

The 1927 Senior Class of the Belmond schools have started work on their special edition of The Independent, to be issued April 14 and which will be known as "The Bell." This edition of the Independent replaces the school annual, which has been issued the past few years. The edition will be in fact an annual, containing facts and information of the schools during the past year, and will contain numerous illustrations of school activities and events, classes, athletics, and the like. The Independent has turned this issue over to the class, who will receive half of all advertising they put into it to assist them in defraying the expense. The school will furnish all news matter and editorial used in the issue and will full charge in all respects of the edition.

This special edition is more or less or an experiment, both on the part of the school and the publisher. It is hoped that business men will cooperate with the school in making it a successful one.

SUGAR FACTORY WILL NOT RUN

Definite word is given that the sugar factory will not operate this season. Up until a short time ago it has been reported that there was a possibility of the mill running, but this hope has been abandoned and it is now definitely known that there will be no run made. The Dyer Co. who have a mortgage on the plant have filed foreclosure proceedings in the federal court at Fort Dodge and the matter will come up in the June term. At that time if Dyer's claim is not satisfied he will probably ask permission of court for sale and the plant will be sold at auction.

NEW BANK RULES ANNOUNCED

In this issue, on page eight, the Wright County Bankers Association carries a large ad in which announcement is made of a new ruling that has been adopted by all banks in the county, pertaining to checking accounts. After April 1, a charge of 50 cents a month will be made on all accounts averaging less than $50 a month. This ad will appear for the next several weeks so that everyone will have the opportunity of reading it and becoming familiar with the change. Read it, and if you do not thoroly understand it, ask your local banker who will be glad to explain the new ruling to you.

ACKLEY TO BUILD NEW SCHOOL

Contract for a new $95,000 public school building was let at Ackley recently, by the board of education. An Oskaloosa company was the successful bidder. The $95,000 covers cost of building only, an additional $31,000 being awarded for plumbing, lighting, heat and ventilation, an Ackley firm receiving the bid on these.

COMMUNITY CLUB FRIDAY

The Community Club will meet Friday afternoon, March 25. A good program has been arranged by the calendar committee.

Community singing led by Mrs. A. H. Skovlin, a piano solo by Ruth Jones, a talk on "The Duties of Club Members" by Mrs. Thiltgen, a one-act play "The Acid Test" written by Mrs. Chauncey Palmer Smith, characters: Katherine Sherman, Mrs. Elder; Helen Herringdon, Mrs. Ramsay. Piano duet by Ruth Ramsay and Mildred Jacobson.

Mrs. Chauncey Palmer Smith is a Mason City woman and the author of several successful plays. Two of our most clever women will interpret her play to us so come out and enjoy the program.

The hostesses for the afternoon are Mrs. F. L. Mortimer, Mrs. T. A. Davenport, Mrs. Conrad Nissen, Mrs. Carl Wenzel, Mrs. Ray Brewer and Miss Lizzie Blair.

ACKLEY FIGHTS CENTRAL STATES CO.

A rather bitter fight is going on between the town of Ackley and the Central States Electric Co. over service to the town. Ackley has a municipal plant, and wants to keep it. The Central States Co. seek to enter and have attempted coming in over the Illinois Central R. R. Co.'s right-of-way. The city officials have fought this, and the matter is now in the courts.

ELECTRIC RATES TOO HIGH SAYS DOWS SPEAKER

G. J. Long, manager of the Webster City municipal electric plant addressed a mass meeting of voters and citizens at Dows last week, and stated in his talk that electric rates were too high. Mr. Long addressed the meeting following a visit to Webster City by a committee from the Dows commercial club which investigated the municipal plant and rates. The Webster City consumers of current have never paid over 9 cents per K. W. H., it is said.

HUMBOLDT PRISONERS ATTEMPT BREAK

Some of the county jail prisoners at Humboldt attempted a break for liberty, last Saturday, but were frustrated by the sheriff when the official found a steel bar sawed off.

TRINITY CHURCH

B. Guldseth, Pastor
Telephone Call, 150

Thursday, March 24, mid-week prayer meeting at 8 p. m.

Sunday, March 27. The newly organized Luther League will conduct their first devotional hour at 7:00 o'clock with Miss Shirley Thompson as leader.

English services will be held at 8 o'clock. Theme: The Courts of Jehova. Psalm 84:1-4.

Tuesday, March 29, the local catechetical class will meet at the church at 4 p. m.

Choir practice will be held at 7:30 p. m.

GETS $3,000 FOR CALF

Dr. C. F. Osborne, of Hampton, proprietor of the Iowa Brown Swiss Company, recently sold a six months' old Brown Swiss bull for $3,000 to a New Jersey breeder, who expects to use the animal in his show herd next fall. This is said to be the highest price ever paid for any Brown Swiss animal in the history of the breed. The calf was born at the Iowa State Fair last year.

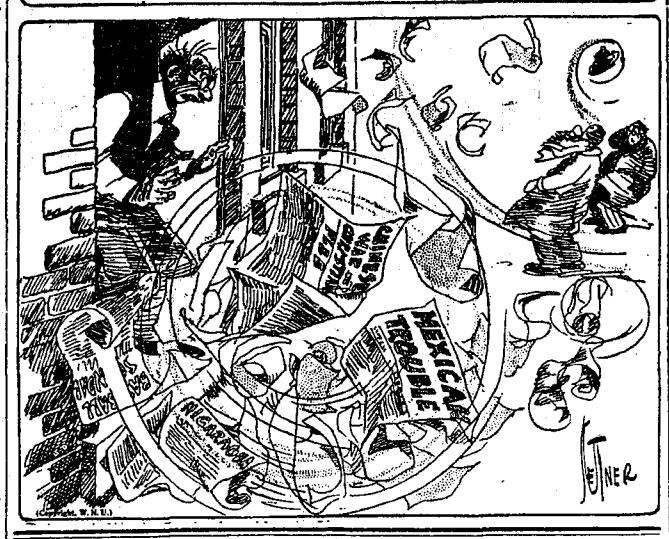
Buried Hog Lives Four Months

Wm. Opheim, a farmer residing between Eagle Grove and Thor, missed a prize 280-pound hog last November. Recently he found it under a straw stack where it had been buried four months. The hog had lost 100 pounds, but was still alive and is now getting fat again.

Eagle Church Fund Up To $36,000

The M. E. congregation at Eagle Grove have the fund for their proposed new church up to $36,000, in pledges. When the amount reaches $45,000 the building will be started. Selection of an architect will be made within a short time.

Whirl of the March Wind



S. S. MEETING AT WOOLSTOCK

All Protestant Denominations Co-Operating In Meeting.

The fifty-second Wright County Sunday School Convention will be held in the Methodist church, at Woolstock, Thursday, March 31, with Mr. Walter Hutton, general secretary of the state work, and Mr. O. G. Herbrecht, young people's division for the state, as state workers.

PROGRAM

Morning

9:00 Registration.
9:15 Devotional period. Rev. E. A. Anderson, Eagle Grove.
9:30 "The Sunday School Teacher and Evangelism" ---------Rev. H. R. Peterson, Goldfield.
10:00 Address, "Greater Building" ---------- State Worker
10:40 Announcement of Committees
10:45 "Our County," the President's Report and Recommendation. ---- Rev. E. A. Anderson, Eagle Grove.
11:00 Address, "Further Business" ---------- State Worker
11:40 Secretary and Treasurer's Report.
Announcements and Adjournment.

Afternoon

1:30 Devotional Period -------Rev. J. G. Waterman, Dows.
1:45 Address, "Older Boys' and Older Girls' Conference" ---- ---------- State Worker
2:15 Address, "Forward Together" ---------- State Worker
Report of Committee: (a) Nominating; (b) Business.
3:15 Separate Conference Session. The Children's Division will be in charge of Mrs. R. M. Smallpage of Eagle Grove, children's division superintendent for the county. There will be a class in illustrative teaching. The other conferences will be in charge of the state workers.
4:10 Reassemble. Report of Registration Committee.
Announcements.

Evening

7:30 Song Service ------- Audience Selections by Parrish Orchestra. Musical numbers by the Parrish sisters, Violet Grady and Lavorn Morrison.
8:00 Address, "Qualifications of Sunday School Teachers and Officers" ------O. M. Keyes, Clarion.
8:30 "Need and Value of Christian Education" -----Rev. Snyder, Belmond.
Closing Period.

A covered dish luncheon will be served at noon. You can not afford to lose out on this social hour. Every one is urged to make this part of the program as well as all others, a success.

A wool bunting Christian flag will be given for one year to the school scoring the highest in attendance. This will be determined by multiplying the number of persons over sixteen years of age from any school by one-half the number of miles traveled to the convention. To be counted you must attend at least two sessions of the convention. If the superintendent and pastor attend they grant an additional 25 points each.

FEW CASES UP IN COURT

Several Suits Filed Against Moseleys At Goldfield.

Mrs. Lillie Johnson asks that Elmer Johnson, a brother, be appointed as guardian of the interests of her husband, Julius Johnson, who has been sent to the state hospital at Cherokee.

L. A. Andrew, for the Farmers Saving Bank of Goldfield, seeks judgment against Emil Stenzel, W. M. Coons and M. F. Coons for $2332.18. Also against Frank C. Moseley for $2726.84. In still another suit against F. C. Moseley and Mae Mosley he asks judgment for $2257.77 with foreclosure of mortgage on west half of lots 5 and 6, block 19, Goldfield.

Receiver Andrew brings several suits to recover from A. W. Moseley —one for $2690.52; another in which A. W. Moseley, F. C. Moseley and Mae Moseley are defendants, for $10,428.37, secured by a mortgage on property in Goldfield; another for $1,872.36. Another case is against Jake Lortz, A. W. Moseley & Co., A. W. Moseley and F. C. Moseley for $129.91. The Moseleys endorsed a note for Robert Hanson, on which suit for $281.36 is brought. Action is brought on a note they signed with Otto Jergenson, which amounts to $206.55. Another with John M. McCutcheon amounts to $238.40. Judgment for $1197.26 is sought on a note which they signed with Bert Weland and Inger Weland. Another note by Lewis Otto and endorsed by the Moseleys amounts to $309.34. E. M. Jones failed to meet a note which they endorsed and which amounts to $2794.18. Note of Henry T. Larsen and Mable Larsen, totalling $222.13, is claimed as an obligation of the Moseleys. A note given by Sam Ulstad, and sold by defendants to the bank, brings a claim for $121.75. On renewal of a note of A. J. Cross and Clara L. Cross there is claimed to be due the sum of $126.41.

The county treasurer says if we are so inclined we can remind the people that March 31 is the last day for paying taxes without penalty. A person has three months to pay taxes—the first three months of the year—January, February and March, without interest, and if the first payment is made within this time, the second payment can run until in September. However, in case the first payment is not made by March 31st, the entire amount becomes due and will draw interest at the rate of 12 per cent, starting April first before breakfast. And if you want to avoid penalty on dog tax, get license now from county auditor.—Monitor.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observer, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week March 12 to March 19, 1927 inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char of Day
13	43	36	.06	Cloudy
14	60	28	—	Clear
15	70	40	—	Clear
16	59	36	—	Cloudy
17	55	29	.08	Pt. Cloudy
18	55	29	—	Cloudy
19	39	21	.05	Cloudy

ONE "SUCKER" LESS

Oelwein Register: There is one man in town who has had his name taken off the "sucker list" of some of the mailorder houses who have been making a practice of sending out certain lines of goods to a man and telling him to either keep them and remit them a dollar or return the goods. This man is Dr. D. I. Pattison of this city. About Christmas time he received from two different sources a box of Christmas cards, a letter accompanying them telling him to keep them and remit a dollar or return the cards. The doctor sat down instead of following the instructions and sent the same house a few pills, enclosing them in the letter and telling the receiver that they were recommended for "gall." He also told him that the value of these pills was two dollars, and that he would give him credit for the Christmas card bill of one dollar and all they would have to remit to him would be the additional dollar. After a while he received an acknowledgement of the pills which were returned and was requested to return the Christmas cards. The doctor then replied and told the writer that it was a half block to the nearest mail box and that he always charged $2.50 for leaving the office so if he would return the amount of two dollars and a half he would mail them back to him. The correspondence was closed when the sender of the cards wrote and told him that he had taken his name off their list. This and similar feats, such as sending out four neckties to a "select" list with instructions to either keep them or send them a dollar, has become quite prevalent, and frequently such stunts are pulled off. There must be enough of them remit the dollar to make it pay for they continue to do it. But if a few of the receivers of these shipments would do as Dr. Pattison did they too would soon be taken off the mailing list.

COUNTY ENGINEER TAKES PLACE ON STATE HIGHWAYS

J. K. Hilton, county engineer, since Wright county began a definite program of road construction in 1919, has resigned and after 30 days from the time of filing his resignation he will become attached to the forces of the state highway commission as resident engineer for primary road construction and maintenance superintendent. In this capacity he will have charge of construction of new roads and maintenance of primary roads in Wright county under the regulations provided in the new state highway law just passed by the legislature and which will go into effect the fourth of July. He will maintain an office in Clarion and retain his residence here.

All of the existing sixty miles of primary highway and 140 miles of other improved highway in Wright county have been completed under the direction of Mr. Hilton. In spite of the change which places primary roads under the control of the state commission, Wright county still has 130 miles of county road under their supervision and 800 miles of township road under partial supervision, so it will be necessary to engage and retain a man who will be known as county highway engineer. Monitor.

PASSION PLAY WILL BE GIVEN AT M. E. CHURCH

Dr. Berry, a world traveler and America's best authority on the Oberammeragau Passion Play will give his pictures and impersonations at the Methodist church on the evening of April 1.

Those who have seen the Play in Oberammeragau and afterwards seen Dr. Berry's presentation have pronounced his work near to perfection.

Not only has Dr. Berry traveled in Bavaria, in his study of the Play, but has spent many months in Palestine, Egypt and Syria getting the background for his interpretations.

Not only will you enjoy the pictures and impersonations, but you will also enjoy Dr. Berry's personality. Admission will be 50 cents for adults, and 25 cents for all students of the public schools.

Mrs. C. I. Williams was hostess to the Kensington club last Wednesday afternoon.

TWO BANKERS ARE INDICTED

Grand Jury Returns Three Indictments Against One And One Against Another.

CLAIM THEY KNEW FACTS

As a result of the grand jury investigation which occupied 16 days and was concluded last Wednesday, three indictments were made against B. W. McElhinney, cashier of the defunct Citizens State bank of Goldfield, and one against W. T. Christenson, assistant cashier of the same institution. The charge in all four counts was for receiving and accepting deposits when the bank was insolvent. Both men were apprehended and upon furnishing bond for $2500 on each count they were released to appear for trial at the April term of court.

McElhinney was the dominating personality in the management of the Goldfield bank, and it is said that Christenson was subservient to him in every proceeding.

It is alleged that the grand jury found evidence in the course of their investigation which shows that these men took their own deposits from the bank when they became aware of the impending crash and before the doors of the institution were finally closed. According to State's Attorney R D. Blue, it is much more difficult to establish a criminal charge that implies knowledge of the insolvency of the bank prior to the time of closing the doors, than it is to sustain an action for damages in a civil suit of recovery against officers of the bank Civil action is sustained by question of fact as shown, while criminal proceedings must show that the officers were aware of the insolvent condition, and the difficulty is to show what was in the back of their minds.

Altho this grand jury adjourned sine die with the turning of these indictments it does not necessarily follow that grand jury investigation of banking conditions in the county is terminated. A new jury will be impanelled at the April term, but will include some of the members who served in the late term and who will be familiar with facts that have been developed. If new information is brought out in the meantime action can be taken by the newly impanelled grand jury.

At the February meeting the board of supervisors authorized a contract with E. B. Raynor & Co., of Minneapolis, certified accountants to check the books of the Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove.

A discrepancy of $225,000 in the figures of the bank occasions the desire for this accounting. E. J. Thompson is serving a term in the penitentiary as a penalty for the embezzlement of part of this difference. In the indictment on which he was found guilty he was charged with the taking of $75,000, but there is considerable difference between that sum and the $225,000 which is short, and where that money has gone is the information that is sought to be brought out as a result of the work of accountants who have just been engaged.

It is regarded as likely that representatives of this firm will begin work within the next week. If they develop anything of an incriminating nature it can be brought to the attention of the grand jury when they have established the facts.

The state banking department has confined itself to liquidating the accounts of banks under their charge rather than ferreting out information on which to construct prosecutions. In response to urgent petitioning from persins effected by the Eagle Grove collapse, the board of supervisors feel they are justified in authorizing this audit and seeking the facts which it will develop. The board has no authority to demand financial restitution, but can see that ample means are provided for prosecutions of criminal infractions if there is justification for that action. Monitor.

Founders Day of the W. F. M. S. of the Methodist church will be observed Thursday afternoon at the Methodist church. This celebrates the 58th anniversary and promises to be an elaborate affair.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch 25c
Locals, per line 10c
Classified, per word 02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

From talking with various farmers around Belmond. The Independent has come to the conclusion that the average farmer does not appreciate the seriousness of the European corn borer menace. The corn borer is decidedly serious, one of the most serious problems that has ever confronted agriculture in the middle west. Because the borer has not yet arrived here and caused any damage, too many farmers make light of the situation. If the borer ever gets into the corn fields of Iowa and Illinois like it has in the eastern states, farmers will experience more hard times than they have had yet. In eastern states where the borer has been at work, the corn fields are more of less scattered; you may find 20 acres on one farm, and go several miles before you find another field. Here in Iowa, where there is a corn field on every farm, and you cannot go half a mile without passing one, the opportunity for the spread of the borer once it gets into our fields is tremendous. In Canada estimates have placed as high as 700,000 borers in a single acre of corn; multiply that with the thousands of acres of corn in Iowa and you will see how great and how desperate will be the battle to control this pest if it ever gets into Iowa. Owing to the habits of the creature it is unusually difficult to control it. It will live 30 days without food; it has been known to live 40 days in both fresh and salt water. The opportunity of spreading is therefore so great as to be almost beyond control. It can be carried long distances in streams, and come out alive ready to begin its deadly work. It can be carried from one state to another in cargoes of grain and corn. The borer winters in the stalk, coming out in the spring as a moth. This moth flies mostly at night, hiding during the daytime on the underside of leaves of corn, grasses and other plants. In four or five days the females begin laying eggs on the underside of the leaves, which hatch out in from four to nine days into the borers. These borers then begin to destroy the corn, boring into the ears and stalk. Wintering in the stalk, they turn into moths again in the spring, and the vicious circle keeps on. The borers have ravenous appetites and grow rapidly, yet the larger borers will go a month without eating. Once the pests get into a field in any numbers, the crop is ruined. Individual stalks will have as many as one hundred borers, while the average in a field may be 30 to 40 worms to a stalk. Methods of fighting this menace are largely experimental, altho many ways have been developed of fighting them. The only certain method of eradication is to burn the entire field, stalks and stubble, all cobs lying about, and all weeds adjacent to the field affected. Discing the stubble, shredding the stalks, deep plowing, putting the corn into the silo, are other ways of combatting this evil. Yet the menace is so great, and the borer so numerous once it gets in, that Iowa corn fields may be the battle ground for one of the greatest fights in history. One thing is deadly certain: If the European corn borer ever does get into Iowa, there will be no surplus of corn. You will pay a dollar and a half a bushel for corn, and mighty glad to get it.

The mails brought another allotment of "Sucker Goods" into Belmond last week, this time in the shape of ties and men's socks. If you like them, send one dollar; if you don't like them, just return them. But the sender, a poor blind man, or consumptive, or epileptic, or something else, takes this means of making a livlihood and your sympathies are worked upon until you send a dollar and you have a warm feeling because you have done such a good deed. The ties, or the socks, of course, are cheap stuff, and you could buy them for less than you did in your local stores, providing they carry such cheap goods. Meanwhile, the proprietor of the graft is banking your money and placing an "A1" after your name on his list, which means you are a first-class sucker and easy mark, and after awhile you'll get another sucker order if not from the same firm then from another. Send the junk back, and send a good sassy note with them asking that your name be removed from the sucker list. For the whole thing is a graft, pure and simple. It has been annoying the entire country for several years past, and the worst of it is, there is no way to stop it. They do not violate the postal laws, and enclose postage for return. They force their shoddy goods on you, and play upon your sympathies thru some harrowing tale until you send the money. An Oelwein doctor got his name off the sucker list as told in an article on page one. Read it.

As far as the veto was concerned that could have been predicted in 1924 as well as in 1927. There was nothing in Coolidge's history or in the campaign he made in 1924 to indicate that he had any desire to do anything for middle western agriculture or any feeling that anything needed to be done. And yet Coolidge carried Iowa by a majority of 200,000. If there are any Iowa editors who want to wager that Coolidge as republican candidate for president, can't carry Iowa again in 1928, we know where they can make a deal.

The foregoing from the Reinbeck Courier is good sound sense, BUT—and there's the question. If the presidential election were to be held now, Coolidge would be lost. A lot of things can happen between now and next year in November, however. The Independent believes the whole matter rests largely upon one point; If Coolidge is nominated by the republicans, Who his democratic opponent is. The right kind of a democratic candidate can carry Iowa next year; the wrong kind can't. Wait until next year, brother; maybe we'll be around and make that deal.

JUST BEGUN TO FIGHT

Reinbeck Courier: Four well informed and intelligent farmers of this community assured us today that our idea of Coolidge, if presented to the next republican convention, will be nominated and in the election will carry Iowa, was all wrong. "The farmers have just begun to fight," they said and pointed out that the farm middle west now had an organized force that had succeeded in putting the McNary-Haugen bill through congress and that with that organization as a starting point, the fight would go on and go more successfully. We hope so.

Yet we cannot but be skeptical. The traditions and training of a lifetime can be as hard to escape for an Iowa republican farmers as for a Vermont president. The same thing that forced Coolidge to veto the bill and to give as a reason for doing something that he had had his mind made up for years to do the very conflicting message that he gave will act to prevent the ordinary Iowa farmer from voting against the regular nominee of the republican party. The ties of party loyalty and the prestige of continued power are not so easily disposed of, as we who thought LaFollette might carry Iowa, know.

"If the election were tomorrow, Coolidge would be snowed under in Iowa," we were told and we agree. But the election never is tomorrow in that sense. When the time arrives that election day is just over tomorrow's rim, things will have shaped themselves differently in the eyes of the farmer, he will have been won by a continued good price for his produce, the old shibboleth that the republican party brings prosperity will again be in clamorous use, all the old arguments that have kept Iowa in line for so many years will have been refurbished and used and the result will not be as many think.

There were long weeks in the last campaign when it was the accepted idea throughout Iowa that "if the election were tomorrow" LaFollette would carry the state. We believe he would. But there was time before election day to change enough minds so that Coolidge had a 20,000 majority. We are accusing no one of insincerity or bad faith. It is just that most all of us can be swayed by certain prejudices, against our own better judgment and against our own best interests.

UNCLE SAM'S HOT STUFF

Another fine example of government bureaucracy is seen in a recent warning by the Federal Trade Commission addressed to the Durant (Okla.) Weekly News, which had been doing battle for home merchants against mail order houses.

The News had published an offer of a year's subscription to anyone who would deliver at its office a mail order catalogue weighing two pounds or more. Of course, the idea was merely to emphasize the advisability of buying at home and incidentally to get the catalogues out of the way

But the Federal Trade Commission ruled that this was interfering with the business of the mail order houses and ordered theNews to stop buying catalogues. This zeal to "protect" the poor, downtrodden mail order houses is truly touching. Really, it is hot stuff.

At any rate, we now know how sacred is the mail order catalogue. It may be neither bought nor sold. It might be adjudged high treason to consign it to the garbage can. In order to safely avert the wrath of the Federal Trade Commission it would be well to keep it in a glass case.—Renwick Times.

THE COMFORTABLE HOME

A comfortable residence for the family provides a decent, clean and well-kept house. This is the foundation of family welfare and happiness. It should be a well-ventilated house, with plenty of fresh air in every room in winter and in summer. In cold weather, the living rooms should be warm and cozy, with the thermometer ranging around 70 degrees, perhaps a trifle below, but not above.

The home should furnish an abundant supply of water, good to drink and ample for cleanliness. Soft water for bathing is a luxury, and they are fortunate who can always draw warm water from the faucet, upon demand. Convenient washing facilities promote cleanly habits.

The comfortable home should be fitted to carry on the industries of the home conveniently—cooking, serving meals, laundry work, sewing, and other activities necessary to keep the family going. It should also furnish a convenient, safe and sufficient place in which to store the belongings of each member of the family: shelf, drawer and closet room.

The comfortable home is a harbor to retire to from out the storms of life. Here "the tired business man" finds sweet repose. Here lads and lassies romp and practice music and try out their developing personalities. Here the wife and mother "carries on" and rules her queendom and feels that she is monarch of all she surveys—when her lord and master is not about. In most families the house is the particular responsibilty and bailiwick of the wife, while the husband manages the business.

One of the chief requirements of a comfortable home is a comfortable and pleasant place to which to welcome friends. Does your home meet all these requirements? If so, congratulations! If not, what can you do about it?

HEALTH ESSENTIALS

A bath every day or at least once a week.

Hands and face washed before meals and at bed-time.

Regular toilet habits.

Teeth brushed at least twice a-day, preferably after each meal and before going to bed.

A regular hour to retire.

Eight, nine or ten hours of sleep; depending on age, manner of life and nervous temperament.

A great deal of fresh air, windows open at night, daily activity in the open, and very much sunshine.

Enough exercise to cause perspiration and stretch every muscle daily.

Correct weight for height. Age makes little difference. One should not grow "fair, fat and forty."

SOFT SNAPS FOR SNAPS

To sew on snaps and have both parts match, you may choose any of the three following methods: Sew the pointed parts on one side of the opening, then rub chalk on the points and fold the other side over carefully making it fit exactly at top and bottom. The chalk will mark the place for the matching part of each snap. Or, pin the top and bottom together and use pins to mark the place of the matching half. Or, press the closed garment with an iron and dents in the fabric will mark the place where the matching half should go.

BAN THE DESSERT

It takes heroic measures to sluff off the extra ten pounds lamented by the overweight sister. To refrain from dessert will help. There are two ways to reduce: Choose bulky vegetables and bran and eat all you want; or eat what you want and only a little of it.

SMILES

Jail Visitor: "So this man is known as a disturber of the peace. What did he do?"

Sheriff: "He plays a saxaphone, mum."

Co-ed: "I want a man who is game, every inch of him."

Athlete: "Wait 'til the end of the season. I have a game leg already."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH
C. W. Stark, Minister.

10:00 a. m.—Bible Study Hour.

11:00 a. m.—Morning Worship and Sermon. Subject, "The Sovereignty of the Spiritual." Phillippians 3: 12-17.

The County Convention meets at Woolstock on Thursday of this week. A good program has been provided. If you can, be sure and go.

A Sunday School picnic will be held in the parlors of the church on Friday evening of this week. A good time awaits you, so come. Bring a covered dish and sandwiches.

The Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. Tom Cullinan on Thursday afternoon of this week. Mrs. E. Boughton will be the leader. Every woman of the church is cordially invited to be present.

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor.

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, March 27:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m.

Divine Worship and Sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "Apart With Jesus." Matt. 17:1.

Junior and Senior Leagues at 6:30. Splendid leaders in both departments. Make this department of church work yours.

Song Service and Gospel Message at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "Mending the Nets." Mark 1:19.

Ladies of the third division of the Aid Society will hold a bake sale in Peterson's Meat Market, Saturday, March 26, beginning at 10:00 a. m.

Women's Foreign Missionary Society Founder's Day program in the church auditorium on Thursday, March 24, beginning at 3:00 p .m. Members of the church who are not members of the society are guests of honor. The members of the society are urged to bring their Incense Envelopes with their Incense Gifts. An old fashioned supper will be served by early candle light.

Epworth League Rally, in Clarion, Friday evening, March 25, at 6:30. Banquet will be served. This is to be a real rally, so please, Epworthians, may we all raally?

Sunday School Workers' Conference in Goldfield, Friday, March 25, beginning at 9:30, closing at 4:00 p. m. Trust a goodly number will find it possible to attend this important meeting.

The Oberammergau Passon Play in pictures and impersonations in this auditorum April 1.

You are most cordially invited to all of our services.

ST. OLAF CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor

Sunday, March 27, Norwegian services will be held at 11:00 a. m. Theme, "Two Reasons for Seeking Jesus." John 6:24-36.

Wednesday, March 30, the North Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. Oscar Hanson at 2:00 p. m.

The Catechetical class will meet at the church at 4:30 p. m.

Prayer meeting will be held at the home of E. Markus at 7:30 p. m.

Thursday, March 31, the South Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. John Mehus at 2:00 p. m.

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN
J. F. Wipperman, Pastor.

Divine service Sunday morning at 10:45 in the English language.

Sunday School at 9:45.

Class at the church Saturday at 10:00.

You are heartily invited to come and worship with us.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Siege of Paris

"THE price of a rat caught in the sewers and half cooked (for fuel, too, is short) is far higher than we formerly used to pay for spring chicken."

This entry in the diary of one of the survivors of the siege of Paris shows the straits to which the gallant defenders of the beleaguered city were reduced for the bare necessities of life. Rats, cab horses, the wild animals in the zoo, plant roots, and even garbage, were utilized as food. Furniture, wainscoting and other woodwork went for fuel in that bitter winter of 1870-71, while the conquering Prussians thundered at Paris' gates, and while the fated city's defenders fought among themselves, starved and attempted futile sallies against the besieging foe.

When Napoleon III was captured with MacMahon's army France had cast off the imperial yoke, abolished the assembly and for the third time in eighty years had declared a republic. General Trochu, a brave man and wise soldier, was appointed military head of a hastily selected provisional government, his colleagues being Gambetta, Favre, Thiers and Simon. The city was at once set in order to resist the advancing Prussians.

But here a new difficulty arose. Paris was full of sects and factions, each at swords' point with the others. In the first French revolution the warring factions had combined as one against the advancing foreign invasion and had repelled it. But now, in 1870, with the German army already within a few days' march of the capital, the political parties wrangled, disputed and accomplished nothing. The only point on which they united was their disgust for Napoleonism. Instead of preparing organized resistance, the chiefs of these factions—"Social Democrats," as they were called—spent their energies in hampering and trying to overthrow the provisional government. Even when, on September 19, the German armies reached Paris and laid siege to the city these malcontents did not cease from their efforts to overthrow Torchu and his colleagues.

The German armies bombarding the city, starvation stalking abroad and internal riots and intrigues—this was the triple state of affairs confronting Paris' defenders. And, over and above all, hung the amazement and black shame of martial France's utter defeat at the hands of her heretofore despised Prussian rival. All this was, apparently, sufficient to break the stoutest spirit. Yet, in spite of it the Parisians fought and suffered like heroes. They endured hunger, cold and other privations with a gay courage that was the admiration of Europe. They joked about the murderous hail of Prussian shells that scourged them daily and nightly with fire and death. They volunteered eagerly for military service. Sortie after sortie was made against the stronger Prussians outside the city, and each crushing defeat served only to increase the warlike zeal of the brave defenders.

Armies were raised in other parts of France to relieve the siege. Garibaldi himself took the field in behalf of the stricken land. But, one after another, each of these relief armies was beaten back by the invading German hosts. At last, on January 19, 1871, a final sally against the enemy failed. Paris could hold out no longer. Nothing was left to eat. For three weeks a bombardment of shells from every quarter had devastated whole sections. Torchu resigned and the French capital surrendered. A truce (January 28) was agreed upon with the Germans and elections were held. In this way a new national assembly was chosen, Thiers was elected executive head of the nation, a temporary seat of government was established at Versailles, near Paris, and peace terms were discussed.

But the Social Democrats and other factions in Paris saw in this an excellent occasion to break into active insurrection. They demanded that Paris be an autonomous (home-rule) city, disclaimed the acts of the government at Versailles and opened an era known as the Commune. Communists were by no means new in Frence, nor was this their first active outbreak. They had been opposed to the empire, and now they had an equal dislike to the Thiers government. So, March 18, 1871, the horrors of a revolution again convulsed unhappy Paris. Home rule was declared and the Communists prepared to hold the city against all comers. The government tried to compromise, but failed. Then civil war broke out, the government attacking the city, the Communists defending it. A second siege of Paris began, lasting from April 2 to May 21. The Communists quarreled among themselves, indulged in the wildest excesses of mob rule, burned public buildings, ordered wholesale executions, scoffed at religion, murdered the archbishop, threatened in an excess of blasphemy to swear out a warrant for the arrest of God, and in similar ways demonstrated their unfitness to exist. The government troops at last forced their way into Paris. After eight days of street fighting the Commune was stamped out, 6,500 of its members being killed and many thousands more imprisoned.

So ended the war, the siege and the Commune. The battered, humiliated French nation slowly began to rebuild its wrecked prosperity. The price of Napoleonism was paid.

FREE AIR

A German scientist says it won't be long before we will read our daily paper before breakfast, then soak it in some kind of dope and eat the paper for breakfast.

* * * *

Can't see anything extra sensational in that. From the taste of most breakfast foods, we've been eating paper for some time now.

* * * *

But granting such comes to pass, we will certainly have a wide variety to choose from in the modern paper.

* * * *

A nice dish of scandal for instance, will be a prominent itom on cold winter mornings, to warm us up.

* * * *

A bowl of government graft will be as filling as a bowl of oatmeal, and a good well seasoned divorce case will take the place of bread and butter.

* * * *

Instead of pancakes and syrup, we will have a platter of gang war and bootleggers.

* * * *

Ham and eggs will give way to gasoline taxes and Chinese rebellions while the weather report will replace the grapefruit.

* * * *

Folks who must be careful of their diet will only have to use care in choosing their newspaper.

* * * *

See by the paper yesterday, that some fellow is going to introduce a bill prohibiting the ladies from using the barber shops, thus returning them once more to strictly male institutions.

* * * *

In other words, make them male order houses.

* * * *

Such being the case, the Ladies Home Journal will lose a lot of subscriptions.

* * * *

Like Barney Google, "We hope you don't feel hurt," but our two enterprising young business men remind us of two kids on opposite sides of the road each trying to make the biggest face at each other.

* * * *

But one of 'em has such a terrific advantage: look at the start nature gave him.

* * * *

Anyway, it's lots of fun.

Local News

The Congregtional Aid Society will hold a Food Sale at the Boughton Store on Saturday, April 2.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Rhodes left for St Louis last Friday, where they will make their future home.

Cordie Butterfield, of Mason City was calling on friends and relatives here last week.

Mrs. W. J. Buchanan, who has been very ill with pneumonia, is reported much improved.

Mrs. Chris Sorenson and son, Chester, from Mason City, were guests at the Harry Sorenson home west of town last week.

Mrs. Thomas Burgess, of Goodell, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith, last Thursday.

Mrs. H. K. Hutchenson, of Swea City, was visiting her father, Chas. Leonard, last week.

A. L. Tracy left for Senic, Washington last Tuesday, where he has a position with the Guthrie Company of St. Paul, who are building an eight-mile tunnel for the Great Western railroad.

Mrs. Sam Crabtree has returned to her home near Clarion after a successful operation for infected gall bladder and gall stones, at the Rochester, Minn., hospital.

Mrs. Frank Jacobmeyer underwent a successful operation at the local hospital, Monday morning.

Joe Smith returned from Bird Island, Minnesota, last Thursday, where he had been on business matters.

Miss Ella Denton returned Thursday from Swea City, where she had been visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John Spitler were visitors at Clarion, Tuesday.

Mrs. Pat Parker and children went to Iowa Falls last Saturday to visit Mrs. Parker's parents.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

IOWA CROP SUMMARY, MARCH 1, 1927

Stocks of grain crops on Iowa farms on March 1, 1927 were about 74 percent smaller than a year ago. The combined stocks of corn, oats and wheat amount to 44 percent of the entire production of these grains in 1926, while a year ago at least 50 percent of the crop was still in producers' hands on March 1. Comparisons of the total production of these three crops for the two years show that the combined grain crops produced in 1925 was nearly 84 percent greater than the 1926 crop.

These figures are based upon reported percentages applied to the entire crop of our important grains and supplied by the official crop correspondents of the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service of Iowa. Mr. Leslie M. Carl, federal statistician, in commenting upon this report, states that official correspondents are farmers in nearly every township in Iowa. These men serve without financial remuneration and some have served for nearly thirty years.

CORN—A total of 190,250,000 bushels of corn, or 46 percent of the 1926 production is estimated as March stocks in the growers' hands. This is about 63,403,000 bushels less than the amount of the March stocks last year, but the fact that the 1925 corn crop was over 65,000,000 bushels larger han the 1926 crop should be regarded in making comparisons.

Reported percentages applied to the entire crop indicate that about 95,125,000 bushels, or 23 percent of the corn produced in Iowa in 1926, will be the marketable supply for shipping out of the producing counties. It was estimated that 25 percent of the 1925 crop and 15 percent of the 1924 crop was shipped out of the producing counties.

Of the total corn crop of Iowa in 1926 only 76 percent was merchantable, as compared with 75 percent for the 1925 crop, 62 percent of the 1924 crop and 83 percent of the 1923 crop.

OATS—Oats reserves in Iowa on March 1, 1927 are estimated at 78,385,000 bushels, or 40 percent of the 1926 crop. A year ago 45 percent, or 110,972,000 bushels of the crop remained as farm reserves. The oats production in 1925 was nearly 80 percent larger than in 1926.

Shipments of oats into market channels will comprise at least 31 percent or 60,748,000 bushels, compared with 86,311,000 bushels a year ago.

WHEAT—Farm reserves of all wheat were only 1,651,000 bushels, or 21 percent of the total crop. The 1926 wheat crop in Iowa was at least 13 percent larger than a year previous. Reserves on March 1, 1926 were 1,390,000 bushels or 19 percent smaller than the present reserves.

The larger pro ortion of the Iowa wheat crop moves out of the producing counties as marketable wheat. It is estimated that 62 percent of the 1926 wheat crop will be represented in such a market movement as compared with 66 percent of the 1925 crop.

IOWA LAND VALUES

Des Moines, Iowa, March 15.—If a dog bites a man that is not news but if a man bites the dog that is news, according to Mr. Dana, the renowned editor of the New York Sun.

"So the abnormal is news, and a large compilation of news is only abnormally multiplied," commented C. D. Reed of the Weather and Crop Bureau of the Iowa Department of Agriculture, when shown a compilation of news items reporting 463 sales of Iowa farms in the 6 months just preceding March 1.

Of these reports, 360 were sufficiently complete to be used in averages. The average size of these 360 farms was 125.6 acres, while the average size of all Iowa farms in 1925 was 162 acres. The average value per acre of the 360 farms was $167.95 which is about $25 per acre above the average value of all improved farms and $58 above the value of all unimproved farms. Plenty of Iowa farms are being sold under foreclosure for $80 to $85 per acre which is about what it would cost to replace the improvements."

WHEN IS A FRESH EGG FRESH?

Des Moines, Iowa, March 15.—The public will be assured that a fresh egg will be fresh if the bill, which Senator J. O. Shaff of Clinton, introduced, becomes a law, according to the members of the Iowa Department of Agriculture, who helped Senator Shaff write the bill.

"One of the big needs of the egg business is that the consumer knows what he is buying," states M. G. Thornburg, Secretary of Agriculture. "The law, which Senator Shaff is proposing, will establish egg grades but will not make them compulsory. It will define a fresh egg so that if other eggs, which are not fresh are so labeled, it will be possible for our inspectors to use information."

In addition to defining a fresh egg the law establishes a Special Grade 1, which shall be that eggs must be delivered to the dealer before they are three days old. The law as proposed, will not be a handicap to legitimate dealers, but should encourage the buying on grade so that farmers who produce a high quality product, will get the benefits. Consumers should be for the bill as they will be able to tell by the label whether eggs are fresh or not.

FARMING SEASON GETTING UNDER WAY

The agricultural season is getting under way early this season not only in Iowa but in other states. Spring work and crop growth in the south are reported as progressing rapidly. Many fruit trees were in full bloom by the middle of February in the Gulf states and even farther north.

Many farmers in Iowa have already started to burn some of the surplus cornstalks in preparation for early oats seeding. Although this practice has been often condemned as robbery of soil fertility, some farmers will deem it a proper precaution this season in guarding against the corn borer.

Oats are being sown in the southern portionso f the wheat belt, with earlier sowings already up. Late snows helped grain in western Kansas but the spring wheat territory is none too optmistic followng a lean year. The South probably will grow considerably more corn and other feed crops this year, so that if acreages are sustained elsewhere a good growing season might bring another year of cheap feed stuffs. Nevertheless many farmers are in much better position to make a profit out of low-priced feed crops this year than from low-priced cash crops.

SEEK GRASS—NOT RACE TRACKS

A campaign is on in thirteen Iowa counties this year to convert the hog pastures from "gymnasiums" into green feed-producing areas. Hogs gain little except exercise from many pastures in the state because most of the permanent ones are filled with weeds, are barren in large part, or grow bluegrass which stays green only a small part of the year.

In order to acquaint the farmers with good hog pasture crops and how best to produce them, farm crops extension specialists of Iowa State College, Ames, are holding special meetings this spring in Bremer, Sioux, Muscatine, Winnebago, Marion, Benton, Shelby, Pottawattamie (East), Pocahontas, Wright, Carroll, Wayne and Greene counties. The following are some of the suggestions being made:

Alfalfa makes a good hog pasture, tho it will not produce the first season and it demands a sweet soil. Alfalfa should not be pastured too heavily. It may be pastured a limited amount and a crop of hay taken off the same season. It will furnish psture about five to six months of the year and will carry ten to fifteen hogs per acre.

Rape, either sown alone or with oats and a mixture of clovers, is a good crop. It may be sown from March to May, either broadcast or drilled, at the rate of five to seven pounds per acre. It will be ready to use in about seven to nine weeks, will furnish pasture for two to six months and will carry fifteen to twenty head of hogs an acre.

Red clover alone or mixed with alsike will be ready to pasture in six to twelve months, will furnish pasture for four to five months and will carry ten to twelve hogs per acre.

Sweet clover may be sown alone or with rape or other clovers in March or April. As with alfalfa, it requires a sweet soil. Sweet clover will be ready to pasture some the first year about July 1. The second season, it will be ready near the first of April and will furnish pasture for four to six months. About ten to fifteen head of hogs with some cattle may be fed on each acre.

Sudan grass will furnish an abundance of feed in five to seven weeks after sown. It may be sown broadcast or with a drill from May to July 15 at the rate of ten to twenty pounds an acre. It will furnish forage for three to four months and will carry fifteen to twenty head of hogs an acre.

Other crops which may be used for hog pastures are oats, rye, oats and field peas together and corn and soybeans together. Where corn and soybeans grown together are hogged-down, no other grain is needed.

SEASON OPENS ON FRUIT PESTS

The orchardist soon must prepare for his first trip thru the trees with the spray rig. Hence it is now time to order the spray materials.

The primary spray material that will be used thruout the year is lime sulfur. Liquid lime sulfur is recommended by the Extension Horticulturists, Iowa State College, because it is easier mixed and generally more economical. In purchasing lime sulfur, estimates for the amount required should be based on an allowance of 1-2 gallon for each tree 20 years old.

Lead arsenate will also be used in all of the sprays and 1-2 pound of this should be bought for each 20-year old tree.

The first spray should be applied at the time that the clusters of apple buds separate but before any of the buds open. This spray should be made up of five to six quarts of lime sulfur and 1 1-2 pounds of lead arsenate to 50 gallons of solution.

The second spray should be applied when 95 percent of the petals have fallen from the blossoms. Its purpose is to combat the first brood of codling moth and apple scab. This second spray is composed of 5 quarts of lime sulfur and 1 1-2 pounds of lead arsenate per 50 gallons of solution.

The third summer spray is applied 10 to 14 days after the second spray. This spray is composed of 4 1-2 or 5 quarts of lime sulfur and 1 pound of lead arsenate in 50 gallons of solution.

This is the last spray that need be applied for early summer apples but for late fall and winter apples, a fourth spray is applied about July 20 to 30 and is composed of 4 quarts of lime sulfur and 1 pound of lead arsenate to 50 gallons of spray material.

A fifth spray is applied about two to three weeks following this fourth spray and is similar in composition to the fourth spray. These last three sprays are all applied to control the codling moth.

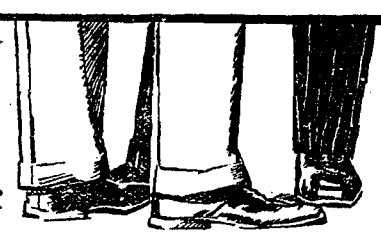
DR. R. E. PORTER
BELMOND, IOWA
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

Modern smokers enjoy the mellow fragrance of Camel

THE smokers of this modern age appreciate the smooth, mellow fragrance of Camels—that taste and goodness that come from the choicest tobaccos grown. Camel's steadily growing popularity with modern smokers has given it the greatest preference any cigarette ever had. In quality and in fame Camel is supreme.

Meet the cigarette that has won the modern world. There is not another like it—regardless of the price. Always mellow, always mild—the smoothest smoke ever made.

"Have a Camel!"



© 1927, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

March Meals

Are difficult to plan, but if you will visit our store you will find a variety of tasty and staple groceries that will make your planning easier. Besides that, you'll find you can save money by taking advantage of our new cash prices. As a sample we are offering this week:

REGULAR PRICES!

CORN	10c
PEAS	2 for 25c
PLUMS, No. 2 can	20c
TOMATOES	10c and 20c
OPAL COFFEE in glass jar	50c
HOMINY	10c
PORK and BEANS	10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S

BELMOND Iowa

PHONE 38

CAR OF POULTRY FEED

Start to finish baby chick mash—that red feed—the same kind that we sold last year. It is treated with imported Spanish Oxide of Iron, a pure 96 percent mineral, and contains cod liver oil. Our price this year is right.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER. Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

Combination SALE!

Saturday, March 26

At the Foundry Building, at the Rock Island Yards

BELMOND, IOWA

Starting Promptly At 1:00 O'clock P. M.

A variety of articles have been listed for this sale, including

20	-	Head of Horses	-	20
10	-	Head of Cattle	-	10
30	-	Head of Hogs	-	30

Among them some good Brood Sows.

Many Items of Farm Machinery Potatoes, Household Goods, Etc.

LIST YOUR ARTICLES FOR SALE---With State Bank of Belmond, phone 16; or with David Kelley, Mgr., phone 228.

TERMS---Purchasers desiring credit, please make arrangements with your local banker.

DAVID KELLEY, Mgr.

J. W. Munnis, Auct. State Bank of Belmond, Clerk

MESERVEY SECTION

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30.
Morning Worship at 10:30 (Ger.)
Young People's Meeting at 7:30.
Evening preaching services at 8:00.

Senior Class in Catechism meets Tuesdays at 3:20 at the parsonage.

Catechetical classes meet Saturday at 1:30.

The Dorcas Society met last Friday evening at the parsonage with eighteen members present. Miss Dena Kuhlers served refreshments. The members decided to donate a Thomas Individual Communion Service to the church. They also made a donation of $25 toward the parsonage which was recently purchased.

Sunday School pupils who did not bring their mission boxes last Sunday are kindly requested to do so either next Saturday or Sunday.

We extend a hearty invitation to all to attend our services.

H. Pannkuk, Pastor.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday School 9:45. G. E. Raecker, Supt.

Missionary lesson presented by Miss Sherrard. Missionary offering.

Morning Worship at 10:45. Subject, "The Gospel of Jesus Christ in Romans."

Practicing for Easter services at 2:30 p. m.

E. L. C. E. at 7:00 p. m. Subject, "What Does A Missionary Do?" Miss Sherrard, Leader.

German Prayer Meeting at Rev. H. Raecker's home.

Mid-week Services at the church on Thursday at 7:30 p. m.

Sunday is Conference Sunday, April 3.

Let us all be out next Sunday.

Laurence Sohl, Pastor.

MESERVEY SCHOOL NOTES

Grace Groen, one of our alumni, visited the high schiol Friday afternoon. Let's have more visitors.

All of our English classes have been studying classics the past six weeks. The Freshmen have esjoyed George Eliot's "Silas Marner" immensely. The Sophomores are having their first Shakespeare study in "The Merchant of Venice." The Juniors and Seniors are finishing their second play, "Hamlet."

The Home Economics class is making bread this week.

SILVER WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb Lauster observed their 25th wedding anniversary last Sunday by entertaining their relatives to a dinner, which was greatly enjoyed, and a pleasant afternoon was spent by those present. Mr. and Mrs. Lauster were well remembered with lovely gifts and good wishes.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Wilfred Paul returned from Minnesota last Monday, where he had been spending the past few months at the home of his uncle, Fred Paul.

C. Bier was a Mason City business caller on Monday.

Mrs. M. Halfwassen returned home from German Valley, Illinois last Saturday, where she had been called by the illness and death of her father.

Miss Irena Butz and brother Luverne were Belmond callers last Saturday.

Mrs. H. B. Frey and son Wilbert were visiting at her parental home in Kiester, Minn. the latter part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Fischer, of Ft. Dodge were week end visitors with relatives here and attended the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. G. Lauster.

L. B. Hulsebus and family, of Dows were visiting relatives here last Saturday.

Mrs. Anna Brater, of Janesville, spent the week end here with Bernard and with friends, returning to her school work Sunday.

H. Fischer and son, Herman returned from Logan last Saturday evening. The latter will spend his vacation here.

Mrs. H. Wilkens and daughters spent Saturday afternoon and Sunday at the home of her sister near Garner and visited with her mother, who is getting along as well as can be expected from the effects of her recent accident.

The Misses Amelia Hinkey and Emma Lacher, of Hartley were visitors at the Roy Claus home Sunday and Monday. They returned to their home Tuesday accompanied by Mrs. Lacher who had been here since the first of the month.

Roy Claus and family were accompanied to Mason City by Miss Ella Lacher, of this place, and Mrs. Lacher and the Misses Emma Lacher and Amelia Hinkey, of Hartley, last Monday, where they spent the day shopping and viewing the city.

The Misses Tena Watermiller and Minnie Schmidt, of Belmond were Sunday visitors with Miss Fannie Bruns and also were at the home of Geo. Watermiller before returning.

Mrs. B. Vierkant returned home Sunday from a week's visit at the Lloyd Bishop home in Goodell.

Feed you chicks Nutrena Chick Mash with cod liver oil this spring, and raise what you hatch. Phone your order. C. J. Janssen, Meservey phone 417. 1c

Louis Vandermyde, of Morrison, Illinois was a week end guest at the H. K. Pals home, remaining until Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dirks took their baby daughter to Mason City Tuesday where she is receiving treatments at the Park hospital.

Mrs. Emma Dorenkamp and children Emil and Esther spent a short time in town last Friday.

Leppo Wessels and family, from near Ventura, spent last Tuesday afternoon visiting at the parental Wessels home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schumaker, of Thornton were business callers here last Thursday.

Mrs. A. E. Muller and son Donald were Mason City callers last Wednesday, Donald attending the Scout Leaders' School in the evening, at the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Dale Mabb, of Thornton was in town Thursday on business and calling on acquaintances.

Messrs. Fred Schluter, H. F. Reif and A. E. Muller attended a special meeting of the Masonic Order in Thornton last Thursday evening. The supper was served by the O. E. S. at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. O. Young.

George Grosz attended a Scout leaders' meeting last Wednesday evening at Mason City.

The Helping Hand Society of the Evangelical church met at the Jacob Nissen home last Thursday for the monthly meeting with Mrs. Nissen and Mrs. C. Bier hostesses.

Rev. H. Pannkuk returned home from Pella last Thursday where he had attended a board meeting at Central College.

The Revs. Pannkuk and Poppen took part in the installation services at the Reformed church at Alexander on Sunday evening, March 13. A large crowd was present and a goodly number from here attended.

Rev. H. M. Raecker, of Sheffield spent Thursday here visiting relatives.

Mesdames Jerry Koenen and Dave Koenen, of Latimer, and the latter's mother, Mrs. W. T. Janssen, of Kings, Illinois were calling at the Rev. Pannkuk home Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Janssen's husband is the pastor of the Reformed church at Kings.

Now is the time to place your order for Nutrena Chick Mash with cod liver oil. C. J. Janssen. 1c

H. Barkema Sr. has been confined to his home the past week on account of illness. Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Pals accompanied him to Hampton, Tuesday, to consult physicians regarding his ailment.

News About Iowa People And Events

G. M. Carman, of Buffalo Center, Winnebago county says that the Buffalo Center Sugar Beet club, organized from boys in the vocational agriculture class at the Buffalo Center high school under the direction of their teacher, Fred G. Bliss, succeeded in making an average return of $84.84 per member on one acre plots. This return amounted to an average yield of 14.14 tons of sugar beets per acre, which sold for $6 per ton. The yield obtained by the club was about four tons higher than the average tonnage grown by all farmers selling to the American Beet Sugar company at Mason City. Raymond Steenblock won highest honors in the club by producing a yield of 17.95 tons per acre from his plot of slightly less than an acre. His gross return on an acre basis would have been $107.70. As a reward for his excellent club work he attendedthe boys' and girls' short course at Ames with all expenses paid by the American Beet Sugar company, of Mason City.

* * * *

Mayor Stiner, as overseer of the poor for the city of Cherokee, acting in behalf of the supervisors who have power to reverse his decision has declined to extend aid to persons who own and operate automobiles. There have been several such applications made to him within recent time. In all instances of this nature aid has been refused. The automobiles are not employed in any way that helps to produce revenue for family support and are held by the mayor to be in the class of luxuries. He concludes that if their owners have funds to purchase gas, tires, oil and accessories they have funds to purchase groceries and fuel. He holds, further, that the needs of any man's family should come before the requirements of his own personal pleasure with which he could, without injury to himself, or any other, dispense.

Former state senator Ed M. Smith, of Winterset, has some ideas touching the evasion of law by radio broadcasting stations. He calls attention to the fact tha there is a stringent law in Iowa against lotteries. So airtight is this law that even a merchant may not give away anything by drawing, even if the chance to win a prize costs nothing. Selling merchandise by appealing to the gambling instinct is taboo in Iowa and its is generally regarded as a good law. It protects legitimate business firms from having to get into the gambling game to meet the competition of gamblers. Now comes the radio seed houses with lottery games in which gambling instinct is capitalized on a big scale. In the name of fair play and equality under the laws of Iowa, the legislature should get busy.

* * * *

Palo Alto county has a live game warden by the name of Ross Moses. He had his suspicions that people in that section were shooting pheasants and so he planned to trap some of the guilty parties. Gust Wesfalt, of Rodman, was the first victim. He plead guilty to shooting seven pheasants and Squire Stenhmeer of Emmets burg imposed a fine of $250. Others have been initiated into the mysteries of law enforcement as featured by Game Warden Moses.

* * * *

A firm in Osceola, Clarke county, purchased 600 bushels of black walnuts last fall and during the winter proceeded to remove the kernels which were sold to candy and cake makers for $1.50 per pound. Black walnut "meats" are in great demand because it is the only nut whose kernel will stand the heat required in making candy or baking cakes without losing its flavor. The forestry department at Ames is urging the planting of walnuts on land not fit for farming which will become of great value in the coming years. There are a number of varieties of black walnuts. Planting of the large size is urged.

* * * *

Dr. John C. Merriam, an early graduate of Lenox college, at Hopkinton, Delaware county, is given prominence in Who's Who in the National Capital. After graduating from Lenox college his studies were continued in Munich and later postgraduate work in the leading educational institutions of this country. Eventally he was elected to the position of professor of palentology and historical geology in the University of California, which he held for several years. From his experience and scientific research Dr. Merriam soon became quoted as an outstanding authority in paleontological circles. Such was his rapid rise in the field of scence that when the endowed Carnegie Institution was established in Washington and a selection was to be made for its president, Dr. Merriam was called as its head. He has a brother who has distinguished himself ineducational activities and for many years has been a member of the faculty of Chicago University. A cousin, Frank Merriam, was auditor of state for Iowa some years ago and he is now speaker of the house of representatives in California. He is also a graduate of Lenox.

READ THE WANT ADS

BETTER HAVE THAT
Spring Suit
Cleaned and Pressed
Men's Suits....$1.50 a Suit
Ladies' Suits $2.00 and Up
Ladies' Coats $1.75 and Up

H. F. REIF
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17; Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

This coupon and 25c entitle the undersigned to one 35c can of Acme Quality Enamel-Kote, any color, and a special 20c Paint Brush.
Name_____
Address_____
To acquaint you with Acme Quality, we are making a special offer for a short time only.
SPECIAL OFFER
55c Value for 25c

Would your house bring what it's worth in its present paint condition?

Does your house really look its best? You may not want to sell now—but who can say when you might care to do so? Are you proud of your doors—your floors—your interior and exterior woodwork? Is the color keynote really pleasing? Why don't you find out how little it would cost to make the whole place beautifully fresh and new-looking?

ACME QUALITY* Paint and Varnish *looks better—lasts longer

Nobody makes house paint that goes so far as Acme Quality House Paint. Nobody takes the pains to advise so intelligently on color combinations. Come in and talk paint with us.

C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

now only CHEVROLET
for Economical Transportation
$595 f.o.b Flint Mich

The Beautiful Fisher Body
COACH

—a host of improvements

New AC Air Cleaner
New AC Oil Filter
New Heavy One-Piece Full-Crown Fenders
New Windshield Pillars (Narrower to provide perfect, clear vision)
New Bullet-Type Headlamps
New Tire Carrier
New Coincidental Lock (Combination Ignition and Steering Lock)
New Remote Control Door Handles
New Duco Colors
New Gasoline Gauge
New Radiator
New Bodies by Fisher
New Windshield on Open Models
New and Improved Transmission
New Brake and Clutch Pedal Closure (Preventing excessive dust on floor of car)

With the beautiful Chevrolet Coach reduced to $595, you no longer need to deny yourself the luxury of owning a closed car of true distinction, fine quality and modern design. The Fisher Body is spacious, comfortable and finished in lasting lustrous St. James Gray Duco. And like all other Chevrolet models, the Coach provides Chevrolet's world famous smartness, power and dependability, enhanced by a host of new quality features and mechanical improvements. Come in! See the greatest closed car value of all time!

The most beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet history!

—amazing low prices

The Touring or Roadster	$525
The Coach	$595
The Coupe	$625
The Sedan	$695
The Sport Cabriolet	$715
The Landau	$745
1-Ton Truck (Chassis only)	$495
½-Ton Truck (Chassis only)	$395

Balloon Tires now standard on all models. All prices f.o.b. Flint, Mich.

In addition to these low prices Chevrolet's delivered prices include the lowest handling and financing charges available.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa
RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

The Spirit of Fairness

THE greatest asset of any bank is its dependability and if any one quality more than any other assists a bank in establishing a reputation for dependability it is that of "fairness."

That is why this bank has exerted every effort to carry into its daily transaction with patrons a spirit of fairness---fairness to its depositors, fairness to its borrowers, and fairness to itself.

In the same spirit of fairness we should appreciate larger balances in those of our checking accounts that have been carried at a loss.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

FORMER GOODELL GIRL MARRIED

Cashman-Tanner

Tuesday, March 1, at St. Thomas of Canterbury Catholic church in Chicago occurred the marriage of Miss Leona Cashman to William Howard Tanner, of Chicago. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mrs. Thos. Cashman of this place. She attended high school here and completed her education at Mount St. Clair, Clinton.

The bride is an accomplished musician, having instructed an orchestra and large class in music at the convent in Green, Iowa. For the past four years she has been doing secretarial work in Chicago and at the time of her marriage was secretry to the general manager of the Celite Products Company.

Leona is well known here and has a host of friends in this vicinity. She is a woman of splendid character and high ideals and will make a fine helpmate for the man who has won her as his bride.

Mr. Tanner is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tanner, of Chicago and is manager of a clothing store in Chicago.

After the wedding the happy bridal couple left for New York City to spend their honeymoon and after April 15 will be at their home in Chicago. Goodell friends join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Tanner much happiness and a long and happy wedded life.

Monroe Graeber, who has been working at the Goelz barber shop in Belmond the past few weeks finished working there Saturday night as Mr. Goelz is again able to work.

The Twin Lake follow-up meeting of the ladies' farm bureau was held at the home of Mrs. Framer Cordes on Thursday.

A large crowd of relatives and friends gathered at the Will Heginger home Thursday evening in honor of Mrs. Lee Robbins' birthday. A pleasant timew as spent and delicious refreshments were served.

Mrs. Glen Avery was pleasantly surprised Saturday evening by a host of friends who came to help her celebrate her birthday. Everyone enjoyed a fine time and the refreshments.

Mrs. Pete Lackore returned home Friday from the Steele hospital. She is feeling fine since her recent operation.

The Roy Spitler family entertained relatives from Buffalo Center on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Nelson and children, of Belmond visited Wednesay at his parental home.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas Schmalle and Mrs. Gladys Bennett, of Garner visited Thursday at the Met Avery home.

Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Trumbell, of Klemme spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Del Christie.

Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Church and son Dent, Dr. Snearly and D. M. Conlan were called on the grand jury held at Garner last Thursday.

U. B. Ladies' Aid met Wednesday of this week, entertained by Mesdames Scott, Blue and Wesenberg.

The annual school election passed off in this city very quietly on Monday of last week. About 143 votes were cast, F. W. McNutt receiving 103, Anton Ahrenkiel 93, Lew Wesenberg 43 and Alfred Carpenter 40.

Miss Nettie Thada spent Monday at Garner between trains visiting her sister, Mrs. Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Finn, of Belmond visited Monday with Miss Eliza Cashman.

Miss Clara Christie returned on Wednesday from her work at Clear Lake because of illness.

A deal was closed last week in which George Burkett, of Mason City sold his farm east of town to Harm Rust.

Mrs. Naber, of Lyle, Minnesota, came Wednesday and visited her friend, Mrs. J. Christie. On Thursday she went to Ackley to visit her mother. The Nabers formerly lived here about seven years ago.

Misses Louise Ahrenkiel and Louise Mason autoed to Burt and Titonka on Monday and visited the Prof. Peters family at Burt and friends of Miss Ahrenkiel's at Titonka, she having taught there two years ago.

Mrs. Mayme Dakin Ellis, who resides at Minneapolis called on friends here Sunday. She will be remembered by many here as Miss Dakin before her marriage and visited here severalyears ago when her sister, Mrs. Prof. Freeman lived here.

Mr. Stevenson, of Webster City, spent Thursday in this town collecting funds for the Sunday School Union. He has called here once a year for many years and always receives a good offering which is used to organize Sunday Schools in different places.

Mrs. Leo Ahrenkiel entertained several children at her home Thursday in honor of her son, Morris' tenth birthday. Thec hildren enjoyed a fine time and delicious refreshments.

Mrs. Amos Hanson accompanied the Earl Jenison family, of Belmond to Clarion on Friday, and attended the Wright county spelling contest. Their son, George Earl was one of the contestants.

The school ball team beat the town team in the game held Friday afternoon by a score of 10 to 2. Leo Finn played with the town team and while running fell and hurt his knee very badly but is much better at this writing.

Lyle LaRue resigned his position at the Lamer Drug Store and left Thursday to Buffalo Center where he has a position.

Seven car loads of stock were shipped fromh ere to Chicago Saturday evening. Bill Tanner, manager of the Farmers Elevator and Shipping Association accompanied them in and will remain in Chicago a few days, expectng to return home on Wednesday.

Mrs. Lloyd Carpenter was taken to the Lutheran hospital at Hampton on Friday and underwent an operation on Saturday. Lloyd is staying with her at Hampton and their little daughter is being cared for by its grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Carpenter.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Nelson, of Belmond, and Miss Bessie Benshoff, of Iowa Falls spent Friday with the former's sister, Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel.

Mrs. Harry Bonwell returned the fore part of the week to her home at Renwick, having enjoyed a visit at her parental home.

Mrs. Homer Ness went to Story City Saturday to visit over Sunday with relatives.

Mr. Cole, of Fonda has rented the garage here and will start work there this week.

A spelling contest with pupils of the Twin Lake rural schools was held at the Center school house last Friday evening. The little Burhow girl from Lulu Wilkins' school won first prize, so the silver loving cup remains in this school for the second year. She also received a cash prize, given by the teachers from Twin Lake township.

Miss Grace Luttchswager went to Alden Friday night to visit over Sunday with home folks.

SHOWER FOR ROWAN GIRL

On Thursday evening of last week about forty friends of Miss Effie Olson gathered at the L. R. Fitz home and tendered her a miscellaneous shower. The house was tastily decorated in green and white streamers. The entertainment of the evening was centered around the thots of Ireland. The first event was "The Wearin' of the Green," which was won by Mrs. R. A. Azeltine. Mrs. Dave Veeder won the consolation prize of a stick of gum. "Putting the necktie of Pat" was won by Mrs. W. J. Peddle. The guests retired to the porch where they "Walked to Dublin" by the aid of field glasses. This proved very hilarious to the onlookers. Partners for supper were found by the aid of a St. Patrick's Romance which was read afterwards. Shamrock ice cream and white cake with green frosting and coffee were served. The guest of honor then pushed in a wheelbarrow on which her gifts had been placed. The wheelbarrow was tastily decorated in green and white. Before each gift was unwrapped Miss Olson was requested to state what she would use each of the many useful articles she received for. As the guests left they kissed the blarney stone. Those from out of town who were present were Mrs. Dave Veeder and Mrs. Cliff Olson, of Belmond and Mrs. Tom Ross of Galt.

Johnson-Conn

A marriage of interest in collegiate circles is that of Miss Genevieve Johnson, of Dumont, Iowa, and Mr. Dallis Conn, of Rolland, Iowa, which took place at the Grace M. E. church at Waterloo, Wednesday.

The Rev. E. D. Rodman read the service. He was pastor at Allison when Mr. and Mrs. Conn were high school pupils there, and was Mr. Conn's first scoutmaster when he became a scout at Allison. Mrs. Conn is the daughter of Mrs. Kate Johnson of Dumont, Iowa. She is a graduate of Drake University of the class of 1925 and a member of the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and Beta Phi Eta. She also spent one year at Columbia University, where she took work in Dramatic Art. Mr. Conn is a graduate of Iowa University with the class of 1926. He was a student in the commerce college and is a member of Delta Sigma Pi, Commerce Fraternity and Delta Upsidon, a social fraternity. He also attended Columbia University one year. He is the youngest son of Mrs. Kate Conn Hanna, of Lake Worth, Florida. The young couple will live in the Elmwood apartments in Des Moines. Mr. Conn is city salesman for the Shaffer Oil Company.

—Des Moines Sunday Register.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hansen went to Rochester, Minnesota last week, where Mrs. Hansen underwent an examination. Mr. Hansen returned late in the week and will go up again this week when Mrs. Hansen is to be operated on for goitre.

R. Virden, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Hubbard McCallum, of Mason City, left Saturday to be at the bedside of their brother, Frank Virden, who is seriously ill.

Gae Fletcher has accepted a position with the Standard Oil Co. at Ft. Dodge. The family will move to said place about April 1.

Relatives here have received word of the serious illness of James Whitten at his home at Bloomfield, Ontario.

Mrs. Etta Carr returned Saturday from Latimer, where she had made her daughter, Mrs. Henry Miller, an extended visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hansen and son, Alfred went to Hampton last Tuesday to visit their son, Julian.

George Wessels Jr. visited friends here last week. He is enjoying a twelve days' furlough from the Great Lakes Training Station. George reports that his parents' home at Ft. Dodge is under quarantine for scarlet fever.

Miss Jeanette Mosman, who has been a house guest at the Bert Payne home departed Saturday for her home at Luverne.

Mrs. R. H. Keith, Kenneth and Margaret were Dows business callers Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Whitten and children spent Friday evening with their cousin, Mrs. Lizzie Haspaska at Clarion.

Mrs. Amos Cowley spent last week assisting in the care of her granddaughter at the Harley Jacobson home near Dows.

Edwin Nelson's father passed away at the Hampton hospital last Thursday evening. The remains were taken to Sheffield, Illinois for burial.

Ezra Ingerham, of Swaledale is visiting his sisters, Mrs. Mary Braden and Mrs. Amos Cowley and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Tresidder spent part of last week at the home of their son, Howard in Clarion.

Among those from Rowan attending the county spelling contest were Supt. Adamson, Miss Pruss, Mesdames Ray Harsen, Roy Hyde and Chas. Richards, Marlyce Harson, Mae Hyde, Frances and Darrel Farran.

Mrs. Nels Hansen received word Friday of the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Roy Freetley at her home at Lombard, Illinois.

Fred Hackley attended a shoe dealers' convention at Des Moines last Thursday.

N. B. Olson returned last week from a business trip to Chicago and Sheffield, Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie White are moving to Eagle Grove, where Mr. White has employment.

O. R. Myers was called to Illinois last week by the illness of his father.

Kenneth Keith will return to Ames Wednesday to resume his school duties.

F. M. Myers was a business caller in Des Moines and Indianola last week.

Fred Ohlerking will be employed on the Chester Moellering farm this season.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Sinclair, of Clarion spent Sunday at the F. M. Myers home.

Mrs. Wilbur Utz pleasantly entertained the Standard Bearers at her home last Friday evening. There were thirteen present. The games and luncheon was carried out on the St. Patricks order.

Mesdames J. W. Bounds and F. H. Fowler entertained the local Standard Bearers, who had as their guests about twenty Standard Bearers from Clarion, at the M. E. church basement last Saturday afternoon. The local Standard Bearers was reorganized at this time.

Rowan School Notes

Several of the High School students and faculty were invited out to the I. C. Aldrich home on March 14th to help DeRush Hughes celebrate his sixteenth birthday. A lively evening of games was planned by Raymond Aldrich and were thoroughly enjoyed by all. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Aldrch and the birthday cake was sampled by everybody.

Mr. Swanson is busy developing a baseball team which we hope will be able to give some of our neighboring schools some keen competition this spring.

The members of the Senior class were guests of Miss Margaret Keith on St. Patrick's night. The evening's entertainment was so well and cleverly planned by Miss Keith that the time passed much too rapidly for the guests. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Keith, assisted by Mrs. D. H. Keith, of Goldfield, Laura Aldinger, Evelyn Whitten and Violet Patton. During the entire evening the Shamrock, "Pat and Mike," and other characteristics of the "Emerald Isle" were featured. At a late hour the guests departed declaring that this was one of the most enjoyable events of the season.

At the regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Club last Tuesday evening the parents furnished most of the program which was thoroughly enjoyed. After the program and refreshments, a few games of volley ball were played. The championship game between the teachers and board of education was quite thrilling and the teachers were victorious.

Supt. Adamson and Miss Bruss accompanied the champion spellers, Mae Hyde and Marlyce Harson, to Clarion to compete in the county contest. Both spellers made a good showing but Marlyce stood up the longer of the two.

The Junior class and Prin. Swanson are very busy working on their play, "A Bunch of Fun," which is to be given April 8th and 9th.

ALEXANDER NEWS NOTES

Alexander School Notes

Concha Flores, the bright Mexican girl, quit school last Tuesday to move with her parents to Nebraska. She was in the third grade and ranked as one of the best students in the grade.

A week ago last Friday the Domestic Science girls entertained the Board members, their wives and most of the faculty to a 6:30 o'clock dinner. After the dinner a basket ball game was enjoyed between the women and the men. At the end of the game the score was declared a tie but in the overtime period the women staked a wonderful rally to win by a two point margin.

Margaret Hall, a seventh grader, represented our school in the county spelling contest last Saturday at Hampton. She was tenth from the last to go down out of a group of forty-four.

Junior Class Play, "Borrowed Money," April 22nd.

The High School enjoyed a splendid talk on "The Value of An Education" last Thursday morning by Rev. Moody. The key-note of his talk being: that a high school education is absolutely necessary for every boy and girl of today, that an education should not be measured in dollars only but rather from the standpoint as a more useful citizen to his community by having obtained a more complete training.

We are sorry to lose Dick and Wilbert Hansen from the tenth and ninth grades. Both boys stated that they did not want to quit school but that it was necessary for them to work the home farm.

The faculty were entertained at a four course dinner at the Greenfield home last Monday evening.

The fifth grade are making history booklets covering the early explorers chiefly and the sixth grade are completing their Iowa booklets.

A crowd of well over the three hundred mark enjoyed the faculty play, "Three Pegs" last Friday evening. A number of very fine compliments have been paid the teachers on the play and they wish to express that they are appreciated.

As indicative of what can be accomplished when systematic effort is expended in diversified farm operations Clayton county is put forward as the champion in the United States. Elkader, the county seat, with a population of 1,400 has two banks with deposits of over $2,000,000. Clayton county with a population of 24,000 has 26 banks and these have deposits of $14,000,000. There has never been a speculative land boom in the county. Of the 3,063 farms in the county 3,006 are farmed by the owners. Almost no landlordism. In 1925 there were 2,064,374 eggs marketed. Half a million chickens are kept. There are ten cow test associations in Clayton county. In 1925 nearly five million pounds of butter were sold out of the state. For six years in succession this county has won the famous Kildee trophy for efficient cow test association work. It will send the U. S. Champion Junior Judging team to contest in London this year, the legislature having appropriated $5,000 to pay the expenses of the trip. Clayton county has the largest whole milk creamery in the world. The milk tickets total over $200,000 per month.

Wm. Meves, of Clinton county has purchased a thirty-six acre tract of timber land east of the Wapsie river and south of the Lincoln highway in the western part of the county on which he and his sons will start a timber reserve. He will specialize in planting black walnut trees. Davenport boy scouts have purchased twenty-five acres of land south of Wheatland, in the western part of Clinton county. It is situated along the Wapsie river and will be a camp site.

Victor G. Nesheim, of Lawler, Chickasaw county, says that the firm of Murray & Murray, of that place recently shipped a car of high class dairy cattle to New York. The car went by express on the fast passenger train on the C. M. & St. P. Transportation charges were $470. This is the first time that Lawler buyers could boast of shipping such high class cattle that they could afford to ship by express.

What You Want In the WANT ADS

Belmond Opera House

THURSDAY, MARCH 24
"Riding Romance"
Al Hoxie in a thrilling frontier romance.
They believed him a criminal, but he turned out otherwise.
"GREET THE WIFE"
Two-reel Comedy.
Prices 10c and 20c

FRIDAY, MARCH 25
DANCE
Music by Smith's Orchestra.
Dance Tickets 75c.

SATURDAY, MARCH 26
"Dangerous Fists"
Featuring Jack Perrin and his horse, Starlight.
The man who tried to steal his girl found he had "Dangerous Fists."
"RADIO LOVE"
Two-reel Comedy.
Prices 10c and 20c

MONDAY AND TUESDAY, MARCH 28-29
"Say It Again"
Richard Dix in a real comedy role.
Lend an ear to this one! And believe us when we say "Say It Again" is a picture worth repeating on.
With Richard mistaken for the ruler of a Balkan comedy kingdom, —and then when the people find out—!!?!—Fireworks!
Also 2-reel Educational Comedy
Prices 10c and 25c

THIS COUPON!
And 15 Cents will admit One Person to the Opera House, Monday or Tuesday, March 28 or 29.

These Cars are DOUBLY guaranteed!

YOU RECOGNIZE the emblems shown below. But do you know what General Motors has done to make each car the outstanding value in its price class? How it is using its great resources to provide each with a finer engine—a stouter chassis—a more beautiful, more lasting body—a finish that defies wear and weather—quality materials in those hidden places where quality is most needed? You'll save money on your new car by clipping the coupon below. Mail it TODAY.

CHEVROLET

7 models—$525 to $745. The quality car of the low-priced field. 3-speed transmission. Dry-disc clutch. Smooth, powerful engine. Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. Fully equipped.
CHEVROLET TRUCK CHASSIS: ½-ton, $395; 1-ton, $495.

PONTIAC — Chief of the Chiefs — Product of General Motors

5 models—$775 to $975. Has largest 6-cylinder engine in its price class. Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. Beautiful, stylish lines. Value proved by unprecedented sales.

OLDSMOBILE

11 models—$875 to $1,190. Gratifies your finer taste. Satisfies every need. Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. 6-cylinder motor. Harmonic balancer, 4-wheel brakes and other new features.

OAKLAND — Product of Pontiac Building

7 models—$1,095 to $1,295. The "six" that is winning and holding goodwill everywhere. Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. Rubber silenced chassis and other tested improvements. 4-wheel brakes.

BUICK — Valve-in-Head — Motor Cars

18 models—$1,195 to $1,995. Everybody knows Buick's worth. Now finer than ever. New models vibrationless beyond belief. 6-cylinder valve-in-head engine. Fisher bodies. Duco finish.

LaSalle

6 models—$2,495 to $2,685. The new and beautiful car designed and built as a companion car to Cadillac. Has V-type 8-cylinder engine. Bodies by Fisher. Duco finish. Now on display.

CADILLAC

50 body styles and types—$2,995 to $9,000. The pioneer in the 8-cylinder field. Standard of the world. Duco finish. Bodies by Fisher and Fleetwood. 500 different color and upholstery combinations.

(ALL PRICES F. O. B. FACTORIES)

GENERAL MOTORS

CLIP THE COUPON

GENERAL MOTORS (Dept. A), Detroit, Mich.

CHEVROLET ☐
PONTIAC ☐
OLDSMOBILE ☐
OAKLAND ☐
BUICK ☐
LASALLE ☐
CADILLAC ☐

Please send, without obligation to me, illustrated literature describing the General Motors product I have checked—together with the name of the nearest dealer in case I may wish a demonstration. ALSO YOUR PROVING GROUND BOOK.

Name .....
Address .....
.....

FRIGIDAIRE Electric Refrigerator ☐ DELCO-LIGHT Electric Plants ☐

Wright County Board Proceedings

Clarion, Iowa, March 7, 1927.

The Board of Supervisors of Wright County, met at the court house in Clarion, Iowa, on March 7, 1927, as per adjournment.

Members present, E. E. Kitley, Chairman and Supervisors James Mehl, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder and J. D. Baker, with Deputy County Auditor in attendance.

The minutes of February 19, 1927 were read and on motion approved.

On motion Supervisor James Mehl was authorized to purchase a tractor with solid rubber tires.

On motion Mrs. D. A. Sherwood of Goldfield, was allowed eight dollars ($8.00) per month, beginning with March 1, 1927, and the County Auditor was instructed to send her a warrant each month for that amount.

The following resolution was presented and on motion approved:

BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, that E. M. McCall be and hereby is appointed and employed by Wright County, Iowa, and by the Board of Supervisors thereof to assist the County Attorney of Wright County, Iowa, in the investigation by the Grand Jury of said county as to whether or not the criminal laws of Iowa relating to the conduct of banks have been violated, and in the prosecution of all such violations, if any there be.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, that we hereby ask the District Court of Wright County, Iowa, to appoint E. M. McCall to assist the County Attorney of Wright County, Iowa, in the above mentioned capacity.

The recommendation of Engineer J. K. Hilton in Re: condemnation proceedings for right-of-way on Primary Project F-267, Primary Road No. 15, was presented to the board and on motion was approved by them.

It was moved, seconded and carried that Mrs. Sullivan's compensation for services in the County Treasurer's office be fixed at $100.00 per month, from and after March 1, 1927.

After discussion of various county matters, the board adjourned to March 8, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY,
Chairman.
E. M. CALLENDER,
Deputy County Auditor.

Clarion, Iowa, March 8, 1927.

Board met as per adjournment, all members present with Deputy Auditor in attendance.

On motion E. B. Rayner & Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota, were employed to check the Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove, Iowa.

Resolution for condemnation of land for road changes on Primary Road No. 15 was read before the board as follows:

WHEREAS, it is the desire of the Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, to make certain changes in Primary Road No. 15, in accordance with the recommendation of the County Engineer therefor, which recommendation is accompanied by a report upon the proposed change and a plat and survey of the same. Said recommendation, report and plat are now being on file in the office of the County Auditor of Wright County, Iowa, and

WHEREAS, such changes will avoid the construction and maintenance of bridges, straighten the road and avoid railroad crossings and dangerous corners, all as set out in the report and recommendation of J. K. Hilton, County Engineer, filed under date of March 7, 1927, and

WHEREAS, this Board has been unable to acquire the necessary right-of-way for the proposed change by agreement with the owners thereof.

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED by the Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, acting under Chapter 237 of the Code of 1924, that steps be taken to acquire the following described right-of-way by condemnation, to-wit:—

A strip of land owned by H. C. Enger, mortgaged to H. L. Winakell, containing approximately .314 acres and described as follows, to-wit:—

Commencing at a point sixty six (66) feet north of the Southeast corner of Section No. Twenty Four (24), Township No. Ninety Three (93), North Range No. Twenty Four (24), West of the Fifth P. M., and running thence north 414.1 feet; thence east 33 feet; thence south 414.1 feet; thence west 33 feet to the point of beginning.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the Auditor be and he is hereby directed to cause notice to be served on the owners of record of such land with occupants and upon mortgagees of record as provided in Section 4611 of the said 1924 Code of Iowa, and that April 5, 1927, at ten o'clock A. M. of said day be and the same is hereby set as a final time at which said owners may appoint their appraiser, and this Board will meet at their room in the Court House in Clarion, Iowa, at said time to appoint an appraiser as provided in said Statute and also to appoint a second appraiser in case the said owners have failed to select one, or having selected one, he fails to appear and qualify as such appraiser, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that all proceedings in connection herewith be and they are hereby adjourned until the said 5th day of April, 1927, at 10:00 o'clock a. m., of which adjournment all interested parties will take notice.

Moved by Schroeder, seconded by Baker, that the foregoing resolution be adopted. On roll call the vote was as follows:

E. E. Kitley, Aye; James Mehl, Aye; J. C. Peterson, Aye; L. W. Schroeder, Aye; J. D. Baker, Aye. Motion was declared carried, all members having voted aye.

On motion L. N. Archerd was retained to take charge of the condemnation proceedings.

The official bond of Henry B. Hallock for the office of County Treasurer from January 3, 1927, to January 3, 1929, was on motion approved.

It was moved and seconded that the petition of Henry Tesdahl, et al, for the establishment of a Secondary Road Assessment District be referred to the County Engineer. Motion carried.

It was moved and seconded that the County Auditor be and he is instructed to take the necessary legal steps leading to the proposed vacation of such portions of the old location of Primary Road No. 15, lying east of the C. R. I. & P. Ry. in Sections 7 and 8, Pleasant Township, and Sections 12 and 13 in Belmond Township. Motion carried.

The following claims were presented, audited, allowed and warrants ordered drawn on the proper funds for their payment:

LIST OF CLAIMS FOR PUBLICATION
COUNTY FUND

Guy Barker, Extra Help in Engr. office	$ 6.00
J. D. Baker, Supervisor	118.30
Blaine Twp. Trustees, Meeting	12.00
E. A. Breckenridge, Extra help in Engr. office	54.00
Mrs. Lena Breckenridge, Extra help in Supt. office	3.00
Burroughs Adding Machine Co., maintenance service	38.56
Robert D. Blue, Commission on fines	128.10
Crescent Printing Co., Office Supplies	20.13
Bruce E. Corliss, Prem. on Co. Treas. bond	380.00
Clarion Oil Co., Gas and oil for Co. car	19.94
Central Iowa Power and Light Co., Lights c. h. and jail	41.28
Dows Advocate, Ptg. and supplies	6.60
The Electric Shop, Exp. co. car	18.75
Eagle Grove Eagle, Bd. pcds.	33.81
Eagle Grove Twp., Trutees Meeting	12.00
L. G. Focht, Office expense	7.79
Farmers Elevator Co., Fuel for jail	65.04
M. L. Goslin, Salary	85.00
R. V. Goslin, Office expense	4.64
Helsell, Helsell & McCall, Services	1106.60
H. B. Hallock, Jury & Wit. certificates	125.50
J. K. Hilton, Office expense	14.06
J. K. Hilton, Salary	132.94
International Chem. Co., Supplies c. h. and jail	31.00
Iowa Twp. Trustees, Meeting	12.00
Fred Johnson, Bd. pris.	246.40
Fred Johnson, office expense	57.68
Fred Johnson, Exp. of Thompson to Clarion and return	74.89
Klipto Loose Leaf Co., Office supplies	4.20
Keuffel & Esser Co., Office supplies	18.00
E. E. Kitley, Supervisor	118.60
Linfor Auto. Co., Storage co. car	18.00
Jake Lampert Yards, Inc., Fuel for jail	19.50
Mrs. W. E. Mann, Conducting Exams. at E. G.	7.50
S. A. McCreery, P. M., Env. for Aud. office	66.98
S. A. McCreery, P. M., Env. for Supt. office	11.51
Rose McGrath, Extra help in Treas. office	56.00
M. B. Miles, Justice fees	3.50
Fred Johnson, Mileage	3.00
James Mehl, Supervisor	96.40
Norway Twp. Trustees, Meeting	12.00
H. C. Pinkham, Bd. of Education	5.00
J. C. Peterson, Supervisor	46.60
Wallace Ramsay, Bd. of Edudation	4.30
L. C. Smith & Corona Typewriters Inc., Typewriters and repairs	82.52
A. B. Stole, Hauling coal	8.00
H. L. Sergeant, Justice fees	5.25
Dr. J. H. Sams, Medical aid pris.)	20.00
F. B. Sheldon, Bd. of Education	3.20
L. W. Schroeder, Supervisor	57.40
E. P. Tinkham, Making transcript	48.00
G. A. Triggs, Justice fees (H. L. Peters)	4.00
Fred Johnson, Mileage (H. L. Peters)	100.03
Troy Twp. Trustees, Meeting	12.00
G. A. Triggs, 10 percent on del. tax collections	47.65
Vernon Twp. Trustees, Meeting	12.00
Edith M. Vaugn, Office expense	2.15

(Continued next week).

R. E. PORTER

Chiropractor

Eight Years' Experience

PEACE IS MORE DEADLY THAN WAR!

Belmond, Iowa, March 24, 1927

Dear Friend:

Please take just two minutes to read this letter. Your personal welfare depends on your knowing something of the "horrors of peace."

War is a fearful waste of human life, of course. Yet, this year, in peace time, more than 800,000 people will die needlessly. Will you be one of them? Will you be alive next year at this time?

Soldiers are subjected to careful physical examinations. Their health is protected in every possible way. Are you giving your body the careful attention that is given to soldiers in war-time? The chances are that you are not. You may, therefore, be one of the 800,000.

It is a fact that two persons out of every three are suffering from some sort of chronic bodily trouble. Many do not realize there is anything particularly wrong with them until they become seriously ill. Then it may be too late.

I have been very successful in discovering and correcting deep-seated chronic conditions. I use no drugs. I simply co-operate with Nature. I have helped hundreds to tingling, joyous health. Perhaps I can help you, too.

I will be glad to give you a preliminary analysis of your physical condition, without charge or obligation. It is the part of wisdom to find out just how you stand physically and to have chronic conditions corrected and your body put in good shape to resist illness.

Come in to see me. Don't take a chance of being one of the 800,000 people who will die needlessly this year.

Yours sincerely,

R. E. PORTER

Chiropractor

OVER 20 PERCENT

PAID IN WAGES

More than 20 percent of the entire Income of Electric Light and Power Companies is paid out in salaries and wages to the 300,000 Employes working in this industry.

And PRACTICALLY ALL of the enormous sum represented by the total of these wages is spent in the communities in which these Employes live. In addition to this, these Companies paid out last year more than $155,000,000 in Federal, State and Local Taxes.

Your HOME COMPANY paid its share of this great sum and helped keep your own community prosperous.

ALSO many thousands of dollars in interest and Dividends are paid by this Company to Customers who own its Securities and we are constantly striving to make our Company OWNED COMPLETELY BY ALL OF OUR CUSTOMERS.

The growth of the business makes this possible and insures to every community efficient service at reasonable cost and the opportunity to every Customer of owning a share in the Company and of bringing back the revenue earned to the Cities and Towns receiving the Service.

Respectfully,

Central States Electric Company

General Office

CEDAR RAPIDS, - IOWA

EVERY CUSTOMER SHOULD BE A SHAREHOLDER

It's easy to own a PREMIER DUPLEX!

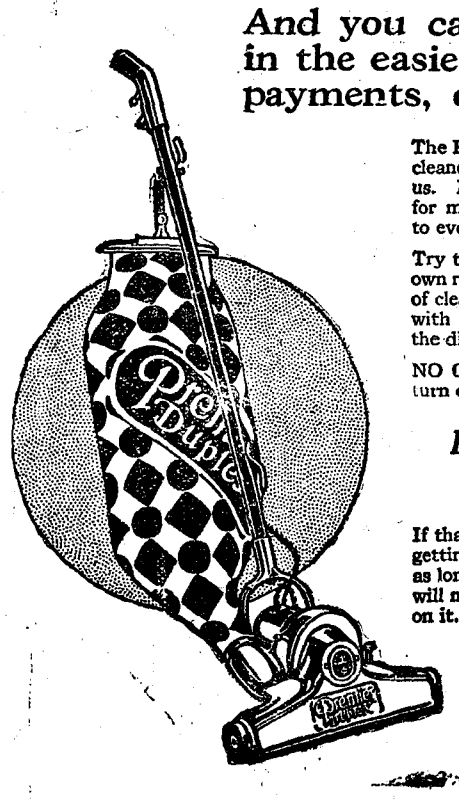
$2.50 down

And you can pay the balance in the easiest of easy monthly payments, over a year's time.



The PREMIER DUPLEX is a splendid cleaner—endorsed and guaranteed by us. It will clean—easily and quickly—for many, many years. There is little to ever get out of order.

Try the PREMIER DUPLEX on your own rugs. Note the double action method of cleaning. Power suction is combined with a motor driven brush to get all the dirt.

NO OILING for both motor and brush turn on ball-bearings.

Liberal allowance for your old cleaner

If that old cleaner is running weakly—getting half the dirt—and taking twice as long to do it—TRADE IT IN. We will make you a very liberal allowance on it.

Premier Duplex

Central States Electric Company

Belmond, Iowa

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With a stranger, whom he introduces as his nephew, Ned Carter, Claude Melnotte Dabbs returns from New York to his general grocery at Peace Valley, Pa. To "Aunt Lyddy," his housekeeper, he explains that Carter is a chance acquaintance, veteran of the World war, whom he had met and taken a liking to.

CHAPTER II.—Carter tells Aunt Lyddy he has broken with his family and his sweetheart because of his resentment of their ultra pacific tendencies. With Dabbs Ned visits Clover Hollow, abiding place of a "collection of good-natured cranks," according to the grocer. They almost run over a dog belonging to a girl whom Carter apparently recognizes. Ned delivers a grocery order, and in his absence the girl, Dorothy Selden, reveals that she knows him to be Ned Carter Rangeley, son of Loren Rangeley, New York banker.

CHAPTER III.—Next day Ned commences work as a "grocer's boy." At a residence, the "White House," he delivers an order marked "Johnston." There he meets a girl who tells him she and her mother are alone in the house, the servants having left them because of the "loneliness." He promises to try to procure household help. Meeting Dorothy Selden, his erstwhile sweetheart, he baffles her attempts to discover the reason for his presence in Peace Valley. Arrangement is made for a cook to go to the Johnstons'.

CHAPTER IV.—The cook being unable to begin work at once, Ned visits the White House to inform Miss Johnston of the fact. Explaining the situation to her mother, the girl, "Mary," is astonished by that lady's emotion at the mention of Dabbs' name. The cook arrives, and Mary, with Ned, goes to the village for groceries. They are seen by Dorothy Selden. Mrs. Johnston, worried over financial troubles, is bothered by Dorothy, who warns her there is something suspicious about Ned Carter.

CHAPTER V.—There is something about Mary vaguely familiar to Dabbs, and he is highly interested in village gossip concerning the mother and daughter. Mrs. Johnston accompanies Mary to an inn for luncheon. Dabbs sees Mrs. Johnston and is obviously perturbed. He informs Ned he has something on his mind that he would like to tell him.

"Son, I don't know that I can make you understand it, but I might just as well have had something strong to drink. The food made me feel so queer; like plowing ahead at someone or something. I took a little walk, and then I said to myself that now I'd only got to get it over and then I could take the nine o'clock train home—and that would be all of that.

"The hotel wasn't far from the station, and it wasn't very handsome, I guess, but it was finer than any I'd ever been in. I asked for Polly by her own name, only saying Mrs. instead of Miss. It was her own idea. She didn't wish to have anything like talk about us. I said I was her husband. The woman called up and told me Polly would be down in a minute.

"The parlor was full of people, but nobody I knew. I sat down and waited, and while I waited that hurry and rush of excitement inside me kept up. It was hard to sit still. I wanted to walk about and talk, but I held myself in. I looked at the people who came in, and they all seemed the same kind of red-faced, common people. Nobody I knew.

"Then I heard a voice near me say: 'Well, so it's you.' I looked up and there was Polly."

Claude glanced at Ned, who, his eyes shaded with his hand, seemed to be listening intently.

"Wish I could make you see just what she looked like to me. I'd never seen her in right clothes; just house dresses and apron things. There, beside me, was one of the prettiest girls I'd ever seen in my life. She was dressed all in black—mourning for her uncle—and it set off her fair skin. It made her red hair look like autumn leaves, kinda flaming and yet soft. I'd mostly seen that hair bundled up in a dusting cap. Well, I guess I gawked at her before I rose to my feet, and Polly was confused, too, and kept looking away from me.

"'We can't say anything private here,' she said. 'Maybe you'd better come to my room.'

"I told her I guessed that would be all right, for I'd said I was her husband when I came in.

"'Oh,' she says, 'did you? Then it's all right. Come along.'

"We went up and she opened the door and I went into her room."

Claude's pipe went out. There was silence in the room as he filled it, but Claude did not feel it. He had forgotten that he was telling the story to Ned. He had forgotten everything that belonged to himself in the present. He was back in the past, seeing the shy, awkward Claude Dabbs on the threshold of that girl's room. He remembered that already it looked different from the rest of the house. She had flowers in a vase on the rough, cheap, pine dressing table. She had spread clean towels on that, on the bureau and on her trunk, discarding the dirty-looking scarfs that had adorned them. They had been too shy to look at each other. He had stared out of the window.

Every time Dabbs brought his eyes around to her, he caught her looking at him, and finally she laughed.

It was wonderful, that laugh. It made him feel young again. He had been feeling like an old man, with a weight of sorrow and care on his shoulders, but that girl's laugh had made him feel his own age. Her laugh was young and spiced with deviltry. Back of it all was the new strange feeling the girl gave him.

He saw himself solemnly giving her the papers. He watched her while she put them carefully away in a bag, and counted out the rest of the money. There had been a moment's awkwardness over that, he remembered. He had made an involuntary movement of his hand, to give it back to her, but she as involuntarily, thrust it back at him. Then he laughed, folded it up and put it away.

But he did not go. He had known that he should, but he could not. He sat down beside her, and they began talking, awkwardly enough at first. Then suddenly they were no longer the Claude and Polly of the boarding house days, but two young things who had lots to say to each other, and enjoyed saying it.

She told Claude of her plans. She meant to travel and study and see everything. She was fond of reading. Indeed, she had read and planned in a way that seemed remarkable to him for a girl, a servant girl, too, but he noted that she did not ask about his plans. Every time their conversation touched his life, present or future, she changed the subject. Then he knew that she meant him to understand she would have nothing to do with him after tonight. After tonight, Claude would not see her; after tonight she would be away enjoying things, out in the freedom of the world, with money, and she would have no use for him, no use at all. It had eaten into the young Claude's consciousness that she was going to use him as a shield until she met some one she really cared for. Then she would drop him, and his name. "After tonight" echoed and re-echoed in his mind, and he forgot that he had no right to expect anything else, for he had taken her money. Jealousy gradually took possession of him. He watched her talk and smile. It struck nine. His train had gone.

He did not go; merely sat watching her. He had known, even then, that she saw what she had done to him, and it had gone to her head. He had been one of the "boarders" in the old days, one for whom she must fetch and carry. Now he was at her mercy.

He began to think of lots of things that proved she had not been as indifferent to him in those old boarding house days as she had pretended. Even before the money came, Polly Johnston, the man-hater, had a soft spot for one man—Claude Dabbs. All unconsciously she had let him see that. Claude had wondered afterward if it was not a conscious use of her new-found power. He began to believe that it was not entirely by accident that she had made him come to her for the money, instead of having the lawyer pay him. He had never, until then, guessed that the girl liked him—that way. But now she told him more than she meant, or knew, and when she realized this, she pulled herself up and began telling him that the lawyer had arranged for her to go to France. She would go as a young widow, to people who would help her; let her see everything and do everything she wanted to do.

He remembered how the other, younger Claude, after listening to her silently for awhile, had blurted out:

"When are you coming back?"

"Never!"

"How about me?" the young Claude had asked, and realized as he said it that it was a fool's question.

And the girl had laughed.

"Oh, after tonight you won't count."

She had dared to say it, actually dared to look him in the eyes and say it.

"Is that so?" the boy had snapped, and he had never been angrier in his life. Rebellion seethed within him. And yet, he remembered, he had not hated her.

"After tonight, eh? Well, the night's still young."

Something in the way he said that, struck through her laughing guard. Her expression changed. She began to look ever so little—what was it—frightened?

"It's getting late. I think you'd better go."

"It's my last night," he had answered, without moving. "Why cut it short?"

Then she had moved to the door, swiftly, and held it open. He rose to his feet somehow and moved with her. He could not have told exactly why, but there was a dangerous feeling growing up inside him. Yet, now that he understood his younger self, Claude Dabbs felt if the girl had not looked so scared, the feeling would not have grown as fast, nor been so dangerous. If she had laughed at him, he would have been ashamed. If she had trusted him he would have been compelled to be worthy of her trust. But she saw, and feared, the flood tide of feelings she had deliberately evoked and something in her must have answered his passion. She was deadly afraid of that—as well as of him.

"I want you to go now," she had said, hard, cold and staring. "If you don't, I'll call down to the office."

He had faced her and shut the door, and now he was sure he hated her. "Go on," he had said grimly. "Call 'em up at the office. What you going to tell 'em? That I'm not your husband?"

She shook her head. He could see her face, puzzled, bewildered, frightened.

"That I am your husband, and you don't care about having me 'round?"

She still stared at him, her mouth open in an odd, babyish way that, angry as he was, he remembered he had thought pretty.

"It'll make your stay in this house short, if you start a row like that."

She sprung to the door, but Claude was there before her. Their hands met on the handle, and somehow, at his touch, she had given up, and swayed against him. Claude felt a little shiver run through his strong body now at the remembrance of how it had "finished" him, too, but not in the way either of them dreamed.

He was beyond reasoning or thought then. He was entirely given up to feeling. He put his arm about her waist and held her closely to him as he turned the key in the door.

"You can have the key," he had whispered, in a queer, husky voice, "when you call down to the office and say that the man in your room isn't your husband, and you want to get rid of him."

She had looked at him, given a queer little sound, and hidden her face against his shoulders.

* * * * * * *

Claude Dabbs stared before him, his lips moving. After awhile he lit his cigar, crossed one leg over the other, and began to talk, in an even voice, quite as though he was continuing his narrative to Ned from the point he had left off.

"Next morning I went out for a stroll before breakfast, and to settle in my mind a plan I meant to carry through quickly, before Polly made up her own mind. We'd talked lots about everything, but nothing was settled.

"Nobody'll ever know how wonderful it was to me to have Polly to talk to. It changed everything. There wasn't a girl in Peace Valley could talk as she did, none I knew, anyway; and the short while I'd been at Rutgers I hadn't met any girls, except Polly. She made me realize that we'd been fond of each other for a long time, though it had taken this to bring us together."

Claude looked up at Ned, who with a languid movement of his hand removed the cigarette from between his lips. Claude noted idly that it was not lit. He glanced at the wall above Ned's desk. A small photograph in an old-fashioned frame hung above it. It was that of a lovely young country girl, with character behind the young loveliness. She was Claude's mother.

"You see, Ned, I'd always been queer about girls. I liked 'em, but expected a good deal of 'em. Not every girl pleased me. Sounds conceited, but I don't mean it that way. It wasn't that—it was Mom."

His eyes turned again to the photograph. "It's one of those things you can't find words for. It's a feeling. Anyway, Mom gave it to me about girls, and Polly was the first. I meant she should be the last. I felt that if we were careful enough about explaining our marriage to Mom she would understand and be pleased. But she never knew.

"Nobody'll ever know how wonderful life was to me that morning. I hadn't forgotten Pop, but since I'd told Polly just how I felt about him, and she'd tried to comfort me, I could bear it easier, because Polly understood. I forgot all about her money. It never entered my head. I only thought of Polly. When I was going out, she kissed me and said:

"'Claude Melnotte, is your home lit by alabaster lamps?'

"I thought she was just fooling about my silly name. She'd read the play, you see. I hadn't, then. I just told her they were Rochester lamps. When I thought about it, as I turned back toward the hotel, I wondered if there was more to her question than just lamps—something behind it. I thought she might have been turning over in her mind whether she'd live with Mom, or insist on having a separate house for just us two. I didn't care. She could have her own way about that—and most everything else, too. But I've read the play since, and I'm pretty sure that there was a catch in it. Her question, I mean. It's the part where he's blowing about the house he's gonna take her to. All lies!

"She wasn't down in the dining room when I came back from the walk, but she'd told me to give her plenty of time to pack, so I went up to her room. She wasn't there, and her trunks were gone. I went to inquire at the desk. They said the bill had been paid and Polly had gone, bag and baggage, to the station, half an hour after I left."

Claude paused, knocked the ashes from his cigar, and without looking up, went on hurriedly: "I'm not asking for sympathy. The girl served me right, and I know it as well as you do. I've told you this, Ned—and you're the only one I have told—because I want you to know the worst of me.

"Polly knew blame well I couldn't follow her, seeing she had money and I had none. Her lawyer, all these years, has refused to give me any clue. But she's never divorced me. Unless I'm much mistaken, the Mrs. Johnston who is up at the White house is Polly, and what I want to know is who is Miss Johnston?"

A little sound, like a sigh, came from Ned and he turned gently on his pillow, and then silence.

Claude jumped to his feet and went noiselessly over to the bed. Ned was sleeping as quietly as a child. Claude took the cold, unlighted cigarette from between Ned's fingers and looked at him with affection.

"Forty-seven years old, and I don't have sense enough to know or remember that other people's love stories are as big a bore as other people's dreams!"

He Turned Out the Lamp and Left the Room.

He turned out the lamp and left the room.

In the morning, when he could get Dabbs alone, Ned's apologies were sincere. But though Ned insisted that he had only dropped off at the end, Claude had a shrewd idea from the lame way in which Ned fished for information, that slumber had overtaken him in the middle of the tale. They were in the garage where Ned had tracked him down, and he only laughed as he put his hand on Ned's arm.

"My boy, I was an ass to insist on telling you my old trouble. Boiled down, without any of the frills I put on so that you would get my side of the case, the facts are that I slipped up on my promise, broke my word to Polly, and she ran away. And Peace Valley thinks me an old bachelor."

He had made up his mind that it wasn't the thing to tell Ned his suspicions until he had corroborated them, or dropped them. It would be awkward for the boy, since he was seeing the Johnstons daily.

CHAPTER VII

Mrs. Johnston, having something rather disagreeable to tell Mary, kept putting off the evil day and hour.

Sooner or later it must be told, but Polly Johnston, though by no means a fool, was of a singularly sanguine temperament. She still hoped that kind fortune might intervene in some miraculous manner and save her the trouble and necessity of telling. If not, it would have to be done, but not this day, if she could help it. Having come to that decision, it behooved her to keep away from Mary.

She could refuse to go out, pleading a headache, thus removing herself from Mary's presence and scrutiny.

When the girl presented herself, fresh, smiling, and ready for motoring, she found her mother lying down. She did not see the novel that her mother had poked under her pillow when she heard Mary coming. Explanations were made, received, and then came silence.

Mrs. Johnston wriggled herself into a more comfortable position, and the novel fell on the floor. Mary restored it to the couch. Mother never read when she had a real headache. The situation became tense.

"Come, Mother," coaxed Mary, "what's up? You've been grouching sweetly for several days, you know. I've got to know sooner or later, so let it be now."

Mrs. Johnston sighed, made a swift mental calculation that she had better tell the most obvious first, and began:

"I can't keep it from you forever, but I did want to keep it just a little longer. However, here it is, Mary. I haven't any money. Not a cent. And the dividends on the stock, payable this month, just aren't going to be paid."

(Continued next week.)

The Independent's circulation is local. It is read by more people. And that's why its ads bring results.

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

Kinseth's Store News

We really thought spring was here last week. Certainly looked as tho it was, and we had the spring fever so bad all we could think of was those big fish up at Dad Ingall's place at Cross Lake. But the weather man was only kidding us and we'll have to wait awhile longer.

For 14c we are selling Linoleum Mats, very attractive patterns, an honest to goodness bargain which is creating a lot of interest. Get yours before the selection is reduced.

Nineteen cents buys a yard of Percale.

And we have some dandy ladies' fancy novelty handkerchiefs.

French designs in silk, and only 25c for one of these handkerchiefs.

Even tho spring isn't here, altho it did officially arrive the 21st, it's time to be planning the garden. We can fix you out with all the seeds, and onion sets too.

Fresh crackers in milk pails with the pail thrown in for $1.12.

Oranges still 29c a dozen.

Grapefruit 8c each.

Fresh Lettuce, Carrots, Cucumbers, Spinach and new Cabbage.

The Store on the Corner—That's us—and our phones are 19 and 5, so start saving money now for the Fourth of July!

Investigate First!

The Postoffice force are working hard putting out the endless line of mail order catalogues with their attractive line of "save-you-money" prices. The Public looks no further, but order what they need—and some things they don't need, just because the prices look so attractive.

Let's figure it out: You send your order, and the cash, for the mail order house never ships without your money first. You wait from one to three weeks for your merchandise, and then you may find they are not what you expected, or they are out of the goods you ordered. Perhaps you returned them, and there is another long wait before you get your order or refund. You are out your postage, money order, and your time is wasted. If you do get the order, you pay the freight.

Recently a Belmond man purchased some paint from an out-of-town firm. He was told he could buy cheaper. But the catch was, in order to buy cheap he must buy more than he really needed. After the order was sent—when it was too late—he investigated prices at home, and found he could have purhhased better paint for less money! And he could have purchased what he needed, with no left-overs.

Remember that old slogan—Trade at Home! It is backed with a guarantee which holds good the year 'round!
We carry a Full Line of PAINTS, WALLPAPERS, ALABASTINE and FRESCOATS, and in addition a Full Line of Dr. Hess' and Lee's Products for your Stock.

Wear A Smile of Satisfaction—Trade at Home—And Try The Drug Store First!

Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, March 24, 1927. No. 50

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

We still notice a Christmas wreath or two hanging in the windows. It will soon be time to take 'em down.

—

After the show has gone, why can't we take down the posters and get the cards out of the windows?

—

A wealthy auto tourist lost his dog out in Illinois and inserted a lost ad in the small town newspaper. He offered a reward of $100. Next day he went to the office to inquire. Nobody there. Finally he asked an old man outside where the newspaper force was. "They're all out lookin' for your dog," the old man informed him.

—

Cello Glass windows in your poultry house will give health to your chickens. Cello Glass lets in the life-giving ultra violet rays of the sun. Glass stops them. That's why chickens do better under glass cloth. There isn't anything better. It's been tested.

—

We guess we'll never make an expert ad-writer. We got hold of an advertising book night before last and it told all about "mass psychology" and "reactions" and "indirect appeals," etc. Too deep for us! But remember this—when you're in the market for Lumber, don't forget us! That may be poor advertising but it's the only way we can think of to say it.

—

The lumber business is just like any other business. We have to make a profit or quit. Everybody understands that and we have never met anybody who objects to paying a reasonable profit—so long as it is reasonable.

—

Hardwood floors! We've never met a lady who doesn't love beautiful floors. We can provide them promptly.

—

"Rastus did you ever have your tonsil out?"
"Only when ah laffs, suh!"

LOCALS

George Goelz has returned to work in his barber shop after an absence of two weeks due to treatment for his hands, which have been troubling him for some time.

An enjoyable meeting of the M. E. Aid society was held at the home of Mrs. W. H. Wolle last Thursday afternoon.

Henry Groen left the first part of the week for Rochester where he will receive further treatment.

At a special meeting of the city council Monday night, an ordinance was passed regulating peddlers, solicitors and "one-night stand" concerns who come into town with doubtful merchandise.

R. D. Kenefick came down from Garner last Thursday with his son-in-law, Chas. Engstler, and family, for a short visit with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Edna Warneke motored up from Webster City Sunday to see her mother, Mrs. Buchanan, who has been very ill. Miss Frank accompanied her and spent the day with Mrs. Curtis.

Mrs. V. F. Mikesell, Mrs. Ed. Kennedy and Mrs. A. H Skovlin attended a county meeting of Auxiliary officers at Clarion, last Wednesday afternoon.

Merle Hildebrand left Tuesday for Belle Fouche, South Dakota, where he has a position in the new beet sugar factory being erected there this year. Mrs. Hildebrand and two children will remain with her people at Buffalo Center until a house can be secured at Belle Fouche.

On behalf of the Business Men's Luncheon club, we wish to express to B. L. Moody our appreciation for the use of the opera house in connection with the Fire Prevention day program.

C. O. Fitts
O. L. Varland
Committee in Charge.

NOTICE!

BOLIVER 1000, Registered Belgian Stallion, will make the season in and around Belmond. He is a red roan; star, right hind foot white to postern. Good bone and plenty of action—a 2300 pound horse. A wonderful individual. His sire—Bongo 5491 (58926) by Carnaval (26232) out of Mie de Heers (63405). His Dam—Farceuse de Masnuy 1379 by Conquerant de Boulant (23610) out of Blonde de Masnuy (30937). He is a prominent prize winner at leading shows.

Terms: $15 to insure foal. Full amount of the service fee to become due on the sale or removal of mare. Due diligence will be exercised, but we will not be responsible should accident occur. R. A. THAYER, Owner. Telephone 3710, Belmond, Iowa. 192*

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Trafford spent Sunday with friends at Mankato, Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Tyrrell entertained the Monday Night Bridge Club and a few other guests at their home Monday evening of this week.

Mrs. David Kelley returned last week from Mason City, where she had been caring for the new grandson at the Ted Buchanan home.

H. N. Hill is the owner of a new four-door Essex sedan, purchased from the Nordschow Motor Co.

The Congregational Sunday School will hold an indoor picnic in the church parlors Friday evening at 7:00 o'clock. Please bring sandwiches for your own family and a covered dish; also silver and dishes. All members of the Sunday School and their families are cordially invited. Remember the time and date.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Parsons and daughter, Doris, motored to Des Moines, Sunday afternoon, returning Monday evening.

1200 Extra High Grade W. Leghorns to sell April 6. We do careful custom hatching. A hatch off every Tuesday. Balluff & Thorpe, Clarion, Iowa. 192

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	20c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	36c
Corn	50c
Barley	62c

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Rural New York and Early Ohio seed potatoes, $2.00 a bushel. S. Enger. 17tf

FOR SALE—370-gallon storage gasoline tank. F. P. Dibble. 182

FOR SALE—Timothy and Clover hay.—T. A. Wicks, Kanawha. 193

FOR SALE—P. B. White Wyandotte hatching eggs: $3.50 per 100. Mrs. R. D. Box. Phone 3613. 19tf

FOR SALE—S. L. Wyandotte and Buff Orpington hatching eggs. Mrs. A. P. Lonning, Belmond. Phone 2606.

FOR SALE—Hard or soft wood, stove lengths. A C. Lieuwen. Phone 186 1-3. 17tf

FOR SALE—8 head of horses, from 3 to 12 years of age. Weight from 1200 to 1675 pounds. Priced from $35 to $165 each. Will give time on satisfactory note. Frank Drury, 1 mile west of Rowan. 16tfc

FOR SALE—Buff Rock hatching eggs, good producers, range flock. $4 per 100. Mrs. Menno Frohling. Phone 1105. 164*

FOR SALE—John Deere 8-ft disc, in good condition. Phone 3007. Galen Johnson. 192*

FOR SALE—Eagle Valley and Irish Cobbler Potatoes, good quality, $1.65 and $1.75 a bushel. Inquire of M. Halfwassen, Meservey. 192*

FOR SALE—Reed's Yellow Dent Seed Corn, early gathered and tested, $3.00 per bushel. Also early and late potatoes, $1.75 per bushel. J. B. Sheffield. 19tf

WANTED TO TRADE—Residence property in Eagle Grove, 2 lots and 7-room house, for residence property in Belmond. Write Box 133, Clarion, Iowa. 192*

WANTED—News items. Help us give you a better paper by sending or phoning the items you know. Call 115.

WANTED—Experienced housekeeper on farm. Write or see me personally. John Harberts. 182*

WANTED—Cattle. See Peterson's Market before selling. 193

LOST—Saturday afternoon, black bill fold pocketbook containing about $30 in bills, and slips bearing my name. Liberal reward if returned to Elso Steenblock, Belmond. 1c

McKibbin hats

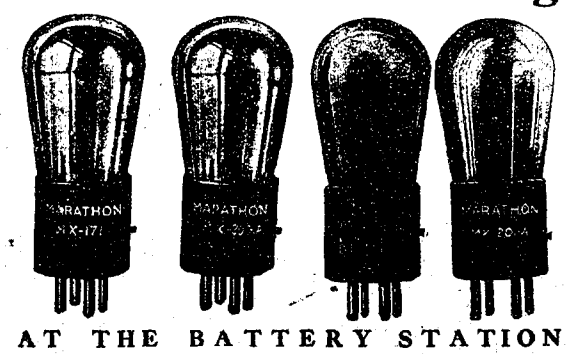
New Shapes New Colors
New Fancy Bands

They'll shed ethereal gladness on your head.

Smith & Skovlin
Belmond, Iowa

Wm. H. WOLLE
Real Estate Farms
Town Property
Insurance—All Branches
Your Business Solicited
The Best at Lowest Prices
BELMOND, - - - IOWA

FREE Tube Testing



AT THE BATTERY STATION
Regular, Special Detector and Power Tubes.
We stock all of them.
Fresh shipment of B-Batteries every week. All sizes.
We give Radio Service.

Belmond Storage Battery Co.
Belmond, Iowa
Phone 46 Official 2417

Just In
New Spring
HATS
For SATURDAY
ALL THE NEW SHADES
PRICES REASONABLE

TheHatShoppe
Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

When you want good, juicy, tasty
Beef,
Pork,
Veal or
Mutton
Try us. We have them all---and at attractive prices.

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

To the Patrons of the Banks of Wright County:

A bank within a community is no longer a private business enterprise but a community affair. Its success has such a far reaching influence upon the financial welfare of those within its vicinity that its interests are mutual with those of every citizen who resides within its territory.

For this reason that which affects the success of a bank affects all and as such is of vital interest to the public.

It is a fact that a bank cannot give the service and safety in its affairs to which patrons are entitled, unless its business is conducted upon a basis which returns a fair margin of profit to the bank.

For this reason patrons have within their power to increase or diminish the service which they are to receive from their bank precisely to the extent to which they give or withhold their co-operation.

Particularly is this true in the matter of checking accounts. The checking account privilege is probably the most expensive service a bank offers, entailing as it does the purchase of bank-books, check-books, deposit slips, checks, etc., as well as the cost of bookkeeping in connection with the accounts.

The only profit a bank receives from these accounts is the interest it receives from loaning the money deposited with it, but the amount it can loan is small. Good banking requires the bank to keep a large part of these deposits in reserve. If the depositor constantly checks out all or nearly all his balance each month, there is none to loan and the bank can make no profit on the account with which to pay the expense of handling it.

Careful investigation has proven that to cover the cost of an account a balance must be maintained of at least $50 each month over and above the amount that is checked out at any time. The Wright County Bankers Association has therefore adopted a resolution that, after April 1st, 1927, any checking account which fails to average $50 for the month will be charged 50 cents for the checking service.

If a checking account is essential it is suggested that the balance be increased to $50 and maintained as a permanent balance, which will cover the cost of handling the account. Those few who find it impossible to maintain a permanent balance of $50, and do not wish to pay this service fee, are invited to transfer their accounts to a Cashier's Check, or Savings Account, where their funds will receive the same certain safety and can be withdrawn at will in lump sums as needed, but not by check.

This charge has not been instituted with the idea of collecting 50 cents per month on the small accounts but with the hope that it will call the depositors' attention to the fact that they are carrying small balances, and to induce them to increase their balances to a point where they will cover the actual cost of handling the accounts.

Please co-operate so that your bank may do everything within its power to make your business relations with it of the greatest possible value to you.

Wright County Bankers Association

MODERN FARM MACHINES WORK SUCH WONDERS AS THESE:

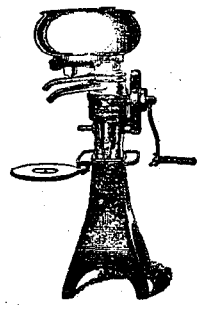
A tractor and 2 or 3-bottom plow will plow 8 to 12 acres a day as against 3 acres for a 3-horse team.

Three horses on a two-row cultivator will do 90 percent more than two horses on a one-row cultivator, saving $50 in labor in four cultivations of 40 acres.

A mechanical corn picker picks, husks, and delivers into a wagon five times as much corn in a day as the hand husker.

The Illinois farm worker uses $600 worth of farm equipment compared with $115 worth used by the North Carolina farm worker. The Illinois man cultivates 53 acres compared with 12 for the North Carolina man and has an income correspondingly larger.

New CREAM SEPARATORS frequently save $25 per month over inefficient machines they replace.



This firm has handled and serviced Good Farm Equipment 37 years in the Belmond trade territory. Bring your implement problems to us and let us figure with you on the new equipment that you need.

A spike-tooth harrow section attached to one side of the tractor plow to catch the furrow crowns will save 50 cents per acre on harrowing expenses.

The farmer's old-time formula was "An Acre a Day per Horse." The slogan of the average tractor farmer is "Ten Acres a Day per Man."

A new corn planter will save from 100 to 200 bushels of corn on 40 acres over an old planter which cracks or misses but one kernel in 10.

Twenty years ago a hay loader saved two men in the field, each getting $1.00 a day. Today, a better loader saves the same men, but each would be earning $3.00 a day.

We have a limited supply of booklets giving full information on the CORN BORER. They are yours for the asking.

GRIESY'S
The Friendly Place
PHONE 10 BELMOND, IOWA

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDAY, MARCH 31, 1927 | NO. 20

FORM AUDUBON SOCIETY AT SCHOOL

Ninety-five Members Join New Organization At School At Meeting Held Monday.

OBJECT IS STUDY OF BIRDS

The Parent-Teachers Association met in the auditorium Friday afternoon, March 18, at 2:30 o'clock. One of the special features of this meeting was the Art Exhibit which the association sponsored. A very different and interesting program which dealt with the High School and the High School student was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Miss Waugh's Girls' Glee Club sang two very pretty numbers. Lucille Skouge talked on "What High School Means To Me!" Donald McNulty spoke on "Athletics and High School." Mrs. E. W. Luick gave us her viewpoint on "The Student At Home" and showed us that the situation was not as bad as some would like to have us believe. The Rev. Mr. Snyder discussed the present-day need of Christian leadership. Miss Hammers spoke on the subject, "The High School Student As the Faculty Sees Him." After the program the faculty served light refreshments.

Miss Purdy's room won the Pennant for this month. Miss Barry and Miss Purdy seem to have a monopoly on it.

Mrs. Peterson, Mrs. Leavy and Mrs. Dahl visited Miss Barry's fifth grade a week ago Friday.

Mrs. Lathrop visited Miss Quigley's sixth grade a week ago Friday.

Daryl Hood is absent from the second grade on account of measles.

The following were neither absent nor tardy from the kindergarten the last six weeks: Roger Bohning, Clarence Chamberlain, Clara Jane Courson, Robert Dempsey, Ruth Fulton, Minnie Steenblock, Laurence Greenwood, Bennet Moe, Dale Ramsey, DeLous Obrecht, Mary Williams, Vivian Rice, Mary Jane Roosevelt, Lloyd Wagner, Ruth Kemp, Harmon Klemme, Maxine Kinseth.

The following children in Miss Jackson's room received their silver star award pins in penmanship: Doloris Pech, LaVon Forristall, Cortland Luick, Dorothy Finndorf, Margaret Dillon, Jessie Jacobson, Norma Anderson, Harold Schultz, Josephine Anderson, Donald Major, Peter Daniels.

Faye Thompson visited Miss Thompson's room, Monday.

The following children in Miss Thompson's room received their silver star award pins in Penmanship: Bernadine Ayers, Ray Bonte, Juanita Brewer, Frankie Buchanan, Donald Champlin, Lucille Cramer, Bernard Daniels, Arlene Dorenkamp, Francis Dorr, Ruth Finn, Jean Hake, Jake Rust, Violet Kelley, Kenneth Kinseth, Arlene Kragh, Eugene Miller, Lowell Trafford, Laura Williams, Donald Nielson, Reynold Packard, Meryl Pfaltzgraff, Ralph Rowe, Bennie Ruiter, James Shaw, Earl Sheller, Dorothea Thayer, Laurence Tuffree.

All members of Miss Barry's class have joined the Audubon Society.

The Promoters of the Audubon Society held a meeting Monday afternoon. There are 95 members at present. Due to the large enrollment it was necessary to divide the society into three divisions. Division I under the leadership of Miss Bond; Division II, Miss Heggen; Division III, Miss Barry. However, the three sponsors will be present at each meeting, and accompany the pupils on each field trip.

The main objective of the society are:

1. To learn the economic and aesthetic value of birds to man.
2. To see that no birds are wantonly killed.
3. To identify by sight twenty birds.
4. To study in detail six birds.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

The last Girl Scout meeting was called Tuesday evening, March 22 in the gymnasium. Mr. Fulton conducted our athletic part of the program with drill work. It was enjoyed by everyone. After the usual business meeting we adjourned.

HEALTH NOTES— AMERICAN RED CROSS

Good health is the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow all are seeking. Not one corner in the field of human ills will be neglected. Until quite recently no one thought of teeth as an important factor in the problem of disease. However, it is now definitely known that bad teeth can be the source of a number of serious, infectious diseases, especially diseases of the heart, blood, kidney and joints. The development of X-ray photography has shown infected roots to be the cause of many obscure "rheumatic" and other joint troubles.

Infected gums, teeth, tooth-sockets may poison the whole body. A little money spent occasionally to have the teeth cleaned is cheaper than to lay off from work and pay doctor's bills for rheumatism or stomach trouble or other serious troubles that come from tooth or mouth infection. And always the cause of trouble must be removed before relief is had.

One of the most common infections of the gums is Pyorrhoea. One of the first signs of this disease is bleeding gums. Any abnormal condition of the gumss hould receive prompt dental attention.

A great many parents, who otherwise keep careful watch over their children's health, are inclined to be careless about the condition of "baby teeth." They do not realize that it is just as important to care for the first set as for the second for a number of reasons. Although they are only temporary, their development and care determine the size and shape of the upper and lower jaw bones. They also condition the maturing of the second set, for if the first teeth are lost too early, the permanent teeth do not have the proper stimulas for growth. Good oral hygiene is just as important for the health of the child as it is for the adult.

How much remains to be done in the way of public education about teeth is indicated in figures compiled by physicians which show that the number of children with decayed teeth varies in different localities from 50 to 98 percent. Yet America is ahead of other countries when it comes to dentistry!

Scientists have found that the quality of a child's teeth is determined in part before birth. It is therefore declared important that the mother selects articles of diet from food with a high calcium content. Milk contains more than 44 percent calcium and is therefore an admirable food. Other foods containing high percentages of calcium are spinach, onions, molasses, dried beans and figs. After birth the importance of diet from this standpoint must not be forgotten. Oral hygiene is not entirely a tooth brush affair though it is often viewed as such. There is too much of a tendency to blame a child's decayed teeth on candy and soft foods. A lack of proper food must take a share of the responsibility.

A large number of cavities in the teeth of young children indicates poorly calcified teeth as well as lack of attention to their cleansing. Teeth that have a poor enamel coating are usually the result of poor general health or more often of a diet lacking foods that contain the right building materials to make them strong and hard. A child's diet should contain plenty of milk, fruit, vegetables, cereals and rough breads.

Furthermore a child should be taught to chew its food thoroughly. Not only will this be an aid to digestion but it is necessary for jaw and tooth development in early life and for maintaining the health of the teeth and gums throughout life.

Clean a child's teeth as soon as they appear with a soft cloth and later with a brush that is not too large or with stiff bristles. The teeth should be cleaned at least night and morning. The common idea most mothers have is that the first tooth of the permanent set is a front tooth. This is not true. The first permanent tooth to come in is a big back tooth or grinder. It comes in just back of the last temporary tooth at about five to seven years. This tooth should be watched carefully and guarded against decay. It is the most important tooth of the permanent set and has much to do with the arrangement of the teeth in the jaw. Its position is remembered as being the sixth tooth from the front and coming in at the age of six years. It is commonly called the sixth year molar. Watch your children's diet and take them to the dentist at regular intervals. These two things will do much to maintaining their present and future healh.

The Vagrant

TOURNAMENT HERE FRIDAY

Boy Scouts From Three Towns Will Compete In Events.

A Boy Scout tournament will be held in Belmond tomorrow, Friday evening, April 1, at the high school gymnasium. The events will start promptly at 7:00 p. m., and will consist of three basketball games, a basketball relay game, signalling contest, and a talk on Forestry by Ed. C. Goodman, of Mason City.

Troops from three towns will compete, namely, Mason City, Garner, and Belmond. Everybody is cordially invited to attend the tournament. A small admission charge of ten cents and 15 cents will be made.

THOMPSON CASE FILLS 22 DAYS IN TESTIMONY

Monitor: With the closing today of hearings on the case of Amos Thompson vs. L. A. Andrew, receiver for the Citizens Bank of Eagle Grove, their has been established in Wright county a new long time record for circuit court hearings. The case has taken twenty-two days, during which Thompson has been pumped dry of all information in regard to transactions of the partnership between himself and his brother; fifty witnesses have been heard, and accumulation has been made of 2700 individual exhibits, all of which had to be identified by competent witnesses and numbered for the court records.

Though the hearing of testimony was concluded yesterday the arguments have not yet been made, and the attorneys will come back at another time to present their discussion of the case to Judge Fry.

In this suit Thompson is suing to recover a share of the property which his brother, E. J. Thompson, turned over to the Citizens State bank to cover defalcations. He claims that he and E. J. were in a partnership in whch he was to manage the property while the banker brother furnished the funds, each to share alike in the profits. Some of the property in which he claimed half interest becaose of this agreement was turned over to the bank. Opposing attorneys attempted to shiw that there had never been a profit in their deals, in fact there had been a loss, and that because of this situaton Amos Thompson had nothing to lose by the aition of his brother in converting the property to the bank.

Because of the mass of evidence concerned Judge Fry will probably require considerable time to arrive at a judgment in the case even after arguments are made by the attorneys.

It is said that in the event a transcript of the case should be required for any further proceedings that it would cost $400 to complete the record.

"DAD'S NIGHT AT LEGION

Annual Entertainment To Be Held At Hall Tonight.

Annual "Dad's Night" will be observed by the American Legion Post of Belmond tonight, Thursday, March 31, at the Legion hall over the Schultz Drug store. The program will begin at 8:00 o'clock and will be as follows:

Regular Opening Ceremony.
Address of Welcome—W. A. Parker, Commander.
Music—Legion Band.
Song—Quartette.
Speech—Editor Hall, of the Mason City Globe-Gazette.
Music—Legion Band.
Song—Legion Quartette.
Instrumental Solo—Dr. A. L. Larson.
Music—By Old Timers.
Professional Old Time Jigging.
Stunts.
Cards and Social Hour.

Following the social hour, the Legion and guests will adjourn to the library where refreshments will be served.

The Legion's Annual Dad's Nights are always hugely enjoyed, and this one will prove no exception judging by the program.

OBITUARY

Harm Ruiter was born on the 15th day of April, 1905, in Belmond township. He grew up to manhood in this vicinity. He seemed to enjoy good health until about a year ago his health began to fail. A deadly disease had seated itself deeply into his system which proved to be tuberculosis of the lungs. During the last six months he was taking treatments at the Oakdale sanitarium, at the same place where his brother, Remmer has been for over a year. Here Harm died Friday morning, March 25th at the age of twenty-one years, eleven months and twenty-one days. Altho his critical condition was known, his death nevertheless came as a shock to his relatives anc friends.

The remains were sent to Belmond for burial. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 1:00 o'clock in charge of Rev. O. G. Poppen. Interment was made in the family lot in the Emmanual Reformed cemetery adjoining the church.

His loving mother preceded him in death. He leaves to mourn his untimely departure his father, Fred Ruiter, seven brothers and five sisters, grandparents and other relatives and friends.

ULSTAD-SPELLMEYER

Miss Edna Lenor Ulstad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Ulstad, of Eagle Grove, and William Spellmeyer, son of G. C. Spellmeyer, of Eagle Grove, were married at that place March 26 by the Norwegian pastor, the ceremony occuring at the home of Mrs. Mable Orr, sister of the bride. The young couple have moved to Belmond where they are now employed by Helmer Johnson on the Julius Johnson farm west of town, Mrs. Julius Johnson being a sister of Mrs. Spellmeyer.

NOW IT'S LEAD PENCILS

Hampton Chronicle: Several months ago everybody was receiving a box of neckties, with a request to send in one dollar. Some were suckers to send in the dollar, and others were wise enough to keep the ties for a sufficient length of time to claim ownership. Now we are being flooded with lead pencils. This week a full gross of "choice" pencils were received at the Chronicle office, and a few days later along came a bill for $4.25, with the explanation of why they were offered so cheap. It was stated that the regular price was $6.00, but on investigation, we find that you can buy them at any book store in Hampton for $3.75. If the owner does not come after this bunch of pencils about 144 school kids will receive a pencil from this office a little later on.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary, Monday, at their home on Main street. Those present to enjoy the occasion with them were Mrs. Emma Bell, of Glilden, Mrs. Moore's only and elder sister; Miss Effie Bell, daughter of Mrs. Emma Bell, also of Glidden; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Suhr and son, Lewis, of Spirit Lake; Mr. and Mrs. Gus Bruger and sons Vern and Marlow, of Owasa; Howard Moore and children, Marjorie and Billy, of Minneapolis, Minn.; Young Moore, of Glidden, a brother of Charles Moore; Mrs. Frank Buchcit, of Carroll; Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Shane, of Omaha, Neb.; and Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Stark, Mr. and Mrs. O. Young, and Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bailey, of Belmond. Rev. Stark performed again the ceremony which united them fifty years ago, 1877, in Carroll county, Iowa, and following the ceremony the guests sat down to a wedding dinner served by the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Moore. During the afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Moore received many friends. The guests of honor received numerous beautiful and valuable gifts from their children, relatives and friends in token of the golden anniversary.

M. E. MISSIONARY PARTY

The members of the society celebrated the 58th anniversary of the founding of the society last Thursday, March 24.

The program and pageant was under the direction of Mrs. H. J. Williams. It was impressive and beautiful, Mrs. C. O. Fitts singing the solo parts.

The incense gift offering proved a generous one.

An antique exhibit which was arranged by Mrs. Jennings was varied and interesting.

Mrs. R. E. Courson, Mrs. R. H. Klemme and Mrs. Andrew Bullis with a committee assisting planned and served the supper. The arrangement of the table and supper were old fashioned. The sight of many things thereon brought a lump into the throat as we remembered how they had things like that at the home of dear old grandmother long, since gone to her heavenly reward. The supper was enjoyed by about 90 members and guests. ***

COMMUNITY CLUB MEETS

The Community Club met in their regular monthly meeting on Friday, March 25, with the new president, Mrs. R. A. Rankins presiding.

There was the ordinary routine of business and then the calendar committee announced the program for next month. It was voted to have the year's calendar printed, so come next time and get your calendar and keep informed of the monthly meetings.

The program was next in order. An interesting talk was given by Mrs. Thiltgen on "Duties of Club Members." Ruth Jones favored us with two piano selections. Then the playlet, "The Acid Test." by Mrs. Chauncey Palmer Smith, of Mason City, was well enacted by Mrs. Elder and Mrs. Ramsay, which was greatly enjoyed by the audience. Mildred Jacobson and Ruth Ramsey then rendered a fine piano duet. We fully appreciate the efforts of these girls in helping us out with our program. Delicious doughnuts were served after the program.

NUMEROUS SUITS FILED ON NOTES

Attention of Court Next Term Will Be Occupied With Lot of Small Suits.

TERM STARTS NEXT MONTH

Sebastian Fischer, who bought the note from the First Liberty Savings Bank of Eagle Grove, is suing William H. Paskin as guardian of Benjamin Paskin, for judgment on first mortgage note for $5000 made December 1, 1923. He asks foreclosure against 80 acres in section 34, 93-26 township.

State Savings Bank of Galt brings action for judgment against W. W. and Lois Cooley for $2,129.61, on a note.

Amos Amosson seeks recovery of $2332.13 from Emil Stanzel to liquidate a note.

Moseley Grocery Co., of Goldfield, asks recovery of a grocery bill of Eva Nelson for $127.01.

Action is brought against DeWitt Goodrich, Agnes B. Goodrich, A. W. Moseley, F. C. Moseley and Mae Moseley to recover $18,053.52 on a mortgage given by Goodrich to the Moseleys and afterwards negoiated to the bank.

J. E. Stauffacher seeks recovery on a mortgage note for $5,349.46 covering land in 32-93-26, which was given by Alcinda Frank and J. H. Frank to the First National Bank of Renwick, and which was later purchased by Stauffacher.

Merrill H. Halsey and Ida M. Hoebel, guardians, seek recovery from W. A. Evans and wife, T. L. Thompson and wife, for $17,935, secured by land in section 16, 91-26 township.

L. A. Andrew, for Commercial Savings Bank of Des Moines, asks judgment against John Connolly, Jr. and wife, and others, for $11,000, secured by land in section 29, 91-24 township.

On November 18, 1921, Nels and Erine Thompson of Eagle Grove borrowed $11,000 from the Prudential Insurance Co., and being unable to pay the same when due the company petitions the court to appoint a receiver to look after the interests of all parties.

John R. Johnson, of Eagle Grove asks judgment against Ruby D. Paine, now of Milwaukee to recover on her unpaid note the sum of $1539.47.

Security Savings Bank of Eagle Grove was given judgment against Mary H. Henneberry for $3303.50.

The grand jury endorsed the sanitary condition of the jail, but advised that it needs painting and papering.

Court approved the sale of a tract in lot 6, block 21, Goldfield, to Jacob Reichter for $175, by Farmers Savings Bank of Goldfield.

Ruth M. Shake was granted divorce from Murphy Shake on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

State Bank of Williams asks judgment against Ernest C. Meyer on his past due note for $7616.85. The State Bank of Blairsburg joins in the suit to recover the sum of $8596.50 on an unpaid note executed by above defendant.

Jennie Meyer brings action against John and Ernest Meyer asking judgment for 621.90, alleging the said Ernest Meyer as her guardian had failed to make a report as required by law; that the said John Meyer is a surety on the bond of said guardian. It is alleged that property in the above sum has been sold and no account made of the same. A similar case against said defendants is filed by Margaret Chandler who seeks to recover the sum of $445.18. Anna Allen also brings suit against above defendants upon similar grounds to recover $511.50.

The Eagle Grove Bottling works is named in suit brought by the Prima company of Chicago to recover the sum of $482.25 for tonics, extracts, etc., sold said works.

Ruth H. Noble of Eagle Grove vs. Minnie L. Walters is a suit to regain possession of certain residence property in that city now held by the defendant under contract. It is alleged terms of contract have been violated. —Monitor.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES

Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c

(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

Communications sent this paper dealing with the public or community matters or problems must be signed with the author's name. It is not necessary that the communication bear the name when printed, altho anyone who has something to say should not be afraid to put their name to it. But absolutely no communications can be printed unless they are signed when received. The paper must know who sends them, and who is responsible for them. The Independent has received several such communications recently which were not signed. They could not be printed for that reason if for no other. If the party who wrote in regard to liquor arrests will call at this office, he or she will receive the information requested.

There seems to be one thing about publishing a newspaper which many readers do not grasp, and that is, that when an item is clipped from another paper, and that paper credited with it, the newspaper reprinting the item does not assume responsibility for the veracity of the item. It is reprinted merely as a matter which is of interest to many of its readers. By giving credit to the paper originating the item, every reader is notified thru the credit that it is not original with the paper reprinting it. When an item is reprinted, and the facts given in the item are incorrect, the fault must lie with the paper originating the item. Papers reprinting it do so as a matter of interest to their readers and they cannot go to the time and expense of checking up the facts in another town or community; they must take that for granted, and by giving credit for the item the responsibility is placed where it belongs.

LOCAL NEWSPAPERS IN HARMONY ON PRINCIPLE OF FORCED CIRCULATION

Hampton Recorder: In regard to subscriptions the Recorder and its contemporary seem to agree perfectly. A general condemnation of newspapers with forced circulation appeared in last week's issue of the contemporary. A newspaper which keeps on sending papers after a subscriber has cancelled his subscription is a nuisance to the general public, the postoffice employees, and a menace to the advertisers who receive value from their advertising in proportion to the number of readers—not the total circulation. The Recorder takes pride in keeping up a paid circulation list of readers who want the paper and agrees heartily with its contemporary in the above. The Recorder takes occasion to add:

If you ordered a paper stopped three or four years ago and it is still coming do not be afraid to refuse it now on the grounds that you will have to "pay up." No publisher in the world will make you pay for a paper if you insist you ordered it cancelled. Some may try to bluff it out.

NO MERCY FOR THE CROW

Garner Leader: The magazine called "Our Dumb Animals," the official publication of the Boston Humane Society, prints a long article pleading for the crow, saying that he does more good than harm. "Dumb Animals" is printed in Boston, far removed from hog cholera and other diseases that the corn and hog farmer of Iowa has to contend with. Its publisher talks from the standpoint of the city man, who sees the crow a brainy, brave, black friend. If he lived in Iowa and became acquainted with Iowa problems, he would see the crow as a carrier of disease germs from a sick herd to well ones, a destroyer of birds whose standing is without question, and a general enemy of the farmer. Some of the things crows are accused of doing they do not do, but there are enough things they do do to make them anything but good fellows on the Iowa farms. These things being true, the Iowa crow should be shot at sight—if you can get close enough. He is a shrewd bird and very careful how he gets too close to a man with a gun or to a trap. He is a good scavenger, but that is his greatest undoing, for in that he becomes a menace by carrying disease germs in his feathers.

BETTER NEWSPAPERS

Humboldt Republican: One has only to take up the files of the weekly papers published in this portion of Iowa to know that they have improved vastly during the past few years. In fact, there is little about the average northwest Iowa county-seat newspaper today that is like the papers printed in the same towns ten years ago. There is an increase of news published and an improvement in the form of the news. The papers are better printed, better edited and more carefully put together, and contain about twice as much reading matter.

The news is more carefully gathered. County news letters are now usually carefully edited, and the old multitude of trash eliminated. Papers are now paying their correspondents an inch rate for what they publish, and reserve the right to throw out any unimportant or detrimental matter.

The same is true of local news items. The editor has given over gathering the news to local reporters and contents himself with a strict supervision of the articles turned in. They have to be of good quality or they get the blue pencil.

Threats of Bolting Don't Alarm

Waterloo Tribune: The south is to bolt Smith provided he is nominated; the middle west is to bolt Coolidge provided he's nominated—but the wise politician knows they'll be themselves when the time comes.

Everybody's Doing It But the Farmer

Iowa Falls Citizen: The president complains that the farmers are trying to escape the law of supply and demand. In the name of the Almighty, what is the purpose of tariff walls and trusts and combinations and gentlemen's agreements and special privilege laws?

Local News

C. A. Church and Mr. and Mrs. George Avery returned last week from their winter's sojourn in California.

Supt. Williams, Mrs. Gibbs, Misses Barry and Bond visited the Mason City schools, Thursday.

Supt. Williams, and the Misses Thomas, Bond, Beatrice and Loretta Barry attended the teachers' convention at Mason City last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Weide returned from Minnesota, Sunday. They had been visiting relatives there for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newgard, of Goodell spent Sunday with relatives here.

Miss Sadie E. Stark, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Stark, who has been for ten years head of the Home Economics department of the State Teachers' College at Chico, Cal., has been offered a similar position with Columbia University.

Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Stark left Tuesday for Lewis, Cass county, Iowa, where Rev. Stark has accepted a call to the Congregational church. Mr. and Mrs. Stark have been in Belmond about a year and a half, and have made many friends here who wish them all success in their new field.

George Earl Jenison won first place in Pleasant township at the county spelling contest in Clarion, recently. George is in the fifth grade in Miss Loretto Barry's school and has shown remarkable ability in spelling. Last year he won second place in the Belmond-Pleasant township contest.

The Joy Bearers' Congregational Missionary Society, composed of Mrs. Goelz' Sunday School class of girls met at the home of Jean Elder last Saturday afternoon. Beryl Hake led a very interesting lesson which impressed the members so much that it was decided we would help an orphan child. Delicious refreshments were served after which the society adjourned.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Congregational church met with Mrs. Thos. Cullinan March 24, with good attendance. Called to order by Pres. Mrs. M. F. Christie. Devotional led by Mrs. Hildebrand, after which a very interesting lesson was led by Mrs. E. E. Boughton. Lois Leinbach and Arlene Dipple favored us with a piano solo and duet, which was enjoyed by all. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mesdames Cullinan, Earhart, Davenport and White.

HOUSECLEANING

Housecleaning is a very ancient custom. It seems to be a primitive instinct in the human female which breaks out annually with great virulence, along about in April. Entomologists tell us that even the insects clean their bodies and their nests in the spring when the sap begins to flow.

There are three delightful, but busy, tasks which confront us in the spring-time: housecleaning, sewing, and gardening. It is well to take turns with each and not wear ourselves out by trying to do all three too strenuously. Work awhile each pleasant day in the garden, clean house in moderation in fine weather, and sew on rainy days.

Begin the housecleaning by looking over the things in the bureau drawers. Sort out everything which is no longer needed, and do not yield to the temptation to hold on to questionable articles on the chance that you may need them sometime. If you haven't used them for months the probability is that their day of usefulness to you is past. Bundle them off to the rummage sale and let someone else have a chance at them. While working at the bureaus, of course you will leave them clean throughout all their inside parts.

Get after the closet in the same way, taking everything down from each shelf and hook, cleaning the walls and putting back only what deserves to be put back. Nobody can do this work but the housemother herself. With some time spent on these preliminaries, an outsider can come in and help with the heavier work.

When you are sorting over the family raiment, you will find numerous pieces which need some repair. Pile them in a back room and mend them in stormy weather, or, if you cannot get around to it before, such work can be done pleasantly as you sit on the porch in summer.

Look over your supply of kitchen utensils and dishes, and replenish those which have given out. Do not make the mistake of keeping the broken can opener or loose-jointed egg beater. Discard them and buy new and save your temper and be efficient. You will be surprised how much more respect you will have for yourself when your working equipment is in repair.

This is a good season to paint those dingy spots and freshen up several places by a new coat of varnish. Now is the time, too, to get that shelf and the other little devices you have long been wanting. If you would be really in shipshape, get glass containers, all of a size, for holding pantry supplies. Buy shelf paper made to fit your shelves, and dress your cupboards in real style.

Cap the climax of your housecleaning by making a raid on your cellar. Dump out all the debris and rubbish which accumulates there, and make it so clean you will hardly recognize it. Those salad dressing bottles and dried beef glasses you couldn't bear to throw away, will be useful to some farm woman with oodles of jellies and preserves to can. Pack them in the auto and take them out to her, and do yourself, as well as her, a favor. You will have more by the time you might happen to need them.

Housecleaning is valuable, not only for the sanitary condition it creates, but for the new zest and impetus it arouses in the whole household. They feel almost as though they had moved into thrilling new quarters.

CANDY HINTS

In spite of the fact that we know it adds ounces to our weight, the sweet tooth will occasionally get an irresistable ache. When it does, make delicious home-made candy—as good as you know how—and then eat what you crave, taking care to deny yourself all other sugar and starch foods for a meal or a day. To counteract the evil effects of too much candy, eat lavishly of oranges, lemons, coarse vegetables, fruits and bran.

When making candy, let it cool before eating it. Keep it covered while it is cooking. This holds the steam in and dissolves the sugar crystals as they form around the edges of the kettle. Have the fire low under it or it will boil over. A little more butter and a little less cooking will make the candy more waxy and less granular. If you want to keep candy from drying out, seal it in a tin can away from the light and atmosphere.

EGGS

Eggs are one of our cheapest sources of body building materials. They contain no waste, are easily cooked and are completely digested. They are best when cooked below the boiling temperature—coddled or soft boiled.

Though eggs come in their own sealed package, the shell, they should be chosen from a clean yard, as the filth and germs of unclean surrounding will be passed on into the egg.

Fresh eggs may be preserved in water glass, using one quart of the commercial liquid to eighteen quarts of boiled water. Pour this into two 6-gallon jars and it will preserve thirty dozen eggs. Eggs may be added daily. The top layer should be covered by two inches of the liquid, and a cover kept over the jars to prevent evaporation.

Spring eggs, infertile, will keep better than fall eggs. Pack only clean eggs, but do not wash them, as the egg has a slime upon it which helps to seal it, and washing removes this protection.

CHURCHES

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN
J. F. Wipperman, Pastor

Divine service Sunday morning at 10:45, in the German language.

Divine service Sunday evening at 7:30 in the English language.

Sunday School at 9:45.

Class at the church at 10:00, Saturday.

We bid you welcome to our services.

TRINITY CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor
Telephone Call, 150

Thursday, March 31, mid-week prayer meeting at the church at 8:00 o'clock.

Sunday, April 3 the Sunday School and Bible classes will meet at 9:30.

English services will be held at 10:30 and Norwegian services at 11:30 a. m. An offering for our missions will be received at both services.

Tuesday, April 5 the catechetical class will meet immediately after school.

Choir practice at 7:30 p. m.

ST. OLAF CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor

Sunday, April 3, the Sunday School will meet at 10:30 a. m. We urge our members to assist all our children to be present. And the best assistance we can give is to accompany them to the church, take an active part in the work, or enroll with the Bible class.

Wednesday, April 6, mid-week prayer meeting will be held in the church at 8:00 p. m.

Friday, April 8, a meeting of the young people of our church and others interested in our work, will be held at the church at 8:00 p. m. We hope to have a well represented meeting.

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, April 3:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. Classes for all ages. Competent teachers. You are welcome.

Divine worship and sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "The Authority of Jesus." Matt. 21-23.

Junior and Senior Leagues at 6:30. Qualified leaders in both departments.

Worship and Gospel Message at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "When Is Prayer Answered?" Acts 9-11. With this service we shall begin our two weeks of special meetings every night except Saturday nights we shall have services for these two weeks. We look forward to the Easter season with particular emphasis on church and spiritual things. May we not solicit your efforts for the success of these meetings?

The account of the Sub-District Epworth League group rally at Clarion of last week you will read in another part of this paper.

County Sunday School Convention at Woolstock March 31, which is Thursday of this week. We hope a large representation of the Belmond church will be present, and help make this day all it should be. The Passion Play by Dr. Barry in this church Friday evening, April 1st. You cannot afford to miss this opportunity. See the play. You are most cordially invited to all of our services.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Crusades

A DWARF—misshapen, bearded, ungainly—sat on a lean, shaggy donkey, in the midst of a shrieking multitude and brandished a huge crucifix above his head. His shouted exhortations were echoed and re-echoed by the crowd.

The dwarf was known as Peter the Hermit. He was pleading with his Eleventh-century audience to wrest the Holy Land from the grip of the Mahometan infidels. And so eloquently did the little priest urge his cause that he aroused a world-wide wave of enthusiasm and set afoot a mighty international agitation which endured for centuries.

Mahomet's successors held the Holy Land. Christians on pious pilgrimages to the Savior's birthplace and tomb were robbed, insulted and even murdered by these Moslems. Sacred shrines were profaned or destroyed. These outrages aroused Peter the Hermit; and, in the latter part of the Eleventh century, he went from country to country, urging all Christians to sweep the Holy Land, and especially the Holy City, Jerusalem, clear of Mahometans and to avenge the injuries perpetrated on Christian pilgrims. Pope Urban II approved the plan and promised remission of sins to all who should enter on this holy war.

All Europe went mad with religious zeal. "Id Deus vult!" ("God wills it!") was their war cry. Thousands and hundreds of thousands donned the blood-red cross which was to be the badge of the mission.

Debtors, felons, servants, monks and other classes bound in one way or another were freed on promise to march against the infidels. An enormous international army was raised for the purpose, its chief commander being Godfrey du Bouillon, duke of Lorraine. But early in 1096, before the organized expedition could get under way, a disorganized mob of 200,000 men, women and children, under the personal leadership of Peter the Hermit, started across Europe for Jerusalem. They never reached their destination. Without discipline, food or sufficient arms, they straggled on eastward, their ranks daily thinning through desertion, disease and famine, until of all that vast motley horde a bare 7,000 reached the eastern banks of the Bosphorus. There they were set upon and literally cut to pieces by the Turks.

On August 15, 1096, Godfrey de Bouillon's host began its march to Palestine, reaching Constantinople on Christmas day. Wrangles of various sorts, disputes as to precedence in command, bad management and insufficient supplies hampered their movements from first to last. The expedition, which started with so holy an aim, began to feel the influence of politics, corruption and personal ambition. Nevertheless, held together by Godfrey's genius, they defeated, one after another, the Mahometan armies sent against them, and at last laid siege to Jerusalem itself. The Holy City fell after about a month's defense, and the victorious crusaders put to death in horrible fashion every Mahometan defender they could lay their hands on. Moslem men, women and even babies were slaughtered mercilessly by these upholders of the Gospel of Peace, and Godfrey was chosen king of Jerusalem.

A second crusade, urged on by St. Bernard and led by Louis VII of France, followed a few years later. An unsuccessful effort was made to capture Damascus, and, altogether, the venture was without any real results. For eighty-eight years the Christians held Jerusalem. Then the Moslems recaptured it.

In 1190 a third great crusade was begun, the prime mover and leader being King Richard I of England, surnamed Coeur de Lion (Lion Heart). Again the leaders quarreled among themselves and swerved from the true purpose of their mission. They won a few barren victories, but failed wholly to win Jerusalem.

Crusade followed crusade, none achieving true success. At length the belief spread that the expeditions failed because of the sins and worldliness of the men who embarked upon them. Churchmen declared that the Holy Land could be snatched from the infidel by none but innocent hands. Innocence then, as now, was not a common commodity among men of war, so it was decided to raise an army of little children and send them against the Moslems. The new venture was known as the Children's crusade. It was the saddest, most pitiful tragedy in all history.

Fifty thousand children, some of them mere babies, set out for Palestine in 1212. They went, assured by their parents and by the priests, that theirs was the solemn privilege of restoring Palestine to Christianity. They set forth with high hopes. But they starved, fell ill, were lost in strange lands, died or were sold as slaves.

The crusades were the most glorious, sublime failures in the annals of the world. They constituted a mistake that can never wholly be condemned. They accomplished nothing permanent, yet they did much to Christianize, unite and teach the brotherhood of man to Europe's warring nations.

They remain forever a monument of the life-sacrifices—magnificent, if futile—that men have made and ever will make, for their faith.

FREE AIR

How much do you know? Answering questions is the latest craze to take the place of cross word puzzles and Mah Jong, and it's a sensible fad. You ought to know most of the questions being propounded. Keeping up with the Jones, we submit a list of questions about Belmond which every local citizen should be familiar with:

1. What great American does R. E. Courson resemble?
2. How much does Matt Barry know?
3. How many fish does Fred Shipley claim he caught each time he goes to Cross Lake?
4. At what time in the morning does Cato get up?
5. How often does Harold Aigley shave?
6. What is Adolph Skovlin's middle name?
7. What sport do Con and Gus Nissen get most excited about?
8. When is Belmond going to have a tourist park?
9. Who is editor of that famous weekly, "Splinters"?
10. Which one of our well known citizens is called "Little Nemo."
11. Where is the "Red Light District" located?
12. Which local concern was reported to be interested in erecting a broadcasting station?
13. Did Rich Thompson ever find his auto trailer?
14. What became of Belmond's Chamber of Commerce?
15. Is Geo. Goelz figuring on raising potatoes this year?
16. What were the estimated profits the first year of the United Manufacturing Co.?
17. Has Geo. Elder ever paid his debt to Dad Ingalls?
18. What is Cecil Jones' nickname?
19. Where does Dr. McBurney get all his funny stories?
20. Are you a subscriber to this paper, or do you mooch you neighbor's?

For the best list of answers submitted to these questions before April 5, we will give a year's subscription—and this ain't no April Fool business either.

LOCALS

Mrs. E. H. Thorman left last Friday for South Dakota to help care for her sister, who is very ill.

Ronald Purcell had the misfortune of breaking his wrist last Friday, while cranking a truck.

Edwin Mennenga visited a few days last week with W. Garling at Bricelyn, Minnesota. Mr. Garling was the Rock Island station agent here last summer.

Boy Scout Tournament April 1 at school gymnasium. Everyone invited. Admission 10c and 15c.

Tom Burgess and family of Goodell visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith, Sunday.

Mrs. Chris Norby visited her sister, Mrs. Wm. Connor, at Hampton, last week, returning Sunday.

H. L. Stapley, who is staying at the home of his son, Willard, in Chicago, this winter, is reported quite ill, being at a hospital for treatment.

Harold Wallace left recently for Mango, Ill., where he is employed in electrical work.

Mrs. Wm. Warneke of Webster City visited at the Ed. Brewer home Thursday. The ladies are cousins.

Harry Webb, Harley Hammond and Joe Sprenzel attended the revival meetings at Kanawha, Sunday.

Miss Esther Dibble spent her spring vacation with her sister, Mrs. Lammers at Iowa Falls.

A surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hilko H. Pals, March 27th, the occasion being the 20th birthday of John Pals. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Blau and family, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Schmidt and family, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Ostendorf and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Blau and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Blau and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Modderman and family, Miss Marie Blau, Mrs. Bert Hemmes and daughter, Wilma. The guest of honor was presented with a valuable ring by his uncles in honor of the event.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

GREEN PEAS EASILY PRODUCED

Green peas, tho one of the most highly prized and expensive vegetables sold on the market, are easily grown in the home garden and in order to insure a steady supply over a long period, C. V. Holsinger, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College, recommends making three or four plantings.

The first planting should be made as soon as the ground can be worked. For this the Alaska, a very early, dwarf variety, may be used. The second planting may be made two weeks later, using a good wrinkled and, preferably, a dwarf variety, because it is unnecessary to train these or to provide a trellis. This second planting can be followed in two weeks by another planting and this by still another.

Mr. Holsinger does not recommend growing peas for extra late use because there is danger of running into the dry weather of June, which would prevent a good crop from setting.

OATS ARE GERMINATING POORLY

Samples of seed oats obtained from over the state recently and tested by the Farm Crops Department, Iowa State College, have germinated as low as 6 percent, with many samples showing only 50 to 60 percent germination.

Much of the oats available on Iowa farms is not fit for seed this year owing to the low germination, in the opinon of H. D. Hughes, Farm Crops Department head. Because oats usually germinate well, testing to determine their vitality is seldom thot of or in fact necessary. The trouble this year was caused by the unfavorable weather conditions prevalent at the time of threshing last summer, which caused much of the grain to be damaged in the shock or to heat in the bins.

While many farmers realize that the seed is of poor quality, undoubtedly much of it will be planted, Mr. Hughes believes. Where low germinating seed is used, it will either produce unsatisfactory returns or will germnate so poorly that new seed will have to be bought and the fields re-seeded.

HINTS OFFERED SPUD GROWERS

"Never before were there so many farmers in Iowa intending to plant 5 or 10 acres of potatoes as there are this year and many of them are in danger of losing money on the proposition," says C. L. Fitch, specialist in vegetable production, Iowa Extenson Service, Ames.

Two years of high potato prices with the relative low price of corn this year has brought about the situation, Mr. Fitch says. Many new growers will be disappointed this year, he believes, because potatoes are not "at home" in Iowa on account of the hot weather and too heavy soils in most localities.

"There is a market in Iowa for the crop that could be produced by a thousand men growing from 5 to 40 acres of potatoes," Mr. Fitch says. "These potatoes would be marketed almost altogether locally."

Some pointers brought out by Mr. Fitch to be remembered in growing potatoes follow:

Buy good seed—seed that has been given the hot formaldehyde treatment.

Do not attempt to grow potatoes on worn out or poor soil, because high fertility is essential to the production of both quantity and quality.

If possible, potatoes should follow corn, which, in turn, has followed a legume crop.

If an acre or more of potatoes are to be grown, the grower should own a sprayer capable of carrying 250 pounds of pressure steadily in nine or more nozzles, and the sprayer should be used at the right time to delay blight. To make the increase in yield pay for a sprayer, a 10 acre crop is required, which may be owned by one grower or may be the combined crops of several growers.

Grading should be done before any attempt is made to sell the crop.

"BARBLESS" BARLEY A REALITY

As a result of the production of a barbless variety of barley, more Iowa farmers are going to grow barley in the future, according to Prof. H. D. Hughes, in charge of farm crops investigations at the Iowa Experiment Station, Ames.

"Ask a dozen men why they don't grow barley," Mr. Hughes said. "Will they tell you that it doesn't yield? No! Because barley yields more feed per acre than oats and as a market crop it gives greater returns. Iowa farmers do not grow barley because of the objectionable beards."

Work by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and a number of experiment stations has resulted in the production of varieties which, while bearded, have smooth beards so that they do not work in."

Perhaps the best of the barbless varieties, according to Mr. Hughes, is a variety named "Velvet," produced and distributed by the Minnesota Experiment Station. A number of Iowa farmers are seeding this new variety and the Iowa Experiment Station, Ames, has a quantity of seed which is being distributed in two bushel lots to farmers who want to get a start of this variety.

News About Iowa People and Events

That the poultry business is going to be overdone is foreshadowed in a statement made by W. C. Davis, of Iowa City, extensive poultry and egg dealer. He says that in a recent survey "we find about one hundred more hens on each farm in Johnson county than last year. This would show that in Johnson county we have 250,000 more hens than last year. Considering the 99 counties in the state, it would be an increase in flocks in Iowa alone of 25,000,000 hens over 1926. Washington, Oregon and California shipped last year 3,280 cars of eggs to eastern markets. In 1927 they expect to ship 4,400 cars of eggs. These all find a market east of Chicago. And are the competitors of the middle west producers? All these hens in the western states are fed one kind of feed, so that the eggs are uniform in quality. We middle western farmers can not handle our eggs as they do, and we must change our methods if we want to make money. Our only chance to compete with them is to raise a chicken that will produce a brown egg. We western farmers have always sold eggs as eggs, regardless of quality, size or color. Last year every white egg we bought sold for less money than did the brown eggs."

* * * *

George Shull, a carpenter by trade is dead at Afton, Union county. He was an expert in wood finishing. He also had a hobby, that of collecting fire arms, ancient and modern, and he had guns, pistols, revolvers and other deadly weapons from all parts of the world. He began his collection when eight years of age and probably had one of the best collections in the United Stated owned by a private individual. In addition to the guns he had many curios in the house which he built especially to display them.

DENISON Turns Water Into Wealth

MAKE IDLE ACRES PAY A PROFIT

THE experience of Fred G. Eilers is typical of thousands of cases showing what tile drainage is doing for farmers.

Mr. Eilers has 20 acres which had been in pasture for 8 years because it was too wet to cultivate. His cost for taxes and interest on this tract was $280 a year while its income as pasture land was estimated at $100, making a loss of $180 a year.

In the fall of 1924 he tiled this land and the following spring planted it to corn, which yielded 70 bushels to the acre. His income from this crop was $980, while the total cost of tiling was $475.

Thus the first year's crop, after tiling, paid the annual carrying charge of $280, paid the entire cost of tiling and left a net profit of $225. And the tiling will continue to do its good work for many, many years with little or no upkeep cost.

HOW about your land? Is it producing all that it should? Write for King's book "Tile Drainage." It may open your eyes to big profits that are now slipping through your fingers.

Denison Double Process Drain Tile sold by your local dealer.

MASON CITY BRICK and TILE COMPANY
210 Denison Building
MASON CITY, IOWA

LOCALS

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lieuwen of Humboldt were Sunday guests with Belmond relatives.

1200 Extra High Grade W. Leghorns to sell April 6. We do careful custom hatching. A hatch off every Tuesday. Balluff & Thorpe, Clarion, Iowa. 192

M. C. Barry reports the sale of Mrs. Anna Jacobson's farm six miles west of Belmond to Harry and Geo. Furgeson last week.

Mrs. Geo. Wickersheim of Meservey is ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ed. Schmidt, of Belmond.

Paul Johnson and Verle Brewer, who are attending the University of Commerce at Des Moines, spent Sunday with home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gartin went to Hampton, Saturday, to visit Mr. and Mrs. Henry Saatoff. Mr. Saatoff is ill at the hospital there.

Remember the Boy Scout Tournament tomorrow, Friday, April 1. at school gymnasium. Three basketball games, basketball relay game, signalling contest and good talk. 10c and 15c admission. Everybody come!

Miss Clara Johnson of Iowa Falls spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gus Johnson.

FOR EASTER—Now is the time to have your spring clothes cleaned at the Belmond Tailor Shop. 203

We make your old hats and caps look like new.—New Belmond Tailor Shop.

STATEMENT OF CONDITION OF

State Bank of Belmond

Organized under the laws of Iowa, located at Belmond, Iowa, in the county of Wright, at the close of business on the 23 day of March, 1927.

RESOURCES

Loans and discounts, bonds and securities		$478,852.93
Overdrafts		2,753.11
Banking House	$ 40,000.00
Furniture and Fixtures	15,000.00	55,000.00
Other real estate owned		29,824.88
Due from banks and bankers, cash and cash items		82,083.17
Other assets		172.98
Total Resources		$647,687.07

LIABILITIES

Capital Stock		80,000.00
Surplus Fund		10,000.00
Undivided Profits (after deducting expenses		1,173.87
Deposits due to banks and bankers on demand	28,770.98
Individual Deposits subject to check	244,297.19
Savings Deposits	67,737.53
Time certificates of deposit	161,701.72
Demand Certificates, Certified Checks and unpaid dividends	6,005.78	508,513.20
Bills payable other than with Federal Reserve Bank		48,000.00
Total Liabilities		$647,687.07

State of Iowa, Wright County—ss.

We, Ole Thompson, vice president, and R. E. Courson, Cashier, of the bank above named, do solemnly swear that the foregoing statement is full, true and correct, to the best of our knowledge and belief.

OLE THOMPSON, Vice President
(BANK SEAL) R. E. COURSON, Cashier

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence by Ole Thompson and R. E. Courson this 30 day of March, 1927

(SEAL GRACE QUIGLEY
Notary Public in and for Wright County.

Attested by: T. A. Davenport, W. C. Tyrrell and G. F. Elder, Directors.

STATEMENT OF CONDITION OF

Belmond Savings Bank

Organized under the laws of Iowa, located at Belmond, Iowa, in the County of Wright, at the close of business on the 23 day of March, A. D. 1927.

RESOURCES

Loans and Discounts, Bonds and Securities		$506,518.60
Overdrafts		374.76
Banking House	6,000.00
Furniture and Fixtures	3,600.00	9,600.00
Other Real Estate Owned		27,655.17
Due from Banks and Bankers, Cash and Cash Items		87,896.44
Other Assets (including expenses in excess of profits), Customer's Tax Receipts		25,130.40
Total Resources		$657,175.37

LIABILITIES

Capital Stock	$ 25,000.00
Surplus Fund	12,000.00	37,000.00
Undivided Profits (after deducting expenses		4,638.69
Individual Deposits Subject to Check	258,263.53
Savings Deposits	172,450.60
Time Certificates of Deposit	183,855.63
Demand Certificates, certified checks and unpaid dividends	966.92	615,536.68
Total Liabilities		$657,175.37

State of Iowa, Wright County, ss.

We, C. P. Luick, president; D. E. Packard, vice president; and C. O. Fitts, cashier, of the bank above named, do solemnly swear that the foregoing statement is full, true and correct to the best of our knowledge and belief.

C. P. LUICK, President
(BANK SEAL) D. E. PACKARD, Vice President
C. O. FITTS, Cashier

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence by C. P. Luick, D. E. Packard and C. O. Fitts this 28 day of March, 1927.

C. M. MORSE
(SEAL) Notary Public in and for Wright County.

Attested by: Harm Steenblock, W. J. Morse, M. D. Sullivan and O. T. Jacobson, Directors.

CAR OF POULTRY FEED

Start to finish baby chick mash—that red feed—the same kind that we sold last year. It is treated with imported Spanish Oxide of Iron, a pure 96 percent mineral, and contains cod liver oil. Our price this year is right.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS
FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER. Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMOND, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

DR. R. E. PORTER
BELMOND, IOWA
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

Kinseth's Store News

Sure looks like spring this week, and you want to be thinking about that garden of yours. We have the seeds to make you the finest garden you ever had, all kinds of them, and when you get ready to plant just drop in and we'll make up any assortment you want.

Onion sets, too.

This week we have a mighty good buy in Flour. 98 pound sacks that are going for only $3.89 the sack. If you need flour, or are going to need some in the near future, don't overlook this buy.

A new broom sweeps clean, it is said, and we have some dandies for 42 cents.

For those baby chicks just hatching out we have chick feed of all kinds.

Oranges still only 29c a dozen.

Just tell Central "19" or "5" when you want food and service. That's the numbers of The Store on the Corner.

House Cleaning Time!

WALL PAPER — PAINTS — VARNISHES
ALABASTINE — FRESCOAT

If you are going to re-decorate this spring, order your Wall Paper or Paint now. See our selection first.

We have a Special on CHAMOIS SKINS—$1.25 value.....98c

Don't forget that we have a nice line of SPONGES.

ABSORBENE cleans Wall Paper. 15c a can. 2 for 25c.

LOWE BROS. CLEANER cleans painted wails and wood work. 45c per can.

Telephone us for a date for our Johnson's Wax Electric Floor Polisher. Rental $2.00 per day. Minimum $1.00. You can polish your floors in one-fourth the time you have been taking and do a nicer job.

Schultz Drug Co.

Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, March 31, 1927 No. 50

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

As near as we can figure it out, this game of marbles wasn't designed for people with lumbago.

—

Geo. Goelz Sez:
"It isn't so hard to face the trial
Of the day's routine with a quip,
But ther' ain't no man can cook up a smile
When he's lyin' at home with the grippe."

—

First of April just ahead. Be cautious. Don't pick up any pocketbooks or kick any old derby hats. Which reminds us of a man we once knew who found a pocketbook on the 1st of April and it had six dollars in it!

—

Soon the sound of the pie plant will be heard and the breath of young onions will be abroad in the land.

—

A little story: Mike and Pat. "I'll bet you five dollars there are seven doors in this room." Pat could count only four. The bet was made. "All right," says Mike, "there are four doors and three cuspidors." Pat lost. Later, Pat encountered a prospective victim. "I'll bet you five dollars there are seven doors in this room." The victim put up the money. "All right," says Pat, "there are four doors and three spittoons!" The point we're trying to make is that we can get you any size door or window.

—

"Cold baths prolong life," says a magazine here on our desk. But we're not interested. That just means more cold baths.

—

Some day we're going to learn all the words to the Star Spangled Banner.

MESERVEY SECTION

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30.
Morning Worship at 10:30 (German).
Young People's Meeting, 7:30.
Evening Preaching services at 8:00.
The Sacrament of Infant Baptism will be administered at the morning service next Sunday.
Senior Class in Catechism Tuesday at 3:20 at the parsonage.
Dorcas Society meets Wednesday at the usual hour.
The goodly sum of $118.50 was raised by the Sunday School thru the mission boxes. Thi samount is $10.00 higher than that of last year, which is very gratifying. We rejoice and take courage. If you have children of Sunday School age, send them.
The Ladies' Aid met last week, Thursday. Mrs. H. Pannkuk served refreshments. The amount of $5.00 was received into the treasury. The society donated $25.00 to the new parsonage.
This church extends a warm welcome to all. The church is here to help you solve your spiritual needs and problems. Let us not neglect our highest needs.

H. Pannkuk, Pastor.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:45 a. m.
Prayer service at 10:45 a. m., conducted by Mr. G. Lauster, the class leader.
There will be no evening service.
German prayer meeting on Wednesday evening at the Rev. H. Raecker home.
On Thursday afternoon, April 7 the W. M. S. will meet at the H. Reif home for the monthly business meeting, and study of missions. Every member is urged to be present. Friends are also invited to meet with us.
English service on Thursday evening and study of the Sunday School lesson.

Lawrence Sohl, Pastor.

MESERVEY SCHOOL NOTES

The high school literary program March 18 was a St. Patrick's program. Roll call was answered with Pat and Mike jokes, Irish songs were sung and reports on Ireland taken from the March issue of the National Geographic magazine were given by two of the Juniors. Instrumental numbers, readings, original stories and a very humorous newspaper held the interest of all.

Winners in the Lincoln essay contest are as follows: Neva Muller, first; Harriet Sprau and Fredona Lemke, second; and Harvey Quandt, third. The winner was presented with a bronze medal, given by the Illinois Watch Company. Her name will be engraved on the back of the medal by the watch company.

Fredona Lemke and Dena Wieman have been absent from school due to illness. We are glad to have them back in school again.

Bernard Brater and Harvey Quandt have had an average of 100 percent in spelling this six weeks.

The girls are playing base ball during their physical training period every Thursday morning.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Spring Coats and Dresses this week Thursday and Friday at the Belmond Hat Shoppe.

Don't bury your chicks. Feed NU-TRENA Cod Liver Oil Chick Mash. For sale by C. J. Janssen. 1c

Miss Ella Jorgenson, telephone operator of Thornton, visited at the Central office here Sunday p. m.

Mrs. H. Wilkins and daughters visited Mrs. Meinderts at the Bachman home near Garner, Monday. They were accompanied here by Leona Wilkins and Marjory Bachman who will remain here for a week's visit.

Mrs. John Ruiter and daughter Evelyn, returned home Sunday from a week's visit at the home of her parents at Latimer.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hemming of Thornton spent Sunday p. m. at the Ed. Foss home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wendel from Belmond were Sunday guests at the Theo. Wendel home.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lemke and daughter were Hampton callers Monday to consult physicians about the latter's health. Fredona has been ailing for the past few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Wendel were visiting the latter's sister and husband, Mr and Mrs. Pequet, near Clear Lake, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Thomas and Lois motored to Cedar Falls Sunday to spend the day with their daughters, Miss Viola returning with them for a week's vacation.

Chas. Strasburg and two sons, also Miss Anna, motored here from Ackley, Sunday, to attend church services, spending the remainder of the day with another son at Thornton.

Mrs. Clyde Smith and Mrs. Sweesy of Mason City were Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. Mary Butz.

H. C. Barger and Geo. Grosz were business callers at Garner, Monday.

Robt. Gobeli visited his wife at a sanitarium at Fort Dodge, several days last week. We are informed that Mrs. Gobeli has not been as well recently as was hoped.

Mrs. Wm. Gealow returned home from Belmond, Monday, after spending Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Geitz.

Miss Dena Wieman was compelled to remain home from school several days last week on account of illness.

Word was received here Saturday of the death of Harm Ruiter, at Oakdale sanitarium. Deceased was the second eldest son of Fred Ruiter of Belmond. Funeral services were held Monday at Belmond and burial was in the Palsville cemetery.

A. J. Nissen transacted business in Hampton last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Ed Schmidt, of Belmond accompanied her mother, Mrs. George Wickersheim to the Schmidt home, where she will remain until her health improves.

Miss Ona Ulrich spent her vacation at the home of her sister, Mrs. Leland Jacobson and family. Miss Ona is a student at the Minnesota University.

Wilfred Paul returned to Morristown, Minn. last Friday, where he will be employed at the home of his uncle, Fred Paul, for the summer.

A. D. Brogan of Whittemore was a business caller here the fore part of last week.

Geo. Grosz and Donald Muller motored to Mason City last Wednesday evening to attend the Scout Leaders' School at the Chamber of Commerce.

George Wessels, of Fort Dodge visited here at the home of his parents between trains, Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Kolb received a message from Pine Island, Minn. last week, conveying the sad news of the death of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Mosher's daughter. Funeral was held Sunday and was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Kolb.

Erwin Langlitz is busily engaged with the remodeling of the church property into a five room house.

Horace Hobel has been enjoying a visit with his mother at the C. J. Wendel home the past week.

The 4-H Club of Meservey held their regular monthly meeting on March 22, at the home of Hallie Ward. A very interesting meeting was held, the main thought under discussion being "home furnishings." Nine members were present and all had a very good time. Light refreshments were served at the close of the meeting. All girls between the ages of twelve and twenty-one are welcome to join this club. We assure you that you will enjoy belonging to this club, and these meetings will interest you very much.

Neva Muller, Scribe.

I. A. Nissen and children of Kamrar were Sunday visitors at the Chas. Waddingham home.

Rev. H. M. Raecker of Sheffield was a caller here, Saturday.

Mrs. Clarence Groesbeck and three children of Klemme were week end visitors at the O. E. Strasburg home.

Rev. L. Sohl left Monday for Cedar Falls to attend the annual conference session.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Peters of Alexander were Sunday visitors here.

Prevent Leg Weakness and White Diarrhea in your chicks. Feed sunshine NUTRENA Cod Liver Oil Chick Mash. C. J. Janssen. 1c

Mr. and Mrs. Moody Quandt and daughters were at Dows, Sunday.

Mrs. Lambert Pals and daughter, Miss Tillie, attended the funeral of Harm Ruiter, Monday. Others we learned of attending were the Misses Hannah, Grace and Emma Boelman, and Abbe Meints, Jr.

Peter Koenen is home from Central College, Pella, to spend the spring vacation.

Mrs. Pearl Tanner and her sister, Miss McEwen, of Mason City, were in this vicinity the fore part of the week in the interest of the former's office as county superintendent.

Miss Grace Groen and her brother Cristopher and Wilbert Frey were Thornton callers, Monday.

Dan Schmidt and family of Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Crist Groen were Sunday visitors at the Harm Groen home.

Mrs. Herman Bunning and son Francis of Lake Park visited at the Clarence Ruigh home the latter part of last week. Mrs. Bunning and Mrs. Ruigh were girlhood friends and came to America together. They had not met since. Needless to say, the visit was a most enjoyable one.

Theo. Wendel left Tuesday via the auto route to be in attendance at the annual conference at Cedar Falls as a delegate

News About Iowa People And Events

March 31 has been set by the Iowa soldiers' bonus boards as the final date on which additional evidence will be received on resubmission of rejected claims. After this date the matter of considering claims for bonus will be closed, and all money on hand in the bonus fund after these claims are disposed of, will be invested in state and federal bonds under the provisions of a law enacted by the legislature this year. It is estimated that about $1,200,000 will be invested. There are about 3,600 of rejected claims pending submission of additional evidence to support their validity. The board comprises Treasurer of State R. E. Johnson, Auditor of State J. W. Long, R. J. Laird, state adjutant of the American Legion, and Adj. Gen. Louis G. Lasher.

* * * *

Sixty-two persons were killed and 149 were injured in highway grade crossing accidents in Iowa in 1926, the state board of railroad commissioners announce. Of these accidents 102 occurred in daylight and thirty-six after dark. Five of them involved horse drawn vehicles and the remainder automobiles. Twenty of the accidents occurred at grade crossings protected by some type of automatic apparatus, gates or crossing flagmen; twenty at crossings where a good view of the approaching train was obstructed by cars on adjacent tracks; sixteen at crossings where switching movements were being made, and twenty-seven were caused by an auto being driven into the sides of trains while the latter were standing at, or moving over the crossing.

* * * *

The program for the thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Physical Education association which will be held in Des Moines April 13 to 16, has been made public by Miss Margaret A. McKee, chairman of local arrangements. W. H. Burton, of Columbia university will be the principal speaker at the opening general session Thursday morning, April 14. The Midwest Society of Physical Education and the central division of the Iowa State Teachers association will meet jointly with the American Physical Education association. The public school section, which will be presided over by Edgar Everts, state supervisors of Minnesota, will have charge of the Friday morning program. Round table discussions will be held Friday afternoon and Saturday morning.

* * * *

A flock of more than 200 strange birds have been feeding on the berries of the Norway spruce trees in front of C. F. Crawford's residence in east Cascade, Dubuque county, for several weeks. The birds are not much larger than sparrows. Their plumage is gray underneath body, wings striped with red brown, with long pinions of red, and topknots varying in colors of red, gray and mixed red and gray. The birds roost in the dense growth of cedars at the bluffs and make daily trips to the spruce trees. Persons acquainted with all kinds of native birds state that these visitors are foreign and have never been here before.

* * * *

Wild turkeys will again be found in Iowa if the efforts to propagate these birds of pioneer days, now being undertaken by the state fish and game department, prove successful. Forty-eight wild turkeys from Tennessee were turned into the pens at the state game farm near Clive, west of Des Moines, last month. Although the weather was cold, the turkeys showed no signs of discomfort. State Game Warden W. E. Albert says the southern state are full of wild turkeys. They do not come much farther north than Tennessee, and those brought to the Iowa game farm were from that state because it was thot they would stand the Iowa climate better than those found farther south.

STATEMENT OF CONDITION OF

Farmers Savings Bank

Organized under the laws of Iowa, located at Meservey, in the County of Cerro Gordo, at the close of business on the 23rd day of March, 1927.

RESOURCES

Loans and discounts, bonds and securities		$289,557.74
Overdrafts		97.64
Banking House	$ 5,000.00
Furniture and Fixtures	3,980.00	8,980.00
Other real estate owned		22,911.26
Due from banks and bankers, cash and cash items		88,807.75
Other assets (customers' tax receipts)		17,812.36
Total Resources		$428,166.75

LIABILITIES

Capital stock	20,000.00
Surplus fund	5,000.00	$ 25,000.00
Undivided profits (after deducting expenses		4,540.87
Individual deposits subject to check	195,115.58
Savings deposits	8,683.85
Time certificates of deposit	194,649.93
Demand certificates, certified checks and unpaid dividends	176.52	398,625.88
Total Liabilities		$428,166.75

State of Iowa, Cerro Gordo County, ss.

We, A. J. Nissen, President; Conrad Bier, Vice President, and K. Clarence Ruigh, Cashier of the bank above named, do solemnly swear that the foregoing statement is full, true and correct, to the best of our knowledge and belief.

A. J. NISSEN, President
CONRAD BIER, Vice President
K. CLARENCE RUIGH, Cashier

(SEAL)

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence by A. J. Nissen, Conrad Bier and K. Clarence Ruigh, this 28th day of March, 1927.

ELLA LACHER
Notary Public in and for Cerro Gordo County.

(SEAL)

Attested by: Frank Hafermann, W. F. Butz, Wm. Messelheiser and Jacob Nissen, Directors.

This coupon and 25c entitle the undersigned to one 35c can of Acme Quality Enamel-Kote, any color, and a special 20c Paint Brush.

Name.....

Address.....

To acquaint you with Acme Quality, we are making a special offer for a short time only.

SPECIAL OFFER 55¢ Value for 25¢

You will scarcely know your own rooms

Just a few strokes of a paint brush are all that stand between you and a home interior that visitors will admire and envy.

Scuffed up floors, marred woodwork and furniture, walls, ceilings, even the radiators, can be magically transformed with

ACME QUALITY Paint and Varnish

Specially pleasing is the color range in No-Lustre Finish Flat Wall Paint for walls and Enamel-Kote for interior woods and furniture.

Before you buy any paint, come in and see us. We are here to serve you.

C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

Low Prices May Not Mean Economy

You're interested, when you buy clothing in something more than prices; but that doesn't mean that prices are not interesting; they are interesting only in their relation to what you get—quality and satisfaction.

We think you'll find our prices interesting. They're very reasonable considering what we have to offer. All our merchandise is high quality—"Patton quality." We guarantee your satisfaction.

Suits $30 Up
Many with two trousers

PATTON BROTHERS Co
9 and 11 South Federal Ave.
Where a dollar does its duty
MASON CITY, IOWA

BETTER HAVE THAT
Spring Suit
Cleaned and Pressed
Men's Suits....$1.50 a Suit
Ladies' Suits $2.00 and Up
Ladies' Coats $1.75 and Up

H. F. REIF
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

The Spirit of Fairness

THE greatest asset of any bank is its dependability and if any one quality more than any other assists a bank in establishing a reputation for dependability it is that of "fairness."

That is why this bank has exerted every effort to carry into its daily transaction with patrons a spirit of fairness---fairness to its depositors, fairness to its borrowers, and fairness to itself.

In the same spirit of fairness we should appreciate larger balances in those of our checking accounts that have been carried at a loss.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

ROWAN AUTHOR GUEST OF R.H.L.

Don Farran returned Tuesday of last week from a trip to Chicago. He spent that week end as the guest of the Richard Henry Littles (RHL of the Line O' Type column of the Chicago Tribune), and was a special guest of Eusibic Conciaidi, one of America's greatest baritones at the concert given by Mr. Concialdi at the Studebaker theatre in Chicago on Sunday afternoon, March 20. Mr. Farran occupied a box with the author Snowshoe Al, and the famous star, Dennis King, of the immensely popular musical comedy, "The Vagabond King." Mr. Farran also attended a dinner given by Mr. Concialdi, at which were present R. H. L. and Shelby Little, Isiac VanGrove, accompanist for Concialdi,) the conductor and prima donna of the Chicago Civic Opera and other famous people. Mr. Farran has been asked to go with R. H. L. and a few of his contributors to give a program at the University of Illinois on March 31.

Iowa Township Farm Bureau program held at the R. E. Lee Aldrich home March 31:

Community Singing
Roll Call, answered by Month of April in History and Farm Bureau Notes.
Duet—"On Forest Land" ----Gladys Gunderson and Cleo Peddle.
Dialogue—"What the Trees Teach Us" ----------By the Children
Reading—"Mrs. Jones and the Burglar" ----------By LaVerna Simon
Song --By High School Boys' Quartette.
Reading—"At the Movies"----Mable Aldinger.
Talk On Recent Legislation----R. E. Lee Aldrich.
Solo ---------- Miss Venessa Pruss
Reading ---------- Earl Patton
Playlet—"Good Gracious Grandma"

The program will close with a bridal scene.

Martin Peterson, who has been in the employ of R. H. Keith, as blacksmith, has accepted a position m a machine factory at Northfield, Minnesota and will move there with his family April 1.

Rowan Girl Honored

The Des Moines Register spelling bee director has issued a certificate to Mae Hyde as champion speller of Rowan schools. L. G. Focht, county superintendent, also indorces the certificate.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stadtlander are the proud parents of a baby girl born Friday, March 25.

Miss Alva Berg spent the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Berg, who reside near Clarion.

Spring Coats and Dresses this week Thursday and Friday at the Belmond Hat Shoppe.

T. A. Davenport, of Belmond was a business caller at the telephone office here last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Azeltine entertained as Sunday dinner guests, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Parliman and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bonnett and daughters of near Clarion.

Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Knuths and Mrs. Irvin Knuths spent Sunday at the Herb Boyington home in Galt.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. McKinly and daughter, Luelda were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Harmon near Goldfield, Sunday.

Mrs. E. S. Tway, who is traveling spent the week end at home.

Miss Lela Quaintance spent the week end with her sister Miss Neva Quaintance who is teaching in Latimer.

The community extend their sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. William Ferguson who are mourning the loss of their infant son who was buried at the Graceland cemetery Monday morning.

Miss Laura Lippert spent the week end at the home of her mother, Mrs. O. F. Lippert, in Cedar Falls.

Mrs. Dorothy Greves, of Sac City has accepted a position in the Fred Hackley store and will begin work April 1.

Mrs. Ida Ryder, who has spent several months at the home of her son, Ralph, at Grundy Center, returned last week to make an extended visit at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Earl Bailey.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reeder entertained as Sunday dinner guests Mr. and Mrs. Greatricks, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Gotliff and Wendell Payne.

Jeff Tudor is now driving bus No. 6, formerly driven by W. W. Bailey.

Junior Class Play To Be Presented April 8th and 9th
"A BUNCH OF FUN"
By Erastus Osgood
Cast of Characters:

Rev. Stephen Brandon D., rector of St. Pauls ----------Darl Farran
Mary, his wife, "flustrated on occasions" ---------- Beulah Payne
Martha, his sister, "a trifle warped" ---------- Gladys Gunderson
Christina, a Swede maid "struck on the movies" --- Luelda McKinley
Raymond Hunting, "a live wire" ---------- Virgine Andrews
Vera Matherson, "a baseball fan" ---------- Ruth Bounds
Nina Lee, "a stage aspirant" ---------- Fladys Martin
Cecily Moorland, "a mandoline girl" ---------- Thelma Hackley
Sylvia Steward, the dancing girl ---------- Neva Aldrich
Lynn Lockwood, the man "who can take off his face" ----Cleo Peddle
Alice Hunting, the entertaining girl ---------- Thelma Streveler
Murray Kent, a college playright ---------- Kenneth Whitten
"Tacks" Mulford, a football star ---------- Raymond Aldrich
Mrs. Selma Blair, a pest in the parish ---------- Dorothy Knuths

Principal Swanson is coaching the play.

Methodist Church Notes

Morning worship, 11:00 a. m.
Sabbath School, 10:00 a. m.
Epworth League, 6:30 p. m.
Evening Service, 7:30 p. m.
Junior League Saturday afternoon.
Prayer Meeting Wednesday evening.

There will be no church services held on Wednesday evening of this week.

Choir practice will be held Tuesday evening at the A. O. Pelley home.

The W. H. S. will meet Wednesday, April 6 at the Theo. Hanson home. Mrs. Etta Carr will be leader.

The Ladies' Aid will meet Thursday with Mrs. J. D. Pritchett. Mrs. Charles Martin, assistant hostess.

The date set for the bazaar is April 9.

Congregational Church Notes

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the home of Mrs. Reese Thursday of this week.

The date for the bazaar is set for March 16.

Rev. L. A. Marquardt, of Green Mountain has accepted a call from Galt and Rowan joint charges, and will preach his first sermon in Rowan Easter Sabbath. The Rowan parsonage is to be remodeled, work to begin this week.

FORMER GOODELL MAN IS DEAD

Goodell friends received a message Monday stating the death of A. M. Johnson, of Spirit Lake. Mr. Johnson was shoveling snow from off the walk Monday morning and suffered a heart attack, passing away immediately. He will be remembered here by many as he was united in marriage to one of our former Goodell girls, Maude Kepner Hodgekinson, about fifteen years ago. Goodell friends extend sympathy.

Miss Ava Sandry was taken to the Mercy hospital at Mason City last Tuesday for medical treatment.

Miss Dorothy Allaben, who has been working in Moline, Illinois the past few months came Tuesday for a ten days' visit with home folks.

H. Barkema autoed to Hampton Tuesday, taking his father to the hospital to have a physical examination.

Miss Mildred Lemke, of Klemme visited over Sunday with her aunt, Mrs. W. F. Beier.

Miss Irene Ness, of Des Moines enjoyed a visit last week with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. LaRue are enjoying a visit this week with their son from Dows.

A large crowd enjoyed the musical program and spelling contest at the local school last Tuesday evening. Miss Nada Wesenberg was the winner in the contest, composed of the seventh and eighth graders. Vernon Scott won second place.

Bill Sandry returned Tuesday from California. He has spent the past three years in the U. S. regular army and for some time was stationed in the Philippine Islands. He has decided to work in this vicinty for the present.

Tauge Matson was a business caller at Des Moines from Thursday until Saturday. He was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Harry Newgard, who visited friends there.

Word has reached Goodell relatives and friends of the birth of a baby girl to Mr. and Mrs. Mark Smith at Earlville. Mark is athletic coach in the Earlville school.

Mrs. Ivan Baker and three children accompanied her parents, the Weide's, of Belmond to Minnesota last Monday where they visited relatives. They returned home Sunday evening.

Spring Coats and Dresses this week Thursday and Friday at the Belmond Hat Shoppe.

Messrs. Harry Newgard, Francis Mason, Harold Savogue and Wayne Wesenberg autoed to Ames Friday and attended the A. A. U.wrestling meet. They also visited Carl Sandberg who is attending school there.

Frank Quigley Jr. returned last week from Armstrong where he has been filling the vacancy as section foreman for the past few months.

Misses Edna Rust, Ada Sandry, Marie and Fannie Landon returned Sunday to their high school work at Belmond, having enjoyed the past week as spring vacation.

Max Nolte went to Chicago Saturday night. He plans to work there.

Messrs E. J. Schneider, O. Sandberg, Rev. F. C. Scott and Amos Hanson attended special Masonic lodge meetings at Belmond the latter portion of last week.

Mrs. Dan Kadoos received word Saturday telling of the death of her brother, Mr. Reutter, who has been a patient for many months at the sanitarium in Oakdale. Her many Goodell friends extend sympathy to her in her sorrow.

Goodell was largely represented at the Hancock county spelling contest held at the court house at Garner, Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock. Miss Naida Wesenberg was the honored contestant, going from our school and we have every reason to be very proud of her as she won second place in the contest and a cash prize. There were 43 children who took part in the contest. From our rural schools, Ruth Burrhow, Gertrude Quigley and Karna Peterson were also in the group and did very well. Britt carried off first honors and will represent the county at Des Moines; Goodell second, Kanawha third and Klemme fourth.

The literary society gave a very fine program at the opera house Friday evening. Several musical numbers and the best articles from the high school literary of this year's work were presented.

The eighth grade pupils who wrote the eighth grade county examinations in February have received their grades and everyone did very well. Those having failed in some subjects will write again May 5 and 6.

Leo Finn purchased a new Ford coupe the fore part of last week.

Miss Clara Christie went to Garner last Monday and will work ror her aunt, Mrs. Polly Christie.

The Dave Cuppett family, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fanselow, and Mr. Paul Fanselow, of Dows Sundayed with the latter's sister-in-law, Mrs. Butts.

Mrs. Will Sharper, of Charles City visited a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Will Tanner.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Conlan entertained at their home Sunday Clement Houghton, of Iowa Falls, Selwyn Houghton, of Belmond; Neva Aldrich of Rowan; Mr. and Mrs. Francis McNulty.

Prin. George O. Nelson autoed to Thornton, Swaledale and Meservey on Saturday, scheduling base ball games for the spring season.

Dale Chase, of Garner spent the week end at the home of his brother, Clifford.

F. C. Hall, of Moline, Illinois came Saturday and visited over Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hood are the happy parents of a baby girl, born Tuesday.

Mrs. A. D. White received word last week from Klemme that her grandson. Albert White was seriously ill. He has been suffering with the flu, measles and threatened with pneumonia but at this writing is a little better.

Mrs. Ed Hemenway entertained a number of ladies at her home Thursday. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hill and sister, of Clarion were out of town guests.

Mr. Eagmo went to Cylinder last week in interest of shelling his corn.

Rev. Father Malloy, of Belmond called on friends here Friday.

Lloyd Carpenter and daughter, Zeola autoed to Hampton Sunday to spend the day with Mrs. Carpenter, who is getting along nicely at the hospital.

Lewis Rierson was a business caller at Mason City on Thursday.

Carl Schultz, of Afton, Minn., a former resident here is visiting this week with his aunt, Mrs. Clara Butts.

Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson were at Clarion, Monday.

Church Notes

U. B. Ladies' Aid was entertained Wednesday by Mesdames Scott, Blue and Wesenberg. The ladies voted at this meeting to give the church a spring cleaning on Wednesday of this week.

The ladies' and girls' missionary society will meet Saturday afternoon at the church. A surprise program will be given.

The U. B. church stewards will sponsor a food sale that will be given April 16, the Saturday previous to Easter. Everyone please donate and patronize. Buy your Easter dinner here at a very reasonable price.

ALEXANDER GIRL IS POISONED

We are glad to report that Miss Vernie Alfreds has recovered from a poisoning caused by eating canned apricots, so the doctor states. She became sick shortly after eating them and was in bed nearly a week, from the effects. The apricots had been removed from the can as soon as they were opened. Other members of the family took sick but did not realize the bad effects.

We are glad to state that Mrs. W. P. Aldinger and Mrs. Judkin Latham, who are in the Lutheran hospitol at Hampton are getting along nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith and children Beatrice and Howard were shopping in Hampton, Monday.

Fifty-one neighbors gathered at the Hilko Pals home on Friday evening to share of the bounty, received as the results of a charavari. A sociable evening was spent, after which ice cream, cake and fruit were served. If anyone else is getting married, let us know about it.

Jessie Arends returned to Des Moines Thursday to continue his school work, after spending a few days with relatives and friends.

Mrs. Claas Symens was at Belmond Friday having dental work done.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Veeder, of Hollandale, Minnesota spent several days with relatives at this place.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Gillett and son, Alva George were visitors at the John Weik home at Kenseth on Sunday.

Spring Coats and Dresses this week Thursday and Friday at the Belmond Hat Shoppe.

Mr. and Mrs. John Arends and daughter, Sylvia, and Mrs. Albert Larsen and daughter Mildred, were business callers at Mason City, Saturday.

Rev. Moody, Mrs. Lloyd Green and Miss Jessie Bell attended the sub-district meeting of the Methodist church, held at Goldfield, Friday.

Will Foughty was at Iowa Falls, Friday. His daughter, Miss Wilma, accompanied him home to spend the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Polmateer, of Renwick were calling on friends here, Wednesday.

Ralph C. Taylor, representative of the Mason City Globe-Gazette, of Swaledale was a caller in town on Thursday.

Mrs. JohnH. Leebrich and Mrs. Charlie Winwood, were business callers at Hampton, Saturday.

L. C. Peters was transacting business in Hampton, Friday.

Joe Veeder, of Hollandale, Minnesota and Fred Larsen were Belmond visitors, Saturday.

Rev. L. N. Moody and Miss Marjoria Webster were Hampton callers on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Louie Peters were Hampton callers, Monday.

(Too late for last week.)

A miscellaneous shower was given in the church basement, on Thursday afternoon, March 17th, under the direction of the Delta Alpha class, and the Ladies' Aid Society of the United church, in honor of Mrs. John H. Leebrich. Mr. and Mrs. Leebrich have returned recently from their honeymoon in the West. The room was beautifully decorated in green and white color scheme for St. Patrick's Day. A mock wedding was an item of the program, which furnished much merriment, as well as entertainment for all present, which included about sixty-five guests. Mrs. L. N. Moody sang "I Love You Truly," followed by a solo by Mrs. Lyle Hall. Then at the tones of the wedding march, rendered by Mrs. George Dunn and Mrs. L. N. Moody the wedding procession marched into the room, led by the minister, (Mrs. Francis Gillett), followed by the groom (Mrs. Sylvia Bohlen), and the bride, (Mrs. Anna Pekarek,) best man (Mrs. Bessie Winwood,) bridesmaid (Mrs. Annabel Green), maid of honor (Mrs. Anita Reed,) flower girl (Emmagene Green.) The gifts were many, beautiful and useful. A very delicious luncheon was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Greenfield entertained the school faculty at their home on Monday evening to a six o'clock dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Herman, of Goldfield were visitors at the Lewis Bell home Wednesday.

Otto Keislich and John Arends were elected directors for a term of three years, on the school board. The votes cast for candidates were as follows: Otto Keislich 91, John Arends 59, John Pastour 46, William Holze 41, Rudolph Beenen 35.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Larsen transacted business at Hampton Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Greenfield were Dows callers Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Claas Symens, Mrs. John H. Leebrich and Miss Jessie Bell were business callers at Belmond Tuesday.

Rev. L. N. Moody was a caller at Hampton, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Peters were Hampton shoppers, Wednesday.

Mrs. Jesse Latham underwent an operation at the Lutheran hospital in Hampton, Monday.

Mrs. Claas Symens, Miss Jessie Bell and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Leebrich were business callers at Mason City Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Beenen were calling on relatives at Hampton Sunday.

Louie Peters transacted business at Hampton, Friday.

Amel Polmateer, of Renwick was a visitor here over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hill were shopping in Hampton, Monday.

Jesse Arends, who is attending school at Des Moines came Monday for a few days' visit with his parents.

NOTICE!

BOLIVER 1000, Registered Belgian Stallion, will make the season in and around Belmond. He is a red roan; star, right hind foot white to postern. Good bone and plenty of action—a 2300 pound horse. A wonderful individual. His sire—Bongo 5491 (58926) by Carnaval (26232) out of Mie de Heers (63405). His Dam—Farceuse de Masnuy 1379 by Conquerant de Boulant (23610) out of Blonde de Masnuy (30937). He is a prominent prize winner at leading shows.

Terms: $15 to insure foal. Full amount of the service fee to become due on the sale or removal of mare. Due diligence will be exercised, but we will not be responsible should accident occur. R. A. THAYER, Owner. Telephone 3710, Belmond, Iowa. 192*

Belmond

Opera House

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY
March 31 and April 1
Darrell Landen Players present
"Hold It"
A Hilarious 3-Act Comedy Drama
Prices 10c and 40c

SATURDAY, APRIL 2
Lester Cuneo in
"Lone Hand Tex"
Two of the bandits are lying in wait for the train, and after looting the passengers and drivers, they cut the saddle on the stranger's horse, and he clumsily falls off on to the trail, while they gallop off with his mount with loud laughter.
"SAILING ALONG"
Comedy
Prices 10c and 20c

MONDAY AND TUESDAY
April 4 and 5
Mary Carr in
"Somebody's Mother"
Two-reel Comedy
"THE FLIRTING FOOL"
Prices 10c and 20c

Special offer to the readers of this paper

WE want you to know that each of the seven quality automobiles named below is a General Motors car. We want you to know how General Motors doubly guarantees these cars—how it is passing the savings of vast manufacturing operations (1,200,000 cars last year) on to you—in finely built engines, Fisher Bodies, Duco finish, quality materials in those vital points where quality counts most in comfort, safety, long life and high resale value.

Read about the General Motors line. "A car for every purse and purpose." See the wide choice of models—the wide range of prices. Decide which car interests you most; then clip and mail the coupon.

As a special offer, we will also send you a wonderfully interesting little book about the General Motors Proving Ground. It gives facts which you ought to have before you select any car. Fully illustrated. And its reading may save you hard cash. Act today.

CHEVROLET 7 models—$525 to $745
The quality car of the low-priced field. 3-speed transmission. Strong rear axle. Smooth dry-disc clutch. Over-head valve engine. Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. Alemite lubrication. Fully equipped. CHEVROLET TRUCK CHASSIS: ½-ton, $395; 1-ton, $495.

PONTIAC 5 models—$775 to $975
A low-priced "six" which is a quality product in appearance and construction. Has largest 6-cylinder engine in its price class. Beautiful, stylish lines. Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. All conveniences included. Value proved by unprecedented sale.

OLDSMOBILE 11 models—$875 to $1190
Gratifies your finer taste; satisfies every need. A truly fine car at moderate cost. Beautiful Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. Powerful 6-cylinder motor. Harmonic balancer. 4-wheel brakes. Many other new improvements. And a wide range of models to choose from.

OAKLAND 7 models—$1095 to $1295
Winning and holding goodwill everywhere because of its advanced engineering and precision construction, Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. Rubber silenced chassis. 4-wheel brakes. A "six" whose quality is doubly assured as a product of General Motors.

BUICK 18 models—$1195 to $1995
Everybody knows Buick's worth. General Motors emphasizes Buick's statement that its new models represent "The Greatest Buick Ever Built." Vibrationless beyond belief. Famous 6-cylinder valve-in-head engine. Bodies by Fisher. Duco finish. Many models.

LASALLE 6 models—$2495 to $2685
General Motors' latest contribution to the fine car field. This is the new and beautiful car designed and built by Cadillac as a companion car to Cadillac. Has V-type 8-cylinder engine. Fisher Bodies. Duco finish. Now on display.

CADILLAC 50 body styles and types —$2995 to $9000
The pioneer in the 8-cylinder field. Standard of the world. Improved V-type 90-degree engine. Marvelous bodies by Fisher and Fleetwood. Duco finishes. A choice of 500 different color and upholstery combinations to emphasize individuality in ownership.

ALSO—

FRIGIDAIRE electric refrigerators. The largest selling electric refrigerator in the world. Built by General Motors. Many models—many prices.

DELCO-LIGHT electric plants. Another General Motors product. Brings you all the conveniences and labor-saving devices of electricity.

[ALL PRICES F.O.B. FACTORIES]

CLIP THE COUPON

WE WANT YOU to know more about General Motors and its cars and other products. Check the car that interests you most and mail in the coupon. We will send you, free, interesting illustrated booklets telling all about that car and what General Motors is doing to assure you of both value and satisfaction in car ownership. Clip the coupon now. Mail it TODAY. Don't wait.

GENERAL MOTORS

CLIP THE COUPON

GENERAL MOTORS (Dept. A), Detroit, Mich.

CHEVROLET ☐
PONTIAC ☐
OLDSMOBILE ☐
OAKLAND ☐
BUICK ☐
LASALLE ☐
CADILLAC ☐

Please send, without obligation to me, your Proving Ground Book, together with illustrated literature describing the General Motors product I have checked, and the name of the nearest dealer in case I may wish a demonstration.

Name_____
Address_____
_____

FRIGIDAIRE Electric Refrigerators ☐ DELCO-LIGHT Electric Plants ☐

Wright County Board Proceedings

(Continued from last week.)

Wes. Elec. Tele. System, Phone rent and Aud. toll	21.10
Dr. H. P. Walker, Coroner's fees (Brannon)	9.00
Wright County Monitor, Bd. pcds., ptg. & supplies	77.81
Wright County Pay Roll, Officers and clerks	2086.64

COUNTY ROAD FUND

A. C. Anderson, Patrol	34.00
Mary Buckton, Rent for 1 acre of land	15.00
Black Hawk Oil Co., Grease and oil	99.61
Black Hawk Oil Co., Oil	38.44
Ralph Coombs, Labor	2.80
Raymond E. Caquelin, Patrol	69.50
Harvey Caquelin, Patrol	23.00
Community Service Station, Gasoline	2.15
Harry Daggett, Patrol	63.20
Mendel Shaffer, Labor	17.50
Tom Henry, Labor	6.00
Peter Rasmussen, Labor	12.40
Farmers Grain & Lbr. Co., Tile	4.00
Homer Gordon, Patrol	38.00
Glen Hackley, Patrol	39.10
W. D. McCutcheon, Dragging	50.13
Mathison Motor Co., repairs	35.10
A. W. Moseley & Co., Gas and oil	56.37
D. B. Pepper, Labor	57.00
E. E. Simpson, Repairs	15.60
Stark Bros., Material	5.61
Skelly Oil Co., Kerosene	8.10
A. B. Stole, Patrol	43.20
Lismore Stole, Patrol	30.50
Tolford Larson, Labor	5.75
Standard Oil Co., Gasoline	10.38
Sinclair Refining Co., Gasoline	17.01
Claude H. Thayer, Patrol	22.00
R. Thompson, Repairs	32.40
Edith M. Vaugn, Recording Easements	2.45
E. E. Wolf, Gas and supplies	5.35
A. H. Waddell, Shed rent	3.00
E. E. Wolf, Supplies	5.20
Wright County Oil Co., Gas and oil	20.91
France G. Warner, Gravel	268.90

POOR FUND

Harvey Armstrong, House rent	10.00
Azeltine & Son, Fuel	9.15
Martha Amonson, Care of Kari Bjelland	22.00
Hattie Armour, Care of Kari Bjelland	44.00
J. K. Baker, Cash adv. for trans. & exp. (J. W. White and Dr. Hanson)	158.00
Emile Bernard, Care of Paul Bernard	20.00
W. R. Blake Lbr. Co., Fuel
E. G. poor	104.50
Olena C. Brown, Care of Robert Hanson	20.50
Cox & Adams, Groc.	40.97
Bruce E. Corliss, Rent	25.00
Christeson & Flower, Groc.	96.94
C. H. Clifton & Son, Fuel	11.95
L. W. Cole, Rent	15.00
Dows Mercantile Co. Groc.	75.80
Dows Mercantile Co., Groc.	31.15
Duer & Son, Groc.	66.59
Dows Lbr. Co., Fuel	11.50
K. J. Engh, Overseer of poor in E. G.	10.12
East Side Grocery, Groc.	156.86
Farmers Elevator Co., Fuel	27.28
Clarion Farmers Elevator Co., Fuel	14.23
C. O. Fitts, Agent, Rent	36.00
Wm. Finn, Rent	12.00
Farmers Creamery Co., fuel	21.85
A. Granau, Meat	18.15
Chas. Gealow, Rent	21.00
Gildners - Thompson Co., Clothing	7.90
Mike Gutierrez, Rent	8.00
Greenlander Lbr. Co., Fuel	79.50
Alice Gibbs, Rent	15.00
Halverson & Smith. Prov. H. C. Hansen, Rent	23.86
Theo. Hansen, Groc.	15.00
E. O. Hansen, Shoes	36.01
O. R. Hanson, Rent	14.50
Mrs. Anna Imboden, Care of poor	60.00
C. G. Johnson, Groc.	76.00
O. C. Johnson, Groc.	52.16
B. K. Kinseth & Son, Groc.	8.31
Jake Lampert Yards, Inc., Fuel	119.33
Leuthold & Hinkley, Clothing	48.40
Mrs. Fred Meachem, Rent	19.43
Martin Grocery, Groc.	15.00
Moore's City Dray, Moving Dewey LaRue	45.08
H. F. McAllister, Milk	3.05
Mrs. J. A. McBeth, Care of Agard child	12.40
Mrs. Pearl Miller, Rent	24.00
Moseley Groc. Co., Groc.	15.00
T. J. O'Toole, Rent	54.10
Betsey Peterson, Allowance	10.00
John Phippen, Milk	20.00
Ole O. Ralle, Rent	16.50
C. S. Robinson, Groc.	30.00
W. K. Roosevelt, Groc.	14.12
Duane Richardson, Rent	16.82
Henry Riggan, Care of Jacob Riggan	12.50
Shake & Son, Fuel	10.00
H. M. Smith, Fuel	11.70
Schoonover's Grocery, groc.	10.95
Eddie Thompson, Keeping Larson's cow	35.65
W. M. Tresidder, Rent	8.00
Beloit Orphans Home, Care of Williamson children	10.00
Tillinghast & Co., Groc.	72.00
Wheeler's Cash Store, Groc.	19.11
Frank Welch, Groc.	32.55
A. H. Waddell, Rent	17.97
	8.00

DRAINAGE FUND

J. D. Baker, Committee & mileage—Dn. 3	6.00
J. D. Baker, Session & mileage—Dn. 11	15.00
E. E. Kitley, Session & mileage—Dn. 11	9.40
James Mehl, Session and mileage—Dn. 11	14.00
J. C. Peterson, Session and mileage—Dn. 11	12.20
L. W. Schroeder, Session & mileage—Dn. 11	15.00
Jake Lampert Yards, Inc. Cement & sand—Dn. 58	.95
Nick Reiland, Labor and material, Dn. 85	61.20

DOMESTIC ANIMAL

Geo. Ferguson, Sheep killed	44.00
Elmer Kraft, Hog killed	50.00

BRIDGE FUND

Klauer Mfg. Co., Culverts	233.28

COUNTY HOME FUND

Clarion Farmers Elev. Co., Material	38.00

SOLDIERS RELIEF FUND

F. B. Champlin, Secy., Allowances for March ---- 171.00

REFUND WARRANTS

Emma, Don & Alice Bridge, Error in tax for 1925 ---------- 96.27

Board adjourned to March 12, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY, Chairman.
E. M. CALLENDER, Deputy County Auditor.

Clarion, Iowa, March 12, 1927.

The Board of Supervisors of Wright County, met at the court house at Clarion, Iowa, on March 12, 1927, as per adjournment.

Members present, E. E. Kitley, Chairman, and Supervisors James Mehl, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder and J. D. Baker with Deputy County Auditor in attendance.

Minutes of March 7 and 8, 1927, were read and approved.

On motion the chairman of the board was authorized to appoint committees to deal in matters of right-of-way for county roads. Whereupon he appointed Supervisors Mehl and Schroeder on Dows- Willians road; Supervisors Baker and Peterson on Holmes-Eagle Grove road.

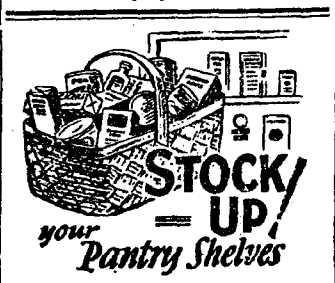
At two o'clock P. M., the time for the hearing on proposed bridge and road construction for 1927, the hearing was held and there being no objections, either oral or filed, on motion the proposed construction program was approved.

On motion the county auditor was authorized to advertise for a letting on grading and bridges for March 30, 1927, and on graveling and guard rail on April 4, 1927. Bridge letting at 10 A. M. March 30th; Grading at 2 P. M. March 30th; Guard rail at 10 A. M. April 4th; Graveling at 2 P. M. April 4th.

Remainder of the day was used in discussion and considering county matter in general.

Board adjourned to March 14, 1927.

E. E. KITLEY, Chairman.
E. M. CALLENDER, Deputy County Auditor.



March Meals

Are difficult to plan, but if you will visit our store you will find a variety of tasty and staple groceries that will make your planning easier. Besides that, you'll find you can save money by taking advantage of our new cash prices. As a sample we are offering this week:

REGULAR PRICES!

CORN 10c
PEAS .....2 for 25c
PLUMS, No. 2 can 20c
TOMATOES .....10c and 20c
OPAL COFFEE in glass jar.50c
HOMINY 10c
PORK and BEANS 10c

Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S

BELMOND Iowa

PHONE 38

Quality Printing Pleases. That is the Independent kind. Get yours here

READ THE ADS

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

WANT ADS PAY

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

R. E. PORTER
Chiropractor
Eight Years' Experience

IF YOU VALUE YOUR LIFE—

Belmond, Iowa, March 31, 1927

Dear Friend:

Is your desire to live just an idle wish? Or are you serious about it? Do you really value your life? So many people don't. For instance:

Your health—your very life—depends largely on a healthy condition in stomach and intestines. That is where 90 percent of all human ailments start.

Seven people in every ten are right now suffering from some form of stomach or intestinal trouble, more or less serious. Modern methods of living are responsible. Are your stomach and intestines in perfectly healthy condition? The chances are three to one that they are not.

Stomach and intestinal troubles are often hard to detect in early stages. There are few disturbing symptoms. You may have spells of nervousness, indigestion, headaches, constipation, and so on. They do not seem to be serious, perhaps. Yet they are Nature's danger signals. They mean "Trouble Ahead."

Thousands of people become old and haggard—thousands die untimely deaths—because the slow, sure poison of stomach and intestinal trouble is gnawing at their vitals, often without their knowledge.

My Chiropractic health service has proven unusually successful in cases of stomach and intestinal trouble. No drugs are used. No extreme dieting. No tiring physical exercises. No fancy baths. Instead, I simply make the necessary mechanical adjustments of the body which enable Nature to do the real work of healing.

My service is worth investigating. Preliminary analysis of your physical condition without charge or obligation.

Yours sincerely,

R. E. PORTER
Chiropractor

This modern age recognizes the honest quality of Camels

THE smokers of America have rewarded Real Quality with Real Leadership.

For Camels have always been all quality and no frills. The choicest tobaccos money can buy, superbly blended. Millions of dollars put into the cigarette. Never a penny expended for show.

There's just one way to find the smoking thrill that has won the modern world's admiration—try Camels. You'll know such taste and fragrance, such mellow mildness, as you never hoped to find. "Have a Camel!"

© 1927, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

WHAT THE PUBLIC GETS WITHOUT RISK

Central States Electric Company had outstanding on December 31, 1926, 8,851 shares of Common Stock owned by nearly 300 Stockholders who had invested nearly $900,000 in this Stock.

These Stockholders received during the year 1926, dividends in the amount of $48,237 on this Stock, which cost them from $100 to $112 per share cash.

The Company during the same year paid $33,133 in taxes, which amount the public received without taking any risk of furnishing any of the capital.

The Public through taxes received without risk, over 40 percent of the total sum paid out in dividends and taxes.

The Common Stockholders received less than 60 percent of the sum paid out for the taxes and dividends and took all the risk.

Central States Electric Company is organized and operated under the laws of Iowa, and its Common Stock is owned by nearly 300 Stockholders practically all living in Iowa, and no one Stockholder owns more than 20 percent of the Stock issued.

In addition to the large investment of these Common Stockholders, there are more than 700 Stockholders who have invested over $650,000 in the 7 percent Preferred Stock.

The Public benefits also without risk from the dividends paid to the Stockholders, because most of them live in the Communities served.

Respectfully,

Central States Electric Company

General Office
CEDAR RAPIDS, - IOWA

ALABASTER LAMPS

by Margaret Turnbull.

COPYRIGHT 1925 BY MARGARET TURNBULL W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—With a stranger, whom he introduces as his nephew, Ned Carter, Claude Melnotte Dabbs returns from New York to his general grocery at Peace Valley, Pa. To "Aunt Lyddy," his housekeeper, he explains that Carter is a chance acquaintance, veteran of the World war, whom he had met and taken a liking to.

CHAPTER II.—Carter tells Aunt Lyddy he has broken with his family and his sweetheart because of his resentment of their ultra pacific tendencies. With Dabbs Ned visits Clover Hollow, abiding place of a "collection of good-natured cranks," according to the grocer. They almost run over a dog belonging to a girl whom Carter apparently recognizes. Ned delivers a grocery order, and in his absence the girl, Dorothy Selden, reveals that she knows him to be Ned Carter Rangeley, son of Loren Rangeley, New York banker.

CHAPTER III.—Next day Ned commences work as a "grocer's boy." At a residence, the "White House," he delivers an order marked "Johnston." There he meets a girl who tells him she and her mother are alone in the house, the servants having left them because of the "loneliness." He promises to try to procure household help. Meeting Dorothy Selden, his erstwhile sweetheart, he baffles her attempts to discover the reason for his presence in Peace Valley. Arrangement is made for a cook to go to the Johnstons'.

CHAPTER IV.—The cook being unable to begin work at once, Ned visits the White House to inform Miss Johnston of the fact. Explaining the situation to her mother, the girl, "Mary," is astonished by that lady's emotion at the mention of Dabbs' name. The cook arrives, and Mary, with Ned, goes to the village for groceries. They are seen by Dorothy Selden. Mrs. Johnston, worried over financial troubles, is bothered by Dorothy, who warns her there is something suspicious about Ned Carter.

CHAPTER V.—There is something about Mary vaguely familiar to Dabbs, and he is highly interested in village gossip concerning the mother and daughter. Mrs. Johnston accompanies Mary to an inn for luncheon. Dabbs sees Mrs. Johnston and is obviously perturbed. He informs Ned he has something on his mind that he would like to tell him.

CHAPTER VI.—Claude reveals to Ned a romance of his early life. He had married, while at college, and under peculiar circumstances, and his wife left him the day after the ceremony. He is convinced "Mrs. Johnston" is his wife, "Polly," and naturally wants to know, Who is Mary?

CHAPTER VII.—Mrs. Johnston tells Mary they are practically penniless, through a trustee's defalcation. She plans an appeal to Loren Rangeley, her banker, and Mary endeavors to dissuade her. While with Ned, Mary falls into a pool. Ned gets her out, unhurt, but the incident reveals to him the real nature of his feelings toward the girl.

Mary gave a little gasp of astonishment and sat down on the floor by the couch. "Do you mean, Mother, that we haven't any money at all, or that we're just faced with a period of depressed finances and will have to tide over things until the first of next month, when you'll get something from somewhere? Tell me the whole thing. The very worst."

Mrs. Johnston saw instantly how useless it was to keep anything back from Mary. "It means the very worst you can think. I drew the last money I had in the bank to come down here, I expected, of course, to have Colonel Rittenhauser send me enough money to carry me along for another three months.

"Well, my dear, he's been speculating with all available money and securities. He lost mine along with those belonging to other people, and he's in jail.

"The rest of my money is tied up in stock that isn't paying dividends—that is, all except money invested by my uncle in Russian securities, which are now worth nothing. There's some land here, in this country, but I can't raise money on it at a moment's notice."

"Poor old mother! Have you any cash at all?"

Mrs. Johnston laughed. "About thirty dollars left. I said I'd sent for servants, but I haven't. However, I have interviewed Mrs. Pulsifer on the subject of coming here and closing up this house for me in case I have to go to New York suddenly, so that's that. I think I'll have to go there soon. It'll be a lot harder for you, Mary, than for me. Just now you ought to have everything."

"Pooh!" said Mary. "Wait till you see me suffer. Honestly, Mother, I can't realize it. We've never had to speak of money like this before. Why, we've always had it."

"You always have," Mrs. Johnston answered, "but there was a time when I had none."

Mary was amazed. "You never told me that. You must, but not now. We'll just have to be practical, Mother. What can we sell, and how shall we go about it?" She considered for a long moment, while her mother watched her. "Bring out your jewelry, Mother, and I'll bring out mine. Rent must be paid, you know. We can do without servants."

Mrs. Johnston put her hand on her daughter's arm as Mary rose from the floor. "Don't dear. I can go to New York and borrow money on the land, I'm sure. I was making up my mind to that when you came in."

Mary turned away and looked down. All the excitement had gone out of her face. It was pale when she turned back to her mother.

"Mother! You were going to Loren Rangeley! Promise me you won't."

"Mary Johnston!"

"Don't you think I know? I've known right along that that pale, cold, bloodless—yes, I know he's a great banker, but he looks like a moneylender. I know he wants to marry you. Oh Mother! If you go to him, he'll ask you, and if you do, just to be comfortable, I'll never forgive you. I'd rather work for you myself, all the days of my life!"

"Mary!" Mrs. Johnston sat up against her pillows and regarded her daughter as though she were a stranger. "I didn't know you felt so strongly, or that Mr. Rangeley's motives were so evident. Don't worry. When he hears I'm practically penniless, I won't seem so desirable in his eyes. Mary, stop crying. I never knew anything so—so silly."

"It isn't silly, not so very," Mary sniffed, trying to regain her self-control. "I've hated him good and hard for a long time, and I just loathe seeing him with you."

Her mother patter Mary's shoulder. "I only thought of him—for your sake."

"You'd lose me," Mary told her firmly. "I'd go and work anywhere first—even in Dabbs' grocery store."

Her mother started. "There won't be any question of that. Bother, there's the car. Send that boy away, Mary."

"Wouldn't it do you good to go out?"

"No it wouldn't. Leave me alone with my thoughts and my novel. I want to go over everything by myself, calmly. We'll tackle the jewel problem tonight, after I've had my think."

"Then I might as well motor," said Mary.

Mrs. Johnston frowned.

"I don't like it. But go and ride with your idealized grocer's clerk, if you want to. Remember, always, that Mother's wary eye will be upon you when you return. I'd forbid you, of course, if I didn't know you'd do it anyway and never tell me the interesting details."

They smiled the smile of perfect understanding.

"And, of course," Mrs. Johnston admitted nobly, "I want to know everything. Don't cheat me of a single thrill, Mary."

Mary kissed her. Mrs. Johnston raised herself on a firm white elbow and called to Mary's back: "Ride on the rear seat, Mary, and don't forget that you're poor now, very poor, indeed."

Mary could visualize the impish smile on her mother's face that accompanied this remark.

She had fully intended at least beginning the drive on the rear seat, but after that, and hoping her mother was at the window to see, she climbed to the seat beside Ned, announcing:

"Mother's not coming, and you're to please take me a different route today."

Mrs. Johnston was not at the window. Her face was set and hard as she tried to make up her mind whether she would let this grocery shop situation develop before she bolted to New York, or bolt now. It was puzzling, but to go now might solve Mary's problem and her own. The solution, however, was very difficult, through lack of available funds.

In his office, C. M. Dabbs, once more embarked on his difficult task of composition, wrote, tore up and rewrote, all afternoon. When he finally ceased writing he had completed a short note, which he thrust into his pocket, carefully destroying the others. He still could not decide whether or not to send it.

Dorothy Selden, having waited in vain for some sign of just anger, or at least indignation, from Ned, had again the privilege of seeing him ride by, happy and contented, with Mary Johnston seated serenely beside him. It was not to be borne. Dorothy threw herself suddenly, but gracefully, into the chair at the writing desk, and seizing a telegraph blank and pen, wrote rapidly. When she had finished, the message read:

"Ned here under assumed name. What shall I do?

"Dorothy Selden."

It was directed to Loren Lorimer Rangeley.

The village saw Ned and Mary ride by and snickered. "Dabbs' nevvy was chasing 'round after a settlementer." The snicker was meant to call attention to Ned's folly and presumption, but it was also a jibe at Mary. "She must be hard up for a man," was the comment.

The pair under observation, engaged in the most absorbing game in the world, hastened toward Great Cold spring, one of the beauty spots of the countryside.

Although the road was as new to Ned as to Mary, he discoursed learnedly on its history, its Indian name, which he was compelled to admit he had forgotten and couldn't pronounce anyway. Mary listened, interested and amused, especially as Ned informed her that he had just "boned up" on the subject this morning. "Uncle Claude supplied me with the local color," he told her honestly. "It isn't at all in my line, but I thought Mrs. Johnston might expect something like it from her 'hired man'."

"Mr. Carter," asked Mary suddenly, "was your mother Mr. Dabbs' sister?"

Ned started. "Oh no, Claude Dabbs is really no relation to me at all. I'm fond of him, and I call him Uncle, that's all."

"Oh, I forgot you told me you were 'adopted'," and Mary lapsed again into silence. She saw only one thing very clearly, and that was Ned's profile. She liked it.

The Great Cold spring, Ned told her, was just a quarter of a mile away. As he spoke they came in sight of a placid little lake, fed by the spring.

Some distance up the road, beyond the lake, was a great old farmhouse, which appeared deserted. As they neared the spring, Mary exclaimed with pleasure. Simultaneously the rear tire blew out.

Ned's exclamation was not one of pleasure. He stopped the machine at the side of the road and made ready with jack and wrench. Mary went toward the spring. The pool was deep, but did not look so.

Ned had the tire on in record time. As he stooped to gather up his tools, Mary stepped off the planks to gather some flowers at the edge of the pool. Ned thought he heard a faint cry. It was such a tiny, muffled sound that he didn't think it important and would have gone about his business had he not seen that Mary was no longer there! No longer anywhere in sight!

He ran at a tremendous rate of speed, such a spurt as he had never accomplished in all his university days.

The pool was muddy and disturbed. He couldn't see Mary, but there was a long streak in the muddy edge that showed where her foot had slipped.

His coat was off, and he was in the pool. Groping, his hands came in contact with her dress. He put forth all his strength and rose to the surface, dragging Mary with him.

Now that he held the motionless girl in his arms, he wondered if this was the end. He knew, in the same dim uncertainty, that if it was he would go mourning all his days for what had been denied him.

He put the girl down on the grass and still in a daze of mingled effort and dream, began to work to restore her breathing, and as he raised and lowered her arms kept repeating, "Oh, my dear, don't die!"

He must have said it aloud, for her long lashes lifted, the blue eyes looked straight at him, and Mary said, "I won't. Do stop and—let me up, please."

Ned helped her to her feet.

"Oh, I'm so ashamed," breathed Mary.

Ned, not yet able to speak, or look at her for very long at a time, took

His Coat Was Off and He Was In the Pool.

her hand and tried to hurry her to the farmhouse. Though it looked deserted, Ned thought he could see signs of life. Mary was so hampered by her wet garments, which were plastered to her with mud, that he picked her up in his arms, refusing to listen to her protest. After the initial request to be put down, Mary simply let her head rest on his shoulder and shook with cold.

At least that was Ned's belief until he looked down at her face. She was quivering with laughter.

"I can't help it," she gasped. "I'm grateful for your saving my life, and all that, but I can think of nothing but how much I want to wipe your face. It's—it's so streaky!"

Ned put her down and laughed. "You ought to see what you look like. You look exactly like a mud baby."

He told her as he felt in his pocket for a handkerchief.

Gravely, Ned divided the handkerchief and gravely Mary accepted it. Laughter still trembled about the corners of her mouth, however, as she took this opportunity of wringing some of the water from her garments.

"Come," Ned commanded, "we can't stop for that. Now then, let's see what the farmhouse holds for us."

"I hope it holds just one woman, no matter how old or fat, because I'm so waterlogged and mud-plastered I can scarcely lift one foot after the other."

"I hate to blast your hopes, but I see approaching us an ancient man with whiskers. He has the look of a hermit. No, cheer up. He's calling Phoebe, and by all the gods, she's young."

She was. Phoebe Sayer was fourteen, but for all that she kept house for Uncle Nate, and miser though he was, he loved Phoebe.

Now, though he had growled something in his tattered whiskers about having a "passel of half-drowned rats" on his clean kitchen floor, Phoebe, who had scented excitement, and fallen in love with Mary, ordered him out to the barn with a pair of clean overalls for Ned. Though it cut Uncle Nate to the heart, she made him take with him a shirt and a pair of socks.

Phoebe was just fourteen, a little short, if anything, and hers were the only feminine garments in the house. Slowly, and with much hilarity, Mary was inducted into "the longest things I've got."

When Ned emerged from the barn and brought the car up to the door, the blinds were up and Phoebe was throwing the wet garments, whose dainty fineness she marveled at, into a washtub near the door. She saw Ned and called back to the open door, "Say, Miss Johnston, your young man's ready for you."

Ned, wondering how Mary would take this classification, looked with interest at the doorway as Mary emerged. She was clad in Phoebe's dark blue dress, a one-piece garment that ended above her knees. She had on Phoebe's best black cotton stockings, which didn't quite reach those knees, so Mary had rolled them. She had tied back her dark hair with a blue ribbon and she looked like a charming actress ready to play "Alice-in-Wonderland."

Mary stooped and kissed her little hostess and thanked her warmly, promising to be back to visit her soon.

"Oh, if you'd do that, that would be wonderful! Jest to have some one come in and see me. I don't ever want for anything," she said proudly, for the Sayers were an old family and Phoebe never forgot it. "Uncle Nate's got plenty, and he's so kind to me. But I do love company."

Uncle Nate looked up at the sky and said: "You'd better hurry home: there's a shower coming."

Ned realized that Uncle Nate did not wish Phoebe to know of a certain financial transaction, in which wear and tear to his barn and kitchen and the loan of dry clothing had been duly and minutely calculated.

They said very little. They had both been shaken out of the groove in which they had been comfortably existing at the beginning of this drive. Ned was no longer a merely amusing grocer's clerk. He was a man who had held her in his arms, who had called her "dear" and had saved her life. As for Ned, there was no longer any need for question. Mary might be still vague about her feelings toward him, but he knew now what she meant to him. He had known it from the moment he came up out of the water with her in his arms. She was the one girl, the only girl for him. Dorothy Selden, and her predecessors, were pale shadows in the long ago. Mary was what he had been searching for, longing for.

He knew it now. It was wonderful. It was romance; romance come upon suddenly in the midst of common, every-day life.

"There's mother, waiting," exclaimed Mary, who had been longing to smooth down his hair which had dried thoroughly, but rampantly, in the breeze. "Oh, I do hope she's not anxious."

CHAPTER VIII

Mrs. Johnston was not only anxious, but annoyed, and was prepared to show her annoyance. Then she caught sight of Mary's wet hair and strange clothes. Instantly she eliminated from her world everything but Mary, until she had her in her arms and was convinced that she was safe and sound.

Then, and only then did she include Ned in her gaze, and for a moment Ned wished he were invisible. The mother's eyes were like those of a tigress who has recovered her cub and sights the hunter who tried to take it away. They softened, almost instantly, when Mary told her all she owed to Mr. Carter.

The tigress disappeared utterly as Mrs. Johnston hurried Mary into the house, with instructions as to a hot bath and bed. Then she turned to Ned and ordered him home as fast as he could go. He might come tomorrow.

She held out her hand and thanked him gratefully and sincerely, and yet dismissed him back into the shades of the grocery shop from which he came.

Ned drove away with no thought of bitterness in his heart. Mrs. Johnston was absolutely within her rights. Mary was a precious possession. Besides, though Ned did not consciously formulate this thought to himself, it made the game so much more exciting to have opposition. An implacable mother was almost as exhilarating as a rival.

This latter thought brought Ned up with a sudden start. It dawned upon him that he was dreaming wildly, with very little foundation for his dream. He knew absolutely nothing about the girl. But when has that fact discouraged a lover?

Claude was at the entrance of the store when Ned drove up. After the first glance he hurried Ned within. Ned noticed with amusement that Claude pursued the same tactics as Mrs. Johnston, ordering Aunt Lyddy to see that Ned had a hot bath immediately, and also mentioning bed. He agreed to the first, but scorned the latter. Later he told his story.

"Jiminy!" Claude exclaimed. "Lucky you were there, and I'm glad it wasn't more serious. Did you see Mrs. Johnston?"

"Mrs. Johnston? Oh, yes! You couldn't help seeing Mrs. Johnston—if she was around. Awfully fond of Mary. She isn't a bit like Mary—er—Miss Johnston."

"No," said Claude, dryly, "apparently not. You didn't notice anything else did you? Wasn't there a single little thing about this Mrs. Johnston that marked her out from any other pleasant-spoken, red-headed woman you've seen?"

"Her good looks," Ned admitted, blowing a cloud of smoke to the ceiling. "They were extra."

"Oh my G—d! Ned, you are an exasperating youngster."

Ned studied Claude's perturbed countenance. Then it slowly dawned upon him that there might be a reason for this excess of feeling. 'Not—not trying to check up your red-headed Polly girl with her, are you?"

"And if I am," declared Claude, shaken out of his usual good-humored acceptance of things as they are, "a lot of help I'm getting from you!"

"What was your—Polly's name?"

"Mary—Polly—Johnston."

Ned whistled.

"If it was the daughter—this Mary girl now, I suppose I could get details and like as not she's twice as ordinary as the mother."

"Nousense!" Ned rose to the defense of his lady. "Mary—Miss Johnston, I mean, has the most extraordinary blue eyes."

"Jiminy, Ned Have I got to hear that again? I got blue eyes myself."

Ned looked at Claude and gasped. He leaned toward him and said: "They're the same color as Miss Johnston's."

Claude Melnotte Dabbs rose, his lips compressed. "Ned, you've had a hard day and I've come darn near losing you, so nothing on earth will make me pick a fight now. But if you want to do me the greatest favor—take a nap, and wake up able to say one single sentence straight through without dragging that girl's eyes in."

He left the room abruptly. "All the same," Ned told himself as he reached for a book, "their eyes are very much alike."

Mary Johnston slept the sleep of exhausted youth, and woke refreshed, to find her mother sitting at her bedside.

"Why, Mumsy," Mary stretched out a slim, warm hand to her mother, "have you been worrying about me?"

Mrs. Johnston stooped and kissed her. "You are all I have in the world, so you're rather precious to me. You're not to get up. I've had my dinner, and yours is on the tray ready to bring up."

"Mother!" Mary lay still and wondered. "You get a dinner! Why I never even dreamed you knew how!"

"There's lots of undiscovered country about mother, though you've known her all your life, Mary. You'll find it out some day."

Mary finished her dinner and when she relinquished the tray, said: "Mother, couldn't we sort over the jewelry tonight?"

Mrs. Johnston agreed and went from the room with the tray. Mary lay back on the pillows and contemplated the ceiling, a little frown between her brows. If it was not having to sell the jewelry and being poor, what was it that was worrying mother? Surely she was not worrying about this—this Mr. Carter?

At the same moment Claude Dabbs, still at his desk, also frowning, looked up from his writing as Ned came into the room.

"C. M., aren't you rather jumping at conclusions? 'Johnston' is far from being an uncommon name, and 'Mary,' with 'Polly' for short, is far from being uncommon either; therefore the combination really tells you nothing."

Claude nodded. "I told myself that, too, at first, but—"

"All the same," Ned continued reluctantly, "I will tell you something I've noticed about Mrs. Johnston. She has a little black mole on the lobe of her ear. Rather fetching, like the dark stone of an earring. And behind the same ear she has a single lock of pure white hair."

"A bit like a thumb-mark and just behind the ear?"

"Yes."

Claude rose, excitedly, then sat down suddenly. "Polly—or I'm a Dutchman! Do you suppose she's got her suspicions about me, and came here to verify 'em?" demanded Claude.

"Never heard her mention your name," Ned declared. "Certainly never asked me any questions."

"All the same, I don't like the way things look," Claude said doggedly. "There's something behind it. I'm going to be on the safe side."

Ned looked at him curiously, and a little uncomfortably. What safe side could there be for a man in C. M.'s position, if his utterly absurd deduction that lovely Mrs. Johnston was his "Polly" had any foundation in fact.

"I'm going to send her back the money," declared Dabbs. "Going to send her back her cursed five hundred and feel that my soul's my own. I scraped and saved that money the first year I was clear of debt, and I've held it all this time just for—just for this chance."

He opened a small drawer in his desk, and reached for a roll of bills with a rubber band about them, wrote a few words on a sheet of paper, sealed it with the money in an envelope, directed it, then went to the store door.

Although the store was closed and shuttered, there was a light in its dim recesses. Young John Slater, an assistant, was there.

"John," called Claude, take this letter up to the White House. You can take the car. I don't care how late you come back, if there's no answer."

Young John grunted assent and disappeared with the note, whistling at the thought of having the car to himself as late as he wished.

On Mary's bed lay two empty jewel cases. Mary sat propped up against the pillows and her mother sat at the foot of the bed. Between them was a heap of glittering things. If Mary said: "Bother that old ring. You don't want to keep that," her mother would say: "Mary, you gave me that ring when you were only twelve. How can I part with it?"

In the middle of an animated discussion about an old jade bracelet, the doorbell rang. Mrs. Johnston, after waiting for some one to answer it, suddenly realized that she was the only some one available, and went down stairs.

Young John Slater stood waiting impatiently. "Mr. Dabbs, he asked me to give this note into your hands, and if they was any answer to wait."

Mrs. Johnston managed to indicate that he might wait in the hall, and went swiftly into the library, shut the door and held the letter as though it was a deadly explosive. Presently she opened the letter. Five one hundred dollar bills fell out. Mrs. Johnston picked them up, together with the note which had been folded around the bills. The note began without preamble.

"If you are the Polly Johnston who married me in New Brunswick, some twenty years ago, you will know why I am returning the money. I have felt worse than the devil about it for more years than I like to remember. For God's sake don't refuse me the chance to get financially straight. I won't intrude otherwise, without your permission. If you are not my Polly Johnston, send it back and excuse

"Claude Dabbs."

Polly Johnston gave a low whistle. "It's a godsend," she said aloud as she put the money in her desk. She threw the note on the fire, watched it burn and went into the hall.

"Tell Mr. Dabbs there is no answer."

Young John went out into the night and Mrs. Johnston went up to Mary, arranging her story as she climbed the stairs.

Mary, fingering the jewels, yawned a little. She idly planned several beginnings for the next chapter of her life in Clover Hollow. They were all different, yet each began with the morning's interview with the grocer's clerk. She thought this was odd, but concluded that poverty and the country were narrowing her horizon. She looked up as her mother entered the room.

With a sudden movement of her hand, Mrs. Johnston swept the "for sale" jewels into the box.

"We won't have to bother with them yet awhile. I've had a telegram from New York. We're to go there and negotiate a loan on the land. I want you with me, of course. I couldn't leave you here alone. We'll have to take the first train tomorrow. It's the 9:30, I think. Will you be feeling up to that, Mary-girl?"

"I feel perfectly all right, Mother. It's only a bit sudden, and I can never care about the city in this weather. But I'll be ready."

"We'll stop on our way to the station and get Mrs. Pulsifer to come and look after the house. Good night, dear, and if you dream of drowning, just call Mother."

Mary looked at her mother, standing in the doorway and ready to snap the light out.

"Lovely old thing," she called, "go and get your own beauty sleep. I'll have pleasant dreams."

When the darkness enfolded her, however, she made a distinctly wry face. How much, she wondered, was she a business necessity in this contemplated trip to New York, and how much was it her mother's plan not to let the next chapter begin with the grocer's clerk?

In her own room, Mrs. Johnson disrobed, her heart beating to the tune of one monotonous chant, which ran thus: "Not yet, Claude Dabbs, not yet shall you know about Mary." Then she planned her next move, which was to eliminate Dabbs and his too engaging nephew from Mary's life—and from her own.

Claude Dabbs waited until he knew there was no answer and no return of the money.

Then it WAS Polly.

He turned out the light, but seeing that the library was still occupied, looked in. Ned was sitting at the window, smoking. He looked up as Claude came into the room, and said, "Well?"

"It looks as if it was Polly. I feel that it is, crazy as it may seem to you. I hope she got all I meant, as well as the money."

Ned turned on him, more excited than Dabbs had yet seen him. "The girl! Uncle Claude, you'll have to explain things to her, won't you?"

(Continued next week.)

LOCALS

Spring Coats and Dresses this week Thursday and Friday at The Belmond Hat Shoppe

Earl Buchanan of Aiken, Minnesota was here visiting his mother and other relatives last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Rayl of Rowan visited Monday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bayliss.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Williams motored to Northwood, Friday evening after Mr. Williams had attended a school meeting at Mason City.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Hadley entertained a number of friends at bridge Tuesday evening.

Mrs. C. I. Williams spent part of last week visiting her parents at Clear Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newgard of Goodell spent Sunday with Belmond relatives.

Louis Parsons, Jas. Roosevelt, Clint Luick and Frank Marbaugh left Monday for Belle Fouch, S D., to work on the new sugar factory.

H. Lamb and family of Eagle Grove and Winifred Kist and family of Webster City were Sunday visitors at the A. L. Lamb home.

CHIX—Rich in quality, low in cost. Every chick a purebred from healthy, vigorous bred-to-lay flocks. Order today.—The Airyhill Hatchery, Fred Pals, Prop., Meservey, Iowa. 20tf

BASKET SOCIAL

There will be a program and basket social Friday evening, April 1, at District No. 9, Belmond township, located 5 miles southwest of Belmond. Everybody invited.

MABLE BAKER, Teacher

NOTICE

BILL, State Certificate of soundness No. 6176, Grade Stallion, Color Black, Markings Star, little white on right hind foot, will make the season in and around Norway and Belmond townships. Terms: $12.00 for standing colt. Full amount of the service fee to become due on the sale or removal of mare. Due diligence will be exercised, but we will not be responsible should accident occur.

203* J. L. TENDALL, Owner.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observer, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week March 19 to March 26, 1927 inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char of Day
20	28	24	.12	Cloudy
21	34	21	.08	Pt. cloudy
22	35	17	.01	Cloudy
23	45	28	—	Cloudy
24	43	31	—	Cloudy
25	43	32	.30	Cloudy
26	38	26	—	Cloudy

Mrs. A. W. Martin and daughter, Harriet returned Sunday from Oakdale where they had visited Miss Ida Anderson. They also visited at Des Moines and Cambridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Bayliss and family spent Sunday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Willard Crawford at Hanlantown.

Word was received by relatives here of the death of Mrs. Wm. Campbell at her home near Grasston, Minnesota, about two weeks ago. Death was due to influenza after an illness of four days. Mrs. Campbell will be remembered here as Alma Saugstadt.

FOOD SALE

At Boughton's Store on Saturday at 10:00 o'clock, by Congregational Ladies' Aid.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	19c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	37c
Corn	50c
Barley	65c

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—R. C. White Wyandotte hatching eggs.—A. W. Martin. 1c

FOR SALE—Buff Orpington pen hatching eggs. English White Leghorn eggs. Also baby chicks.—Otis Tendall. 1*

FOR SALE—Timothy and clover mixed hay.—S. A. Bohning. Phone 3203. 202*

FOR SALE—Rural New York and Early Ohio seed potatoes, $2.00 a bushel. S. Enger. 17tf

FOR SALE—Timothy and Clover hay.—T. A. Wicks, Kanawha. 193

FOR SALE—P. B. White Wyandotte hatching eggs. $3.50 per 100. Mrs. R. D. Box. Phone 3613. 19tf

FOR SALE—S. L. Wyandotte and Buff Orpington hatching eggs. Mrs. A. P. Lonning, Belmond. Phone 2606.

FOR SALE—Hard or soft wood, stove lengths. A C. Lieuwen. Phone 186 1-3. 17tf

FOR SALE—The buildings on the H. L. Stapley lot, adjacent to Ford Garage. Must be removed by order of State Fire Marshal. This is your opportunity to get good building material right. See Ernest Stapley. 20tf

FOR SALE—80-acre improved farm, 5 miles east and 1 mile south of Belmond. For full particulars write Heiko Bruns, Belmond, Iowa.

FOR SALE—John Deere 8-ft disc, in good condition. Phone 3007. Galen Johnson. 192*

FOR SALE—Pure bred S. C. Buff Orpington hatching eggs, $4 per 100. A. V. Mayhew, Goodell. 203*

FOR SALE—Brown Leghorn hatching eggs, $3.00 per 100. Buff Orpington pen eggs $1.00 per setting. Mrs. J. B. Sheffield. 20tf

FOR SALE—Reed's Yellow Dent Seed Corn, early gathered and tested, $3.00 per bushel. Also early and late potatoes, $1.75 per bushel. J. B. Sheffield. 19tf

FOR SALE—150 bushel Northern Grown Rural New Yorker Seed Potatoes. $2.00 per bushel. Inquire at Independent, where sample of seed may be seen. 202*

FOR SALE—Cheap, 200 feet of 1 1-4-inch steel water pipe. R. W. Halfpop. 1*

FOR SALE—P. B. S. C. White Leghorn hatching eggs. Ten cents per dozen over market price, at farm. H. G. Brunes, Goodell, Iowa. Phone 607. 20tf

FOR SALE—A few good, young Shropshire ewes, bred to registered ram. Frank Drury, one mile west of Rowan. 1c

FOR SALE—One two-year-old iron gray mare colt; 7 head of Shropshire sheep, well bred. Also German police dog, 1 year old. Ira Christie. Phone 3318. 1*

WANTED TO TRADE—Residence property in Eagle Grove, 2 lots and 7-room house, for residence property in Belmond. Write Box 133, Clarion, Iowa. 192*

WANTED—News items. Help us give you a better paper by sending or phoning the items you know. Call 115.

WANTED—Married man to work on farm. Separate house. Must have farm experience. Frank Drury, one mile west of Rowan. 1c

WANTED—Cattle. See Peterson's Market before selling. 193

WANTED—Cattle to pasture.—J. W. Kaufman. 203*

LOST—White German police dog. Had heavy strap and dog chain on. Finder notify E. M. Stienlicht. 1*

Special Showing
—of—
NEW SPRING
Coats and Dresses
Thursday - Friday
March 31-April 1
From D. K. Lundberg Co.
Mason City, Iowa
We will have a large selection from which to choose.
The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

Automobile Electricians
Now is the time to have the electrical system of your car gone over. Our electrical stock is more complete than ever.
WE REPAIR
Batteries, Coils,
Starters, Ignition,
Generators, Wiring,
Magnetos, Lights,
Cables, Etc.
Our shop is equipped to take care of your electrical trouble.
Belmond Storage Battery Co.
THROUGH SERVICE
WE GROW
Phone 46 J. W. Scott, Prop.

Wm. H. WOLLE
Real Estate Farms
Town Property
Insurance—All Branches
Your Business Solicited
The Best at Lowest Prices
BELMOND, - - - IOWA

McKibbin hats
You can pay $7.00 for a hat of this quality, but you don't have to.
Let us show you several stunning ones just received.
Smith & Skovlin
Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!
Thursday - Friday
Saturday
March 31, April 1 and 2
BEEF ROAST, per pound 18c
PORK CHOPS, per pound 25c
PORK STEAK, per pound 25c
CREAM OF NUT OLEO, per pound . 23c
Watch for Our Specials Every Week!
Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning
City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

To the Patrons of the Banks of Wright County:

A bank within a community is no longer a private business enterprise but a community affair. Its success has such a far reaching influence upon the financial welfare of those within its vicinity that its interests are mutual with those of every citizen who resides within its territory.

For this reason that which affects the success of a bank affects all and as such is of vital interest to the public.

It is a fact that a bank cannot give the service and safety in its affairs to which patrons are entitled, unless its business is conducted upon a basis which returns a fair margin of profit to the bank.

For this reason patrons have within their power to increase or diminish the service which they are to receive from their bank precisely to the extent to which they give or withhold their co-operation.

Particularly is this true in the matter of checking accounts. The checking account privilege is probably the most expensive service a bank offers, entailing as it does the purchase of bank-books, check-books, deposit slips, checks, etc., as well as the cost of bookkeeping in connection with the accounts.

The only profit a bank receives from these accounts is the interest it receives from loaning the money deposited with it, but the amount it can loan is small. Good banking requires the bank to keep a large part of these deposits in reserve. If the depositor constantly checks out all or nearly all his balance each month, there is none to loan and the bank can make no profit on the account with which to pay the expense of handling it.

Careful investigation has proven that to cover the cost of an account a balance must be maintained of at least $50 each month over and above the amount that is checked out at any time. The Wright County Bankers Association has therefore adopted a resolution that, after April 1st, 1927, any checking account which fails to average $50 for the month will be charged 50 cents for the checking service.

If a checking account is essential it is suggested that the balance be increased to $50 and maintained as a permanent balance, which will cover the cost of handling the account. Those few who find it impossible to maintain a permanent balance of $50, and do not wish to pay this service fee, are invited to transfer their accounts to a Cashier's Check, or Savings Account, where their funds will receive the same certain safety and can be withdrawn at will in lump sums as needed, but not by check.

This charge has not been instituted with the idea of collecting 50 cents per month on the small accounts but with the hope that it will call the depositors' attention to the fact that they are carrying small balances, and to induce them to increase their balances to a point where they will cover the actual cost of handling the accounts.

Please co-operate so that your bank may do everything within its power to make your business relations with it of the greatest possible value to you.

Wright County Bankers Association

THE MANURE SPREADER

In the newer sections of our own northwest, and in the prairie provinces of western Canada, the manure spreader is seldom seen. It is in those sections that "wheat mining" is indulged in, which is a nice way of describing a method of farming by which the natural fertility of the soil is removed in crops which are sold off the farm with absolutely no fertilizer returned to the soil to keep up the strength that nature so richly endowed it with. When wheat was the money crop in Iowa, much the same methods were followed by the early settlers here.

Every crop removes from the soil plant food which in some manner must be returned. Constant reduction of this plant food inevitably results in worn-out and worthless land. Barnyard manure is one of the most valuable as well as the most practical of fertilizers. It is present on every farm and rich in those elements essential to plant growth. It helps to aerate the soil, developes necessary bacteria, and prevents washing of the soil.

Proper spreading of fresh manure will make possible the complete utilization of its full values. This means mechanical aid in spreading; for manure must be well shredded and uniformly spread to secure the best results. Manure which is spread unevenly or in lumps over the ground later interferes with the proper plowing or cultivation of the field on which it has been spread. Nor does it induce the best results in the growing crops, for too much humus in spots produces a rank growth of the plant stalks with little return of grain.

McCormick-Deering and John Deere manure spreaders overcome these objectionable features. They spread the manure as it should be spread. Their patented and exclusive features of design insure results which make the McCormick-Deering and John Deere the logical choice among spreaders.

"A fertile soil means a prosperous people." Manure spreaders are recognized as essential equipment on every farm. The more modern your spreader, the better work it will do. The spreader is one way of increasing your efficiency—more work done in less time. See the spreaders we have set up for your inspection the next time you are in town.

GRIESY'S
The Friendly Place
PHONE 10 BELMOND, IOWA

Belmond Independent

BELMOND, IOWA. THURSDA Y, APRIL 7, 1927 NO. 21

...DENTS ...TTING MILK

...pils Found Underweight By Red Cross Nurse Being Given Pint Of Milk.

MANY PUPILS EXAMINED

Beginning Monday of this week milk is being supplied at school to pupils who were found to be under weight in the inspection conducted by Miss Giesemann, the school nurse. Out of 202 pupils examined below the seventh grade, 44 were found to be 10 per cent underweight. In the replies to questionnaires sent to parents of these children, practically all parents were anxious to take advantage of the opportunity of their children getting milk. In addition several pupils who are not 10 per cent underweight are also taking advantage of the opportunity. At present 60 pupils are being supplied. The milk is given during the morning recess period. No doubt more will be added to the list later. Any parents who desire their children to have milk may do so, but the plan was started with the idea of supplying those who were underweight. Children may bring the milk from home if they so desire.

The plan will be followed for eight weeks.

The last round of the local Extempore contest was held Friday morning and Ruth Ramsay was chosen as our representative in the district contest to be held about the 15th of April. Ten contestants participated in this round and the high school had the privilege of attending. Each student drew his topic at eight o'clock and was given an hour to prepare his speech. These topics are taken from the recent issues of the Literary Digest and the Review of Reviews and deal with the most interesting and important questions of the day. "The Crime Wave" and "Baumes Laws in New York" discussed by Ruth Ramsay enumerated the increase of organized crime in the U. S. and the decrease, or effective method of checking this Crime in New York, namely the application of the Baumes Law. Lucile Skouge was given second place, her topic dealing with Italy's policy in Europe, which was an excellent discussion of the political situation of Italy and the surrounding countries. "The Little Theatre Movement" discussed by Muriel Luick, and Helen Luick's topic "What is Henry Ford Going to Do?" both deserve credit. The other topics that were ably delivered were "A Traffic Cop for the Air" by Randall Klemme, "Record of the Sixty-Ninth Congress" by Mildred Jacobson, "Present Issues in Germany" by Clifford Johnson, "The Negro's Right to Vote as he Chooses' by Mary Quinlan, "Economic Conditions in Europe," by Henry Robinson and "The Naval Situation" by Richard Gowdy. All these subjects were taken up in an efficient and systematic way and all participants deserve credit for their work.

The P. T. A. will meet April 21. This meeting will include the exhibit of various forms of work throughout the grades and in the High School. The style show, exhibiting the work of the Home Economics class in sewing will be a feature of the meeting.

The High School Girls' Basketball Tournament will be held the afternoons of April 5, 6 and 7 at four o'clock in the gymnasium. The public is invited. The schedule is as follows:

Tuesday—
- Freshmen-Junior (A)
- Freshmen-Junior (B)

Wednesday—
- Sophomore-Senior (A)
- Sophomore (B)-Winner (B) of Tuesday.

Thursday—
- Winner (A) of Tuesday-Winner (A) of Wednesday
- Loser (A) of Tuesday-Loser (A) of Wednesday.

Harriet Martin is wearing the typing medal for this week.

Practice for the Belmond High School Track season will begin this week. With two letter men, Bernard Davenport and Clifford Johnson, back again, we students are entertaining fond hopes for a brilliant season this year. There will be five meets in which our teams will participate. They will come off in the following order:

The Interclass meet.

Dual meet with some neighboring town.

County meet at Clarion.

The North Iowa Conference at Clear Lake.

The District meet at Mason City.

We are entering some men in a new form of competition this year, that of the free throws in basket ball at Ames, Iowa. All our High School boys have been trying out out the past week or two. Five men making the best score out of fifteen attempts were selected. Our five representatives are: Duane Jenison, Martial Holtzbauer, Clarence Peterson, and the two Johnsons—Leonard and Henry.

JUNIOR HIGH NOTES

About four weeks ago our 7th grade reading class under Miss Bond's direction was talking about our bad habits. We decided that our two worst habits were drinking coffee, and spending our money. So we decided to organize a club and conquer these demons. Names for the club were submitted and Loran Hadley's was adopted. It is "The Seventh Grade Healthy and Wealthy Club." Different members of the class helped to make the charts and if a person does not drink any tea or coffee for a whole week he receives a mark. Several have been 100 per cent but on the other hand we have some real "old topers". But everyone is cooperating very nicely and we hope to be 100 per cent in another week and then keep it that way. There are 44 people in this class and only 8 drank last week, while 50 per cent of the class was drinking tea and coffee when we began.

Each week we record the amount saved after the name of each individual. The first week we saved $5.55, the second $5.43, the third week $10.01. In a few weeks we are going to have a banking party and deposit our money. We are going to carry this on the rest of this year and see if we can't develop the habit of saving.

Miss Sowerwine's 8th Art Class are making handkerchiefs with Egyptian Cone work this week.

The Junior High boys have organized a base ball team and are planning to have a few games with neighboring schools.

Any boy in the Junior High who thinks he can run or jump should come out for track. Let's get a "real" Junior High track team organized.

The 7th and 8th grade girls played the first base ball game of the season Wednesday night after school. The final score was 13 to 26 in favor of the 8th grade. Miss Cambier acted as umpire.

Last Friday afternoon the Junior High held an assembly in the auditorium at 2:50. The eighth grade class officers, Dwane Brady and Alice Nissen had charge of the assembly. A very fine program was given by the students as follows:

Reading, Jean Elder.

Piano Solo, Rose Barry.

Reading, Ruth Courson.

Report of the 7th Grade Healthy and Wealthy Club, Duan Packard.

Talk, Mary E. Blake.

Jr. High Newspaper, Lois Trafford

The Value of Assemblies, Supt. Williams.

We will hold these assemblies about every two weeks and parents are invited to come.

Division I of the Audubon Society met last Tuesday evening after school and elected Muriel Luick of Grade 10 as chairman of their division. Miss Bond then gave out the pins and literature.

By Junior High School Reporter

Wayne Nissen returned to the fifth grade room after a four days absence due to sickness.

Faye Thompson and Gale Thayer were visitors in Miss Quigley's room last week.

The following members of the fourth grade received their Palmer Method buttons: Irene Greenlander, Wilbur Luick, Jane Holtzbauer, William Stadtlander, Lauretta Hood, Gwendolyn House, James Gowdy and Helen Olson.

The following of Miss Hazlett's second grade are absent on account of the measles: Edgar Jenkins, John Packard and Esther Swenson.

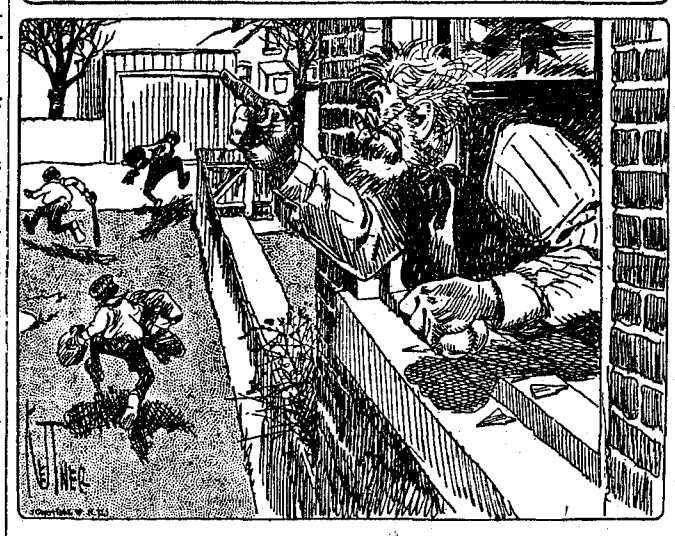
Members of the second grade made a bird house from blocks of wood. They plan to put it out of doors, some time this week.

Orvis Fitts, Daryl Hood, Celeste Hadley are absent from Miss Smith's room, because of measles.

Curtis Chamberlin, Mary Jane Roosevelt, and Anita Mae Thompson are absent from Kindergarten on account of whooping cough; and De Lores Olson and Dorothy Miller on account of Measles.

The following people in the third grade have received the Gold Star award in Penmanship: Bernard Ayers, Bernadine Ayers, Ray Bonte, Waunita Brewer, Frank Buchanan, Donald Champlin, Lucille Cramer, Bernard Daniels, Frances Dorr, Ruth Finn, Jean Hake, Angeline Jacobson, Violet Kelly, Kenneth Kinseth, Eugene Miller, Donald Nielson, Reynold Packard, Meryl Pfaltzgraff, Ralph Rowe, Bennie Ruiter, James Shaw, Earl Sheller, Dorothea Thayer Veona Townsan, Lowell Trafford, Laura Williams.

The Baseball Season Opens



"DAD'S NIGHT IS FINE SUCCESS

Over One Hundred Enjoy Annual Affair Of Legion.

"Dad's Night," an annual affair of the American Legion, was held last Thursday evening in the Legion hall over the Schultz Drug store. Over a hundred Legion members and their guests were present and the affair, as usual, was highly successful. In a few happy words, Commander W. A. Parker welcomed the guests of the evening. The band played a number of selections, and a quartette composed of Messrs. Nordschow, Chamberlain, Griesy and H. F. Luick sang several selections which were greatly enjoyed. Louis Luick and Dell Luick, assisted on the piano by Thayne Bailey, brought down the house with some old time music, as did John Demsey, Jack Flynn and C. O. Fitts with their jigging. Some amusing stunts were then held, and the speaker of the evening, Editor Earl Hall, of the Mason City Globe Gazette, was introduced. Hall was delayed in arriving due to a break down of his car near Klemme, and Ross Eggers had gone up after him at that place. Mr. Hall is a forceful and pleasing speaker, and had a number of ideas which held the attention of his audience thruout. Following the address, the crowd adjourned to the library basement where an excellent plate supper was served. The writer wishes to acknowledge an invitation to the event, and to express his thoro enjoyment and appreciation of the evening.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observer, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week March 2 , to April 2, 1927 inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char of Day
27	45	19	T	Cloudy
28	54	35	.04	Cloudy
29	57	40	.01	Pt. cloudy
30	58	28	—	Pt. cloudy
31	45	32	—	Cloudy
1	42	31	.82	Cloudy
2	44	26	.16	Cloudy

SOME CHANGES IN BUSINESS

Four Changes In Business Firms Noted During Past Week

Several business changes of interest have occured in the past week

A deal is now in the course of consumation whereby C. M. Morse will purchase the interest in the Hub Motor company now held by Calvin Johnson. The deal is expected to be completed about the 15th, at which time Mr. Morse will assume his interests. Mr. Johnson expects to remain with the Company until a competent mechanic can be secured, when he and Mrs. Johnson plan to move to a location near Des Moines.

April 1, Ray Brewer resigned his position with the Southside pool hall and is now engaged in redecorating and arranging the Thoe building formerly occupied by the Ayers Bakery, where he will engage in the restaurant business. Mr. Brewer plans to serve regular meals as well as short orders, and to carry the usual stock of restaurant goods. He will be ready for business in about a week.

Last week Bernard Moody sold his interest in the opera house to his mother, Mrs. Ella Cleveland. Bernard will travel this summer with the Gifford carnival shows, it is understood.

H. T. Bailey, who for some years has been connected with the office force of the Iowa Valley Operating Co., has resigned his position and is engaging in the insurance business.

SCOUT MEET IS POSTPONED

The Boy Scout tournament scheduled for Friday evening of last week was postponed on account of the weather to Friday evening of this week. Troops from Mason City, Garner and Belmond are to compete and on the program of events there are three basketball games, a basket ball relay game, signalling contest and a talk on forestry. A small admission charge of 10 cents and 15 cents will be charged, and everyone is invited to come.

OLSON-TULP

Miss Effie Olson and Herman R. Tulp were united in marriage at the M. E. parsonage in Clarion last Thursday, March 24, at 2 o'clock, by Rev. J. B. O'Connor. The double ring service was used. Miss Dorothy Steffens and William Veeder of Belmond were the attendants.

The bride is the third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Olson residing west of town. She is a graduate of the Rowan high school and attended Ellsworth college at Iowa Falls and was for several years a successful rural teacher. For the past four years she has been an efficient employee at the Fred Hackley store.

Mr. Tulp is a brother of Mrs. Dave Veeder of Belmond and is a stranger in this community, his home being in South Dakota. After the ceremony the happy couple left by auto for Minneapolis, Minn., and points in South Dakota. Rowan friends extend congratulations.

The W. F. M. S. will meet today at the home of Mrs. H. J. Williams.

DOOR POUNDERS

The peddler will tell you, of course, that your local merchant is over-charging you, that you are not g tting value when you trade with your local stores. He will hand you a bunch of commercial "applesauce" about saving you money and giving you the advantage of wonderful and unheard of values. In nine cases out of ten you'll find a good or better merchandise in your local stores for less money. Compare. Satisfy yourself. Nobody is asking you for charity. Your local merchants aren't begging. It is a straightforward business proposition. You will win in the end by patronizing your local stores.

HUMBOLDT MERCHANT HAS NOVEL RADIO AD

Humboldt Republican: An idea, entirely new, we believe, in the radio line has been worked out and is now in service, by a local radio dealer, our good friend, H. E. Breed of the Electric Shop. Mr. Breed will operate what might be termed a radio central station. Lines will be extended over the business district of the town and those who wish the service may simply purchase a loud speaker and tap onto the lines. Mr. Breed will operate two sets, that two different classes of programs may be available at all times. A small switch will be placed on each loud speaker installed so that it may be turned off when not wanted. Music will be supplied at all times and patrons of the various stores can listen and enjoy the programs while doing their shopping, thus relieving the monotony and strain. The stores gain the advantage of not having to own, operate or maintain individual sets.

As soon as the proper negotiations now in progress, are completed, Mr. Breed will be able to extend this service over the entire business district. When programs are not available in the air, he will supply programs by local talent, tending to increase the popularity of the idea. The music will tend todraw and hold the trade, making shopping more attractive.

SUMMARY OF MARCH, 1927 WEATHER

Temperature

Mean Maximum, 47.0.

Mean Minimum, 28.7.

Monthly Mean, 37.8.

Highest in the month, 70 on the 15th.

Lowest in the month, 12 on the 2nd and 3rd.

Greatest daily range in temperature was 32 degrees.

Precipitation

Total for month, 1.06 in.

Greatest in 24 hours, .30 on the 25th.

Total snowfall for month, 1.25 in.

No. days with .01 or more precipitation, 13.

Ciendition of Skies and Wind

No. clear days, 7.

No. partly cloudy, 6.

No. cloudy, 18.

Wind blew from n. w. 7 days.

Wind blew from n. e. 7 days.

Wind blew from s. e. 7 days.

Wind blew from n. e. 5 days.

Wind blew from s. 8 days.

Wind blew from e. 2 days.

Other Marches, 17 Years

March 1927 was 6.5 degrees warmer than average March.

Highest temperature any March day 84 March 23, 1910.

Lowest temperature any March day 20 March 2, 1918.

Precipitation for March, 1927 was .08 short of average.

Largest precipitation any March 2.96 March, 1918.

Least precipitation any March .23 March, 1910.

Heaviest snowfall any March 18.5 inches, March 1928.

Least snowfall any March, 0.00, March 1910.

No. of Marches with temperature below zero, 9.

Shortage of precipitation since January 1, 1927, 1.84 inches.

LUNCHEON CLUB TODAY

The Business Men's Luncheon club will meet this noon for the purpose of determining whether a summer session shall be held.

COURT TO OPEN NFXT MONDAY

Judge Clock of Hampton Will Preside At Next Term Of District Court, April 11

$5000 DAMAGE SUIT IS UP

Judge Sherwood A. Clock of Hampton will preside at the term of district court which will open next Monday. The petit jury will not be required to appear until the 18th, tho the grand jury will convene the 11th ready to dispose of such cases as may be submitted for its consideration.

A $5000 damage suit is brought by Ole B. Olson vs. Dr. L. E. Marker of Goldfield. The plaintiff alleges that said defandant has taken his wife automobile riding; had her come to visit him in his office; induced her to accept small gifts, and in other ways deliberately cultivated defendant's wife; that defendant has caused her to neglect her household duties and to become careless to the wants of her children, she leaving them for hours in the custody of others while in the society of the defendant.

Another Clarion separation case is that of Belle Taylor vs. Dayton Taylor, the wife alleging she was deserted by her spouse of less than two years on or about March 15, 1927. Temporary alimony is asked in the sum of $80 and a like amount monthly thereafter. Defendant is a Great Western conductor.

Mrs. Patrick Brennan of Eagle Grove, 90 years of age, was before the insane commission for hearing Saturday. It was decided best to take her to Cherokee for treatment and she was taken there Monday by Mrs. Bon Taylor.

Emma Barker of Rowan petitions the court for authority to sell all or sufficient amount of the Barker property to pay claims and for her support, not to exceed $1500

Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove has begun suit against the First National bank of that city to collect on twelve separate notes which said defendant bank endorsed to the plaintiff bank. The total of said notes amount to over $45,000. In another suit same plaintiff seeks $900 from Edith and H. R. Norris and First National bank. A third suit asks judgment against said bank and G. S. Gunderson for $455.06.

Standard Radio Supply Co., asks judgment against M. C. Fairbanks of Clarion on account for $152.04.

H. C. Wiser of Goldfield is made defendant in suit brought by Citizens State bank to recover $3588.42 on two promissory notes.

Ole Olson vs. Bertha Olson of Goldfield is an action for divorce, the husband alleging cruel and inhuman treatment.

Farmers Savings bank of Goldfield brings action against H. C. Wiser to recover $2,379.99 on his three promissory notes.

First National bank of Eagle Grove, Fred Madson and D. H. Atwood are defendants in suit brought by Citizens State bank to recover $2,079.91 on note.

Citizens State bank of Eagle Grove asks judgment against the following defendants: First National Bank and Amos Nervig, $2871.29; First National Bank and Mrs. Alma I. Rolfe, $7416.78; First National Bank and Chas. H. Duer, $972.41.

George W. Young, Jr., vs. H. H. Fritze et al, is suit to collect $8159.29 on past due note; a second case involves the sum of $8039.79; the third is for $8017.80.

F. E. Cole et al brings action against J. H. Sterling of Eagle Grove to recover the sum of $8763.77. This sum is alleged to be the amount of defendant's liability on three notes executed to the Citizens State Bank for over $30,000, which plaintiffs had to pay.

Ole Sevick, guardian of Mildred Sevick et al of Dows seeks authority to negotiate a new loan upon the real estate of his wards.

Fred Brooks asks judgment against Hazel and Fred Claude for $364.99 on past due note.

Citizens State Bank of Goldfield seeks judgment against T. R. and Belle Beveridge on their $1900 note.

(Continued on page four)

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

The plans of the County Supervisors to grade Primary road No. 15 this year will meet with universal approval in this end of the county. This road is the main highway across Wrght county, with probably the heaviest traffic of any road in the county, and it is badly in need of rebuilding. This spring has turned it into a "mud road" of the kind Iowa has become famous—or infamous—for, cars becoming stalled daily in some of the holes. The board will let the contract, according to present plans, April 19, for improving this road. With this improvement made, and with the road straightened thru town and the two new bridges completed, No. 15 will be in tip-top condition thru Wright county and promises to be probably the best road in the county. It is slated for paving in the bill passed last week by the Iowa senate, and doubtless within a few years will be paved at which time it will be the main highway between Des Moines and the Twin Cities.

According to the daily papers of Tuesday, Lowden has given permission to start his presidential "boom." This will be good news to the large majority of Iowa voters, who will undoubtedly swing in behind the Lowden band wagon in large numbers. It is questionable, however, whether Lowden can secure the nomination next year. The East and the Coolidge politicians are against him, and they more or less control the situation. It will not be surprising if a compromise results in the nomination of vice president Dawes.

The tourist season will soon be upon us. When will Belmond start work on its tourist park? Who is going to take hold of it and push it along? Or shall we let the park go and paddle along without any accomodations for visitors? Primary 15 is to be straightened and improved this year. It is slated for paving by the state highway commission, and will soon be the main highway between Des Moines and the Twin Cities which means it will carry one of the heaviest tourists loads of any highway in the middle west. Belmond is the first real stopping place on the way north from Des Moines. Shall we invite the tourist to stop a bit with us, or shall we tell him to roll along until he gets to Garner, that we don't want him here?

If Belmond is going to have a band this summer, it's about time we were taking some action in regard to financing it. Everybody wants a band, and Belmond has one of the best of its kind in Iowa. That isn't just boosting—it's fact. But every spring we dally around talking about having one, wasting time and energy, and end up in arranging for one. We might just as well do the talking months ahead, so the band will know where they stand and be practicing and securing supplies and completing their organization. Do you know any just reason why this should always be stalled off until the last minute? It is getting late in the season now; let's get the band started.

PENNY POLITICS

Congress has turned down the bill to rewrite a law permitting post cards to travel for one-cent postage, like a postal card. We may be peculiarly dense and without much imagination, but for the life of us we cannot see why they would hesitate one second to permit the passage of post cards thru the mails at one cent, but rather charge two and do less business. For example, if one sends thru post cards, they buy their own stock, pay for printing, lick a stamp and do the mailing, and pay 2 cents for the privilege. With postal card the government furnishes the card, conveys it to the post office to be sold, fixes the postmaster's salary on what sales he makes, and then allows the card to go thru for one cent—after adding the overhead that we have just spoken about. It looks funny, but maybe they have some reason that can't be readily explained. The printers of the country, who rank sixth in volume of business done, have been trying for years to do away with the monopoly of printed stamped envelopes, but congress gives them the ha-ha when the bill comes to a vote. Of course they like to have the newspaper fellows and printers with them when they run for office, but when they can vote to abolish a monopoly in printing, they can't see the boys who spread the ink.—Livermore Gazette.

ABSENCE MAKES THE HEART GROW FONDER

An expatriate Iowan writing home estimates that 100,000 former and visiting Iowans attended the annual Iowa "return" at Los Angeles. Such a good time they had getting together. Such boosting of the grand old state. Such intense appreciation of its fertility, its people, its opportunities. Wonderful Iowa. Ah, the dear, delightful state that she was when the expatriates plowed and ran stores and practiced one or another profession, "back in splendid old Ioway." Wow!

They got together. They said it to each other. They were glad to see each other. "Where'd you live 'back home'? Marshalltown? Ain't that the good old town? Lived within six miles of Marshalltown m'self. And isn't Marshall county a great one? And Grundy and Hardin, say there's no place like Iowa after all, is there?" And he (or she) replied: "Y' bet your life there ain't a better state, a better county or a better town to live in on earth."

Pathetic, beautiful, the expatriate running over with love and praise for the grand old state? Isn't it a beautiful exhibition of state patriotism and loyalty? Pass the handkerchiefs.

And it's all true about Iowa, true as gospel. Fact is that it is gospel. A good, clean state to live in, a place to earn and save enough to live on in ease somewhere else. Good towns, good people, all true.

But why all this love of state and county and town boiling like a volcano, why doesn't it break volcanically out through the crust and display itself here at home instead of abroad? Iowa's just as great and just as lovable and splendid between the Mississippi and the Missouri as beside the Pacific. Why, then fight like tomcats here at home and fall into each other's arms with wild hurrahs of pride, tears of joy, and loving endearments out in Los Angeles and swing a mean right to the jaw at Des Moines? Why? C'mon Echo, answer? Speak up!

Suppose 100,000 of us got together once a year and fell into each other's arms hiccoughing with fellow feeling and recited the glories and grandeur of Iowa; suppose we told each other what a privilege it is to live in a state like this; pledged anew our fealty to "Good Old Ioway"; recited poems and told each other what we already knew, that Ioway is the bringht and Columbia the gem of the ocean? Suppose we took as much interest in Iowa as we do in Los Angeles? Huh? Suppose?"

One hundred thousand of them? Out in Los Angeles loving each other and the state that bred them! How did they get there, where did they earn and accumulate enough to hie themselves to palm trees and Spanish bungalows and perhaps maintain a second and younger wife "in the style to which she had been accustomed?" Iowa, Iowa, Iowa furnished the opportunity, Iowa rendered back the reward of opportunity seized and fulfilled, Iowa paid the bills, "Ioway" did it. No wonder they meet and swallow a lump in the throat when they think of "Good Old Ioway."

But why don't we do it now? Why do we grouch and grumble and whine and fight in Iowa to weep from 200,000 eyes when we meet in Los Angeles? Why do we boost California highways and knock Iowa's? Why do we love so well 2,000 miles away the state we may have poked in the eye when we lived and profited in it?

Ain't human nature strange?—Marshalltown Times-Republican.

STATEMENT OF OWNERSHIP

Of the Belmond Independent, published weekly at Belmond, Iowa, for April 1, 1927.

State of Iowa, Wright County, ss.

Before me, a Notary Public in and for Wright County, personally appeared R. A. Rankins, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the publisher of the Belmond Independent and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement:

That the Publisher, Editor, Managing Editor and Business Managers are R. A. Rankins, Belmond, Iowa; that the owners are R. A. Rankins; that there are no other security holders.

R. A. RANKINS, Publisher.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 2nd day of April, 1927.

M. C. BARRY, Notary Public.
(My commission expires July 4, 1927)

YOUR CHILD'S CLOTHING

Much of Mother's time is occupied with keeping the family comfortably clad. As Solomon says of his "perfect woman," "She is not afraid of the snow for her household; for all her household are clothed with scarlet." Our grandmothers used to take that literally and make us wear red flannels. But the modern mother—in spite of silk undies and rolled stockings—has her duties to her growing boys and girls. Our day is a steam-heated day, and demands even more carefully regulated clothing to make adjustments to varying temperatures.

The first requirement of clothing is that it should be clean and whole. It should be in taste, and fitted to the occasion on which it is to be worn. Clothing for the warm schoolroom should be light and thin, with warm top-coats, cap, mitten and heavy over-shoes to wear into the cold out-doors.

Every person should have different clothing for night and day, suited to the climate; with a change of underclothes at least once a week. It makes the washings easier to change more frequently, before the clothing gets too grimy to come clear. Stockings should be changed at least twice a week. Shoes should be long, and wide enough; kept free from holes; and with heels which are not run over, throwing the foot out of line.

In order not to offend the taste of your child, every mother should observe how his companions dress. To visit school is a good way to judge of that. Your child will not feel at ease nor be his best self unless his dress is so nearly like that of his mates as to be inconspicuous. If it is too fine or fancy, he will become embarassed or snobbish. If it is eccentric in any way, or not up to par, he will become self conscious or develop an inferiority complex. If dressed right a child's dress has a far more far-reaching influence on his future and his development than most parents realize. The common belief has been that it doesn't matter what the mere child wears; for he doesn't know how to take good care of his clothing anyway, and he will so soon run it thrugh or outgrow it. But it does matter. The vague but inescapable atmosphere of it will become almost indelibly stamped upon his soul and determine his after career.

The ideal dress for a child is just about "average," the "run of the mine;" neither extreme, rich, nor shoddy, but simple and good. This does not require great expense, but considerable thought and care and wisdom on the part of Mother.

FASHIONS, FADS, FOIBLES

If brevity is the soul of wit, our clothing is at its funniest. Some say that skirts are coming down a peg. They will still be high above the dust and germs of the street, but not so far above, by an inch.

Materials are softer and filmier than ever. Crepes are very popular, and wools have the gauziness of chiffon. The lace gown is as stylish as ever and a comfort to the woman who travels, as it does not muss.

This is to be a color season: canary yellow, rose pink, sky blue and grass green. As the athletic girl continues, sport clothes are to be in vogue. The incoming shoes march along in gay shades from roseblush to "parchment." Shoes match gowns with tan a favorite.

We are still "high-hatting it," with very little rim, if any. Hats come to a peak a-top, formed by novel dents.

A few suits are appearing for business. They look smart and their color is black or navy blue. The one-piece dress is holding its own; but the two piece dress, of skirt and over-blouse, is also popular. Colors for dress and evening continue to be neutral.

Style is no so much in the clothes but how you wear 'em. Chicness consists in having stockings fastened up neatly; heels not run over; the slim silhouette. aplainness approaching severity, dress short enough, but not bizarrely over-short; shiningly clean, light-colored gloves: hat pulled far down over the head; and an air of confidence.

BILIOUSNESS

Old fashioned biliousness or spring fever, is less prevalent now than in the good old days. This is probably due to the fact that part of the so-calle dbiliousness, was really malaria or ague, which disappeared when swamp lands were better drained. Another reason for less biliousness is that we have learned to choose better balanced diets and to eat more fresh fruits and green vegetables and not a diet composed of overdoses of pork, pancakes, bread, potatoes and pastry. Better refrigeration and transportation have made oranges, lemons, spinach, tomatoes and many formerly summer foods available all the year round. If you are troubled with biliousness, these eight remedies will help:

Lemonade before breakfast; eat lightly; exercise in the open air; drink an abundance of water; eat vegetables and fruit; do not eat between meals; chew slowly and thoroughly; fast absolutely when you feel bilious attacks coming on.

Moldy bread may be due to wrapping the bread up before it is thoroughly cool, or to lack of care of the bread box. In addition to airing the bread box frequently, sometimes scald it out thoroughly, and dry it in a warm oven or on the back of the stove, or directly in the sun. Molds do not like dry hot air or sunshine.

CHURCHES

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m.

Immediately after the Sunday School, at about 11:00 o'clock there will be a business meeting of the members and friends of the church. All are urgently requested to be present at this meeting.

TRINITY CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor
(Telephone Call, 150

Thursday, April 8, the Ladies' Aid will meet in the church parlors at 2:00 p. m.

The catechetical class will meet immediately after school.

Mid-week prayer meeting will be held at 8:00 p. m.

Palm Sunday, the Lutheran League will hold their devotional hour, beginning at 7:00 o'clock. English services will be held at 8:00 p. m. Theme, "Thy Salvation Cometh." siah 62:10-12.

Thursday, Norwegian communion services will be held at 8:00 p. m.

Good Friday, English communion services will be held at 8:00 p. m.

ST. OLAF CHURCH
B. Guldseth, Pastor

Palm Sunday, English services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Theme: "Serve the Lord with Gladness." John 12:1-6.

Wednesday, April 13, mid-week prayer meeting at the church at 8:00 p. m.

Good Friday, Norwegian communion services will be held at 10:30. Sermon by Rev. Olaf Guldseth, of Minneapolis.

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, April 10:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. You can be a help to the school. The school will prove a blessing to you.

Divine worship and sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "Jesus' Triumphal Entry." Luke 19:41.

Junior and Senior League at 6:30. You will thoroughly enjoy this hour. We all invite you.

Evening worship and gospel message at 7:30. Subject of sermon, "Inspect Your Foundation." Matt. 16:18.

Palm Sunday commemorates Jesus' Triumphal entry into Jerusalem, being joyously and gloriously received by the inhabitants of the city. May we not put forth special efforts in behalf of this great occasion. The Junior catechetical class will be present and have a part in the morning service.

Services every night this week at 7:30 except Saturday night.

Standard Bearers will meet with Muriel Luick Thursday evening at 7:30. All girls are urged to be present.

The Womans' Foreign Missionary Society will meet Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. J. Williams. Lesson study by Mrs. Skovlin. Mystery Box in charge of Mrs. A. W. Martin. A cordial invitation extended to all.

You are heartily invited to join us in worship for the week nights, as well as for the Lord's Day services.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

(© by Dodd, Mead & Company.)

The Balkan Puzzle

IF YOU will look over a map of Europe you will see three great peninsulas jutting into the seas that wash the south shores of the continent. The southernmost and farthest east of the three is known as the Balkan peninsula. It comprises Turkey in Europe, Greece, Serbia, Bulgaria, Montenegro, eastern Roumelia, Rumania and other lesser divisions. Incidentally, that same peninsula has for a thousand years been the hotbed of revolt, intrigue and violence.

No other district of the same size contains so many races, nor so many people who are so widely different in religion, politics, customs and characteristics. This jumble of nationalities dwells side by side, yet never blending. Turk, Greek, Bulgar, Albanian and a half score of other peoples live shoulder to shoulder, yet each sharply divided from all the others. The Turk is the bully of the peninsula. The other races spent centuries fighting and intriguing against each other, but have merged their various difficulties in a common hatred against Turkey. The Turks, strongest of all Mahomet's followers, became masters of the peninsula in the Thirteenth century, being at that time the foremost military power of the world.

Most of the Balkan states are Christian. For this reason, as well as because of the frequent plots and revolts against the sultan's government, Turkey has, from time to time, punished her rebellious subjects by wholesale slaughter and outrage. The Armenian and Macedonian massacres have, at one period and another, aroused the horror of all civilized countries.

In May, 1876, Bulgaria and Herzegovina (then Turkish provinces) started one of the periodical insurrections. The peasants of the Batak district of Bulgaria were preparing to rise when suddenly a large Turkish force under Achmet Agha appeared, surrounded the town of Batak and commander the natives to yield; promising that not one of them should be harmed. With a credulity unusual in people having experience with the "Unspeakable Turk," the patriots obeyed. Then the massacre began. The prisoners—men, women and children alike—were slaughtered like sheep. Some took refuge in a church. It was burned over their heads. Achmet Agha received a decoration from the sultan for this great killing.

At news of the outrage the six great European powers sent a formal protest to the sultan. He had, earlier, promised reforms, but had disregarded his pledges. Now he gave the envoys no satisfaction whatever. This was the chance for which Russia had waited. Twenty years earlier Turkey (backed by England, France and Sardinia) had beaten Russia in the Crimea. The wound still rankled. Russia, moreover, had for a long time yearned to absorb her eastern rival or to annex as much of the latter's territory as possible. The other nations, however, had no idea of allowing the "balance of power" to be thus shifted, and Russia had been able to find no occasion to promote her schemes. Now, under pretext of avenging the injuries inflicted on Balkan Christians, the czar declared war (1877) against Turkey.

A Russian army crossed the Danube June 27. On July 13 General Gourko made the difficult passage of the Balkan mountains and advanced on Adrianople, but was driven back. In December he recrossed the Balkan range, vanquishing a Turkish army of 32,000 at Shipka pass (January 9, 1878). Osman Pasha, the sultan's best general, meantime had held his own against the invaders and had at length occupied the city of Plevna. Here he endured for twenty weeks a memorable siege against superior numbers, but was in the end forced to surrender. With the fall of Plevna the Turkish cause weakened. Philippopolis and Adrianopolis were taken, and the Russian armies marched unchecked on to Constantinople.

Here, however, with the fruits of victory within their very grasp, the conquerors were halted by the powers. The old menace of "destroying the balance of power" seemed about to be fulfilled, and the Russians were forbidden to enter the Turkish capital.

By the peace treaty of San Stefano, however, Rumanian Bessarabia and part of Armenia were ceded to Russia. Bulgaria was made a principality with home rule; Rumania, Serbia and Montenegro were declared free countries, and Bosnia and Herzegovina came under Austro-Hungarian sway. So ended the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-1878. Turkey, far from profiting by her lesson, continued to oppress her Christian provinces. In 1895 massacres of Christians in Armenia, and even in Constantinople, horrified civilization. Christians in Crete revolted, by way of showing their disapproval, and asked Greece to annex their island. A Greek military force was sent to Crete. Turkey at once declared war, thrashed Greece in one brief campaign and wrung from the beaten country a heavy war indemnity.

The Balkan peninsula still teems with plot, counterplot, intrigue, misrule and discontent. The Balkan problem will, perhaps, never be solved.

FREE

That "mental t
Colyum last week
quite an interest.
answers were rec
questions, all see
grand prize.

Dr. H. L. Gowo
of the heap with th
You have to admit D stuff. To get the full answers, hunt up you paper and compare que
swers.

Doc says:
1—Lincoln.
2—Everything.
3—The limit.
4—10:37:59 A. M.
5—Never.
6—Nix.
7—B. B.
8—7291.
9—(Gen.) Grant.
10—Bernard Moody.
11—Across street from The Independent.
12—Scotty's.
13—Hasn't been indicted for manslaughter yet.
14—Died of sleeping sickness.
15—Yes, with a fork.
16—$9,999.99.
17—Not according to Dad.
18—Farmer.
19—From "Life."
20—Yes?

Analyzing these answers, we find No. 2 is debatable; No. 3 rates 100 percent; No. 4 interesting if true; No. 5 libelous; No. 8 reads like doc looked out his office window and caught a wandering auto number plate, but there's a hook in that number; No. 9 uncovers a dark secret; No. 14 a perfect gem; No. 15 self evident; No. 16 is too sad for words; No. 17, the case should be retried, justice must be done; No. 19 pretty clever; and No. 20 sounds like Coolidge on the agricultural problem.

Doc wins the year's subscription, all right. But another clever list came so close that we're going to award its author a six months' subscription. Jesse Tomlinson, of Cornelia, submitted these:

1—Lincoln.
2—Very little.
3—None.
4—In time for dinner.
5—When he needs one.
6—Willy.
7—Baseball.
8—Never.
9—Greenlander.
10—Bernard Moody.
11—Near Aigley's Garage.
12—Willard Battery Station.
13—No.
14—No.
15—No—too hard work.
16—No dollars, no sense.
17—Not much.
18—Farmer.
19—From his patients.
20—No.

Compare No. 2 with the first list; see how persons differ about things. This holds good on No. 3, also. No. 4 both hit pretty close. On No. 6 neither made a good guess, and we don't know yet; the owner of the name says it's Hezekial—maybe. On No. 8, Jesse beat doc, we believe. No. 14 is true either way. So is No. 15. Different ways of expressing the same thing show in No. 19.

Now we'll give another year's subscription for the best set of questions pertaining to Belmond that are submitted by next Monday, April 11. Send 'em in!

LOCALS

Robert Pritchard, of Garner was a guest at the Earl Martin home last week.

Howard Spitler and family, of Klemme, were Sunday visitors at the John Spitler home.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Brooks and daughter, Miss Shirley, were guests at the Leo Dunn home in Clarion, Sunday.

Peter Swenson and family, of Latimer were visitors Monday at the F. C. Aldrich home.

The Monday Night Bridge Club met this week at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Stevens.

Mrs. Mason, of Mason City, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Louis Moe, returned to her home, Sunday.

Mrs. Louis Foss went to Clarion, Saturday, to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rohrback.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

VACCINATION SCHOOL APRIL 12-13 IN BELMOND

Since the hog cholera vaccination school was held in Dows the latter part of January, there has been considerable interest in a second school. The only opportunity local people will have in the near future for getting this work will be in Belmond April 12-13 when Dr. S. H. Johnston of the Veterinary Extension Service will conduct a school at the City Hall.

Fourteen men passed the examination and were given permits to vaccinate their own hogs at the Dows school. It is quite probable that a number of these men will never do their own vaccinating work, however, they feel well repaid for their time and money, for the information they received on swine diseases and parasites.

The work given at the vaccination schools is open to the public. Those who want to take the examination on hog cholera are required by law to pay a fee of $3.00.

MARCH REPORT OF GOLD-FIELD-BELMOND C. T. A.

We have just completed the best month of the year so far. There were 300 cows tested in 28 herds. Of these 248 cows were in milk and 52 were dry.

The 300 cows averaged 681 pounds of milk and 26.6 pounds of fat. 36 cows made 40 pounds of fat, 15 made 50 pounds, 4 made 60 and 1 made 71 pounds.

One herd produced butterfat at a cost of fifteen cents per pound, while the highest cows was 47 cents per pound. Three new members were tested this month.

The following are the five high cows:

Homer Mechem—Gr. H., White Face 2, age 3, fresh Mar. 1, milk 1479, test 4.8, fat 71.

A. O. & E. G. Hauge—P. B. H., Georgia Aalama, age 7, fresh Nov. 9, 1926, milk 1525, test 4.4, fat 67.1.

Meeker & Son—Gr. H., Bob, age 8, fresh Feb. 25, milk 1776, test 3.7, fat 65.7.

F. B. Mathias, Gr. G., Mary, age 3, fresh Feb. 8, milk 1015, test 6.4, fat 64.9.

Homer Mechem, Gr. H., Pet, age 11, fresh Feb. 27, milk 1473, test 4.3, fat 63.3.

The five high herds:

A. O. & A. E. Hauge, milk 15, dry 0, P. B. H., milk 1054, test 3.62, fat 38.2.

F. B. Mathias, milk 11, dry 0, Gr. & P. B. G., milk 848, test 4.46, fat 37.9.

Homer Mechem, milk 10, dry 1, Gr. H., milk 912, test 3.9, fat 36.9.

J. M. Sampson, milk 9, dry 1, Gr. G., milk 776, test 4.54, fat 35.29.

Schnug & Shaeger, milk 8, dry 0, Mixed, milk 834, test 4.1, fat 34.5.

High herd less than 8 cows:

W. C. Donelson, milk 6, dry 0, Gr. & P. B. H., milk 1151, test 3.67, fat 42.2.

Virgil Martin, Cow Tester

FARM RECORDS SHOW UP LEAKS

A study of the records kept by Iowa farmers during the past year shows that some men are able to produce nearly twice as many bushels per acre, or get twice as much from $100 worth of feed fed to livestock, as are other men.

Recently compiled records of 11 farms in Washington county show that corn yields varied from an average of 35 to 65 bushels per acre. The returns from $100 worth of feed fed to livestock varied from $131 to $291 on the different farms. The average was $209.

The hog increase per sow (gross swine receipts per sow) averaged $252 on the 11 farms, with the individual farms ranging from $130 to $389. Similar difference were noted fo rthe dairy cattle kept. The average return for dairy products per cow was $78 with the individual farms varying from $42 to $164.

Some men were able to tend an average of as many as 80 crop acres per man, while others tended but 42. The machinery costs per crop on some farms was as high as $6.25, while on other farms it was as low as 98 cents an acre.

All of the foregoing comparisons show differences between good and efficient management in the various farm enterprises, say the farm management specialists of Iowa State College, who assist in starting and [illegible] records. By [illegible] where they are inefficient. About 900 farmers are keeping such records.

MILK AND RICKETS DON'T MIX

During the year, a series of experiments has been run at the Iowa Station, Ames, in an effort to determine the value of milk in the chick diet. Its value had long been assumed, but definite data were not available, especially in regard to the comparative value of whole and skimmilk in its properties for preventing rickets.

In the experimental work, sweet milk from the college dairy farm was used. This milk was produced by cows which are kept under normal conditions of housing and sunlight and the milk was fed in utensils that had been kept well cleaned.

A summary of the work states that chicks on a corn and milk diet did not make a normal rate of growth. The addition of three percent minerals considerably increased the rate of growth of the chicks, altho the addition of more casein in the ration had no effect on the rate of growth. The work also showed that the whole milk had more of the antirachitic vitamin than did the skimmilk.

SOYBEAN ACREAGE INCREASING

Soybean acreage in Iowa, especially in the southern and eastern part of the state where the soils are generally acid, is increasing rapidly, according to figures secured by F. S. Wilkins, forage crop specialist, Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, Ames. In such acid soils soybeans will produce excellent crops, whereas it is first necessary to apply lime in order to grow alfalfa or clovers successfully. With the present high price of clover seeds, Mr. Wilkins anticipates a still further increase in the soybean acreage the coming year.

Soybeans are now being used extensively to furnish high grade home grown protein supplement to balance the ration for all kinds of livestock. The ground seed may be used quite successfully to replace a part of the oilmeal and tankage in the ration. When the Peking variety is planted with corn for silage, the total yield of silage per acre is increased while the soybean-corn combination for hogging-down has been found very practical.

Soybeans which are now produced on Iowa farms that can not be disposed of for seed are usually fed, but in a short time the surplus can probably be disposed of to a plant at Toledo, Iowa, which is being put into operation to extract oil from the beans. The oilmeal thus produced will be disposed of to the Iowa farmers to feed as a protein supplement.

PLANT HARDY ROSES NOW

Early April is a good time to plant roses, according to E. C. Volz, floriculturist, Iowa State College.

Mr. Volz recommends buying dormant two-year-old plants. Both budded roses and those on their own roots grown from cuttings can be used, but the budded rose will give the best result in most cases, he says. In planting roses, care should be taken to secure varieties which are hardy for the section in which they are to be planted.

A few of the hybrid perpetual roses which are hardy enough for Iowa are the Hugh Dickson, a red variety; the Frau Karl Druschki, a white variety; and the Paul Neyron, a pink variety. Certain other varieties are hardy enough for Iowa winters, but the above three give a range of color and at the same time are a sure bet.

A good hardy variety of the type known as Rugosa or Hybrid Rugosa is the Agnes, a pale yellow rose. There are a few hybrid tea roses which grow in southern Iowa, with a great deal of protection, but even with protection they are not a sure bet in northern Iowa.

True tea roses cannot be grown at all in Iowa and before planting any of the hybrid tea roses, a floriculture specialist should be consulted. Among the climbing roses which are hardy without protection are the Anna Maria, a light pink variety; the Gem of the Prairies, a red variety, and the Rosa Wichuraina, a white variety.

A complete list of varieties recommended for planting in Iowa can be secured by writing to the Horticulture Department, Iowa State College, Ames.

Iowa Men Help Fight Borer

Two of Iowa's extension specialists are on the battle lines in Ohio, where the state and federal governments are waging a war against the European corn borer. These men, Fred D. Butcher, entomologist, and H. H. Sunderlin, agriculturist engineer, have been granted a leave of absence from Iowa State College for six weeks to aid in the borer campaign. Mr. Butcher will have charge of one of the crews, while Mr. Sunderlin will aid in planning the campaign as it relates to the use of machinery.

GIVE CHICKS PLENTY OF ROOM

Many baby chicks in Iowa this year will die or become sickly merely because they were denied enough "breathing" and "living" space, says H. A. Bittenbender, poultry head at Iowa State College. Over-crowding, says Bittenbender, is one of the commonest mistakes poultrymen make.

Experiments at Iowa State College show that the best size brooder house for a flock of 250 chicks is 10 by 12 feet and provided with one warm room and one cool room. Two hundred and fifty chicks can be well cared for under an ordinary size hover in a brooder of this size and the weaker ones will not be crowded out into the cold.

The problem of providing shelter for the "hen raised" chicks is difficult. During the first few weeks the chicks can be kept in almost any kind of a small coop, but as they grow larger, the "cracker box" quarters become too small and it is up to the weaker chicks to roost outside the coop or in the trees. This often results in the fowls taking cold and failing to make satisfactory gains.

A satisfactory method of providing shelter for the young flock during the summer months is to build a small shed which has a roof and a wall on the north side. The shelter is provided with roosts and it is sufficient to provide dry and warm quarters in case of wet weather or cold north winds. Such a shed can be built at a small cost and may be moved from one place to another, making it possible to keep the fowls on fresh ground.

"INSIDE" INFORMATION

Cauliflower should be cooked in uncovered vessel and only until it is tender. This keeps it white and attractive.

Peanuts make good sandwich filling if you put the roast shelled nuts through a coarse meat grinder and then stir in enough cream to make the mixture easy to spread. Be sure to add salt. This filling will not be pasty.

Rolls can be rewarmed satisfactorly if they are brushed over with milk and put in a covered pan to steam through. After the rolls are heated through, take the cover off the pan so the outside will get crisp again.

If you are planning and equipping a kitchen, think first, last, and all the time of the work to be done in it. Don't make the room too big. Make a kitchen oblong so that work centers can be grouped to better advantage.

The Splinters

"Every Splinter Has A Point"

Vol. 1 Thursday, April 7, 1927 No. 51

Published in the Interests of the People of Belmond and Vicinity by the GREENLANDER LUMBER COMPANY.

Pome

We simply love the little birds
That fly upon the breezes,
But the little birds
we love the best
Are the little chick-adeeses.

Conundrum— When two Jewish gentlemen stand in the snow up to their knees, singing The Star Spangled Banner, what time is it? Answer—Winter time!

Will Dempsey—"Where'd you get that cigar? Somebody married?" Geo. Elder—Nope, just paid my grocery bill."

We can give you some fencing facts that will interest you. If you are going to make some fence this summer or fall by all means see us. We handle the American field fencing, you know and this line deserves your acquaintance.

They recently cured a drunkard in New York City by removing a bone that was pressing against the brain. And we've also heard that many others have been cured by the removal of a brass rail that was pressing against the foot.

We heard of a man the other day who said he couldn't eat peaches because the seeds hurt his stomach! Can you beat that?

Don't you admire beautiful floors? Everybody does. Hardwood floors are not only beautiful — they are mighty serviceable.

Ain't nature peculiar? The caterpillar crawls around on his own stomach, but the bed bug ain't so particular.

Perfect Bliss

I wish I was a little rock,
A-settin' on a hill;
A doin' nothin' all day long
But just a-settin' still;
I wouldn't eat, I wouldn't drink,
I wouldn't even wash,
I'd set and set a thousand years
And rest myself, by gosh!

Anon.

TRY THIS HOME TEST ON YOUR SEED CORN

Treat 25 corn seeds with BAYER DUST and plant them in a cigar box. Plant 25 untreated seeds in a similar container. Watch the difference in growth.

Test this seed corn treatment ~in your own kitchen

PROVE to yourself this winter the value of treating your seed corn before planting. Start the home test today. Within a week's time you will be amazed at the difference in growth. You will note, too, the healthier color and more vigorous stand of the treated seed.

The explanation is simple. This new seed treatment protects the seed from disease organisms on the seed and in the soil. Treated seed has merely to grow, while untreated seed is forced to fight the rots and molds which cause poor germination, "down" corn, root and stalk rots—the "troubles" that reduce your corn profits.

Makes Poor Seed Good

This treatment insures germination and sturdy growth never before possible from poor seed. Even selected seed is benefited by the treatment because of the protection it is given against the injurious and costly attacks of soil-infesting diseases.

Tested by U. S. Dept. of Agric.

Extensive tests by the U. S. Department of Agriculture show that the BAYER DUST treatment of nearly disease-free Dent corn gave an increase of 8.5 bushels per acre; of Diplodia infected seed, 15.8 bushels; and of Gibberella infected seed, 28.9 bushels. Phytopathology, January, 1926.

Costs but a Few Cents per Acre

You need no special equipment for this new seed treatment. No tiresome or lengthy procedure is involved. Two bushels of seed can be treated in less than three minutes. And the cost is less than 5c per acre.

Bayer seed treatment comes in two forms: BAYER DUST for Dust treatment and USPULUN for Soak treatment. Most growers prefer the Dust treatment because it is quicker and saves the trouble of drying the seed. Both are equally effective.

Increases Your Profits

BAYER DUST or USPULUN pay their small cost many times over because they:

Permit earlier planting.
Prevent soil decay.
Increase germination.
Prevent seedling blight, root and stalk rot.
Reduce the amount of "down" corn.
Increase the yield.
And bring greater profits.

One pound of either treats six bushels of seed corn

Bayer Dust: 4 oz. 50c; 1 lb. $1.75; 5 lbs. $8.00. Uspulun: 2 oz. 50c; 1 lb. $2.75; 5 lbs. $13.00

If your dealer's stock of BAYER DUST and USPULUN has not yet arrived, send us his name and address. THE BAYER CO., Inc., 117 Hudson Street, New York City.

BAYER DUST OR USPULUN
Dust Treatment Soak Treatment

Schultz Drug Co.
Try the Drug Store First!
Belmond, Iowa

BILL SAYS

"Been reading a lot about the Electric Company's 7 percent Investment so thought I would inquire around about it, and believe me, now that I have the facts I'm convinced that this 7 percent Preferred Stock is the best ever and I'm going to put some of my coin in it because there is no question about it being safe and any Shareholder will tell you about how regular the Dividends are so why take less income with no more safety when a fellow can get even more safety and much more Income. I understand, too, that if I order my shares before the 10th that I will receive Dividends from the 1st, so here goes, folks, and you had better join me while you can get in on these 7 percent Preferred Shares at $100 per share."

Bill is right, so why not join him?

Just ask any Employe how.

Respectfully,

CENTRAL STATES ELECTRIC COMPANY

This modern age likes the mellow mildness of Camels

TRY Camels and you'll know why they win the modern world. Mildness and mellowness. The smoking wish of this exacting age is realized in Camels. Such taste and fragrance as never came before from a cigarette. A mellow mildness that can result only from superb blending of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos.

This age demands the best of everything—and it finds its ideal smoke in Camels. Nowhere else can you find such smoothness, such ever-dependable goodness as here—

"Have a Camel!"

© 1927, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

MESERVEY SECTION

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday School at 9:30.
Morning Worship at 10:30 (Ger.)
Young People's Meeting, 7:30.
Evening Services at 8:00.
No Catechetical classes this week.
The Dorcas Society met last Wednesday evening at the usual hour. Miss Grace Boelman served refreshments. The society had the pleasure of receiving two new members, making the total enrollment to date 24.

Next Sunday preparatory services for Holy Communion. Opportunity will also be given to make confession of faith. Holy Communion will be celebrated Good Friday at 10:00 a. m. The new individual Communion set will be used for the first time. The usual offering at Communion services will be taken up on Easter Sunday and has been designated for "Ministerial Pension Fund."

The Ladies' Aid will not meet this week.

This church extends a warm welcome to all to attend its services.

H. Pannkuk, Pastor.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH

Sunday School, 9:45 a. m. Garfield Raecker, Supt.
Morning Services, 10:45.
Palm Sunday Sermon.
E. L. C. E., 7:00. Subject, "Why Is the Bible the Greatest Book In the World?" Leader, Mrs. H. Fischer.
Evening Services, 7:30.
German Prayer Meeting, Wednesday, 7:30.
Good Friday services at 7:30 p. m.
Easter Sunday services in morning.
Easter program and Missionary Offering Easter evening.
All are invited to these services.

Laurence Sohl.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

Mrs. Ida Lodge, of Milford was a week end visitor at the home of her brother, G. Lauster and family.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Fischer and Rev. H. Raecker attended the funeral of a friend at Waverly last Thursday.

A. D. Brogran, of Whittemore was a business caller here last Thursday.

The combination sale conducted by C. J. Wendel was largely attended last Thursday.

Miss Leona Wilkins and Marjory Bachman returned to their homes at Garner last Friday, after spending a few days with Mrs. H. Wilkins and daughters.

Mrs. H. Proost and daughter Vonna were Mason City passengers Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Bier were calling on friends in Belmond last Thursday.

Members of our local band went to Thornton to rehearse with their band last Tuesday evening.

M. A. Smith and daughter, Esther, F. Schluter, F. C. Sprau and daughters, Miss Inez Obrecht, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Foss, Mrs. Albert Wendel, Miss Irene Guth, H. F. Reif, Mrs. Mel Smith and brother from near Belmond were among the visitors at the county seat during the past week.

Mrs. Ferdinand Lemke, Sr. was under the doctor's care the fore part of the week. Her daughter, Mrs. F. W. Buche of Mason City came Sunday to remain a few days.

F. Schluter was in Mason City between trains, Monday.

C. J. Wendel and Horace Hoebel accompanied the latter's mother to Hampton Saturday afternoon, from which place she left for her home in Tama City after spending several weeks at the C. J. Wendel home.

Louis Foss and Albert Wendel and their wives were in Belmond last Friday evening.

Milton Lewis and family were visiting friends here, Sunday.

The Misses Evelyn and Thelma Thomas and Clara Herndon, of Cedar Falls spent the week end at the Thomas home. They returned Sunday, accompanied by Miss Viola, who had spent a week's vacation at home.

Rev. L. Sohl and Theo. Wendel returned home from Cedar Falls Sunday afternoon, where they had spent the week attending the annual session of the Iowa Conference of the Evangelical church. The Rev. Sohl was stationed to Waverly and the Rev. A. K. Henning, of Sumner Union will be the new pastor at this place.

The Fred Quandt family were numbered among the sick the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Guth are rejoicing over the arrival of a new son, born to them Saturday, April 2nd.

The Cemetery Society will meet at the home of Mrs. August Guth next Tuesday for their annual meeting and election of officers. All members are urgently requested to attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Haferman are the proud parents of a son, born to them Saturday, April 2nd.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Kolb returned home from Pine Island, Minnesota last week on Tuesday, where they had been to attend the funeral of Miss Pearl Mosher, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Mosher.

The box social held at Grimes School No. 7 was well attended considering the inclemency of the weather. A program had been prepared by Miss Lena Pals, the teacher and her pupils which was well rendered. We did not learn the amount of the proceeds.

Mrs. G. E. Thomas was quite ill the latter part of last week as a result of being overcome with gas, while cleaning clothes with gasoline.

Quite a number from here attended the Senior class play at Thornton last Thursday and Friday nights.

Mrs. Bert Lauen and children were Sunday visitors with her sister, Mrs. H. Wilkins.

Miss Ruth Beenen, of Alexander is employed at the H. M. Taulbee home assisting with the housework.

Mrs. H. Sprau and children, of Mason City came Sunday for a short visit at the parental Chas. Halfpop home.

Grandma Loats, of Belmond spent one day last week with her friend, Mrs. B. Bruns.

Mrs. Mel Smith, accompanied by her brother and sister, from near Belmond were motor passengers to Mason City last Wednesday.

Mrs. B. Vierkant, Sr. is at the Lloyd Bishop home at Goodell for a week's visit.

Rev. H. Pannkuk and B. Gruis are attending the annual conference of the Reformed denomination, which is in session at Wellsburg.

Rev. O. G. Poppen and family, of Belmond spent last Thursday evening at the Reformed parsonage.

Mrs. H. Fischer was among those on the sick list the fore part of this week.

COURT HOUSE NOTES

(Continued from page one.)

A. L. Luick, administrator of the estate of L. W. Wendell, vs. Adolph and Anna Dorr is a suit to collect $3526.52 on their joint note.

E. N. Zinn of Goldfield asks judgment against Frank and Hannah Lynch on their promissory note in the sum of $6666.79.

R. E. Harbert et al bring action against R. W. Birdsall, Nels P. Christiansen, H. J. C. Box, S. C. McOllough, Bascom Huddleson, J. F. and J. E. Oler to recover on six separate notes aggregating over $17,000, given in real estate deals in 1916.

B. F. and Etta Hall are defendants in suit brought by Citizens State Bank of Eagle Grove to recover $1666.18 on their note.

Jennie and Lizzie Anderson of Dows ask judgment against Bliss Hall and C. M. Wray on their joint note for $16,669.00.

Johnson Fish Co. seeks to collect $102.64 from Ed Hauck of Clarion on account.—Monitor. account.

News About Iowa People And Events

Drilling for oil is being pressed with vigor in the gas belt in Guthrie county, near Bayard. The Central Oil and Gas company, who are doing the work, have reached a depth of around 1,000 feet. The drill has been passing through a strata of shale. Below this is a strata of Devonian rock which is said to be porous and in which gas or oil should be found if such exist in that locality. The various strata are considerably closer to the surface than the geologists of the state declared they should be. All geological surveys made in that locality indicate that the rock, shale and sandstone, as well as other strata, are deeper than they have actually been found.

* * * *

R. C. Kelley, of Cheyenne, Wyoming, was the victim of a peculiar accident the other day while on a C. B. & Q. passenger train between Murray and Osceola. While walking in the aisleo f the coach while the train was in motion he stepped on a banana peel that a little boy had thrown in the passage way. He slipped and as he did so the train gave a sudden lurch and he was thrown violently across the back of a seat and suffered a fractured spine. He was taken off the train at Osceola and conveyed to a hospital on a stretcher where Dr. Sells, the railway company's surgeon, rendered relief. The outcome of the injury is uncertain.

* * * *

According to W. F. Miller, of Independence, Buchanan county, a car load of condensed buttermilk was shipped over the Illinois Central from that city, headed for Hamburg, Germany. The milk was sold by the H. W. Carmichael condensery to Swift and Company, of Chicago, for their foreign trade. The buttermilk left the New York harbor March 10, on the steamer Thuringia, of the Hamburg-American line, and will reach the German city about March 25. There it will be distributed by the Hamburg branch of Swift and company and sold for feeding purposes to the poultry and hog raisers. The shipment contains 42,000 pounds net weight, or about 86 barrels of the condensed buttermilk and a 50 foot box car, the largest that the railroad could furnish, was needed. It took 164,000 pounds of whole milk to make this carload and paid to the farmers of that community $4200.

* * * *

While a milk condensary at Independence is shipping condensed buttermilk to Germany, an elevator at Postville, Allamakee county, is filling orders for timothy seed from the same country. Five hundred jute sacks, each having a capacity of 200 pounds of timothy seed, were sent to Philadelphia to be loaded on an ocean freighter, billed for Germany. From the same elevator at Postville 400 bags of timothy seed have been shipped to Novia Scotia and 250 bags to Montreal, Canada. The Morrell Packing House at Ottumwa is filling orders for a ship load of hams and bacon for consumption in Europe.

* * * *

Dr. C. F. Osborne, proprietor of the Iowa Brown Swiss Company, of Hampton, sold a six months' old Brown Swiss bull for $3,000, the highest price ever paid for any Brown Swiss individual in the history of thebreed, so far as it has been made possible to trace the sales.

W. H. Gemmill, secretary of the state board of education, announces the following Iowa high schools had been placed on the accredited list for admission of graduates to college without examination: Bloomfield, Buffalo Center, Thomas Jefferson, Council Bluffs; St. Ambrose college, Davenport; Abraham Lincoln, Des Moines; Goldfield, Harlan, Moravia, St. Joseph Academy, Ottumwa; East High, Sioux City and Waverly. The newly accredited schools were voted on at the meeting of the commission on secondary schools of the North Central Association held in Chicago recently.

* * * *

J. W. Brewster, who lives near Iowa Falls, is among the few persons yet living who heard the famous Lincoln-Douglas debate in Illinois before the war. Mr. Brewster is 87 years old and was 19 years old at the time of the historic debate. It is stated that last fall but six people were living who heard Lincoln and Douglas at Freeport. Mr. Brewster was one of the pioneer railroad men of the west and helped build the Chicago & Galena railroad, which later became a part of the Illinois Central system.

* * * *

Pure bred live stock is coming into its own. Down in Taylor county a sale of Shorthorn cattle and Hampshire hogs was held recently on the farm of W. T. Brown, a thrifty breeder of pedigreed animals. The weather and roads were good, and the sale broadcast over four radio stations brought a large crowd numbering over 2000 people coming in better than 1100 cars from all over the state. Free lunch was served to all who desired. Four auctioneers were present and two clerks, and they kept things selling lively. One man from Wyoming took home with him over $1500 worth of the best stuff that sold. The sale, starting at 10:00 o'clock and ending at 5:45 netted Mr. Brown over $11,000.

READ THE ADS

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

Dr. Cora M. Rogge
CHIROPRACTOR
HOURS: 9:00 to 12:00 A. M. 1:30 to 5:00 P. M. Evenings, Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, 6:30 to 8:00.
Other Hours by Appointment
Office Over Belmond Furniture Store
Telephone 86 :: Belmond, Iowa

BETTER HAVE THAT
Spring Suit
Cleaned and Pressed
Men's Suits....$1.50 a Suit
Ladies' Suits $2.00 and Up
Ladies' Coats $1.75 and Up

H. F. REIF
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Undertaking
& Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone--Residence 17: Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

A. M. LARSON, D. D. S.
BELMOND, IOWA
Office Over Robinson Grocery
Telephone 29

DR. R. E. PORTER
BELMOND, IOWA
Chiropractic Health Service
Eight Year's Experience
Office Over Griesy's Store

DR. R. L. NELSON
Osteopathic Physician
General Practice
Office 2nd Floor Candy Kitchen Bldg.
Phone 77 Belmond, Iowa

Harry T. Smith
General
Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork
Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

This coupon and 25c entitle the undersigned to one 35c can of Acme Quality Enamel-Kote, any color, and a special 20c Paint Brush.
Name.....
Address.....
To acquaint you with Acme Quality, we are making a special offer for a short time only.
SPECIAL OFFER
35¢ Value for 25¢
Make your home inviting with COLOR!
Surely there are pieces of furniture in your home that need the brightening touch of the paint brush. Why not get some Acme Quality Enamel-Kote and do the job up right—right now? You can get any color you want. And how easy it is to use Acme Enamel-Kote! Just a few strokes of the brush and there you have a brand new chair! Give your home a personal inspection and note the possibilities for beautifying by the simple means of paint. You've a surprise in store!
ACME QUALITY
Paint and Varnish
It's economical to use Acme Quality Enamel-Kote, the beautiful, enduring finish. For interior woodwork of every kind. See coupon.
C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

The best way to look at the boys Easter problem—is at Patton's

For your problem disappears and purchasing becomes a pleasure.

You won't have to learn to like these new suits—you'll fall in love with every model instantly.

And getting a boy ready for Easter the Patton way is the easiest way—financially.

Due to our determination to beat old records or know why—we ask you at these prices—why not?

Boys Suits from
$12.50 to $25

Boys' Toppers $8.50
Hats—Caps—Shirts

PATTON BROTHERS Co
9 and 11 South Federal Ave.
Where a dollar does its duty
Mason City, Iowa

The Spirit of Fairness

THE greatest asset of any bank is its dependability and if any one quality more than any other assists a bank in establishing a reputation for dependability it is that of "fairness."

That is why this bank has exerted every effort to carry into its daily transaction with patrons a spirit of fairness---fairness to its depositors, fairness to its borrowers, and fairness to itself.

In the same spirit of fairness we should appreciate larger balances in those of our checking accounts that have been carried at a loss.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

Building Material

COAL INTERNATIONAL SUGARED HOG FEED
COW FEED OIL MEAL WHEAT BRAN
COTTON SEED MEAL TANKAGE
Highest Price Paid for Grain

Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

ROWAN WANTS AN ORCHESTER

A meeting for the purpose of organizing a community orchestra will be held next Monday evening, April 11 at the school house. Miss Pruss will be the leader. Anyone playing an instrument are kindly urged to be present.

H. H. Reese, who has been a guest at the home of his brother, F. L. Reese for the past two months, left Saturday for his home at Omaha.

Mrs. Alice Davis of Clarion is a house guest at the home of her friend, Mrs. V. E. Munson.

Mrs. Minnie Thompson has moved into rooms at the Hannah Whitten house.

Dean Fitz and D. K. Stout are putting up their skating rink at Lake Cornelia this week. Glen Liming and Fred Brinkman are assisting.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Hansen and daughter, Berneice, motored to Des Moines, and spent the day Wednesday. Miss Clara Andrews of Coulter assisted Raymond in the store during their absence.

Rev. Bounds, Mrs. W. W. Weld, Mrs. Etta Carr and Miss Angie Baines attended the County Sunday School convention at Woolstock, and report an instructive and inspiring meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Utz and daughter moved last week into the Nels Hanson house recently vacated by the Martin Peterson family.

Miss Anna Rietz returned Tuesday to resume her school work at Simpson college having spent the spring vacation with home folks.

Several rural schools did not open last week Friday as it was impossible for the teachers to get to the schools on account of the heavy snow

Geo. Musson is very low at this writing.

Ralph Whitten of Perry spent the week end at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Whitten.

Elmer A. Reese of Dysart spent Sabbath with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Reese.

Leonard Ryder is visiting at the home of his nephew, Ralph Ryder at Grundy Center this week.

The Alt Hackley family moved last week to the Cris Fowler house in the east part of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Liming are moving this week to Adair, where Mr. Liming will be employed as line man for the telephone company.

Mrs. Fay Mizer and son, of Lincoln, Nebraska left Monday, having paid the former's sister, Mrs. J. H. Bounds a short visit. Mrs. Mizer filled the M. E. pulpit Sabbath evening and gave an interesting address. Mrs. Mizer is an instructor in the public school at Lincoln, also a public worker along the line of young people's Christian activities.

Miss Eleanor Martin, who is a student at Cornell College is spending the spring vacation at home.

The Frank D vis family are moving this week into the W. D. Whitten house recently vacated by the Ray Norris family, who have moved into the Dan Fletcher house.

Miss Bell, a trained nurse who has been caring for Mrs. S. B. Heath returned to her home in Clarion last Friday. Mrs. Heath is somewhat improved in health.

The essays written by the seventh and eighth grades at school on alcohol, and the posters made by the fifth and sixth grades will be read at the school house and judged on Thursday afternoon, April 14 at 2:00 o'clock. Anyone interested in this work is welcome.

Rowan School Notes

The Wright County Schoolmasters club met with Supt. Adamson and Prin. Swanson last Wednesday evening at the school building. A very delicious dinner was served by Miss Ruby and her domestic science class, assisted by Mrs. D. W. Whitten, at 6:30. The discussion on "Objective Tests" was led by Supt. Logan, of Eagle Grove. The idea of having a county track and field meet this spring was discussed and it was decided for the coaches of the various schools to meet in Clarion, Tuesday evening, to complete the plans for the meet.

All of the teachers have signed their contracts for another year with the exception of Miss Berg and Miss Trask. Their places have not been filled to date.

The teachers all attended the Farm Bureau meeting at the home of R. E. Lee Aldrich, Thursday evening. They appreciate the opportunity to get better acquainted with the people of the community.

The Freshman class, assisted by their sponsor, Miss Neely, entertained the entire high school Friday evening. A good program of jokes and games was carried out and very much enjoyed. Refreshments of home made ice cream and cake were served and the party broke up at 11 p. m. (the regular closing time for week end parties), the guests departing declaring the Freshman to be royal entertainers.

School was in session Saturday to make up part of the time lost when the furnace was being repared. The other day will probably be made up in two weeks unless Easter preparations interfere.

The Junior Class play will be given Thursday and Friday nights of this week instead of Friday and Saturday as some of the papers have announced. We are able to assure an enjoyable evening to all who attend.

The Sophomores had charge of the weekly chapel service. They presented the following program on which they received much comment:

Clown Stunt—Ruby Azeltine, Irene Weber
Style Show—
Miss Rowan ------ Laurance Silvey
Styles for 1950 ---- Duane Halbrook
Styles for Little Tots ----------
Carl Emerson, Betty Jean Adamson
Sty[illegible]

---Charles Sellers, Elsie Aldinger
An Eskimo Scene Dramatized—
The Lovers ----------
---Helen Sellers, Clifford Stapley
The Villian ------ Robinette LaGue
The Faithful Dog --- Leona Bowers
Read by Elsie Aldinger.
Stunts by the Clowns—Ruby Azeltine, Irene Weber.

GOODELL CLASS GIVE BANQUET

Miss Grace Luttchweger and her Home Economics class gave a Mother-Daughter banquet at the school house Saturday evening. The room was beautifully decorated with purple and gold, the class colors. At seven o'clock about twenty-five guests were seated to a three-course dinner consisting of fruit cocktail, beef roast, mashed potatoes, brown gravy, apple salad, dressing, rolls, coffee, sherbet and angel food cake. The meal was deliciously prepared by the girls. Mesdames Hamilton and Conklin had charge of the meal during the serving with Frederick Schneider, Cholm Houghton, Dale Conklin and Wayne Wesenberg as waiters.

Miss Natalia Thada went to Garner Tuesday and spent the remainder of the week with her sister, Mrs. Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ness spent last week with relatives in Story county.

The Dan Kadoos family and Mrs. Anton Ahrenkiel went to Belmond Monday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Kadoos' brother, Harm Ruiter. He was a cousin of Mrs. Ahrenkiel's.

Charles Swenson, of Missouri spent a few days here last week on business and calling on old friends. The Swenson family formerly lived here for several years. We are very glad to hear that they are getting along nicely and that Mrs. Swenson is especially well since moving to a different climate.

Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel spent last week at Garner visiting Mrs. Anderson.

Tauge Matson returned Wednesday from Adel where he had spent a few days in interest of getting work. He secured a contract to build sixteen culverts and as uspension bridge.

Hancock County Sunday School Convention was held at Britt Wednesday. Rev. Scott and family and Mrs. A. M. Graeber attended from here. From all reports it was a very successful and interesting meeting.

Lloyd Carpenter, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Carpenter and Mrs. Henry Mennenga autoed to Hampton on Wednesday to spend the day with the former's wife at the hospital.

Alberta Nolte, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nolte was kicked by a cow Tuesday evening. She was knocked unconscious and for some time was thought to be seriously hurt, but at this writing is getting along nicely.

Mrs. Houghton and Mrs. Conlan entertained several ladies at their home Thursday afternoon. A pleasant afternoon was spent and delicious refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lampson and son, of North Dakota are spending a few days with Goodell friends. They were former residents here.

The school ball team had a game scheduled with Britt last Friday to be played on the home field, but the two feet of snow which arrived on Thursday night changed everybody's mind.

Principal George O. Nelson spent the week end with Minnesota relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. George Avery, of Belmond visited Tuesday with Goodell relatives. They recently returned from spending the winter in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Blank and daughter, of Morrison visited Saturday with the former's sister, Mrs. Anton Ahrenkiel. They were enroute from Wisconsin where they had been to attend the funeral of Mrs. Blank's father.

Mrs. J. Christie went to Garner on Saturday to visit over Sunday with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Polly Christie.

Cordi Butterfield and son, of Mason City, former residents, were callers here Wednesdav. Cordi was selling potatoes.

Ray Christie has been on the sick list the past week suffering with a heart attack.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wiles of Ames visited relatives here the latter portion of the week.

Miss Dorothy Allaben returned on Thursday to her work at Moline, Ill.

Prof. C. H. Tompkins, of Garner was a business caller here Wednesday.

Mrs. Will Wenzel and son Clifford of Ledyard visited a few days last week with her sisters, Mrs. Leo Ahrenkiel and Mrs. Nate Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, of Mason City spent Wednesday with Mrs. White and Mayme.

Cal Hughie, of Dows and Gus Okreug shipped four carloads of cattle from here Saturday night.

Mr. E. J. Schneider and son Frederick autoed to Britt Saturday to attend a farm bureau meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Juhal, Mr. and Mrs. Rose, the Scanlan, Willis and Sonmerhom families, of Crystal Lake came Sunday to spend the day at the Will Tanner home, helping Mrs. Tanner to celebrate her birthday. The Tanner's formerly lived at Crystal Lake.

Owen Conwell, Dennis Conlan and Harry Whitehead were business callers at Garner several days last week.

Miss Celia Finn, of Belmond spent Wednesday with her aunt, Eliza Cashman.

Church Notes

The Missionary Society met Saturday afternoon at the church. The Garner Society had been invited to attend but the bad weather and roads prevented them from coming. We ares orry they could not come as a fine program was given and delicious refreshments were served.

The ladies met Wednesday afternoon and gave the church a thoro cleaning from top to bottom.

Don't frget that Easter food sale Saturday, April 16 at 2:00 p. m. Everyone please donate and patronize. You can buy delicious things for your Easter dinner at a reasonable price. All kinds of baked goods, chicken, eggs, home made candy. Sale to be held in building first door west of hotel. Proceeds to be used for church expenses.

ALEXANDER GIRL IS MARRIED

Bert P. Hemmes, of Latimer and Miss Marie Blau of this place were married on Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of the members of the immediate families and a few of their intimate to womanhood here and has a large attended by Miss Marie Pals and Dick Blau, brother of the bride. After the ceremony there was a wedding supper and reception for the guests. Mr. Hemmes is a son of Mrs. Bert Hemmes and is a well known young man in the western part of Franklin county, where he has spent most of his life. He was formerly engaged in farming west of Chapin, and then went to Greeley, Colorado, where he conducted a laundry for four years. At present Mr. Hemmes is engaged as a salesman for the Franklin County Oil Company, of Hampton, driving a gasoline tank wagon. Mrs. Hehmes is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Blau of this place. She has grown towomanhood here and has a large circle of friends in the community. For the past few years Mrs. Hemmes has been employed in Louie Peters' restaurant. She is a young woman of pleasant personality and much ability. Mr. and Mrs. Hemmes will make their home in Latimer, where they will set up housekeeping within the next week. Their friends wish them many years of happy wedded bliss.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Greenfield and son Frederick, and Mr. and Mrs. John Arends, daughter Sylvia and son Robert, were pleasantly entertained at the Harry Gaulke home on Thursday evening at a six o'clock dinner in honor of little Miss Roberta, the occasion being her second birthday anniversary.

Edd Farhman, of Hampton was a business caller in town, Thursday.

John F. Bell was a Belmond caller on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Claas Symens, Mrs. Milko Pals, Mrs. John H. Leebrick, Miss Jessie Bell and Mrs. Lewis Bell and daughters, Alma Gean and Dorothy Ellen were Hampton callers, Tuesday.

Miss Margaret Dunn, who is attending school at Grinnell, is spending her week's vacation with her home folks.

Mrs. Marris, of Des Moines has been visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Rudolph Beenen the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Butler and sons Edwin and John, of Hampton were callers at the A. B. Arends home on Sunday.

W. P. Aldinger and sons Rex and Franz were Hampton callers Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Beenen were visitors at Hampton, Sunday. Mrs. Morris accompanied them as far for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Sandy Pink.

Jerry Beenen was a Meservey caller, Sunday.

Alexander United Church
Lewis N. Moody, Pastor

Palm Sunday services at the usual hours.

Special meetings wil be held on Tuesday and Thursday evening of next week with communion service on Thursday evening.

The Camp Fire Girls will meet at the parsonage on Wednesday afternoon after school.

The Missionary Circle will meet with Miss Jessie Bell on Thursday afternoon, April 14. Program leader, Mrs. Lyle Hall.

Belmond
Opera House

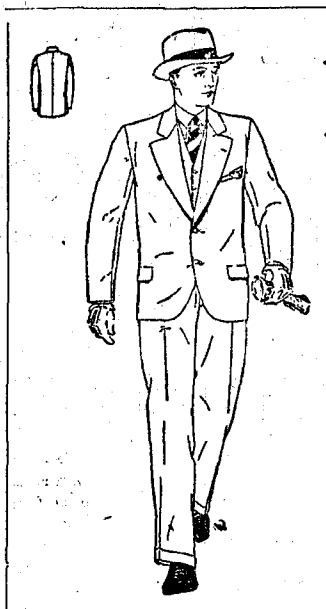
FRIDAY, APRIL 8
Big Old Time Dance!
Music by Local Orchestra
Dance Tickets 75 Cents.
Free Lunch Will Be Served. COME!

SATURDAY, APRIL 9
"Baited Traps"
--A splendid picture, full of action and thrills.
DIZZY DAYS COMEDY
Prices 10c and 20c



Easter News for Men

Harmonize your outfit with these furnishings

Suits

GRAY, WITH A DASH OF UNUSUAL BRIGHTNESS—IN NEW PATTERNS.

TAN, WITH A NOTE OF BRONZE, ADDING CHARACTER.

Two and three-button single-breasted, low pockets, 18 and 20-inch bottom, straight hanging trousers, rounded front and notch lapels.

—Prices Are Low—
$25--$35
Many with 2 Trousers.

Ties

New smart patterns in Neckwear. Diagonal stripes and borders in lighter colors are the style for spring.
75c to $1.50

Shirts

Emery quality in broadcloth of the latest creations. Lighter backgrounds are in demand for spring.
$2.00 to $3.50

Oxfords

Nunn-Bush and Selz Oxfords. New tan shades, soft toe caps, extra quality.
$4.50 to $9.00

Top Coats

NEW TUBULAR TYPE TOP COATS.

Light gray shades, tans, and a sprinkling of other good colors make this a dandy line.

Rough, coarse weaves such as distinct herringbones predominate.

Styles run to the box effect, wide shoulders and gentle drapes.

The finest line to be had. Prices are low.

$22.50 to $30

SMITH SERVICE & SKOVLIN SATISFACTION
Phone 50 Belmond, Iowa

CHEVROLET
for Economical Transportation

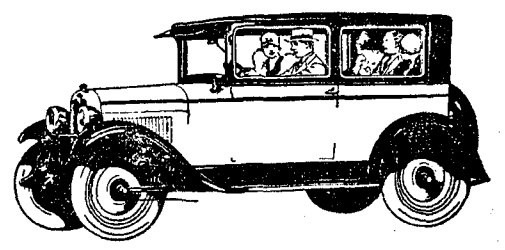
Higher Quality at Lower Prices
because of increasing Volume Production!

January, 1925 —There was introduced a new Chevrolet which scored a tremendous success. Among its many new features were: a new and rugged rear axle, an improved unit power plant, a new single-plate disc-clutch, a much stronger frame, semi-elliptic chrome vanadium steels springs, cowl and dash-lamps, and new Fisher bodies finished in Duco . . . and the price of the Coach was . . . $735 f.o.b. Flint, Mich.

August, 1925 —Chevrolet announced a new measure of value based on many new quality features—such as motor-driven Klaxon horn, improved sheet metal construction in the bodies, corrugated steering wheel with walnut finish, new headlamp rim construction and a more convenient gear-shift lever. Yet, despite all the additions . . . the Coach was reduced to . . . $695 f.o.b. Flint, Mich.

January, 1926 —Another spectacular increase in Chevrolet value—a model offering many mechanical improvements, such as a smoother, quieter motor with three-point suspension, a silent V-belt generator drive, new oil pump, more efficient cooling, an air cleaner, larger brakes, etc. Notwithstanding these improvements . . . the Coach was reduced to . . . $645 f.o.b. Flint, Mich.

and now—



The Most Beautiful Coach In Chevrolet History!

Climaxing all of Chevrolet's previous value triumphs, the Chevrolet Coach of today is acclaimed as the outstanding closed car value of all time. Beautiful new Fisher bodies—paneled and beaded, rakishly low and finished in new colors of genuine Duco . . . full-crown, one-piece fenders . . . bullet-type headlamps . . . AC oil filter and AC air cleaner . . . finer performance, greater riding comfort and remarkable steering ease! A car so marvelously beautiful that you must see it to appreciate it—Yet the price has been reduced to . . . $595 f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

The Touring or Roadster $525
The Coupe $625
The 4-Door Sedan $695
The Sport Cabriolet $715
The Landau $745
½ Ton Truck (Chassis only) $395
1 Ton Truck (Chassis only) $495
All Prices f.o.b. Flint, Michigan

Balloon tires standard equipment on all models.

In addition to these low prices Chevrolet's delivered prices include the lowest handling and financing charges available.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY
Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY
Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

JOINT MEETING

Eagle Grove, Iowa, March 22, 1927

The Boards of Supervisors of Humboldt and Wright Counties, met in joint session on above date.

Members present from Humboldt County: Fred Bradburn, Wm. E. Kirchoff, O. A. Opheim and W. H. Strachan.

Members present from Wright County: E. E. Kitley, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder, J. D. Baker and James Mehl.

The Boards organized by electing Fred Bradburn as chairman and James Mehl as secretary of the joint meeting.

Discussion about roads between Thor and Eagle Grove occupied the time. There being no agreement reached it was moved and seconded that meeting be adjourned to meet at Goldfield, Iowa, the 7th day of April, at 1:30 o'clock p. m.

Fred Bradburn, Chairman
James Mehl, Secretary.

Clarion, Iowa, March 14, 1927

The Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, met at the court house in Clarion, Iowa, on March 14, 1927, as per adjournment.

Members present: E. E. Kitley, Chairman, and Supervisors Mehl, Peterson, Schroeder and Baker, with Deputy County Auditor in attendance.

Raymond Zack, District Engineer, being present, road matters in general were taken up, discussed and planned at length for year 1927, which occupied nearly the whole day.

The following was then presented to the board:

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors,
Wright County, Iowa.

Gentlemen:

Will you kindly accept my resignation to take effect thirty days from date.

March 14, 1927. (Signed) J. K. Hilton

On motion the resignation was accepted.

A petition was presented to the board requesting the appointment of Herbert L. Sergeant as Justice of the Peace for Blaine Township.

His bond for said office being on file, on motion he was appointed to said office and his bond was approved.

Board then adjourned to March 30, 1927.

E. E. Kitley, Chairman.
E. M. Callender,
Deputy County Auditor

Clarion, Iowa, March 30, 1927

The Board of Supervisors of Wright County, Iowa, met at the Court House in Clarion, Iowa, on March 30, 1927, as per adjournment.

Members present: E. E. Kitley, Chairman, and Supervisors James Mehl, J. C. Peterson, L. W. Schroeder and J. D. Baker with Deputy County Auditor in attendance.

At ten o'clock a. m., the time having arrived as fixed in notice published by County Auditor for the letting of bridges and culverts, the board proceeded with said letting.

Bids were received from Hildebrand & Kragh, E. F. Rochet, R. F. Hirt, Iowa Bridge Company, C. A. Halvik and Swanson Construction Company.

The bid of Hildebrand & Kragh, of Belmond, for I Beam bridges being considered the lowest and best, on motion the contract was awarded to them.

The bid of R. F. Hirt, of Woolstock, for culverts being considered the lowest and best, on motion the contract was awarded to him.

It was moved and seconded and carried that the County Auditor be authorized to hold a letting on Primary Road No. 15 from Main Street Belmond to Primary Road No. 10, letting to be at 1:30 P. M. on April 19th for grading and culverts.

At two o'clock P. M., the time having arrived as fixed in notice published by County Auditor for letting the grading on the county road, Items 1, 2 and 3, as advertised, the board proceeded with said letting.

Bids were received from W. W. Burman, J. W. Ault, H. J. Larson and Fox Construction Company.

The bid of Fox Construction Company, of Forest City, Iowa, being considered the lowest and best, on motion the contract was awarded to them.

The remainder of the day was used in discussion of county matters in general.

Board then adjourned to April 4, 1927.

E. E. Kitley, Chairman.
E. M. Callender,
Deputy County Auditor

Local News

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Hedges are the parents of a baby boy, born Saturday, April 2.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Sands, of St. Paul came Monday for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Win Sands and other relatives.

The Cemetery Aid Society will meet April 8th at the E. F. Bailey home. Hostesses will be Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. J. E. Chapman, Mrs. C. L. Groh, Mrs. Frank Case and Mrs. T. N. Davenport.

Mrs. George Stearnes, of Chicago arrived last week for an extended visit with her daughter, Mrs. Vern Trees.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Saatoff, of Hampton were Sunday guests of Mrs. Saatoff's parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. Gartin.

Mrs. W. H. Wolle and daughter, Miss Bernetas, left Saturday to visit Wm. Wolle and family and Carl Wolle and family at Sioux City.

Miss Marvyl Robinson, who teaches school at Malcolm, is spending the week's vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Robinson.

Mr. Patrick, father of Mrs. Marvin Christie, underwent an operation at the Rochester hospital, Monday, for cancer on the nose.

We make your old hats and caps look like new.—New Belmond Tailor Shop. 3

IOWA VALLEY NURSERY

BELMOND, - IOWA

I have a good assortment of the following to offer for Spring trade:

OUR SPECIALS—EVERGREENS and STRAWBERRY PLANTS

And I have good stock of the following:

FRUIT TREES—Apple, Plum, and Cherry.
SMALL FRUIT—Raspberry, Currants, Gooseberry, Grapes, Pieplant, Asparagus, Etc.
SHRUBS—Spirea v. h. (Bridal Wreath), Hydranga, Snow Berry, Jap, Barberry, Rus Prevet, Roses, Etc.

We will start packing and shipping about April 11th, and will be ready to wait on you any time up to May 1st. DRIVE TO THE NURSERY.

LOCATION OF NURSERY—Three blocks east of the C. R. I. & P. Railroad Depot and one block south on east side of the road.

Respectfully,

JOHN F. CANTWELL

Kinseth's Store News

Sure looks like spring this week, and you want to be thinking about that garden of yours. We have the seeds to make you the finest garden you ever had, all kinds of them, and when you get ready to plant just drop in and we'll make up any assortment you want.

Onion sets, too.

This week we have a mighty good buy in Flour. 98 pound sacks that are going for only $3.89 the sack. If you need flour, or are going to need some in the near future, don't overlook this buy.

A new broom sweeps clean, it is said, and we have some dandies for 42 cents.

For those baby chicks just hatching out we have chick feed of all kinds.

Oranges still only 29c a dozen.

Just tell Central "19" or "6" when you want food and service. That's the numbers of The Store on the Corner.

April Meals

Are difficult to plan, but if you will visit our store you will find a variety of tasty and staple groceries that will make your planning easier. Besides that, you'll find you can save money by taking advantage of our new cash prices. As a sample we are offering this week:

REGULAR PRICES!

CORN 10c
PEAS .....2 for 25c
PLUMS, No. 2 can 20c
TOMATOES .....10c and 20c
OPAL COFFEE in glass jar .50c
HOMINY 10c
PORK and BEANS 10c

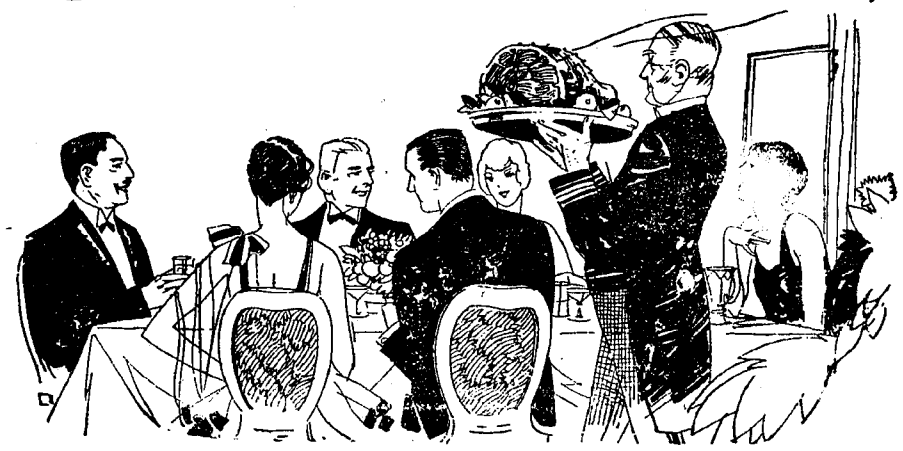
Let Loats' Save You Money

A. W. LOAT'S

BELMOND Iowa
PHONE, 38

SAY IT IN FIVE WORDS

No more—No less



$300.00 CASH PRIZES

JOIN the fun! Carry off a big cash prize! Tell us in just five words why Decker's Iowana Brand of Ham and Bacon is given first place at your table. Perhaps the sweet, mild flavor of these products won you instantly; perhaps their melting tenderness or their finely grained texture.

Beginning with the Decker selection of Iowa's finest corn-fed porkers, there are endless reasons for the superiority of Iowana Ham and Bacon. 200 years ago the Deckers were already mastering the art of curing and smoking ham and bacon. Today wherever Decker's "made-in-Iowa" Products are sold, they are doing their home-state proud.

Be One of the 75 Winners!

It costs nothing to enter this Decker Contest; and a few minutes' effort may bring you $100 in cash. Here are the prizes:

1st Prize—$100.00
2nd Prize—$50.00
3rd Prize—$30.00
4th and 5th Prizes—$10.00 each
6th to 25th Prizes—$5.00 each
26th to 75th Prizes—1 lb. Carton Iowana Bacon

Contest Rules:

1—Everyone is eligible for entry in this Contest excepting Decker employees.

2—In exactly 5 words—no more, no less—give your reason for preferring Decker's Iowana Ham and Bacon. Your reason may cover Iowana Ham exclusively, Iowana Bacon exclusively, or both products taken together. Examples:
Just bursting with "hammy" flavor.
Sweet and tender every time.
Lean and fat perfectly balanced.

3—All members of a family may join this Contest, but each entrant may submit only one answer. Sign your name and address clearly. Also give the name and address of your meat dealer.

4—Three prominent citizens in no way connected with Jacob E. Decker & Sons, will act as judges. Their decision will be final.

5—In case of a tie decision, duplicate prizes will be given.

6—Answers must not be postmarked later than April 20.

7—We reserve the right to use all answers submitted, for such publicity purposes as we see fit.

Address: Contest Manager
JACOB E. DECKER & SONS
MASON CITY, IOWA

why do you prefer

DECKER'S IOWANA
HAM AND BACON

CHAPTER VI.—Claude reveals to Ned a romance of his early life. He had married, while at college, and under peculiar circumstances, and his wife left him the day after the ceremony. He is convinced "Mrs. Johnston" is his wife, "Polly," and naturally wants to know, Who is Mary?

CHAPTER VII.—Mrs. Johnston tells Mary they are practically penniless, through a trustee's defalcation. She plans an appeal to Loren Rangeley, her banker, and Mary endeavors to dissuade her. While with Ned, Mary falls into a pool. Ned gets her out, unhurt, but the incident reveals to him the real nature of his feelings toward the girl.

"Yes, but who is she? That's what I want to get at," Claude said. His tone was that of a man hard-driven, holding on to his patience by sheer will power. "Is she an adopted daughter? Who was her father, and how old is she? Why do you think I told you what I did the other night, if it wasn't that I wanted to know who the girl is?"

Ned crossed to him, and put his hand on his shoulder.

"I give you my word, Claude Dabbs, I didn't realize it. I'm not more innocent nor more stupid than the average, but I slept through the last part of your story and my mind has been on other things. I didn't get you at all. Do you mean to say you—"

"Yes," and this time Claude's control snapped. "I want to know whether she's mine or not."

He wrenched himself away from Ned's hand. "I don't know that it will make a blamed bit of difference to anyone but me, but I'd like to know."

The morning came and went without news from the White house. By this time Ned was anxious. He had promised Claude to wait for him until he returned from a trip to the express office.

Immediately on his return Ned followed Claude into the private office.

"Met Ettie Pulsifer on the wood road this morning going to the White house. She's got orders to pack the trunks, set the house in order, and lock up. The key and the trunks are to be sent to New York. Says it was Mrs. Johnston who telephoned. Says the girl said they were only going up for the day, but the mother never opened her mouth. What do you think of it?"

"Looks to me, C. M., as though Mrs. Johnston wanted to keep Miss Johnston from you," and added mentally, but did not say it, "or me."

"That's what I doped out."

"Did you find out from Mrs. Pulsifer where the trunks were to go?"

"Sure." He took out a small leather notebook and opened it: "Hotel Plaza, New York."

"By G—d, I believe you're right and it is Polly, up to her old tricks. Never faces anything, but always runs away. Well, this time two can play that game. This time I'm going after her."

Ned, who already had made up his mind to follow Mary, cost what it

"Good-by, Mr. Carter."

At the other end of the line the receiver was hung up.

Claude came in and found Ned with his hand still on the telephone receiver, his face a study in perplexity.

"What's up?"

"They're going abroad, and soon. We've got to start things, right now. How soon can you get ready?"

"Ned!" Claude gasped. "Abroad! I hadn't really planned anything like that! Why, by Jiminy, Ned, I've never traveled farther than New York."

"Time you did. Look here, Claude Dabbs, are you going to sit here in Peace Valley and let everything slide as you did before, or are you going to find out the truth—about Mary?"

"If that girl's mine, I mean to know it."

This was so exactly Ned's state of mind that he found himself glaring at C. M., as at a rival, and with difficulty refrained from retorting, "So do I." Fortunately his brain told him that this was no time to tell Mary's possible father, if indeed that was Claude's proud position, his honorable intentions.

"Then you'd better come out into the world—with me, and pursue Mrs. Polly Johnston."

"I'm coming." Claude told him. "You go to New York tomorrow, Ned, and if we can't get the same steamer, we'll take the next. I'll fix things here while you find out Polly's plans. I'll join you in New York."

"I'll go tonight."

"All right, and I'll join you tomorrow, and—and the best on the ship, Ned. You're my guest."

"I have money."

"Yeh, but you're coming with me, and we're going to need plenty, especially if you're—" Claude stopped abruptly and finished rather lamely, "traveling with me."

Ned wondered what was on his mind. He was amazed at this Claude Dabbs.

Claude gave him a clue almost immediately. "Are you 'Carter' or 'Rangely' this trip?"

Ned slid to his feet and faced him, but Claude stopped him before he could speak.

"You see, Ned, Miss Seiden telephoned the station a day or so ago and sent a telegram to your father. It said that his son was living here under the name of 'Carter.' Guess the girl didn't realize she was on a party wire and what that means in the country."

Ned stopped him. "You mean to say you knew?"

"Sure, I've known ever since you met the girl. She volunteered the information."

"And you never asked me a single question?"

"Why should I? Ain't we friends? I knew you'd tell me when you were rown-up daughter. Polly decided the me had come for a frank confession.

While Mary brushed her hair, Polly nnounced that she meant to go to Venice and look about for a place to pend several months, cheaply and omfortably.

Mary said it sounded interesting, ut did not commit herself further. She was tired and hurt by these half-confidences.

Frankness was impossible, until her mother was frank with her. She would not degrade her mother's intelligence, or her own, by playing the hypocrite. Mary said she was sleepy and went to bed. But not to sleep.

Mrs. Johnston stayed in her own room, the door slightly open between them. She disrobed and stood in her dressing gown before the long mirror a wonderful color study in a soft clinging chiffon robe of blue, with her red hair flaming against white shoulders. Polly did not take her usual nightly delight in the spectacle. She braided her hair with no eyes for the vision in the mirror.

"Got to do it, Polly. Come," she said to herself and put down the comb. She went to the door and softly opened it.

"Mary, want to sleep?"

Mary shook her head, turned on the reading light, threw a rose-colored dressing gown over her shoulders and patted the bed beside her. She recognized from her mother's face that the time had come.

"I'd like immensely to have you come and talk yourself out to me. It's been—quite a while," she announced with a sly look up at her mother.

Mrs. Johnston sighed. There was no doubt she was in for it. She sat down, looked at Mary, shut her eyes and took the plunge.

"Mary, I'd like to talk about your father."

Mary sat up. Of all the unlikely things. Talk about her father! Bluebeard's door was about to be opened. From her earliest youth she could remember her mother saying: "Mustn't ask mother questions about father, Mary. It only makes Mumsy unhappy and miserable." What could it mean?

Mrs. Johnston settled herself back on Mary's bed.

"How much do you know about me, Mary?"

"Only that you're the nicest mother ever invented," Mary told her, honestly. "The best looking and the best friend a girl ever had."

Mrs. Johnston leaned over impulsively and kissed the girl.

"I only hope you'll think exactly the same when I get through."

"Hurry up, Mother, and tell. You sound like a 'best seller.'"

"I have known some less interesting plots. Well, we'll begin with the fact that I was born of poor people, in Limekilns, N. J. My mother and father both died when I was a little thing, about twelve, and a kind woman brought me up. She took me to New Brunswick, and sent me to school. I helped about the house after school hours. She kept a boarding house. I had only one relative in the whole world, my Uncle Michael, my mother's brother, and he was as crabbed an old bachelor as ever drew breath. He was supposed to be in Pennsylvania somewhere, working in the iron mines, when my people died. But nobody could find him, so Mrs. Bradley took me in.

"Mrs. Bradley died, and her sister came and took the house and ran it as a students' boarding house. I was inherited with the house, and kept right on working there. Mrs. Thomas, the sister, took no interest whatever in me. All she cared about was keeping the house clean and getting the work done. She didn't keep enough servants to do that comfortably, so I had to work from morning to night. It was ghastly."

She paused, looked at Mary shyly and began to describe the men at the boarding house. Mary listened, fascinated. To think that her mother was capable of keeping this odd past to herself all these years. It was most romantic. She waited eagerly for the first mention of her father. Her mother hadn't mentioned any Johnston yet, most of her talk was about some man named Dabbs. Her mind wandered off, thinking about the name and the man it suggested to her.

"It must be painful to have a name like that."

"Do you think so?" asked her mother, a little uncertainly. "Well, anyway, this young man lived in the house, but he never looked at me—"

"Mother!" scoffed Mary. "A lovely red-headed girl like you! I don't believe it."

"But you must, darling. There's a lot of difference between red-headed Mrs. Johnston, with lots of money and pretty clothes to set off her locks and hair, and a big, overworked, red-headed chambermaid in a boarding house.

"I hated nearly all men. I had a mind and hopes above my station. I was paid so little that I could only save money slowly. I wanted to get enough to nerve myself to leave that house. My ambition at that time was to be a school teacher."

She smiled at the girl and Mary smiled back.

"Mother, how brave you were. My heart just aches to think of you, with all your brilliant ideas, tied down that way."

"Bless you, Baby!" her mother exclaimed. "My lost uncle turned up just about then, and found me out. He was a terrible creature; six feet tall, very dry and brittle and had a bad cough, and a vile temper. What was left of his carroty hair had turned a yellow-gray. The poor thing hadn't long to live.

"He had worked too hard, and lived too roughly, to know how to take care of himself. He had plenty of money, I discovered, and while he knew how to take care of it, he didn't know how to spend it. He didn't want to leave it to any one, especially to a girl. But I was all he had—poor soul." For a moment, Mary's mother caressed the toe of her slipper in silence.

"But Mother, please," urged Mary, "how can I wait until you get to me?"

Her mother came back from some long unlit cavern of her mind.

"Of course," she admitted, "that would naturally interest you most. Though Uncle found me and told me of his money, he swore me to secrecy as far as Mrs. Thomas' boarding house was concerned. He was like a lot of unmarried people, tremendously keen about marrying off the rest of the world. Mrs. Thomas had had a bad first and a wretched second husband, and hated men even worse than I did. She assured Uncle that I was a good girl and kept myself to myself and was perfectly safe.

"Uncle went away without committing himself in any way, but two days later a letter came, saying I was to come to a certain address to see him. I went. It was a private sanitarium, and Uncle was very ill indeed.

"He had his lawyer with him, and then and there I was ordered to get married. Uncle wanted to know that his money was going to some properly married woman with a man to look after her. I think some woman had treated him badly when he was young and poor. He wanted me to get married before any one knew I had any chance of getting money. He wanted me tied up to a hard-working lad who would expect to work for me, and would start honest, as he said, and have a family at once, and as large a family as possible.

"I was shocked and angry, furiously angry. But oh, how I wanted that money! There it was, dangling in front of me, a chance to learn all the things I longed to know, a chance to travel, to have pretty clothes, all the things I'd sworn to have. My dearest day dreams could be realities now, but would be lost to me unless I had a man to hang them on. I, who hated men, who hadn't wanted, and never had had a young man."

"Oh Mother, what did you do?"

"I didn't know what to do. I came home simply beside myself. I couldn't confide in the cook or Mrs. Thomas. I knew what would happen. They would laugh at me—and despise me. It's odd, isn't it? It's always the women who've made the worst matrimonial blunders who laugh the hardest.

"I found Mrs. Thomas in a fine rage. I'd forgotten to do the third floor before I went out. That was the floor young De Harms, Woods and Dabbs occupied. I went up there as quickly as I could get my things off and began slapping things together. Young Dabbs' room I left to the last, because—well, because he was a decent young fellow and wasn't so fault-finding as the others."

"I thought you hated all men," commented Mary, slyly.

Her mother ignored her. "I went to his room. There he was, sitting all huddled up by the window. I asked him if he minded my doing up the room while he was there, and he said he didn't. He had a telegram clutched in his hand. I could see that he was troubled. By and by I couldn't stand it any longer. I forgot my own troubles. I'd never been so sorry for anyone in my life. I went up to him, and quite forgetting I was a servant, said:

"Mr. Dabbs — Claude — what's wrong?"

"Claude!" Mary exclaimed. "Claude Dabbs? What a funny name! Why, it's the same as—"

Her mother stopped her with a quick: "It was funnier than that. I discovered afterward it was Claude Melnotte Dabbs."

Mary's soft laugh rang out, and then she checked it.

"Oh Mother, I'm sorry. I'm so interested. Hurry and tell."

Her daughter's mirth was not the pleasantest sound in Mrs. Johnston's ears just then. "I discovered that this young man, with the funny name, was in great trouble. His father was dying and the boy had no money to go home with, and his mother was quite too poor to send him any."

"Oh, poor thing Of course you loaned him your savings."

"I didn't. I told him my troubles, and offered him five hundred dollars—if he would marry me."

"Mother! You didn't!"

"Sorry dear, but I can't stop to make this romantic. I'm telling you the plain, unvarnished truth. I thought his troubles and mine showed me a way out. I said if he would marry me and show himself, to my uncle, I would give him five hundred dollars. He was to promise to go away and never try to see me again. He was to leave me to go my way alone, while he went his."

"But Mother! What a cold-blooded thing to do!"

"Wasn't it?" agreed Mrs. Johnston, much embarrassed. "But you see it didn't seem like that to me, Mary. Please remember that he was only my door of escape and it was absolutely a business proposition."

"Oh Mother!"

"I can't help it, Mary. That's what I offered him, and after the first moment of astonishment, and when he was convinced that I was not fooling him and would actually have the money—I had two hundred and fifty dollars of my own savings to show him—he agreed."

"Oh dear," groaned Mary, "then he was just as bad!"

"I don't know." Mrs. Johnston said thoughtfully. "I've often wondered. You see, his father was dying."

"That's so, I'd forgotten."

Mrs. Johnston looked as though she was about to say something in her own defense, thought better of it, and went on, doggedly: "Uncle wasn't told anything about the agreement. Both my uncle and his lawyer were favorably impressed with Claude.

"Uncle insisted that we have the ceremony performed at once, and that suited both of us. Claude looked sick with anxiety, and was eager to get it over and start home. We were married before a justice of the peace, who knew neither of us. Right after the ceremony Claude went home with half of the five hundred in his pocket. The other half was to be his when he signed the papers agreeing to leave me alone, and not to block any petition I might make for divorce, on the grounds of desertion, later. The lawyer had to have time to draw the documents up."

"Mother, I simply can't recognize you as the calculating girl who married that way!"

"You'll have to, Mary. I did it. Just in time, too, for my uncle died that night. I was free and the money was mine. I left the boarding house and went to a quiet little hotel. I never told the people at the boarding house anything about the money, or the marriage.

"The lawyer was kind. He made arrangements for me to go to France and live with some friends of his sister who would finish my education. I was supposed to be a young widow."

"I see. Then you went over to France, where you met my father. But how did you get rid of that poor young man?"

Her mother looked at her, so terribly embarrassed that for a moment Mary's heart stood still.

"Mary, I—I didn't get rid of him, at once. He came back. I—he—. But I went to France just the same, and—you came, and I never told him. I've never gotten rid of him. Mary, can you forgive me?"

"Forgive you!" Mary leaned forward and clutched her mother tightly. "I haven't anything to forgive. You've always been the best mother in the world."

They clung together for a moment, Mrs. Johnston glad of the excuse to hide her face. Then Mary's voice came to her, slightly muffled by the mass of her own dark hair which had fallen over her mother's ear. "Didn't he know about me, Mother, ever?"

"No."

"Couldn't he guess? I'll have to hate him, you know, if he guessed and didn't follow you."

Polly felt that justice demanded that she lay no more than his due share of blame on the shoulders of Mary's father. "He didn't know I was going," she said, limply. "I ran away from him."

Mary released her mother with a little amazed gasp.

"Poor, poor, Father!"

"Poor Father!" echoed Mrs. Johnston indignantly. "Little he cared for anything but just getting hold of me and my money and dragging me out to his miserable grocery store in Peace Valley."

Mary sat upright, with astonished eyes, gazing at this extraordinary parent of hers. "But Mother! You said Peace Valley. You're dreaming!"

"It's only too real!"

"Then it was our Mr. Dabbs, and am I—I am really Mary Johnston Dabbs, the grocer's daughter?"

"He need never know!"

"He's got to know!" Mary declared.

Her mother looked at her determinedly. "I've the right to say whether or not he is to know. I owe him nothing," and in her indignant desire to clear herself in her daughter's eyes, she added a few particulars of the story Claude had told Ned. But from her own angle. She stopped suddenly.

Mary was looking at her with a queer expression, not shocked, but neither was it sympathetic. Mrs. Johnston stumbled on and reached the locked door episode. She would have given worlds never to have begun, but once begun the story must be told, and the facts were the same, though from a quite different angle. She thought it would strengthen her case with her daughter to know that Claude had gone back on his sworn word.

Mary leaned forward with upraised finger and placed it gently across her mother's lips. "I always doubted those wife-in-name-only stories," she said. "Don't try to fool yourself or me. You liked Claude Dabbs more than a little. You singled him out of the crowd in that boarding house. Mother, you were romantic about him even then."

"I was not!" Mrs. Johnston indignantly defended herself.

"Stuff and nonsense!" retorted Mary, rising to the defense of her absent father. "If you hadn't liked him a lot, you would have telephoned and had him put out."

What can a woman say to a daughter like that? Mrs. Johnston said nothing, just sat back and—blushed.

"I'm glad you can blush," Mary went on. "Nice tale to tell a girl who thought she was a poor half-orphan, while all the time she had a perfectly good father keeping a grocery store." Ned Carter's uncle's store, she added to herself. And this thought brought a new joy. Now her mother could not make such a frightful fuss about the grocer's boy.

"Was it because you discovered who the grocer's clerk's uncle was, that you left Clover Hollow?"

CHAPTER IX

Not for long now could Polly count on blind obedience. It was not in the nature of things, nor the nature of a mind, she should not be in a position to know that financially she was quite secure.

He agreed with her that it would be better to go abroad with the girl. It is to be noted that even with this lead, and the fact that Mrs. Johnston had been staying in the town Dorothy Selden had wired from, he asked no questions concerning his son. He could and did, by the mere summoning of a private secretary, secure for Mrs. Johnston accommodation on a steamer.

"When do you wish to sail?" Rangeley asked.

"Saturday," said Mrs. Johnston coolly. Somehow she did not like his smiling scrutiny any better this time than she had the last. It would be better to escape before he brought the battery of his elderly charms to bear upon her. In her present financial condition it might be difficult to hold him off successfully. Flight, now, might be as useful in her case as in Mary's.

Mr. Rangeley was mildly surprised at this sudden action, but on the whole pleased. He meant to go abroad this summer himself. Nothing like promptness in action. Mary's suitor must be indeed objectionable to cause Mrs. Johnston to take such drastic measures.

Mrs. Johnston left, with the money and the steamer reservations. At the last moment Mr. Rangeley told her that business might compel him to cross over, possibly within a few days, but Polly Johnston refused to borrow trouble. She took a cab back to the Plaza to break the news to Mary.

Mary listened without speaking, and with wide, homesick eyes. It was incredible! What was there to hold Mary in this country?

Mrs. Johnston had invented the story about the suitor to suit her own purposes, without really visualizing Ned in the background to give her fib color. Had she unconsciously told the truth?

It could not be possible that her wonderful Mary had any real feeling about the grocer's clerk. If she had, then thank the Lord they were going! But she would let Mary infer that it was to escape Loren Rangeley. His name once mentioned, Mary made no protest.

It was only when they were dressed for dinner, and their guests had been announced, that Polly ventured to tell the girl the sailing date was Saturday.

Mary said nothing, but under dark brows her blue eyes looked the question that her mother knew must sooner or later be answered.

(Continued next week.)

LOCALS

Mrs. H. J. Williams and sister Miss Keogh returned from their trip to Oskaloosa, Saturday.

Mrs Pennel will celebrate her 67th birthday next Sunday, April 10

Mr. and Mrs. Preston Tyrrell entertained the Hi-Lo bridge club last Thursday evening to a bridge dinner at their home south of town.

Rehearsals for the "Rose Maiden" were started last Sunday afternoon and it promises to be a lovely production.

"Dad" Hill, for many years night clerk at the Case Hotel here, died a week ago Friday at the home of his daughter at Nora Springs.

Mrs. C. Wilson, who has been staying with her daughter, Mrs. Holden Nelson, left Sunday for Michigan where she will visit her daughters at Ann Arbor and Wayne this summer

W. H. Wolle is limping around by the aid of a cane following a fall last week from a stepladder which fractured a rib or two.

Folks who like to try for prizes have an opportunity to win part of $300 being given away by Decker & Sons of Mason City in a contest for a slogan. Read their ad on page 6 for the details.

Let the Farmers Shipping Association ship your livestock. Notify M. F. Christie.

FOR EASTER—Now is the time to have your spring clothes cleaned at the Belmond Tailor Shop. 203

CHIX—Rich in quality, low in cost. Every chick a purebred from healthy, vigorous bred-to-lay flocks. Order today.—The Airyhill Hatchery, Fred Pals, Prop., Meservey, Iowa. 20tf

NOTICE

BILL, State Certificate of soundness No. 6176, Grade Stallion, Color Black, Markings Star, little white on right hind foot, will make the season in and around Norway and Belmond townships. Terms: $12.00 for standing colt. Full amount of the service fee to become due on the sale or removal of mare. Due diligence will be exercised, but we will not be responsible should accident occur.

203* J. L. TENDALL, Owner.

NOTICE TO MERCHANTS

All purchases of supplies of any kind for Eimbrink Post No. 35, American Legion, must be accompanied by requisition properly filled stating kind of supplies and amount charged, and signed by person giving order and by an officer of the Post, this original requisition to be retained by seller and by him attached to statement of account when presented for payment.

Eimbrink Post No. 35,
American Legion.

Louis Moe and Oscar Nelson, accompanied by Bruce Waddington motored to Humboldt, Tuesday, to bid on a road job.

Mrs. J. T. Snyder went to Rockwell City, Tuesday, to see her mother who is very ill.

Clarence Scott returned the first of the week from his visit at Huron, South Dakota.

Miss Marjorie Williams, who is teaching in Montecello, spent the past week end at her home here.

Mrs. Clyde Jennings was called to Mt. Vernon, South Dakota, last week by the serious illness of her father.

Celestia Hadley, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Hadley, is suffering from an attack of the measles this week.

Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Whipple are the parents of a baby girl, Ruth Ann born March 28.

Miss Tena Watermiller was visiting cousins at Ackley last week.

Mrs. Wolle and daughter, Bernitas drove to Sioux City last Saturday to visit Carl and Will Wolle.

Miss Grace Reed, of Newall spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Reed.

Miss Alice Davis, of Clarion has been visiting at the W. J. Morse and Mrs. R. C. Morse homes the past week.

J. H. Schuntz, the Piano Tuner, from Mason City, is in Belmond now. Leave orders at Hotel Case. 1*

A WARNING!

Boys who break into our mill, and steal, and throw stones through, and break window lights, will be prosecuted. The mill is watched.

T. S. Wallace & Co.

NOTICE!

A phone has been installed at the Sinclair Service station conducted by E. L. Kinseth. Phone your needs in Sinclair Gasoline and Opaline Motor Oils to No. 7 or 106, and you will receive prompt service. 212

NOTICE!

BOLIVER 1000, Registered Belgian Stallion, will make the season in and around Belmond. He is a red roan; star, right hind foot white to postern. Good bone and plenty of action—a 2300 pound horse. A wonderful individual. His sire—Bongo 5491 (58926) by Carnaval (26232) out of Mie de Heers (63405). His Dam—Farceuse de Masnuy 1379 by Conquerant de Boulant (23610) out of Blonde de Masnuy (30937). He is a prominent prize winner at leading shows.

Terms: $15 to insure colt to stand and suck. Full amount of the service fee to become due on the sale or removal of mare. Due diligence will be exercised, but we will not be responsible should accident occur. R .A. THAYER, Owner. Telephone 3710, Belmond, Iowa. 212*

BELMOND MARKETS
(Subject to change.)

Hens	19c
Springs	19c
Roosters	10c
Stags	15c
Ducks	15c
Geese	12c
Eggs	19c
Butterfat	49c
Creamery Butter	48c
Oats	37c
Corn	50c
Barley	60c

WANT ADS

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—P. B. Barred Rock Hatching Eggs, Aristocrat strain. $3.00 per 100. Mrs. Lud C. Johnson. Phone 3007. 31tf

FOR SALE—Purebred S. C. Buff Orpington Hatching Eggs, $3.00 per 100. Mrs. Andrew Pals. Phone 1818.

FOR SALE—Buick Coach, 1925 model. Johnson Garage. 21tf

FOR SALE—Timothy and clover mixed hay.—S. A. Bohning. Phone 3203. 202*

FOR SALE—300-egg Successful Incubator, in good condition. Half price. Inquire at Independent. 213*

FOR SALE—Rural New York and Early Ohio seed potatoes, $2.00 a bushel. S. Enger. 17tf

FOR SALE—Timothy and Clover hay.—T. A. Wicks, Kanawha. 193

FOR SALE—P. B. White Wyandotte hatching eggs. $3.50 per 100. Mrs. R. D. Box. Phone 3613. 19tf

FOR SALE—S. L. Wyandotte and Buff Orpington hatching eggs. Mrs. A. P. Lonning, Belmond. Phone 2606.

FOR SALE—Hard or soft wood, stove lengths. A. C. Lieuwen. Phone 186 1-3. 17tf

FOR SALE—The buildings on the H. L. Stapley lot, adjacent to Ford Garage. Must be removed by order of State Fire Marshal. This is your opportunity to get good building material right. See Ernest Stapley. 20tf

FOR SALE—80-acre improved farm, 5 miles east and 1 mile south of Belmond. For full particulars write Heiko Bruns, Belmond, Iowa.

FOR SALE—Pure bred S. C. Buff Orpington hatching eggs, $4 per 100. A. V. Mayhew, Goodell. 203*

FOR SALE—150 bushel Northern Grown Rural New Yorker Seed Potatoes. $2.00 per bushel. Inquire at Independent, where sample of seed may be seen. 202*

FOR SALE—P. B. S. C. White Leghorn hatching eggs. Ten cents per dozen over market price, at farm. H. G. Brunes, Goodell, Iowa. Phone 607. 20tf

WANTED—News items. Help us give you a better paper by sending or phoning the items you know. Call 115.

WANTED—Cattle. See Peterson's Market before selling. 193

WANTED—Cattle to pasture.—J. W. Kaufman. 203*

LOST—30 x 3 1-2 tire and rim, between Belmond and Cornelia. Reward for return.—Ralph Tomlinson. *

FOUND—Tire. Owner can have same by proving property and paying for this ad.—Jack McLaughlin.

Automobile Electricians

Now is the time to have the electrical system of your car gone over.
Our electrical stock is more complete than ever.

WE REPAIR
Batteries, Coils,
Starters, Ignition,
Generators, Wiring,
Magnetos, Lights,
Cables, Etc.

Our shop is equipped to take care of your electrical trouble.

Belmond Storage Battery Co.
THROUGH SERVICE
WE GROW
Phone 46 J. W. Scott, Prop.

NEW SPRING

Coats and Dresses

We have been able to extend our Sale of Coats and Dresses for another week.

From D. K. Lundberg Co.
Mason City, Iowa

We have a large selection from which to choose.

The Hat Shoppe
Belmond, Iowa

CITY MARKET'S SPECIALS!

Friday - Saturday
April 8-9

PICNIC HAM, per pound 41c

BACON SQUARES, per pound 23c

HOME-MADE BACON, Lb. 35c

Watch for Our Specials Every Week!

Free Deliveries Twice Each Morning

City Meat Market
Nissen Bros., Props.
Phone 207. Belmond, Iowa

THE MANURE SPREADER

In the newer sections of our own northwest, and in the prairie provinces of western Canada, the manure spreader is seldom seen. It is in those sections that "wheat mining" is indulged in, which is a nice way of describing a method of farming by which the natural fertility of the soil is removed in crops which are sold off the farm with absolutely no fertilizer returned to the soil to keep up the strength that nature so richly endowed it with. When wheat was the money crop in Iowa, much the same methods were followed by the early settlers here.

Every crop removes from the soil plant food which in some manner must be returned. Constant reduction of this plant food inevitably results in worn-out and worthless land. Barnyard manure is one of the most valuable as well as the most practical of fertilizers. It is present on every farm and rich in those elements essential to plant growth. It helps to aerate the soil, develapes necessary bacteria, and prevents washing of the soil.

Proper spreading of fresh manure will make possible the complete utilization of its full values. This means mechanical aid in spreading; for manure must be well shredded and uniformly spread to secure the best results. Manure which is spread unevenly or in lumps over the ground later interferes with the proper plowing or cultivation of the field on which it has been spread. Nor does it induce the best results in the growing crops, for too much humus in spots produces a rank growth of the plant stalks with little return of grain.

McCormick-Deering and John Deere manure spreaders overcome these objectionable features. They spread the manure as it should be spread. Their patented and exclusive features of design insure results which make the McCormick-Deering and John Deere the logical choice among spreaders.

"A fertile soil means a prosperous people." Manure spreaders are recognized as essential equipment on every farm. The more modern your spreader, the better work it will do. The spreader is one way of increasing your efficiency—more work done in less time. See the spreaders we have set up for your inspection the next time you are in town.

GRIESY'S
The Friendly Place
PHONE 10 BELMOND, IOWA

Belmond Independent

VOL. 8 | BELMOND, IOWA, THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 1927 | NO. 23

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS TO HOLD STYLE SHOW AT SCHOOL THIS WEEK

Home Economics Class Will Have Program

Exhibits From All Departments Of School Will Be Open To Public For Inspection.

BELL EDITION SUCCESSFUL

School Exhibit and Style Show

Friday afternoon and evening of this week the work in the various departments of the Belmond schools will be on exhibit for the inspection of the public. This open house idea was started last year and from the large interest shown at that time it was evident that the idea met with popular approval. The syle show of clothing made in Home Economics classes has been popular for several years.

The plan for the day, as outlined by Supt. Williams, is for every grade and department in the school to have their work on exhibit. So far as possible these displays will be in the home room of each group. The work to be shown will be the regular work of the school. Visitors should keep this in mind in looking over the exhibit. Pupils will be stationed in the varous rooms to explain how various things are made, materials used, and what their purpose is in the school. Visitors should feel free to ask questions in regard to work of the school and material on display.

The style show will be held in connection with the Parent Teachers Association meeting in the afternoon, beginning at 2:45. The building will be open in the afternoon until six o'clock and again in the evening at seven o'clock. Last year nearly as many visitors were present in the evening as in the afternoon. The evening hours will accomodate any who can not get away in the afternoon. Several visitors remarked last year that it took both afternoon and evening to see everything on display.

This will be the big day of the year for the school. It is hoped patrons will take advantage of this opportunity to get better acquainted with the work of he school.

The Bell

Last Thursday morning the Senior class carried on a rushing business—that of selling The Bell edition of the Independent. We hear, from very good authorities, that about one hundred sixty copies were sold, at twenty-five cents a copy. There were twenty-four pages of very well prepared material. Several of the Staff were also held responsible for the regular "Local" edition. Upon reading this section we would decide immediately that Lois Lilliebo and Henry Robinson had found their calling. Probably we were all greatly educated by the reading of the various editorials. Rumor has it that practically the whole class assumed the job of Editor-In-Chief upon their broad shoulders. Nevertheless, the result was highly edifying. We do wish, though, that the Seniors had been more careful of our delicate, sensitive feelings. Mr. Sprenzel has proved his ability in the talent of drawing laughs from the High School public. No doubt, in later years we will see Joe acting as a comedian on the vaudeville stage.

Much credit must be given to the Editor-in-Chief, Lucile Skouge for her tactful and excellent editing of The Bell. With the backing of such a willing staff, nothing is or rather was impossible, and the High School will take this opportunity in extending to The Bell Staff a vote of thanks for presenting such an excellent paper—The Bell, to the public.

Junior High Notes

Friday afternoon and evening is the Art Exhibit. This will be a great chance to see some very fine work in Art. The Junior exhibition will be found on the second floor. Everyone is invited to come either in the afternoon or evening.

The Girls physical training classes

(Continued on page seven.)

MRS. GERALD HEDGES

Cecile Faye Schuler was born at Dumont, Iowa, on May 21, 1904. She made her home there until she was seven years of age. The parents then moved to Ardale.

She was united in marriage to Gerald Hedges, January 1, 1926. Since then her home has been at Belmond. To this union was born a son, Dallas Darrell, who preceded her three days in death.

Cecile departed this life April 12, 1927, being twenty-two years, ten months and 15 days of age.

She gave her heart to God in early youth and then joined the Evangelical church. She has been a very faithful member all through life. During the time since Christmas when she was unable to attend church services she has read aloud half of the Bible to her husband, which has been a great joy and comfort to her.

In Cecile's last illness she was a most patient sufferer, never losing hope. Those who mourn the death of this loved one are the husband, the father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Schuler, the four sisters, Mrs. Walter McKinney of Dumont, Mrs. Virgil Minnier of Ardale, Verna and Oma of Dumont, and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at the home Thursday morning, April 14th, conducted by Rev. J. T. Snyder, the funeral party driving to Dumont, Iowa, where the burial took place.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt appreciation for the many acts of kindness and words of sympathy extended us in the illness and death of our wife and daughter, and for the beautiful floral offerings.

Gerald Hedges
Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Schuler
and Family.

GRAND JURY INDICTS TWO

One Man And One Woman Are Called To Stand Trial.

Two indictments were returned by the grand jury at the end of their session last week end. One was against Lulu Rader, who is charged with bigamy. She furnished an appearance bond for $1500 and is now at liberty. The other was against Joe Vallie on a charge of assault with intent to commit great bodily injury, as a result of the attack which he made on Wm. DeLong at Dows, March 5. DeLong was in a hospital for a time, but afterwards showed some signs of being mentally unbalanced. He recovered from that and is now able to be about his usual work and is getting along as well as could be expected from the nature of his injuries.

When the trial jurors appeared Monday they were excused for another week. In the meantime the court will be engaged with the hearing of law and equity cases. It is expected that some of the criminal cases on the calendar will be ready for hearing when the jury returns next Monday. Those set for trial at that time are those against B. W. McElhinney and W. T. Christensen of Goldfield, and Mrs. Lulu Rader of Clarion.

A petition was circulated the first of the week asking Judge Thompson to parole John Chapman from the Wright county jail, where he is confined on his second bootlegging conviction. It contained many signatures of Clarion business men. The parole will need the signature of Judge Thompson and County Attorney Blue before being sent to Governor Hammill for his approval or rejection.

Maude Ellis of Belmond seeks divorce from Wm. Ellis, alleging that she has had to support herself for the past fifteen years; that the defendant has left the plaintiff and is still absent.

Harry Paine petitions the court to appoint a receiver for the Smith-Paine Mfg. Co. of Eagle Grove to

(Continued on page four)

April Showers

EX-COUNCILMEN DECLARE MAYOR WANTED TO RUN EVERYTHING

TO THE VOTERS AND TAXPAYERS OF THE INCORPORATED TOWN OF BELMOND, IOWA.
GREETING:

The undersigned, at this time, submit in explanation of their respective resignations as members of the Town Council, that as cause therefor, the following reasons:

That ever since qualifying for such office, there has been one continuous lack of harmony between said Mayor and Council, and in place of improving has been constantly increasing, until conditions became absolutely unbearable, resulting in the resignations noted.

While having a majority power in the exercising of the same, it was only to be confronted with combativeness on the part of the Mayor, resulting in defeating anything and everything desirable to the ends sought.

It was our joint and express desire in qualifying for this office so generously passed to us by your vote and other support, that we might hope to do all in our power that every dollar expended was well expended, and in the best interest of all concerned.

We have made every effort to have the Mayor discharge the present Marshal and Street Commissioner, as the salary paid for his services, fixed at $100.00 per month, is excessive and wholly unnecessary; that such combination of said offices is wrong, and is now legally questionable, whether one person can hold two town offices at one and the same time, it being our contention that in the matter of Street Commissioner that this office could be filled as required from time to time, as necessity might demand.

In the matter of all committees and the duties of such committees, the Mayor has seen fit to do and perform all these duties, ignoring the committees the same as though there were no committees, and that he was the only one to look after the same. Particularly in the matter of the purchasing committee, he has taken it upon himself to do all of the purchasing or buying of all and everything pertinent to the town's use, especially in the matter of coal, there having been no competitive bid or bids therefor, he buying the same at local retail prices; and that there have been no bids sought for anything with the possible exception of the repairs and other improvements of the town water works.

The undersigned might continue with a multiplied number of complaints, all confirming justification of their resignation; and rather than continue, with constantly increasing friction and opposition on the part of the Mayor, there was no other alternative than to resign, and we have resigned.

Concluding, we wish to express our most sincere thanks to every voter for both their support and confidence in electing us to the position, which we have found it impossible to fill through such continued opposition, and we shall hope that subsequent events, and other accompanying performances will both ratify and confirm that our action was for the best and in the interest of Belmond, and Belmond only.

Signed:

I. H. BENSON
JOHN DORENKAMP
L. F. SIMERSON
HENRY GROEN

M. E. MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Mesdames H. J. Williams and R. H. Klemme were hostesses to the April meeting at the Williams home, Thursday, April 7.

Mrs. McBurney was elected delegate to the convention at Fenton. Mrs. McBurney has a part on the program.

The lesson, under the leadership of Mrs. A. H. Skovlin, showed careful preparation. A very interesting and informative letter was read from Miss Carrie Bartlette, our friend, who is a missionary in China.

Miss Bartlette, with many others has been taken by the U. S. government to Manilla for safety.

We are indeed sorry to lose Mrs. Calvin Johnson from our society. Her charming personality will be greatly missed. Mrs. Johnson has been our King's Heralds leader.

Mrs. Martin brought us some spring greens in the form of plants for our mystery questions.

BELMOND WEATHER

As reported by H. F. Luick, Cooperative Observer, U. S. Department of Agriculture, for the week April 10 to 16, inclusive:

Date	High	Low	Prec.	Char of Day
10	59	42	.02	Cloudy
11	53	42	—	Cloudy
12	48	43	.25	Cloudy
13	49	35	.12	Cloudy
14	45	37	.11	Cloudy
15	67	40	.42	Cloudy
16	73	46	—	Ptly Cldy

Atty Birdsall Dies

Ray W. Birdsall, of Dows, well known thruout Wright county, died at St. Louis, Mo. last week, age 60 years. He had been in St. Louis the past two years receiving treatment. Mr. Birdsall was a prominent lawyer and banker, and was well known thruout this part of the state. Funeral services were held at Dows last Tuesday.

BELMOND AGAIN UNDER THE GUIDING HAND OF A NEW CITY COUNCIL

OBITUARY OF HARRY NORRIS

(From Rowan Correspondent)

Harry Norris was born in England, March 31, 1884, and died at his home near Rowan, Iowa, April 16, 1927, at 10:30 a. m. age 43 years and 16 days. He came to this country with his parents when he was one year and ten months old. April 6 of this year, he was taking care of his horses when he was kicked by a colt, receiving injuries which resulted in his death.

Those who knew him, considered him an honorable and upright man. He was the oldest child, and always lived at home with his parents, assuming a share of the care of the family and especially of his younger brother, Charles, who is now at home. His youngest brother, Arthur died at the age of two years.

Deceased leaves besides his parents, five brothers and one sister to mourn his departure, the brothers being Charles and Raymond of Rowan, George, Edgar and Allen, who reside in Illinois, and the sister, Mrs. Naomi Chapman, of Belmond.

Funeral services were held at the Methodist church in Rowan, the pastor, Rev. J. H. Bounds, officiating. Interment was in the Belmond cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness and words of sympathy in the illness and death of our son and brother, and for the beautiful floral offerings.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Norris
Allen Norris
George Norris
Edgar Norris
Ray Norris
Charles Norris
Mrs. John Chapman

P. T. A. MEETS FRIDAY P. M.

Style Show Will Be Program At Meeting Tomorrow.

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teachers' association will be held at the school house Friday afternoon, April 22, at 2:45 p. m.

The program this month will be in the form of a style show by the Home Economics girls, and an exhibit in all the departments of the school.

The building will be open at 7:00 o'clock in the evening for any who wish to see the exhibit at that time.

RED CROSS NOTES

The world war, in one way was a blessing in disguise. It proved to America beyond a doubt, that its most important crop was much of a failure. While we were leading the world in making fine locomotives, automobiles, washing machines and one-man street cars, we were not doing so well in raising healthy, fit-for-service children. If one-third of the guns turned out by our factories during this crucial period had proved unfit for service, or if a third of the ammunition prepared for our soldiers had been no good, there would have been a hue and cry from one end of the land to the other. But it is a fact that one-third of the man-power the United States called to the colors by the draft act, which took a cross-section of the entire population, had to be sent back to peace time activities because they were defective—were not physically fit to make soldiers.

Because of this revelation, more than any other, new methods of child raising were ushered in. Today child raising is somewhat of a science. Among other things it requires accurate weighing and measuring to see that he is progressing physically. The hit-or-miss method of looking at the proud son and heir, and casually remarking, "That boy is surely growing," is a thing of the past. The weighing scales and the measuring rod have usurped the place of such guess work once for all. Now we want to know exactly how much he is growing, and whether he is growing as rapidly as he should.

Health authorities have worked out a definite table of weights to heights by which we can guage the progress of a child. The proper weight for height is given, and if a child does not increase in height commensurate with his age we know there is something wrong. Often it is due to poor hygiene or improper diet, but sometimes it is the result of distinct organic troubles, or diseased conditions of the body.

This height-to-weight test is such a good index to the health of the child that every parent should have the benefit of it. any schools now have scales as a part of the regular equipment. Generally where there is a school nurse this information reaches the parents through her reports. In many schools the report cards of the pupils contain accurate information about this important question. Thus the parents may know positively whether the children's physical development is keeping pace with their mental progress.

This information in the hands of parents often enables them to heed danger signs in their children's health before serious harm has resulted. Allowed to run on and on, serious physical troubles may result that could have been prevented if parents had been informed about the condition sooner.

Nearly all the serious physical defects and illness of later life have apparently insignificant beginnings. Many of them could be prevented if the seemingly trivial deviations from normal conditions were given prompt attention during childhood.

Health is the most valuable thing that we can have, and the cheapest.

Retiring Members Say Mayor Ran Everything

Say Russell Assumed All Power To Himself In Purchasing Supplies For Town.

NEW COUNCIL INSTALLED

Belmond is once again supplied with a city council. Thru a ruling or interpretation of the law by Attorney Williams of Mason City, the one remaining councilman, Thomas McNulty, appointed another councilman. The two then appointed the third, the three the fourth, and the four then picked number five.

The new council consists of Mr. McNulty, F. L. Mortimer, Pat Barry, Louis Moe and Elmer Boughton.

These men were duly installed in office at a meeting Monday night, and the mayor then appointed them on the various committees.

The four retiring councilmen set forth their reasons for resigning in an article in another column. They declare Mayor Russell ignored them almost completely in the transacting of the city's business, that he assumed to himself the powers of purchasing city supplies and generally took full control of everything that went on. The retiring members accuse Russell of purchasing supplies, particularly coal, without competative bids, at retail prices. One of the retiring members of the council in an interview with a reporter for the Independent, stated that the mayor bought coal at the price of $12 per ton when other coal yards in the city were selling for much less.

In their statement, the four men say they requested the mayor to discharge the present marshal and street commissioner, declaring the salary fixed, $100 a month, to be excessive and unnecessary, and the holding of two municipal offices of doubtful legality.

Mr. Russell, however, they state, would not co-operate in any manner, with them, and conducted the city affairs to suit himself, and no one else. As there did not seem to be any need for a council, the four considered they might as well get off.

Belmond Independent

R. A. RANKINS
Editor and Publisher

Entered as second-class matter Nov. 18, 1919, at the post office at Belmond, Iowa, under the act of March 3, 1879.

IOWA PRESS ASSOCIATION

OFFICIAL COUNTY PAPER

Subscription Price $2.00 per year, strictly in advance. Paper stops at expiration.

LARGEST LOCAL CIRCULATION

ADVERTISING RATES
Display, per column inch ------25c
Locals, per line ----------10c
Classified, per word ----------02c
(One cent per word ensuing insertions. Minimum charge 25c per insertion.)

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

Editorials

Every job has its hardships and its difficult decisions, and the newspaper editor is no exception. One of the hardest, if not the hardest things an editor has to do is to print a news story which for the sake of a friend or a family he would like to suppress. Many items are suppressed, and never see the printed page. But sometimes there comes an item which cannot be kept out of the paper if the paper is to be fair and just in its obligation to its public. When a subscriber orders a paper and pays for it, and the publisher accepts his order and money, the publisher and the subscriber have entered into a mutual agreement, a contract. In consideration of the order and the payment, the publisher has contracted to give that subscriber, and his hundreds of fellow subscribers, the news of his particular community insofar as it is compatible with the public good. In doing that and occupying as it does such a public position, the newspaper must consider the general welfare of the community. Upon the person directing the policies of the paper falls the responsibility of printing or suppressing news stories as they occur. No one can take that responsibility from him, and no one can help him; he must decide to the best of his ability. Sometimes he is wrong; an editor is no more infallible than any other person; if he errs, he alone is to assume the blame. But in printing a story, no editor allows it to go thru if he does not think it the best thing to do. Oftentimes pressure is brought to bear to suppress an item; sometimes, but not often, threats are used. The editor who seeks to honestly fulfill his contract with his subscribers, and to serve his community, will never let that pressure color his judgment. He will be cussed and condemned by a party or faction, and like as not one or more papers will be stopped, but that cannot be helped. It is part of the game, part of his contract, and if he be honest and sincere the editor will carry on.

GOSSIP

Upper Des Moines Republican: Gossip is the work of the devil. More harm comes from this than any other source. Any kind of a story can be started by a gossip, and the meaner and rottener the story, the more people will believe it. Banks have been ruined by unfounded stories that have caused unexpected runs. Business men have failed through this source and lives have been ruined. The gossip can start a story regarding a girl's reputation that she can never out-live. When a gossip starts something there are always others who will repeat the tale and often add a little to it. It is not always the women who do the gossiping and some of the very worst types are found among the men who are always ready to believe anything bad and lose no time in repeating it where it will get the most circulation. The curious thing is that people will listen to and believe a bad story when if something good is told them they doubt it and soon forget it. The old adage that if you can not say something good, say nothing, would help this world if the people would follow it.

HANDLING THE FAMILY INCOME

Hampton Chronicle: A New York woman successfully handled $80,000,000 in Liberty bonds. Now where is the husband who can say that his wife shouldn't keep his money and do the family budgeting?

Usually it pays in the long run and the family, gradually and steadily, bit by bit gets ahead, owns this and that—a hoe, a spade, a new garage, a piano, a radio. Pretty soon the girls are taking music lessons and—maybe—when the time comes—father is able to send the boys on to college.

And there are vacations and an occasional new car: Pretty soon the home is paid for. When father is sixty he is able to retire—and all men folks say "Well done thou good and faithful servant," or words to that effect. Back come the wife gets credit within the family circle—maybe.

But—if the wife isn't domestic and if she doesn't care so much for a home and a garden and roses and the future of her children, if she is more interested in fine gowns and gadding about—then she is liable to fail to interest herself in a family budget and to run up bills instead of carefully watching the income.

Women with families must necessarily be more material than husbands and watch corners more carefully. Because of this fact they are oftimes misunderstood by husbands, who, before marriage, were gay young Beau Brummels who believed the American tradition that everyone is born free and equal and tried their best to live up to it by squandering as much of the money that came their way as they could.

Tax Grabbers Still Busy

Algona Republican: Senator Merritt, of the Carroll-Green-Sac district apparently does not know what he was sent to Des Moines for this winter, as well as a number of the other legislators who have introduced bills increasing taxes instead of lowering them. Senator Merritt has introduced a bill proposing to add to the present force of state parasites a police force of not to exceed 390 men with a superintendent. The superintendent would draw a salary of $4,000 per year and the deputy $3,000. The other boys would receive $100 per month. An appropriation of $100,000 is asked for immediately and things were looking fine for the hangers-on in politics until the bill was sidetracked in committee. However, it is stated that the bill will be presented in the next general assembly.

The state of Iowa is now over ridden with an army of game wardens, revenue men, marshals, state agents, prohibition agents, under cover men, dairy inspectors, bee inspectors, stool pigeons and what have you. There is literally an army of these parasites preying on the taxpayers. It has been stated that there is now one paid inspector or stool pigeon or something of that kind for every fifteen persons in the country. Any man who proposes to increase this army should be retired from public life.

THE YOUNGER GENERATON

I have set myself to write an essay on "The Younger Generation," a topic of universal interest, and a subject for profound discussion among the more advanced species, especially the female portion. Perhaps this began back when the ancient Greeks and Romans worried about their offspring; I do not doubt in the least that Cornelia often waited in tearful suspense for the arrival of her "Jewels" from a belated feast or celebration.

At the time when the fair Ellen in Scott's "Lady of the Lake" entered the sylvan mansion with the courtly James Fitz James in tow, I wonder if Aunt Margaret held up her hands in horror, and conversed far into the night with the aged harper, Allen Bane, as to the propriety of such an act. She, most likely, wondered what in the world the younger generation was coming to, and what would her poor dear mother say.

Apparently, there has, in the last half century or so, been a decided change in mankind. When our mothers and grandmothers were young, according to tradition and the dear people themselves, they, at times under proper supervision played croquet or even went on sleigh rides. They spoke in guarded, horrified whispers of the girl who "painted," and who, they felt was doomed.

And the brides! According to one of the Victorian poets, she was as described as "A young and bonny bride whose downcast eye and cheek disclose the tear and blush of morning rose."

What a vast change! How we should pine for those dear old bygone days! We should, I repeat, but we do not. We are so absorbed in worldly pleasures, in material pursuits, and our own speedy and effective downfall.

The Younger Generation! The people speak of us in the same hopeless tone as the measles, or toothache. Perhaps some day ,we may come into our own and the world will recognize our merits, Quien Sabe?

—Marcella Leavy

THE STREAM OF LIFE

Onward! Onward! On and On,
The stream of life flows by
Days gone, and days to come
Roll on like waves; 'till they meet the sky.
Onward! Onward! On and On,
Through flooded valleys of hope
While ships of joy and sorrow,
Ever onward, onward float.
Onward! Onward! On and On,
'Till at the bright sea at its end
The stream of life starts slowly
In vapor to ascend.

Original Poem
by Raymond Hill,
Seventh A.

CHURCHES

METHODIST CHURCH
Rev. J. F. Snyder, Pastor

Services as follows for the Lord's Day, April 24:

Sunday School at 10:00 a. m. Classes for all ages. You in your class and I in mine is what makes the work of the Kingdom fine.

Divine Worship and Sermon at 11:00 a. m. Subject of sermon, "A Ministry of Reconciliation." II Cor. 5:18.

Junior and Senior Leagues at 7:00 p. m. This is one of the departments of the church that is saturated with life. If you are not an attendant in some league we extend you a hearty welcome.

Evening Worship and Gospel Message at 8:00. Subject of sermon, "The Practice of the Principles of Jesus." Matt. 9:9.

Please Note—Parents and adults. All who received the rite of baptism Easter Sunday, may have their baptismal certificate this Sunday. You may desire same in future. We wish to express our heartiest thanks to members of this church and friends who so loyally cooperated in our recent special meetings. You have largely the cause for whatever success has come from these meetings. Thanks to each and all. The church has been blessed and we are the richer because of it.

Regular Aid meeting at the home of Mrs. H. F. Petersen, Thursday afternoon. Everybody welcome.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Algona District will meet at Fenton on April 26-27.

You are cordially invited to all of our services.

ST. JOHN'S LUTHERAN
J. F. Wipperman, Pastor

Divine services Sunday morning at 10:45, in the English language.

Sunday School at 9:45.

Class at the church at 10:00 o'clock.

We bid you welcome. Come and worship with us.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Sunday, April 24, Sunday school meets at 10 a. m. There was the largest attendance of the year so far last Sunday. We have classes for everybody. Come, let us worship together.

There will be church services at 11, after which there will be a business meeting to hear the report of the outstanding committee and decide what is best to do in the future. Make it your special business to be there.

Friday evening at 8 o'clock the ladies' Bible class entertains the men's Bible class, in the basement of the church.

STUDY OF WEATHER CONDITIONS AT BELMOND
1910—1926

Temperature

Year	Highest	Date	Lowest	Date
1910	95	July 16	—25	January 6
1911	103	July 5	—28	January 3
1912	96	June 29	—37	January 12
1913	100	September 5	—20	March 2
1914	101	July 12	—26	December 26
1915	88	July 15	—27	January 28
1916	98	July 27	—27	January 13
1917	99	July 29	—28	February 2
1918	101	August 5	—31	January 31
1919	100	July 9	—25	December 10
1920	97	June 13	—18	December 24
1921	100	July 9	—17	December 25
1922	102	August 17	—21	January 24
1923	100	July 23	—19	February 3
1924	95	August 3	—29	January 5
1925	102	July 12	—18	December 27
1926	104	July 20	—17	December 14

Total Precipitation for the Year

1910—20.38 inches.	1918—42.58 inches.
1911—28.58 inches.	1919—37.40 inches.
1912—29.72 inches.	1920—37.59 inches.
1913—27.81 inches.	1921—29.82 inches.
1914—35.53 inches.	1922—25.31 inches.
1915—40.77 inches.	1923—26.81 inches.
1916—37.37 inches.	1924—33.80 inches.
1917—28.49 inches.	1925—33.66 inches.
	1926—28.41 inches.

Normal Precipitation for Year 33.53 inches.

Snowfall

1910—24.9 inches.	1918—32.2 inches.
1911—44.4 inches.	1919—42.4 inches.
1912—29.5 inches.	1920—28.1 inches.
1913—26.1 inches.	1921—37.6 inches.
1914—28.1 inches.	1922—21.7 inches.
1915—39.0 inches.	1923—41.7 inches.
1916—37.9 inches.	1924—44.1 inches.
1917—59.2 inches.	1925—37.7 inches.
	1926—32.7 inches.

Date of Last Killing Frost in Spring and Length of Growing Season
(Frost to frost)

1910—May 13. 162 days.	1919—April 26. 168 days.
1911—May 4. 169 days.	1920—May 14. 139 days.
1912—May 17. 132 days.	1921—May 16. 141 days.
1913—April 28. 147 days.	1922—April 29. 163 days.
1914—April 20. 189 days.	1923—May 17. 120 days.
1915—May 9. 149 days.	1924—May 24. 129 days.
1916—May 2. 138 days.	1925—May 25. 138 days.
1917—May 7. 152 days.	1926—May 14. 134 days.
1918—May 14. 129 days.

Average date of last killing Spring frost, May 7-8.
Average length of growing season, 147 days.

Sky Conditions for Years 1910-1926

	Clear	Pt. Cloudy	Cloudy		Clear	Pt. Cloudy	Cloudy
1910—	88	212	65	1919—	114	154	97
1911—	69	190	106	1920—	129	131	106
1912—	60	212	94	1921—	100	169	96
1913—	83	191	91	1922—	101	176	88
1914—	66	210	89	1923—	88	190	87
1915—	37	223	105	1924—	84	196	86
1916—	67	229	71	1925—	73	214	78
1917—	79	225	61	1926—	80	64	221
1918—	105	175	85	Average—	83	185	95

H. F. LUICK, Co-operative Observer

LOCALS

David Tyrrell and his friend, Wm. Mossman, who's home is in Roswell, New Mexico ,came down from Wisconsin, where both are attending military academy to spend their Easter furlough at the Tyrrell home. David will graduate in June.

The Methodist Aid Society meets this week Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. F. Petersen.

Bob Pritchard, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Pritchard, suffered a severe attack of appendicitis, Sunday, and was taken to the Belmond hospital where an operation was performed that evening. His appendix was found to be in a serious condition.—Garner Signal.

Dr. and Mrs. L. R. Parsons and daughter, Doris, of Belmond, visited at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Missman, Sunday.—Klemme Times.

Mrs. John Lieuwen, of Belmond, visited between trains Thursday with her daughter, Mrs. M. L. Baker.—Kanawha Reporter.

Byrnes Missman went to Belmond Saturday for a visit with his grandparents, returning home Sunday—Klemme Times.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Gilligan and Mrs. J. W. O'Rourk visited at the Wm. Parker home in Belmond, Monday.—Kanawha Reporter.

Pete Swenson, who has been at Excelsior Springs, Mo. for his health returned home, Saturday.

Clair Christie and wife and little daughter, of Ames have been spending this week end with relatives in and near Belmond.

Mr. Patrick, father of Mrs. Marvin Christie spent a few days the past week at the M. F. Christie home, returning to Kanawha Saturday.

The Martin Hanson family went to Cedar Rapids Sunday, taking their daughter,Verone, who is attending college at that place.

Ed Chapman went to St. Paul Friday where he expects to obtain work.

Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Tomson, of Clear Lake visit relatives in Belmond over the week end.

Mrs. Owen Sullivan has been quite sick but is much improved at this writing.

Dess Bishop and family attended the funeral of their uncle, Mr. Lord, at Clarion, Saturday.

Mrs. Harry Overturs, of Mason City has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louie Moe. Mr. Overtur came Saturday. They returned home Sunday.

C. M. Morse, who recently purchased the half interest of Calvin Johnson in the Hub Motor Co. assumed his new duties with that firm Monday of this week. Mr. Morse resigned his position as assistant cashier in the State Bank of Belmond to take up his new duties. The Bank will not fill the vacancy at present, but will attempt to carry on the work with the present staff of employes.

Mrs. Martin Nissen suffered a sudden attack of acute appendicitis Monday forenoon, and was taken to the local hospital where she underwent an operation that same day.

Mrs. Carl Wenzel returned Sunday from Omaha, Neb., where she had spent several months with her home folks.

The continued rainy weather has greatly retarded farm work. A few days of sunshine over the week end enabled some of the farmers to get into the fields, but another heavy rain Monday night again stopped work. Very little seeding has been done.

The Modern Woodmen held a successful and enjoyable dance, Monday evening, at the opera house. A large crowd was present. Lunch was served by the Royal Neighbors.

Mrs. J. F. Wipperman returned last Saturday from Shakopee, Minn., where she has been staying with her mother the past few weeks since she was released from a St. Paul hospital. On March 11 Mrs. Wipperman underwent an operation for gall bladder trouble and appendicitis. She is recovering nicely.

FREE AIR

Good morning, were you invited to join the council?

* * * *

Anyway, we're all rigged out, now with an entire new set except for Tom. The next question is, have they repaired the safety valve? The last one blew off when the works blew up.

* * * *

One of the readers of this Colyum was so affected by the political situation that he became ill and indited the following pome:

* * * *

THE FIRST RETREAT

Belmond had five councilmen, and a thrifty mayor, too;
Elected by their bosom friends, who knew what they would do.
They may have had a platform,
that's in the days of yore;
It must have been a good one, what else could they stand for.
They gathered at the council room,
with loads of work to do;
Made new laws, allowed some bills
and fixed a road or two.
Everything went lovely, as life on a summer day;
When lo and behold a storm approached, as oft the poets say.
There seemed to be dissention, strife and turmoil within;
Harsh words were said, some threats
were made and other things akin.
We dare not relate the facts, that transpired in that hall;
We heard it said, had things continued, there might have been a fall.
When the smoke of battle cleared away, and the last hot shot was fired;
The dads resembled the lost battalion, all but one had retired.
The storm is o'er, the battle won;
for whom we do not know;
Be that as it may, on election day, is promised the real show.
What ere befalls this city of ours,
let us recall this phrase,
A task well done by a faithful one,
is deserving of endless praise.

Longfellow

* * * *

No, we didn't write it—Longfellow did—and we don't assume the responsibility or the glory.

* * * *

Following we present the prize-winning list of questions, which was submitted by Miss Beryl Hake, with we'll bet, if the truth were known, the assistance of George. Some of 'em sound like him. They're good, anyway, and Miss Beryl will receive this Colyum for one year starting this week. Tell us what you think the answers are to this list. We'll run 'em next week.

* * * *

1. How many less horses in Wright county today than ten years ago?
2. Who writes the "Free Air?"
3. What is Lee Luick's nickname?
4. Who caught the big fish Peterson brought home from Minnesota?
5. How did Frank Baldridge get his nickname?
6. What three respected citizens of Belmond forgot where they parked their car in Des Moines?
7. How many yards of thread are required to make a man's shirt?
8. When Dell Luick sells milk why does he always ford the river?
9. How many pupils enrolled in our Public School?
10. Where was the first hotel of Belmond located?
11. Who run out of gas on the detour south of Belmond?
12. What became of the Tourist Park Belmond did have?
13. Who went snipe hunting in the M. & St. L. gravel pit?
14. How long does it take Bishop to move a beet worker's family to Mason City?
15. What man connected with the Iowa Valley Operating Company says "I bet you"?
16. What R. R. in Belmond is called "The Big Weedy?"
17. How did Claude Benson get his nickname?
18. Who is the best plumber in Belmond?
19. How many toes has a cat?
20. Who were the members of the old Tammany Ring in Belmond?

Submitted by
Miss Beryl Hake,
Seventh Grade

Chicken Thieves At Hampton

Thirty chickens and three turkey hens comprised the loot secured by chicken thieves at the F. J. Scantlebury farm west of Hampton, recently. No clews have been obtained. This was the second raid made on this farm within a month, over 75 fowls being taken from the place on March 11.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS NOTES

COMPARE GRADES FOR PROFITS

A new venture on the part of experiment stations is being undertaken by the Iowa Station at Ames this year, under the direction of John M. Evvard, in an effort to determine whether cheaper feeder cattle, such as "medium" or "common" grades will make more money than will "choice" feeders

It is not always the man who tops the market that makes the most money, Mr. Evvard says, and so this year common, medium and choice grades of steers have been put in the feedlots at Ames, on identical rations, to ascertain, if possible, which is the most profitable grade to feed. All of these steers are being fed a full feed of shelled corn, all of the alfalfa hay that they will consume, self-fed salt and linseed oilmeal at the rate of 1 1-2 pounds per day the first month, 2 pounds per day the second month, 2 1-2 pounds per day the third month, and 3 pounds the fourth month.

The choice feeders this year cost $8 per hundred in Texas, with freight paid to Ames, and weighed 780 pounds when put in the feed lots. The mediums weighed 925 pounds when put on feed and cost $7.35 at Sioux City. The common grade steers weighed 800 pounds when put on feed and cost $6.75 in Sioux City. All of the grades are taking on condition and finish extraordinarily well, according to Mr. Evvard, and many interested feeders are already attempting to guess which lot will eventually prove to be the greatest money-maker.

During the first 90 days on feed, the choice grade of steers gained 107 pounds per month, while the commons ranked second with 94 pounds and the mediums gained 89 pounds. In spite of the more rapid gains of the choice steers, the difference is not great enough, in Mr. Evvard's opinion, to draw any conclusions as to which will prove the most profitable, this final result depending almost entirely upon what the finished steers sell for. This will be shown on Cattle Feeders' Hey Day, May 5, at Ames, when all of the cattle in the experimental lots will be appraised.

PREPARE TO BATTLE CUTWORMS

Farmers and gardeners may expect plenty of trouble this spring from cutworms and it is well to make preparation to fight them, in the judgment of C. J. Drake, state entomologist.

Cutworms have been unusually bad and increasing during the past three years, says Dr. Drake, and further trouble from them seems likely. The pests were unusually abundant in 76 counties of Iowa in 1924 and, according to reports of county agents, caused 12,000 acres of corn to be replanted. In addition, 100,000 acres of oats, barley and pasture crops were damaged.

In small gardens, cutworms may be controlled by hand picking and by sprinkling a poison bran mash about. In large fields, some farmers have spread a poison bran mash by means of an endgate seeder and secured good results.

Specific recommendations for controlling the pest, either in gardens or in fields on a large scale, are given in a new circular, "The Control of Armyworms and Cutworms," just off the press. It may be obtained by writing to the Bulletin Section, Iowa State College, Ames. The circular gives formulae to use in compoundinga poison mash.

Cutworms are plump, sleek, almost hairless, striped, spotted or nearly solid colored caterpillars, of two main types; surface feeding forms which feed at or below the surface, and climbing forms which feed upon the foliage. Dr. Drake suggests early fall plowing of grass and pasture land as a control measure. This destroys a large part of the available food supply for late fall and early spring feeding. Infested areas should be treated with poison bait.

DROP THREE OR FOUR TO HILL

Experiments over a five-year period, conducted in all parts of Iowa, have shown that corn planted at the rate of three or four kernels to the hill may be expected to out-yield a two kernel per hill planting by about 10 bushels to the acre. These tests show, also, that heavier rates of planting are more advantageous in northern and north central Iowa than in southern Iowa.

Ther ate of planting experiments were conducted by the Iowa Corn and Small Grain Growers' Association in conjunction with the state corn yield contests. The corn was planted in each of 12 cooperating fields at the rates of 2, 3, 4 and 5 kernels per hill.

In all sections of the state, the 3 and 4 kernel rates gave larger yields than the 2 kernel plantings. In northern Iowa, 4 kernels per hill produced an average yield of about 4 bushels more an acre than 3 kernels; 5 kernels returned an average of about 3 bushels more than 4 kernels, but the corn in the 5 per hill planting was "nubbiny" and hence of inferior quality.

In north central Iowa, the 4 kernel plantings outyielded the 3 kernel rate an average of 2 bushels an acre, and the 5 kernel rate gave almost the same yield as 4 kernels, but many more nubbins. In south central Iowa the 4 kernel rate returned about 3 bushels more per acre than did 3 kernels.

In southern Iowa, the 3 kernel rate gave the highest yield, beating the 4 or 5 kernel rate an average of about a bushel to the acre.

While the 5 kernel rates gave somewhat higher yields than the 3 or 4 rates in northern and north central Iowa, the advantage in yield was not large enough to make up for the inferior quality, says Joe L. Robinson, Ames, secretary of the Iowa Corn and Small Grain Growers' Association.

Mr. Robinson believes that the difference in soil and the smaller, earlier types of corn used in northern Iowa account for the apparent advantages of planting 4 kernels per hill in that region. The advantages of 4 over 3 gradually receded from northern to southern Iowa.

SELL SURPLUS COCKERELS

There is no time of the year when a little extra feed and care for the poultry stock will show such high returns as it will in the spring and summer months, according to H. A. Bittenbender, head of the Poultry Husbandry Department, Iowa State College. During these months the poultryman is working with nature and not against her.

By the time the growing chicks are 10 weeks of age, all surplus cockerels should have been sold for broilers, unless there is a heavy demand for cockerels for breeding purposes. Only the thriftiest cockerels should be saved for this purpose and these should be selected and separated from the pullet flock at 8 to 12 weeks of age.

During this growing period the brooder house should be moved to fresh ground twice and preferably three times. Mr. Bittenbender stresses the importance of providing sufficient room for the growing flock. A brooder house 10 by 12 feet, which was large enough for 300 to 350 chicks, is only large enough for the pullets that will remain after the cockerels have been sold.

LOCATE NEARLY 4,000 LOAFERS

During the last 12 months almost 4,000 dairy cows in Iowa have been sold for beef because their farmer owners discovered that they were unprofitable producers. Each month of the 12, from 175 to 449 cows were sold for beef. These figures are given in the monthly cow testing association reports issued at Iowa State College, Ames.

Last month 348 cows of the more than 25,000 on test in 69 associations were culled out and sold because their returns were not sufficient in proportion to feed costs, labor and other items of production costs. At present, about 2,000 farmers in Iowa are members of cow testing associations and thus obtain each month a complete record on each cow in their herds. This record shows how much butterfat the cow has produced, the value of her product and the cost of her feed. This tells the farmer exactly which cows are profitable and which are unprofitable.

The summary for last month shows that the O'Brien County Association had the highest average production of butterfat per cow of the 69 reporting in the state. The O'Brien cows, 308 in number, averaged 31.8 pounds of butterfat each. Thirty of the cows were dry. The next four associations in the state, with their averages, were as follows: Fayette County No. 3, 31.1 pounds of fat per cow; Tama County 30.8 pounds per cow; Bremer County, 30.0; and Pioneer Association of Black Hawk County, 29.9 pounds per cow.

The five highest producing herds in the state were as follows: First, Wm. Bath and Son, Sac County, 8 purebred Guernseys, 52.6 pounds of butterfat each; second, Peder Pederson and Son, Cedar Falls, 17 purebred Holsteins, 51 pounds each; third, N. C. Cain, O'Brien County, 11 grade Holsteins, 50.1 pounds each; fourth, F. H. Schmadeke, Butler County No. 1, 16 purebred and grade Holsteins, 49.2 pounds each; and fifth, Wm. F. Voelker, Delaware County No. 1, 12 purebred Holsteins, 48.2 pounds per cow.

READ THE ADS

Modern taste revels in the goodness of Camel

SMOKERS of today—the most particular and hardest to please—find their smoking wishes realized in the mellow goodness of Camels. They demand the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos, and find them in Camel gloriously blended. Modern smokers put Camel ahead of all other cigarettes.

You should know the mildness, the mellowness that brings enjoyment to present-day smokers. You'll find it in Camel—every good point that could be looked for in a cigarette.

It's the modern favorite. "Have a Camel!"

©1927, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

CAR OF POULTRY FEED!

Start to finish baby chick mash—that red feed—the same kind that we sold last year. It is treated with imported Spanish Oxide of Iron, a pure 96 percent mineral, and contains cod liver oil. Our price this year is right.

FULL LINE OF FEEDS, FLOUR, SALT, ETC.

at prices you will find right.

We also buy Poultry and Hides at Highest Market Prices!

We have the original Old Hickory Smoked Salt.

All kinds of Grass Seed. Prices right.

CAR OF FERTILIZER. Leave your order.

Farmers Grain Company

PHONE 198—GIVE US A TRIAL!

BELMONT, - - - - - - - - - IOWA

BILL SAYS:

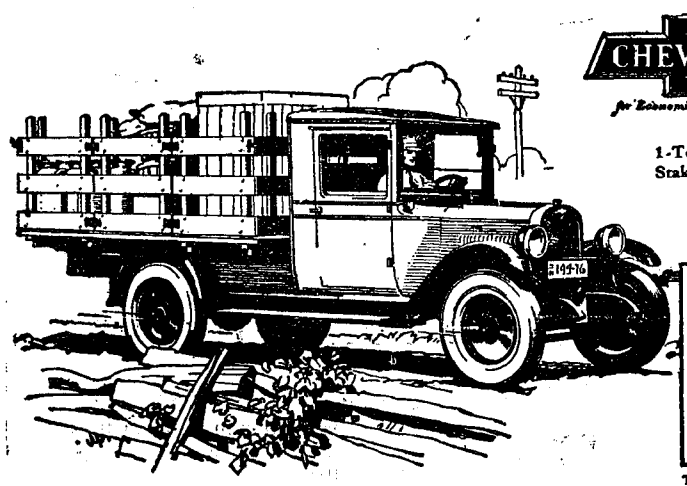
"Folks, I haye been looking into this Electric Company's 7 percent Preferred Stock as I have a few dollars that have just been laying around lately not doing much of anything and I've decided that they are going to work and earn decent wages. This Electric Stock I find is the best place for these dollars because not only will they be safe but will be kept out of mischief by working 24 hours a day, and, I don't mind that because each $100 will be earning the good wages of $7.00 a year payable on 4 pay days during the year."

Bill has the right idea and any Employee will be glad to handle his order.

Central States Electric Company

General Offices

CEDAR RAPIDS, - IOWA



CHEVROLET

for Economical Transportation

1-Ton Truck Complete with Stake Body $680 f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Quality Features of the world's most popular gear-shift truck

Chevrolet is the world's most popular gear-shift truck because it offers, at amazingly low prices, scores of quality features not found on any other haulage unit in the low price field.

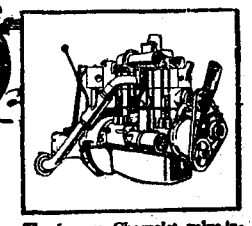
Included in this list are numerous recent mechanical improvements of the utmost importance, such as—AC oil filter and AC air cleaner to protect the motor from excessive wear and to maintain at its peak efficiency the smooth, effortless power for which Chevrolet's motor has long been famous. Other new features are an improved transmission and new gear-shift lever; a new and more conveniently located emergency brake; crowned fenders; a new radiator of greater cooling capacity; a new 17-inch steering wheel—and even bullet-type headlamps to give a distinctive touch of smartness!

If you want the utmost in commercial transportation combined with true economy, come to our salesroom and see the improved Chevrolet Truck!

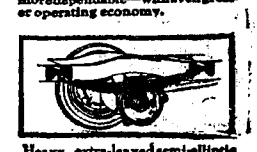
1-Ton Truck with Stake Body $680 | 1-Ton Truck with Panel Body $755 | 1-Ton Truck Chassis with Cab $610

1-Ton Truck Chassis $495 | ½-Ton Truck Chassis $395 | All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

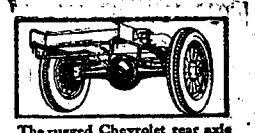
In addition to these low prices, Chevrolet's delivered prices include the lowest handling and financing charges available.



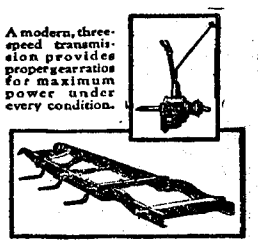
The famous Chevrolet valve-in-head motor has been made even more dependable—with even greater operating economy.



Heavy, extra-leaved semi-elliptic springs—set parallel to the frame—effectively cushion the load and chassis against road shocks.



The rugged Chevrolet rear axle possesses abundant strength and stamina for the heaviest haulage duty—giving faultless performance under every condition.



A modern, three-speed transmission provides proper gear ratios for maximum power under every condition.

A husky, 6" channel steel frame is a contributing factor to the long life and faultless performance of Chevrolet Trucks.

HUB MOTOR COMPANY

Belmond, Iowa

RAECKER CHEVROLET SALES COMPANY

Meservey, Iowa

QUALITY AT LOW COST

MESERVEY SECTION

REFORMED CHURCH

Sunday school at 9:30.
Morning worship at 10:30 (Ger.)
Young people's meeting 7:30.
Evening preaching services 8.
Catechetical classes Saturday at 1:30 p. m.
Senior class in catechism Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

Holy Communion will be celebrated next Sunday at the morning service. The usual communion offering was received last Sunday, but being that some were not present owing to the bad roads, opportunity will be given them to bring their donation for the "Pension Fund" next Sunday.

The Dorcas society met last Wednesday evening and in spite of the bad roads the goodly number of 15 were present. Mrs. H. Pannkuk served refreshments.

Welcome to all.
H. Pannkuk, Pastor.

ROBBERS AGAIN

In our desperate efforts at gathering news items last week, we overlooked a very important and exciting event. On Saturday morning upon opening their business places, the following found that some petty thief had been there before they—E. A. Strasburg Drug store, missing some $30, gaining entrance thru the front door; the lumber office was broken into, no money taken; the depot was relieved of some $3.00; and the hardware store was also entered thru a window. All that was found missing were rifle shells and a shot gun. No clew has been found as to the guilty person, altho Sheriff Cress and a finger print expert were here in search of evidence.

MESERVEY LOCAL NEWS

K. C. Ruigh spent several days last week in Des Moines, returning Friday.

Rev. and Mrs. Fred Pieper and daughter arrived here from Abbott last week on Tuesday evening, to spend the night at the C. Bier home. They were enroute to their new home at Fostoria, but were obliged to remain longer owing to Mrs. Pieper becoming ill. Rev. Pieper left Friday by rail, planning to return later for his wife and daughter.

The Cemetery Association met at the home of Mrs. August Guth on Tuesday of last week for their annual business meeting. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Theo Wendel; Vice President, Mrs. C. Bier; Secretary, Mrs. Nelse Faaborg; Treasurer, Mrs. Otto Strasburg. Plans for beautifying the cemetery were discussed and other business attended to and at the close of meeting dainty refreshments were served.

FOR RENT—To the highest bidder, the 5 acre school ground. See Peter H. Pals, President of Meservey School. 1c

E. A. and Otto Strasburg were called to Alexander last Wednesday owing to the serious illness of their sister, Mrs. John Peters. At this writing she is not much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Fischer ,visited at Dows, Saturday.

H. Barkema continues to be very poorly and growing weaker. Dr. Steele of Belmond was here Saturday giving medical aid. His many friends are hoping for a speedy recovery.

Rev. L. Sohl was in Mason City, between trains Friday.

Otto Strasburg was calling on relatives in Alexander Friday. He was accompanied home by his aged mother, who has been making her home with her daughter, Mrs. John Peters for several years. On account of the latter's illness it was thought best for here to remain here for the present.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Sands and baby, of St. Paul visited here with the latter's aunt, Mrs. H. Wilkens, the fore part of last week. Mrs. Sands was before her marriage Jeanette Lauen. Her mother was also here.

John Pals arrived from Morningside, Sioux City, to spend Easter at his parental H. J. Pals home.

H. W. Hulsebus spent Sunday fore noon here at his parental home, leaving on the afternoon train for Mason City to visit friends.

I. A. Nissen and son Ardell from Kamrar were Sunday guests at the Adam Kolb and J. Nissen homes.

Mr. and Mrs. James Hemming of Thornton spent Sunday at the home of relatives.

Ruth Prelipp had her tonsils and adenoids removed Thursday and is getting along quite well altho the results of the operation were not as good at first.

Miss Mabel Prelipp of Klemme was visiting home folks last week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Nissen and daughter Virginia spent Easter at the Thomas Sloss home in Ames. Ed Rooks accompanied them and in the afternoon he and Frank motored to Mitchellville.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Wendel from Belmond spent Sunday with relatives here.

E. E. Butz and family from Clear Lake visited at the W. F. Butz home Sunday.

Otto Strasburg motored to Ackley Sunday to spend the day with his father and sister.

Walter Fischer and family and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Deerman of Mason City spent Sunday at the S. P. Fischer home.

Henry Sprau and family, Leo Halfpop and wife and Alvin Halfpop of Mason City spent Saturday and Sunday at the Chas. Halfpop home.

Mrs. Ferdinand Lemke Sr., is still under the nurse's care and not improving as well as she might. F. W. Buche and family of Mason City visited her Sunday.

Wilbur Vandemeer of Dumont was a Sunday visitor at the H. K. Pals home.

Hartley Blewitt and family from Thornton were Sunday guests at the John Hartfelder home.

Cards were received here last week from Supt. and Mrs. D. P. Hackett of Patterson announcing the birth of a baby girl, April 8.

Robt. Gobeli was called to Fort Dodge, Monday, in response to a message that his wife's condition was much worse.

Mr. and Mrs. John Simms are the parents of twin daughters, born Saturday afternoon, April 16. They have been named Beatrice Alene and Betty Jean.

Tuesday evening of last week, the 4-H club held a business meeting at the home of Harriet and Thora Sprau The girls finished weaving their baskets which were sold at the bake sale Saturday. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served. The proceeds of the bake sale were $10.50.

Boost for the club!
Neva Muller, Reporter.

The funeral services for Johanna Suntken, 8 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Suntken, were held at Alexander last Tuesday. The little girl passed away at the Park hospital Saturday after a week's illness with mastoid. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved family.

Rev. and Mrs. Sohl and daughter, Evelyn, left Wednesday for their new home in Waverly after spending three years in our midst. The good wishes of their friends go with them to their new pastorate, and also welcome the Rev. Henning and family to this place.

The condition of the roads have made it very trying for the school bus drivers and it was considered wise for a while that school be dismissed for a week, but it was thought best to continue owing to the time for vacation coming so late in the season.

Carl Bier, of Renville, Minnesota was an overnight visitor at the home of his parents last Thursday, leaving Friday afternoon.

In last week's issue we stated that Geo. Wessels was moving into Heiko Janssen's house. This should have read Heiko Kuhlers, who is the owner of the property.

H. Fischer left Monday for Logan where he will spend a few days on his farm making improvements.

C. J. Janssen and family were Mason City callers Monday.

Labina Halfwassen was obliged to remain home from school several days this week on account of illness.

Otto Strasburg was on jury duty the first of the week.

COURT HOUSE NOTES

Continued from page 1

take charge of the property and assets; that the partnership be dissolved and sale ordered to pay indebtedness; that Arthur Smith be required to give an accounting of the business since September, 1923.

Elmer Johnson was appointed guardian for Julius Johnson.

Wm. Lortz, for some time a prisoner in the county jail, was ordered taken to the state hospital at Iowa City. He will be taken in charge of Sheriff Fred Johnson.

Court and the grand jury both adjourned Wednesday to resume sessions Friday. The grand jury expected only one day of service after that.

The case of Fred C. Jacobson of Eagle Grove against the C. & N. W. railway company was settled by agreement between the two parties with a stipulation for payment of $374.73 to the plaintiff for damages for an injury.

Mamie Teems made confession of judgment in favor of Dr. J. R. Christenson of Eagle Grove in the sum of $167 for professional services.

After making the required inspection of the jail the grand jury reported that everything was in good shape and they made no recommendations.

An equity case of Joseph Patterson vs. Simon Simerson was settled out of court at defendant's cost.

A. R. Woodley was appointed guardian of the person and property of John Johnson, who was recently sent to the insane hospital.

An amended and substituted petition is filed which seeks to recover for a proceedure which it is alleged made the Goldfield Telephone company a preferred creditor of the Citizens State bank of Goldfield. The action is brought by L. A. Andrew receiver, against the company. It is alleged that on the day the bank closed, B. W. McElhinney, cashier, who was also president of the telephone company, paid two large bills, giving the company check therefore, buying drafts from the bank's account with the Clarion Savings bank, thus securing current funds to the telephone company. It is sought to have them pay back to the Goldfield bank the amount realized thru their drafts. This would put the telephone company in a position where they couuld file claim for deposits as an ordinary claim, and take the same percentage of dividends as other deposits. Th whole action is based upon the presumption that McElhinney knew the bank was insolvent and was seeking to protect the account of the phone company.

George R. Elwood brings action against H. H. Schwenck, farmer near Eagle Grove, for wages due and for damage alleged to have been sustained when the owner of the farm wantonly killed chickens and ducks belonging to plaintiff. It is claimed that under the agreement between the two Elwood was to have the privilege of raising poultry on the place. Because it is alleged that W. 8. Christenson, assistant cashier of the Citizens State bank of Goldfield, took his account out of the bank the day before it closed, when he knew the bank was insolvent, action was started to recover it. It is claimed he gave a check for $1300 to his father, P. T. Christenson, which was immediately cashed, and that W. T. took the balance, $26.68. Both are made defendants in the action brought by L. A. Andrew, receiver. In the event that this amount is recovered Christenson could reinstate his account as a common claim.—Monitor.

ROY A. HENDERSON
Attorney-at-Law
In all State and Federal Courts
Office Over C. G. Johnson Store
BELMOND, IOWA

Harry T. Smith
General Blacksmithing
Horseshoeing Woodwork Welding
Meservey, - Iowa

WE DO
Hemstitching and Pleating
Dry Cleaning
Ladies' and Gents' Clothing Rugs
We Clean Everything But TEETH
Prices Right
H. F. REIF
Phone 52 Meservey, Iowa

Undertaking & Funeral Director
F. D. FULTON
Licensed Embalmer
Calls Answered Day or Night
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Phone—Residence 17 Office 20
Meservey, Iowa

This coupon and 25c entitle the undersigned to one 35c can of Acme Quality Enamel-Kote, any color, and a special 20c Paint Brush.
Name_____
Address_____
To acquaint you with Acme Quality, we are making a special offer for a short time only.
SPECIAL OFFER 55c Value for 25c

Two things to watch when ordering your house paint

Make sure, for one thing, how long it will stay on—for another, how pleasing it will look.

Experience with all makes and qualities of paints qualifies us to be of real assistance. We'll see to it that you get paint that will last. We'll help you in deciding on a pleasing color effect.

And because we want you to be thoroughly satisfied, we will recommend that you make your choice from our complete line of

ACME QUALITY* Paint and Varnish

Before you buy any paint, come in and see us. We are here to serve you.

C. J. WENDEL
MESERVEY, IOWA

The Spirit of Fairness

THE greatest asset of any bank is its dependability and if any one quality more than any other assists a bank in establishing a reputation for dependability it is that of "fairness."

That is why this bank has exerted every effort to carry into its daily transaction with patrons a spirit of fairness---fairness to its depositors, fairness to its borrowers, and fairness to itself.

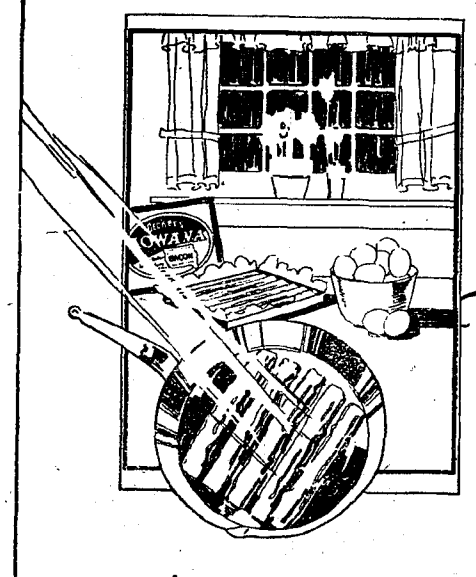
In the same spirit of fairness we should appreciate larger balances in those of our checking accounts that have been carried at a loss.

"Service and Safety"

Farmers Savings Bank
Phone 12 :: :: Meservey, Iowa

HIGH QUALITY BUILDING MATERIAL
Building Material
HARD AND SOFT COAL
Red Top fence posts, American fence, Farm Gates, Lawn Gates, Cedar Posts & Poles, Cement, Lime, Cow feed, Oil meal, Wheat Bran, Cotton seed meal, Tankage.
Highest Price Paid for Grain
Special price on Red Top steel Post, come and see us. It will pay you.
Woodford-Wheeler Lumber Company
Res. Phone 17 Office Phone 20
HARM J. GROEN, Mgr.
Meservey, Iowa

SAY IT IN FIVE WORDS



Why do you prefer

$300 IN CASH

When your appetite yearns for a real ham or bacon treat, why do you insist upon Decker's Iowana Brand to satisfy it? Select just one of your good reasons—jot it down in exactly five words—and you may be the lucky winner of a big cash prize. Perhaps the sweet, mild flavor of Decker's Iowana Ham and Bacon won you instantly; perhaps their superb tenderness or finely grained texture.

Beginning with the Decker selection of Iowa's finest corn-fed porkers, there are endless reasons for the superiority of Iowana Ham and Bacon. 200 years ago the Deckers were already mastering the art of curing and smoking ham and bacon. Today wherever Decker's "made-in-Iowa" Products are sold, they are doing their home-state proud.

Be One of the 75 Winners!

It costs nothing to enter this Decker Contest; and a few minutes' effort may bring you $100 in cash. Here are the prizes:

1st Prize—	$100.00	4th and 5th Prizes—	$10.00 each
2nd Prize—	$50.00
3rd Prize—	$30.00	6th to 25th Prizes—	$5.00 each

26th to 75th Prizes—
1 lb. Carton Iowana Bacon

Contest Rules:
1—Everyone is eligible for entry in this Contest excepting Decker employees.
2—In exactly 5 words—no more, no less—give your reason for preferring Decker's Iowana Ham and Bacon. Your reason may cover Iowana Ham exclusively, Iowana Bacon exclusively, or both products taken together. Examples:
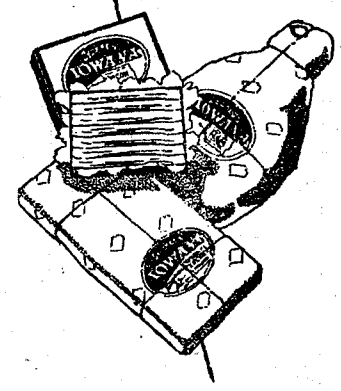
Just bursting with "hammy" flavor.
Sweet and tender every time.
Lean and fat perfectly balanced.
3—All members of a family may join this Contest, but each entrant may submit only one answer. Sign your name and address clearly. Also give the name and address of your meat dealer.
4—Three prominent citizens in no way connected with Jacob E. Decker & Sons, will act as judges. Their decision will be final.
5—In case of a tie decision, duplicate prizes will be given.
6—Answers must not be postmarked later than April 20.
7—We reserve the right to use all answers submitted, for such publicity purposes as we see fit. Address: Contest Manager,

JACOB E. DECKER & SONS
MASON CITY, IOWA



DECKER'S IOWANA HAM & BACON

GOODELL TEAM LOSES TO BRITT

Britt high school ball team came down Monday and played the local school team. Britt was victorious with a score of 6 to 2.

Miss Clara Christie, who is working in Garner came home Monday and visited until Thursday with home folks.

Avery and Twin Lake farm bureau ladies held a joint meeting at the Chelsvig hotel, Tuesday. Miss Merle Ramer, of Ames was present and gave the lesson.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ruka were Mason City shoppers, Monday.

Mrs. Dan Miller went to Marshalltown Wednesday to visit her sister for a few days.

The Earl R. Blue family was entertained Tuesday to six o'clock dinner at the A. C. Carpenter home in honor of Richard's birthday.

Misses Olive Butts and Dorothy Swanson, of Minneapolis, returned Monday to their school work at Hills, Minnesota, having enjoyed a week's vacation with Olive's home folks.

Mrs. Lloyd Carpenter has been very ill the past week, having had a nurse to care for her.

Miss Mae Griggs, primary teacher at Gillmore City came Friday evening to spend spring vacation at her parental home.

Mrs. Walter Thada and Jean returned Friday from Mason City, having visited a few days with relatives there.

Miss Hazel LaRue, who has been visiting her parents the past few weeks returned the fore part of the week to her work at Dows.

Mr. and Mrs. Reynold Kinseth and Mrs. B. Kinseth, of Belmond; Mr. and Mrs. Gus Wenzel, of Kanawha, visited Sunday at the L. G. Avery home.

Mrs. Mary Ahrenkiel is spending a few days at Meservey with her daughter, Mrs. Matt Smith.

Miss Eliza Cashman visited Saturday and Sunday at Belmond with her sister, Mrs. Finn.

Mrs. Adolph Wenzel and Corinne, of Belmond, visited Thursday with the former's home folks, the Butts family.

Miss Veronica Finn, student at Iowa University came Friday for a few days' spring vacation.

Bert Chelsvig went to Chicago recently and has secured a position there in a greenhouse.

Miss Viola Finn returned Friday from Estherville, where she had visited her sister, Mrs. Sam Dominy.

